

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services

Policy Manual

Current as of March 10, 2023

The USCIS Policy Manual is the agency's centralized online repository for USCIS' immigration policies. The USCIS Policy Manual will ultimately replace the Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), the USCIS Immigration Policy Memoranda site, and other policy repositories.

About the Policy Manual

The USCIS Policy Manual is the agency's centralized online repository for USCIS' immigration policies. The Policy Manual is replacing the Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), the USCIS Immigration Policy Memoranda site, and other USCIS policy repositories. The Policy Manual contains separate volumes pertaining to different areas of immigration benefits administered by the agency, such as citizenship and naturalization, adjustment of status, and nonimmigrants. The content is organized into different volumes, parts, and chapters.

The Policy Manual provides transparency of immigration policies and furthers consistency, quality, and efficiency consistent with the USCIS mission. The Policy Manual provides all the latest policy updates; an expanded table of contents; keyword search function; and links to the Immigration and Nationality Act and Code of Federal Regulations, as well as public use forms. The Policy Manual contains tables and charts to facilitate understanding of complex topics. The Policy Manual also contains all historical policy updates.

The Policy Manual contains the official policies of USCIS and assists immigration officers in rendering decisions. The Policy Manual is to be followed by all USCIS officers in the performance of their duties but it does not remove their discretion in making adjudicatory decisions. The Policy Manual does not create any substantive or procedural right or benefit that is legally enforceable by any party against the United States or its agencies or officers or any other person.

How to use the USCIS Policy Manual website (PDF, 2.99 MB).

Adjudicator's Field Manual Transition

USCIS is retiring its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working to update and incorporate all AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content in PDF format to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

To find remaining AFM content, see the crosswalk (PDF, 350.49 KB) between the AFM and the Policy Manual.

Get Updates by Email

Search

Please enter a search term in the box below.

Updates

Get Updates by Email

Updates(223)

POLICY ALERT - International Entrepreneur Parole

March 10, 2023

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address international entrepreneur parole.

Read More

Affected Sections

3 USCIS-PM G - Part G - International Entrepreneur Parole

POLICY ALERT - Domestic Mobile Biometrics Collection and Remote Domestic Applicant Biometrics Collection

March 07, 2023

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address mobile biometrics collection and the biometrics collection of benefit requestors in remote locations.

Read More

Affected Sections

1 USCIS-PM C.2 - Chapter 2 - Biometrics Collection

POLICY ALERT - Evaluating Eligibility for O-1B Visa Classification

March 03, 2023

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to clarify how USCIS evaluates evidence to determine eligibility for the O-1B visa classification for nonimmigrants of extraordinary ability in the arts and nonimmigrants of extraordinary achievement in the motion picture or television (MPTV) industry.

Read More

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM M.4 - Chapter 4 - O-1 Beneficiaries

POLICY ALERT - On-Site Inspections for Religious Worker Petitions

March 02, 2023

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding on-site inspections for special immigrant and nonimmigrant religious worker petitions.

Read More

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM O.1 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

2 USCIS-PM O.3 - Chapter 3 - Petitioner Requirements

6 USCIS-PM H.2 - Chapter 2 - Religious Workers

POLICY ALERT - Special Student Relief for F-1 Nonimmigrant Students

February 22, 2023

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to clarify the validity period of employment authorization for F-1 students experiencing severe economic hardship due to emergent circumstances (also known as special student relief (SSR)).

Read More

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM F.6 - Chapter 6 - Employment

10 USCIS-PM A.4 - Chapter 4 - Adjudication

POLICY ALERT - Age Calculation under Child Status Protection Act

February 14, 2023

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to update when an immigrant visa “becomes available” for the purpose of calculating Child Status Protection Act (CSPA) age in certain situations.

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM A.7 - Chapter 7 - Child Status Protection Act

POLICY ALERT - Asylee and Refugee Adjustment 1-Year Physical Presence Requirement

February 02, 2023

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to clarify the applicability of the 1-year physical presence requirement for refugees and asylees applying for adjustment of status.

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM L.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

7 USCIS-PM L.3 - Chapter 3 - Admissibility and Waiver Requirements

7 USCIS-PM L.4 - Chapter 4 - Documentation and Evidence

7 USCIS-PM L.5 - Chapter 5 - Adjudication Procedures

7 USCIS-PM M.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

7 USCIS-PM M.3 - Chapter 3 - Admissibility and Waiver Requirements

7 USCIS-PM M.4 - Chapter 4 - Documentation and Evidence

7 USCIS-PM M.5 - Chapter 5 - Adjudication Procedures

12 USCIS-PM D.2 - Chapter 2 - Lawful Permanent Resident Admission for Naturalization

Technical Update - Public Charge Ground of Inadmissibility Final Rule

January 25, 2023

This technical update incorporates into Volume 8 the policy guidance that U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) announced December 19, 2022, addressing the public charge ground of inadmissibility under section 212(a)(4) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA), as implemented by the Public Charge Ground of Inadmissibility Final Rule, 87 FR 55472 (PDF) (Sep. 9, 2022).

This guidance became effective December 23, 2022, and applies to adjustment of status applications postmarked (or filed electronically, if applicable) on or after that date. For applications postmarked (or submitted electronically, if applicable) before December 23, 2022, USCIS will continue to apply the public charge ground of inadmissibility consistent with the statute and the 1999 Interim Field Guidance.

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM G - Part G - Public Charge Ground of Inadmissibility

Technical Update - Permanent Resident Card Replacement

January 25, 2023

This technical update to Volume 11 eliminates reference to the extension sticker for expired permanent resident cards (PRCs), which is no longer in use, and clarifies how lawful permanent residents (LPRs) can request documentation of their LPR status when their PRC is expired. This update also clarifies when a conditional permanent resident may file Application to Replace Permanent Resident Card (Form I-90).

Affected Sections

11 USCIS-PM B.2 - Chapter 2 - Replacement of Permanent Resident Card

POLICY ALERT - Public Charge Ground of Inadmissibility Final Rule

December 19, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address the public charge ground of inadmissibility under section 212(a)(4) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA), as implemented by the Public Charge Ground of Inadmissibility Final Rule, 87 FR 55472 (PDF) (Sep. 9, 2022).

The new final rule and policy guidance become effective December 23, 2022, and apply to adjustment of status applications postmarked (or filed electronically, if applicable) on or after that date. For applications postmarked (or submitted electronically, if applicable) before December 23, 2022, USCIS will continue to apply the public charge ground of inadmissibility consistent with the statute and the 1999 Interim Field Guidance.

Read More

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM G - Part G - Public Charge Ground of Inadmissibility

POLICY ALERT - Extension of Permanent Resident Card for Naturalization Applicants

December 09, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to provide that USCIS may automatically extend the validity of a Permanent Resident Card (PRC) (Form I-551) through an Application for Naturalization (Form N-400) receipt notice, without regard to whether the applicant has filed an Application to Replace Permanent Resident Card (Form I-90). This guidance becomes effective December 12, 2022.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM D.2 - Chapter 2 - Lawful Permanent Resident Admission for Naturalization

POLICY ALERT - Revision of Medical Certification for Disability Exceptions (Form N-648)

October 19, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to clarify how medical professionals can properly complete the new version of the Medical Certification for Disability Exceptions (Form N-648) and request oath waivers based on a physical or developmental disability or mental impairment.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM E.3 - Chapter 3 - Medical Disability Exception \(Form N-648\)

12 USCIS-PM J.2 - Chapter 2 - The Oath of Allegiance

12 USCIS-PM J.3 - Chapter 3 - Oath of Allegiance Modifications and Waivers

POLICY ALERT - Calixto Settlement Agreement and Military Accessions Vital to National Interest Naturalization Applicants

October 07, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to update guidance regarding certain Military Accessions Vital to National Interest (MAVNI) naturalization applicants based on a settlement agreement in Calixto, et al., v. U.S. Dep't of the Army, et al. (Calixto Agreement).

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM I.3 - Chapter 3 - Military Service during Hostilities \(INA 329\)

12 USCIS-PM I.5 - Chapter 5 - Application and Filing for Service Members \(INA 328 and 329\)

POLICY ALERT - EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022

October 06, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to incorporate changes resulting from the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM G.1 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

6 USCIS-PM G.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

7 USCIS-PM A.3 - Chapter 3 - Filing Instructions

7 USCIS-PM A.6 - Chapter 6 - Adjudicative Review

7 USCIS-PM A.7 - Chapter 7 - Child Status Protection Act

7 USCIS-PM B.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

7 USCIS-PM B.8 - Chapter 8 - Inapplicability of Bars to Adjustment

POLICY ALERT - Extension of Temporary Waiver of “60-Day Rule” for Report of Medical Examination and Vaccination Record (Form I-693)

September 29, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is extending the temporary waiver of the requirement that the civil surgeon’s signature on the Report of Medical Examination and Vaccination Record (Form I-693) be dated no more than 60 days before an applicant files the application for the underlying immigration benefit.

Read More

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM B.4 - Chapter 4 - Review of Medical Examination Documentation

Technical Update - Public Charge Final Rule

September 08, 2022

This technical update to Volume 8 alerts readers to the September 9, 2022 publication of the Public Charge Ground of Inadmissibility Final Rule, 87 FR 55472 (PDF), and clarifies that USCIS will continue to apply the 1999 Interim Field Guidance until the final rule goes into effect on December 23, 2022. For more information about how USCIS is applying the public charge ground of inadmissibility, see the Public Charge Resources webpage.

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM G - Part G - Public Charge Ground of Inadmissibility

Technical Update - Disability Accommodation Requests

August 31, 2022

This technical update to Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures provides that anyone, including asylum and NACARA 203 applicants, may submit a disability accommodation request online.

Affected Sections

1 USCIS-PM A.6 - Chapter 6 - Disability Accommodation Requests

Technical Update - Refugee Adjudications: Policies and Procedures

August 31, 2022

In accordance with Section 4(m) of Executive Order 14013 of February 4, 2021, Rebuilding and Enhancing Programs to Resettle Refugees and Planning for the Impact of Climate Change on Migration, 86 FR 8839 (Feb. 9, 2021), and considering necessary safeguards for program integrity, USCIS published several current policies and procedures related to the U.S. Refugee Admissions Program on the Refugee Adjudications: Policy and Procedures webpage. This technical update adds an alert box with a link to this webpage in the Policy Manual.

Affected Sections

4 USCIS-PM - Volume 4 - Refugees and Asylees

POLICY ALERT - Guidance for Special Immigrant and Nonimmigrant Religious Workers

August 30, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to reorganize and expand on existing guidance related to special immigrant religious workers.

Read More

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM O.3 - Chapter 3 - Petitioner Requirements

6 USCIS-PM H.2 - Chapter 2 - Religious Workers

POLICY ALERT - L-1 Intracompany Transferees

August 16, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to clarify how USCIS determines eligibility for L-1 nonimmigrants seeking classification as managers or executives or specialized knowledge workers. Note: This update consolidates and updates guidance that was previously contained in the Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM) Chapter 32, as well as related AFM appendices and policy memoranda. This update is not intended to change existing policy or create new policy.

Read More

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM L - Part L - Intracompany Transferees \(L\)

POLICY ALERT - Uncharacterized Military Discharges Eligible for Naturalization

August 02, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address eligibility of military service members with uncharacterized military discharges for purposes of naturalization under section 328 or section 329 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA).

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM I.2 - Chapter 2 - One Year of Military Service during Peacetime \(INA 328\)

12 USCIS-PM I.3 - Chapter 3 - Military Service during Hostilities \(INA 329\)

POLICY ALERT - O-1 Nonimmigrant Status for Persons of Extraordinary Ability

July 22, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to further clarify how USCIS evaluates evidence to determine eligibility for O-1A nonimmigrants of extraordinary ability, with a focus on persons in science, technology, engineering, or mathematics (STEM) fields.

Read More

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM M.4 - Chapter 4 - O-1 Beneficiaries

POLICY ALERT - Legislative Changes and Transition Affecting Afghan and Iraqi Special Immigrant Visas

July 20, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual on the transition of the responsibility to adjudicate certain Afghan special immigrant visa (SIV) petitions to the U.S. Department of State (DOS) and to incorporate other changes to the Afghan and Iraqi SIV classifications resulting from the Emergency Security Supplemental Appropriations Act of 2021.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM H.1 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

6 USCIS-PM H.8 - Chapter 8 - Certain Iraqi Nationals

6 USCIS-PM H.9 - Chapter 9 - Certain Afghan Nationals

6 USCIS-PM H.10 - Chapter 10 - Certain Iraqi and Afghan Translators and Interpreters

7 USCIS-PM F.10 - Chapter 10 - Certain Afghan and Iraqi Nationals

Technical Update - Clarifications Addressing Passage of EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022

July 18, 2022

This technical update to Volume 6 clarifies the Policy Manual alert boxes published on April 27, 2022 relating to the recent EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022, which authorizes an EB-5 Immigrant Investor Regional Center Program and includes various implementation effective dates for the program. On June 24, 2022, the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California in Behring Regional Center LLC v. Mayorkas, et al, 3:22-cv-02487, issued a preliminary injunction enjoining

USCIS “from treating as deauthorized the previously designated regional centers.” The April 27, 2022 alert remains posted for historical purposes.

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM G.1 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

6 USCIS-PM G.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

6 USCIS-PM G.4 - Chapter 4 - Immigrant Petition by Alien Investor (Form I-526)

6 USCIS-PM G.5 - Chapter 5 - Removal of Conditions

POLICY ALERT - Temporary Protected Status and Eligibility for Adjustment of Status under Section 245(a) of the Immigration and Nationality Act

July 01, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating the USCIS Policy Manual to address the proper mechanism for authorizing travel by temporary protected status (TPS) beneficiaries, and how such travel may affect their eligibility for adjustment of status under section 245(a) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA). USCIS is also updating the USCIS Policy Manual to reflect the decision of the U.S. Supreme Court in Sanchez v. Mayorkas, 141 S.Ct. 1809 (2021).

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM A.3 - Chapter 3 - Filing Instructions

7 USCIS-PM B.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

12 USCIS-PM D.2 - Chapter 2 - Lawful Permanent Resident Admission for Naturalization

POLICY ALERT - INA 212(a)(9)(B) Policy Manual Guidance

June 24, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual on inadmissibility under section 212(a)(9)(B) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA), specifically, the effect of returning to the United States during the statutory 3-year or 10-year period after departure or removal (if applicable). Under this policy guidance, a noncitizen who again seeks admission more than 3 or 10 years after the relevant departure or removal, is not inadmissible under INA 212(a)(9)(B) even if the noncitizen returned to the United States, with or without authorization, during the statutory 3-year or 10-year period.

Read More

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM O.6 - Chapter 6 - Effect of Seeking Admission Following Accrual of Unlawful Presence

POLICY ALERT - Special Immigrant Juvenile Classification and Adjustment of Status

June 10, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to incorporate changes from the Special Immigrant Juvenile Petitions Final Rule (SIJ Final Rule), including updated citations, new definitions, and clarifications.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM J.1 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

6 USCIS-PM J.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

6 USCIS-PM J.3 - Chapter 3 - Documentation and Evidence

6 USCIS-PM J.4 - Chapter 4 - Adjudication

7 USCIS-PM F.7 - Chapter 7 - Special Immigrant Juveniles

Technical Update - Health-Related Grounds of Inadmissibility

May 25, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating existing guidance based on revised Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Technical Instructions regarding gonorrhea and syphilis.

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM B.6 - Chapter 6 - Communicable Diseases of Public Health Significance

Technical Update - Documentary Requirements for National Interest Waiver Petition

May 25, 2022

This technical update to Volume 6, Part F aligns language related to documentation required for submission with a national interest waiver petition with the Form I-140 instructions. Specifically, consistent with those instructions, this update removes reference in the Policy Manual to the requirement that a petitioner submit two copies of the employee-specific portions of a permanent labor certification (without DOL approval).

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM F.5 - Chapter 5 - Advanced Degree or Exceptional Ability

Technical Update - Implementation of Special Immigrant Juvenile Classification and Deferred Action

May 06, 2022

This technical update incorporates the policy guidance that U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) announced March 7, 2022, to consider deferred action (and related employment authorization) for noncitizens classified as Special Immigrant Juveniles (SIJs) who are ineligible to apply for adjustment of status to lawful permanent resident (LPR) status solely due to visa unavailability. This guidance became effective May 6, 2022.

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM J.4 - Chapter 4 - Adjudication

Technical Update - Passage of EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022

April 27, 2022

This technical update to Volume 6 alerts readers to the passage of the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022, which authorizes an EB-5 Immigrant Investor Regional Center Program and includes various implementation effective dates for the program. The alert boxes refer readers to uscis.gov for the latest information on the implementation of that law. In addition, this update reserves and moves all of the content in Chapter 3 (Regional Center Designation, Reporting, Amendments, and Termination) to an appendix (Regional Center Program Prior to March 15, 2022) as Congress repealed that program.

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM G.1 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

6 USCIS-PM G.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

6 USCIS-PM G.3 - Chapter 3 - Regional Center Designation, Reporting, Amendments, and Termination [Reserved]

6 USCIS-PM G.4 - Chapter 4 - Immigrant Petition by Alien Investor (Form I-526)

6 USCIS-PM G.5 - Chapter 5 - Removal of Conditions

POLICY ALERT - Interview Waiver Criteria for Family-Based Conditional Permanent Residents

April 07, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual on interview waiver criteria for family-based conditional permanent residents (CPRs) filing petitions to remove the conditions on permanent residence.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM I.3 - Chapter 3 - Petition to Remove Conditions on Residence

POLICY ALERT - Qualifying Published Material and Scope of Leading or Critical Role in Extraordinary Ability and Outstanding Professor or Researcher Visa Classifications

March 23, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating the USCIS Policy Manual to align existing guidance on certain first preference immigrants with a recent Policy Manual update relating to nonimmigrants of extraordinary ability.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM F.2 - Chapter 2 - Extraordinary Ability

6 USCIS-PM F.3 - Chapter 3 - Outstanding Professor or Researcher

POLICY ALERT - Documentation of Employment Authorization for Certain E and L Nonimmigrant Dependent Spouses

March 18, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address the documentation that certain E and L spouses may use as evidence of employment authorization incident to their status.

Read More

Affected Sections

10 USCIS-PM A.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

10 USCIS-PM B.2 - Chapter 2 - Employment-Based Nonimmigrants

POLICY ALERT - Special Immigrant Juvenile Classification and Deferred Action

March 07, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating the USCIS Policy Manual to consider deferred action (and related employment authorization) for noncitizens classified as Special Immigrant Juveniles (SIJs) who are ineligible to apply for adjustment of status to lawful permanent resident (LPR) status solely due to visa unavailability. This guidance becomes effective May 6, 2022.

Read More

Affected Sections

Technical Update - Request to Transfer Underlying Basis

February 23, 2022

This technical update to Volume 7 removes specific information about where to submit requests to transfer the underlying basis of a pending adjustment application and instead points readers to the instructions for requesting a transfer of basis on the USCIS website.

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM A.8 - Chapter 8 - Transfer of Underlying Basis

Technical Update - Updating USCIS Mission Statement

February 23, 2022

This technical update to Volume 1, Part A, incorporates the new USCIS mission statement: USCIS upholds America's promise as a nation of welcome and possibility with fairness, integrity, and respect for all we serve.

Affected Sections

1 USCIS-PM A.1 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

Technical Update - Critical and Emerging Technologies in National Interest Waiver Context

February 23, 2022

This technical update to Volume 6 provides information in a footnote on the latest resources available to determine critical and emerging technologies.

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM F.5 - Chapter 5 - Advanced Degree or Exceptional Ability

Technical Update - Providing Link to Public Charge Resources Webpage

February 17, 2022

USCIS is administering the public charge inadmissibility statute (section 212(a)(4) of the Immigration and Nationality Act) consistent with the 1999 Interim Field Guidance to determine whether a noncitizen is inadmissible as likely at any time to become a public charge. The 1999 Interim Field Guidance is the policy that was in place before the 2019 Public Charge Final Rule was implemented. The 2019 Public Charge Final Rule is no longer in effect. For more information about how USCIS is applying the public charge ground of inadmissibility, see the Public Charge Resources webpage.

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM G - Part G - Public Charge Ground of Inadmissibility

POLICY ALERT - Violence Against Women Act Self-Petitions

February 10, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is publishing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual addressing Violence Against Women Act Self-Petitions.

Read More

Affected Sections

3 USCIS-PM D - Part D - Violence Against Women Act

POLICY ALERT - Clarifying the Temporary Need Exemption for Certain H-2B Workers on Guam and in the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands

February 08, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to clarify how a petitioner may demonstrate that it qualifies for an exemption from the temporary need requirement for a nonimmigrant visa petition for a temporary nonagricultural H-2B worker on Guam and in the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands (CNMI) that falls under the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2021 (FY 2021 NDAA).

Read More

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM I.11 - Chapter 11 - Temporary Nonagricultural Worker (H-2B) Petitions Requiring Special Handling

POLICY ALERT - Updating General Guidelines on Maximum Validity Periods for Employment Authorization Documents based on Certain Filing Categories

February 07, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating guidelines in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding validity periods for Employment Authorization Documents (EADs) for asylees and refugees, noncitizens with withholding of deportation or removal, noncitizens with deferred action, parolees, and Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) self-petitioners.

Read More

Affected Sections

10 USCIS-PM A.4 - Chapter 4 - Adjudication

POLICY ALERT - Use of Medical Examination Completed Abroad for Afghan Nationals Applying for Adjustment of Status After Evacuation Under Operation Allies Welcome

February 01, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to allow certain Afghan nationals applying for adjustment of status after evacuation under Operation Allies Welcome (OAW) to use the report of an immigration medical examination completed abroad by a panel physician to satisfy the requirement normally demonstrated on a Report of Medical Examination and Vaccination Record (Form I-693) completed by a USCIS-designated civil surgeon, as long as certain conditions are met.

Read More

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM B.3 - Chapter 3 - Applicability of Medical Examination and Vaccination Requirement

POLICY ALERT - Photographs and Signatures for Applications for Certificates of Citizenship

January 26, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to specify that persons submitting an Application for Certificate of Citizenship (Form N-600) will generally now have their photographs taken at a biometrics appointment instead of submitting paper photographs and handwritten signatures, as applicable.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM H.4 - Chapter 4 - Automatic Acquisition of Citizenship after Birth (INA 320)

Technical Update - Extension of Conditional Permanent Residence While Form I-829 is Pending

January 26, 2022

This technical update to Volume 6 removes references to the period of time for which the Petition by Investor to Remove Conditions on Permanent Resident Status (Form I-829) receipt notice shows proof of conditional permanent resident status.

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM G.5 - Chapter 5 - Removal of Conditions

POLICY ALERT - USCIS Expedite Criteria and Circumstances

January 25, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding criteria used to determine whether a case warrants expedited treatment.

Read More

Affected Sections

POLICY ALERT - National Interest Waivers for Advanced Degree Professionals or Persons of Exceptional Ability

January 21, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address requests for national interest waivers for advanced degree professionals or persons of exceptional ability.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM F.5 - Chapter 5 - Advanced Degree or Exceptional Ability

POLICY ALERT - O-1 Nonimmigrant Status for Persons of Extraordinary Ability or Achievement

January 21, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to clarify how USCIS evaluates evidence to determine eligibility for O-1A nonimmigrants of extraordinary ability, with a focus on persons in science, technology, engineering, or mathematics (STEM) fields, as well as how USCIS determines whether an O-1 beneficiary's prospective work is within the beneficiary's area of extraordinary ability or achievement.

Read More

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM M.4 - Chapter 4 - O-1 Beneficiaries

POLICY ALERT - Determining the Appropriate O-1B Classification for Persons of Extraordinary Ability in the Arts or Extraordinary Achievement in the Motion Picture or Television Industry

January 13, 2022

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to clarify how USCIS determines whether an O-1B beneficiary is evaluated as a person of extraordinary ability in the arts (O-1B Arts) or as a person of extraordinary achievement in the motion picture or television industry (O-1B MPTV).

Read More

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM M.4 - Chapter 4 - O-1 Beneficiaries

POLICY ALERT - Temporary Waiver of “60-Day Rule” for Report of Medical Examination and Vaccination Record (Form I-693)

December 09, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is temporarily waiving the requirement that the civil surgeon’s signature on the Report of Medical Examination and Vaccination Record (Form I-693) be dated no more than 60 days before an applicant files the application for the underlying immigration benefit.

Read More

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM B.4 - Chapter 4 - Review of Medical Examination Documentation

POLICY ALERT - General Adjudications

November 23, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is incorporating and superseding existing guidance into the USCIS Policy Manual addressing topics in the context of general adjudications, including evidence, sworn statements, and adjudicative decisions.

Read More

Affected Sections

1 USCIS-PM E.1 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

1 USCIS-PM E.6 - Chapter 6 - Evidence

1 USCIS-PM E.9 - Chapter 9 - Rendering a Decision

1 USCIS-PM E.10 - Chapter 10 - Post-Decision Actions

POLICY ALERT - Adoptions

November 19, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is publishing a volume in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding adoptions. This guidance incorporates basic requirements for the submission of adoption-based applications and petitions to USCIS.

Read More

Affected Sections

5 USCIS-PM - Volume 5 - Adoptions

POLICY ALERT - Demonstrating Eligibility for Modification under Section 337 of the Immigration and Nationality Act

November 19, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to clarify guidance related to requests for modifications to the Oath of Allegiance.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM J.3 - Chapter 3 - Oath of Allegiance Modifications and Waivers

POLICY ALERT - Employment Authorization for Certain H-4, E, and L Nonimmigrant Dependent Spouses

November 12, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address automatic extension of employment authorization for certain H-4, E, and L nonimmigrant dependent spouses. USCIS is also rescinding the 2002 Legacy Immigration and Naturalization Service memorandum entitled, “Guidance on Employment Authorization for E and L Nonimmigrant Spouses, and for Determinations on the Requisite Employment Abroad for L Blanket Petition” (2002 INS memorandum).

Read More

Affected Sections

10 USCIS-PM B.1 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

10 USCIS-PM B.2 - Chapter 2 - Employment-Based Nonimmigrants

POLICY ALERT - Clarifying Guidance on Military Service Members and Naturalization

November 12, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to provide clarifications regarding certain naturalization applications filed by current or former members of the U.S. armed forces under sections 328 and 329 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA).

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM I.2 - Chapter 2 - One Year of Military Service during Peacetime \(INA 328\)

12 USCIS-PM I.3 - Chapter 3 - Military Service during Hostilities \(INA 329\)

12 USCIS-PM I.5 - Chapter 5 - Application and Filing for Service Members \(INA 328 and 329\)

12 USCIS-PM I.9 - Chapter 9 - Spouses, Children, and Surviving Family Benefits

POLICY ALERT - Evidence Supporting Liberian Refugee Immigration Fairness-Based Adjustment of Status Applications

October 29, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to clarify what steps applicants must take if they are not able to submit primary evidence of Liberian nationality to support an application for adjustment of status under the Liberian Refugee Immigration Fairness (LRIF) law.

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM P.5 - Chapter 5 - Liberian Refugee Immigration Fairness

POLICY ALERT - T Nonimmigrant Status for Victims of Severe Forms of Trafficking in Persons

October 20, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding the adjudication of applications for T nonimmigrant status for victims of severe forms of trafficking in persons.

Read More

Affected Sections

3 USCIS-PM B - Part B - Victims of Trafficking

9 USCIS-PM O - Part O - Victims of Trafficking

Technical Update - Implementation of COVID-19 Vaccination Requirement for Immigration Medical Examination

October 01, 2021

This technical update incorporates the policy guidance that U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) announced September 14, 2021, regarding health-related grounds of inadmissibility in accordance with recently updated requirements issued by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). The updated guidance requires applicants subject to the immigration medical examination to submit COVID-19 vaccination records before completion of immigration medical examinations conducted in the United States and overseas. This guidance became effective October 1, 2021.

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM B.9 - Chapter 9 - Vaccination Requirement

9 USCIS-PM D.3 - Chapter 3 - Waiver of Immigrant Vaccination Requirement

Technical Update - Incorporating Eleventh Circuit Case Law

October 01, 2021

This technical update to Volume 8 modifies several footnotes to note the divergence from the Board of Immigration Appeals (BIA)'s decision in Matter of Richmond, 26 I&N Dec. 779, 787 (BIA 2016) in the Eleventh Circuit. In Patel v. U.S. Att'y Gen., 971 F.3d 1258, 1272 (11th Cir. 2020) (en banc), the Eleventh Circuit held that a false claim to U.S. citizenship does not have to be material in order to result in inadmissibility. This decision only applies to cases within the jurisdiction of the Eleventh Circuit, which covers Georgia, Alabama, and Florida. This update also removes redundant footnotes.

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM K.2 - Chapter 2 - Determining False Claim to U.S. Citizenship

Technical Update - End of Temporary Extension of Validity Period of Report of Medical Examination and Vaccination Record (Form I-693)

October 01, 2021

This technical update to Volume 8 removes the temporary extension of the validity period of the Report of Medical Examination and Vaccination Record (Form I-693) announced August 12, 2021. This temporary extension expires October 1, 2021.

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM B.4 - Chapter 4 - Review of Medical Examination Documentation

POLICY ALERT - Refugee and Asylee Adjustment of Status Interview Criteria and Guidelines

September 16, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding interview criteria for asylee and refugee adjustment of status applicants.

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM L.5 - Chapter 5 - Adjudication Procedures

7 USCIS-PM M.5 - Chapter 5 - Adjudication Procedures

POLICY ALERT - COVID-19 Vaccination Requirement for Immigration Medical Examination

September 14, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding health-related grounds of inadmissibility in accordance with recently updated requirements issued by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). The updated guidance requires applicants subject to the immigration medical examination to submit COVID-19 vaccination records before completion of immigration medical examinations conducted in the United States and overseas. This guidance becomes effective October 1, 2021.

Read More

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM B.9 - Chapter 9 - Vaccination Requirement

9 USCIS-PM D.3 - Chapter 3 - Waiver of Immigrant Vaccination Requirement

POLICY ALERT - Temporary Extension of Validity Period of Report of Medical Examination and Vaccination Record (Form I-693)

August 12, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is temporarily extending the validity period of the Report of Medical Examination and Vaccination Record (Form I-693). This temporary extension is effective through September 30, 2021.

Read More

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM B.4 - Chapter 4 - Review of Medical Examination Documentation

POLICY ALERT - Rescinding Guidance on Discretionary Employment Authorization for Parolees

August 12, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is rescinding policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual on discretionary employment authorization for parolees.

Read More

Affected Sections

1 USCIS-PM C.1 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

3 USCIS-PM F.1 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

10 USCIS-PM B.2 - Chapter 2 - Employment-Based Nonimmigrants

POLICY ALERT - Assisted Reproductive Technology and In-Wedlock Determinations for Immigration and Citizenship Purposes

August 05, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding the determination of whether a child born outside the United States, including a child born through Assisted Reproductive Technology (ART), is considered born “in wedlock.”

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM B.8 - Chapter 8 - Children, Sons, and Daughters

12 USCIS-PM H.2 - Chapter 2 - Definition of Child and Residence for Citizenship and Naturalization

12 USCIS-PM H.3 - Chapter 3 - U.S. Citizens at Birth (INA 301 and 309)

12 USCIS-PM H.4 - Chapter 4 - Automatic Acquisition of Citizenship after Birth (INA 320)

12 USCIS-PM H.5 - Chapter 5 - Child Residing Outside of the United States (INA 322)

POLICY ALERT - Extension of Blanket Civil Surgeon Designation for Certain Afghan Special Immigrant Visa Applicants

July 30, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address the urgent need for additional civil surgeons to conduct immigration medical examinations in support of Operation Allies Refuge. This guidance became effective July 26, 2021.

Read More

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM C.3 - Chapter 3 - Blanket Civil Surgeon Designation

Technical Update - Adding References to the EB-5 Visa Program in Child Status Protection Act Guidance

July 26, 2021

This technical update to Volume 7 includes references to the EB-5 visa program and Form I-526, Immigrant Petition by Alien Investor, and clarifications regarding the Child Status Protection Act eligibility of derivative applicants of the VAWA-based Form I-360, Petition for Amerasian, Widow(er), or Special Immigrant.

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM A.7 - Chapter 7 - Child Status Protection Act

POLICY ALERT - Immigrant Investors and Investment of Loan Proceeds

July 22, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is revising policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to comply with a recent court order.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM G.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

POLICY ALERT - Change of Status to Nonimmigrant Student (F-1) Visa Classification

July 20, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding applications for change of status (COS) to F-1 classification.

Read More

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM F.8 - Chapter 8 - Change of Status

Technical Update - Removing References to the U.S. Department of State's 90-Day Rule

July 16, 2021

This technical update to Volume 8 removes all references to the U.S. Department of State's 90-day rule.

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM J.3 - Chapter 3 - Adjudicating Inadmissibility

Technical Update - EB-5 Modernization Rule Vacatur

July 15, 2021

This technical update explains that on June 22, 2021, the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California, in Behring Regional Center LLC v. Wolf, 20-cv-09263-JSC, vacated the EB-5 Immigrant Investor Program Modernization Final Rule (PDF). While USCIS considers this decision, USCIS will apply the EB-5 regulations and policies that were in effect before the rule was finalized on November 21, 2019.

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM G.1 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

6 USCIS-PM G.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

6 USCIS-PM G.3 - Chapter 3 - Regional Center Designation, Reporting, Amendments, and Termination [Reserved]

6 USCIS-PM G.4 - Chapter 4 - Immigrant Petition by Alien Investor (Form I-526)

6 USCIS-PM G.5 - Chapter 5 - Removal of Conditions

7 USCIS-PM A.6 - Chapter 6 - Adjudicative Review

Technical Update - Liberian Refugee Immigration Fairness

June 17, 2021

This technical update to Volume 7 clarifies what evidence an applicant may submit to establish Liberian nationality when applying for adjustment of status under the Liberian Refugee Immigration Fairness (LRIF) law. It includes examples of secondary evidence that could support an applicant's claim of Liberian nationality, as part of the totality of the evidence.

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM P.5 - Chapter 5 - Liberian Refugee Immigration Fairness

POLICY ALERT - Bona Fide Determination Process for Victims of Qualifying Crimes, and Employment Authorization and Deferred Action for Certain Petitioners

June 14, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is publishing guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual on employment authorization and deferred action for principal petitioners for U nonimmigrant status and qualifying family members with pending, bona fide petitions.

Read More

Affected Sections

3 USCIS-PM C - Part C - Victims of Crimes

POLICY ALERT - Requests for Evidence and Notices of Intent to Deny

June 09, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address the circumstances in which officers should issue Requests for Evidence (RFEs) and Notices of Intent to Deny (NOIDs).

Read More

Affected Sections

1 USCIS-PM E.6 - Chapter 6 - Evidence

1 USCIS-PM E.9 - Chapter 9 - Rendering a Decision

POLICY ALERT - USCIS Expedite Criteria and Circumstances

June 09, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding criteria used to determine whether a case warrants expedited treatment.

Read More

Affected Sections

1 USCIS-PM A.5 - Chapter 5 - Requests to Expedite Applications or Petitions

POLICY ALERT - Employment Authorization for Certain Adjustment Applicants

June 09, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to increase the amount of time a grant of employment authorization is valid for applicants seeking adjustment of status under Section 245 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA).

Read More

Affected Sections

10 USCIS-PM B.4 - Chapter 4 - Reserved

POLICY ALERT - Veterans Residing Outside the United States and Naturalization

May 28, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to provide clarifications regarding certain naturalization applications filed by veterans of the U.S. armed forces under section 329 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA). These clarifications ensure eligible military veterans who served honorably during specifically designated periods of hostility and meet all other statutory requirements for naturalization are able to naturalize and become U.S. citizens in accordance with U.S. immigration laws.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM I.3 - Chapter 3 - Military Service during Hostilities (INA 329)

12 USCIS-PM I.5 - Chapter 5 - Application and Filing for Service Members (INA 328 and 329)

POLICY ALERT - Naturalization Eligibility and Voter Registration Through a State's Benefit Application Process

May 27, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding applicants' registration to vote through a state's department of motor vehicles or other state benefit application process and the effects on an applicant's good moral character (GMC).

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM F.5 - Chapter 5 - Conditional Bars for Acts in Statutory Period

POLICY ALERT - Preserving Continuous Residence and Physical Presence for Purposes of Naturalization while Engaged in Religious Duties Outside the United States

May 25, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding preservation of continuous residence and physical presence for naturalization purposes for applicants engaged outside the United States in a qualifying religious vocation under section 317 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA).

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM D - Part D - General Naturalization Requirements

Technical Update - Incorporating New INA 320(c) Provision into Nationality Chart 3 - Derivative Citizenship of Children

May 24, 2021

This technical update to Volume 12 incorporates into Nationality Chart 3 the new INA 320(c) provision, as amended by Section 2 of the Citizenship for Children of Military Members and Civil Servants Act, regarding the automatic citizenship of a foreign-born child of a U.S. citizen employee of the U.S. government or member of the U.S. armed forces.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM H.3 - Chapter 3 - U.S. Citizens at Birth \(INA 301 and 309\)

Technical Update - Incorporating Existing Guidance into the Policy Manual

May 20, 2021

This technical update is part of an initiative to move existing policy guidance from the Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM) into the Policy Manual. This update does not make major substantive changes but consolidates and incorporates existing AFM guidance into the Policy Manual, streamlining USCIS' immigration policy while removing obsolete information. This guidance replaces Chapter 30.4 of the AFM, related appendices, and policy memoranda.

Affected Sections

11 USCIS-PM F - Part F - Arrival-Departure Records

Technical Update - Incorporating Existing Guidance into the Policy Manual

May 19, 2021

This technical update is part of an initiative to move existing policy guidance from the Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM) into the Policy Manual. This update does not make major substantive changes but consolidates and incorporates existing AFM guidance into the Policy Manual, streamlining USCIS' immigration policy while removing obsolete information. This guidance replaces Chapter 21.7 of the AFM, related appendices, and policy memoranda.

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM P.9 - Chapter 9 - Amerasian Immigrants

Technical Update - Incorporating Existing Guidance into the Policy Manual

May 18, 2021

This technical update is part of an initiative to move existing policy guidance from the Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM) into the Policy Manual. This update does not make major substantive changes but consolidates and incorporates existing AFM guidance into the Policy Manual, streamlining USCIS' immigration policy while removing obsolete information. This guidance replaces Chapters 22.1 and 22.2 of the AFM, related appendices, and policy memoranda.

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM E - Part E - Employment-Based Immigration

6 USCIS-PM F - Part F - Employment-Based Classifications

Technical Update - Program Extension and Visa Numbers for Special Immigrant Visas for Afghans Who Were Employed by or on Behalf of the U.S. Government

May 14, 2021

This technical update directs readers to visit the USCIS webpage for the latest information on Special Immigrant Visa (SIV) program extensions and visa numbers for Afghans who were employed by or on behalf of the U.S. Government.

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM H.1 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

6 USCIS-PM H.9 - Chapter 9 - Certain Afghan Nationals

7 USCIS-PM F.10 - Chapter 10 - Certain Afghan and Iraqi Nationals

POLICY ALERT - Exemption to the Temporary Need Requirement for Certain H-2B Workers on Guam and in the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands under the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2021

May 13, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is providing guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding the filing and adjudication of temporary nonagricultural worker (H-2B) nonimmigrant visa petitions that fall under Section 9502 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2021 (FY 2021 NDAA).

Read More

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM I - Part I - Temporary Agricultural and Nonagricultural Workers \(H-2\)

Technical Update - Replacing the Term “Alien”

May 11, 2021

This technical update replaces all instances of the term “alien” with “noncitizen” or other appropriate terms throughout the Policy Manual where possible, as used to refer to a person who meets the definition provided in INA 101(a)(3) [“any person not a citizen or national of the United States”].

Affected Sections

1 USCIS-PM - Volume 1 - General Policies and Procedures

2 USCIS-PM - Volume 2 - Nonimmigrants

6 USCIS-PM - Volume 6 - Immigrants

7 USCIS-PM - Volume 7 - Adjustment of Status

8 USCIS-PM - Volume 8 - Admissibility

9 USCIS-PM - Volume 9 - Waivers and Other Forms of Relief

10 USCIS-PM - Volume 10 - Employment Authorization

11 USCIS-PM - Volume 11 - Travel and Identity Documents

12 USCIS-PM - Volume 12 - Citizenship and Naturalization

POLICY ALERT - Deference to Prior Determinations of Eligibility in Requests for Extensions of Petition Validity

April 27, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address the issue of deference to prior determinations of eligibility by an officer when adjudicating a request for an extension of petition validity.

Read More

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM A.4 - Chapter 4 - Extension of Stay, Change of Status, and Extension of Petition Validity

Technical Update - Temporary Proof of Lawful Permanent Resident Status

March 30, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding the temporary proof of status USCIS provides to lawful permanent residents (LPRs) applying to replace an expiring Permanent Resident Card (PRC).

Affected Sections

11 USCIS-PM B.2 - Chapter 2 - Replacement of Permanent Resident Card

11 USCIS-PM B.3 - Chapter 3 - Expired Permanent Resident Cards

POLICY ALERT - Additional Guidance Relating to P-1A Internationally Recognized Athletes

March 26, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to update and clarify guidance for internationally recognized athletes (P-1A nonimmigrants).

Read More

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM N.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

2 USCIS-PM N.4 - Chapter 4 - Documentation and Evidence

POLICY ALERT - Special Immigrant Juvenile Classification and Saravia v. Barr Settlement

March 18, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating the USCIS Policy Manual regarding the special immigrant juvenile (SIJ) classification to incorporate changes agreed to in the settlement agreement resulting from the Saravia v. Barr class action lawsuit.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM J - Part J - Special Immigrant Juveniles

Technical Update - Removing Guidance on Inadmissibility on Public Charge Grounds

March 10, 2021

This technical update removes the guidance in Volume 2, Part A, Chapter 4, Volume 8, Part G, and Volume 12, Part D, Chapter 2 relating to the administration of the public charge ground of inadmissibility under the Inadmissibility on Public Charge Grounds final rule, 84 FR 41292 (Aug. 14, 2019); as amended by Inadmissibility on Public Charge Grounds; Correction, 84 FR 52357 (Oct. 2, 2019) (“Public Charge Final Rule”), which was implemented on Feb. 24, 2020. On Nov. 2, 2020, the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois vacated the Public Charge Final Rule nationwide. On Nov. 3, 2020, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit issued an administrative stay and, on Nov. 19, 2020, a stay pending appeal of the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois’ Nov. 2, 2020 decision. On Mar. 9, 2021, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit lifted its stay and the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois’ order vacating the Public Charge Final Rule went into effect. USCIS immediately stopped applying the Public Charge Final Rule to all pending applications and petitions that would have been subject to the rule. For information on related litigation affecting implementation, see the Inadmissibility on Public Charge Grounds Final Rule: Litigation webpage.

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM A.4 - Chapter 4 - Extension of Stay, Change of Status, and Extension of Petition Validity

8 USCIS-PM G - Part G - Public Charge Ground of Inadmissibility

12 USCIS-PM D.2 - Chapter 2 - Lawful Permanent Resident Admission for Naturalization

Technical Update - Implementation of Revised Guidance on Naturalization Civics Educational Requirement

March 01, 2021

This technical update incorporates into Volume 12 the policy guidance that U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) announced February 22, 2021, addressing educational requirements for naturalization to demonstrate a knowledge and understanding of the fundamentals of the history, and of the principles and form of government, of the United States (civics) under section 312 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA). Specifically, USCIS is reverting back to the 2008 version of the civics test, allowing a brief period during which USCIS may also offer the 2020 version of the test to applicants affected by the timing of this update. This guidance became effective March 1, 2021.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM E.2 - Chapter 2 - English and Civics Testing

POLICY ALERT - Revising Guidance on Naturalization Civics Educational Requirement

February 22, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding the educational requirements for naturalization to demonstrate a knowledge and understanding of the fundamentals of the history, and of the principles and form of government, of the United States (civics) under section 312 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA). Specifically, USCIS is reverting back to the 2008 version of the civics test, allowing a brief period during which USCIS may also offer the 2020 version of the test to applicants affected by the timing of this update. This guidance becomes effective March 1, 2021.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM E.2 - Chapter 2 - English and Civics Testing

Technical Update - Updating Filing Deadline for Liberian Refugee Immigration Fairness Adjustment of Status Applications

February 10, 2021

This technical update to Volume 7 adjusts the filing deadline for Liberian Refugee Immigration Fairness (LRIF) adjustment of status applications to December 20, 2021, to reflect an extension by Congress.

Affected Sections

POLICY ALERT - Applications for Discretionary Employment Authorization Involving Certain Adjustment Applications or Deferred Action

January 14, 2021

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is providing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding applications for discretionary employment authorization based on 8 CFR 274a.12(c)(9) (pending application for adjustment of status under INA 245) or 8 CFR 274a.12(c)(14) (grant of deferred action). USCIS is also providing guidance outlining the categories of aliens eligible for discretionary employment authorization.

Read More

Affected Sections

10 USCIS-PM A - Part A - Employment Authorization Policies and Procedures

10 USCIS-PM B - Part B - Specific Categories

POLICY ALERT - Refugee and Asylee Adjustment of Status Interview Criteria and Guidelines

December 15, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding adjustment of status interview waiver categories and expanding the interview criteria for asylee and refugee adjustment of status applicants.

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM A.5 - Chapter 5 - Interview Guidelines

7 USCIS-PM L.5 - Chapter 5 - Adjudication Procedures

7 USCIS-PM M.5 - Chapter 5 - Adjudication Procedures

Technical Update - Incorporating Existing Guidance into the Policy Manual

December 08, 2020

This technical update is part of an initiative to move existing policy guidance from the Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM) into the Policy Manual. This update does not make major substantive changes but consolidates and incorporates existing AFM guidance into the Policy Manual, streamlining USCIS' immigration policy while removing obsolete information. This guidance replaces Chapter 23.5(c) of the AFM, related appendices, and policy memoranda.

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM C - Part C - 245(i) Adjustment

Technical Update - Clarifying Acquisition of Citizenship Requirement in Nationality Chart 2 for Children Born Out of Wedlock Before May 24, 1934

December 08, 2020

This technical update to Volume 12 incorporates a clarification to Nationality Chart 2 to align with the provisions of the Immigration and Nationality Technical Corrections Act of 1994 (INTCA), which affected acquisition of citizenship for children born before May 24, 1934. Specifically, this technical update clarifies that an alien child born out of wedlock before May 24, 1934 acquires citizenship retroactively to the time of birth in cases where the child's mother resided in the United States at any time before the child's birth, regardless of whether the child was legitimated by the alien father.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM H.3 - Chapter 3 - U.S. Citizens at Birth (INA 301 and 309)

POLICY ALERT - Properly Completed Medical Certification For Disability Exception (N-648)

December 04, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to reflect changes made in the new version of the Medical Certification for Disability Exception (Form N-648).

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM E.3 - Chapter 3 - Medical Disability Exception \(Form N-648\)

POLICY ALERT - Schedule A Designation

December 02, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address Schedule A designations.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM E.7 - Chapter 7 - Schedule A Designation Petitions

Technical Update - Implementation of Redesigned Civics Test for Educational Requirement for Naturalization

December 01, 2020

This technical update incorporates into Volume 12 the policy guidance that U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) announced November 13, 2020, addressing the educational requirements for naturalization on the knowledge and understanding of the fundamentals of the history, and of the principles and form of government, of the United States (civics) under section 312 of the Immigration and Nationality Act. This guidance became effective December 1, 2020.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM E.2 - Chapter 2 - English and Civics Testing

POLICY ALERT - Prerequisite of Lawful Admission for Permanent Residence under All Applicable Provisions for Purposes of Naturalization

November 18, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to ensure consistency in the naturalization decision-making process and to clarify circumstances under which an applicant may be found ineligible for naturalization if the applicant was not lawfully admitted to the United States for permanent residence in accordance with all applicable provisions under the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA).

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM B.4 - Chapter 4 - Results of the Naturalization Examination

12 USCIS-PM D.2 - Chapter 2 - Lawful Permanent Resident Admission for Naturalization

12 USCIS-PM F.2 - Chapter 2 - Adjudicative Factors

POLICY ALERT - Job Portability after Filing Application to Adjust Status

November 17, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to consolidate and update guidance on the ability to change to a same or similar job, also known as portability, for certain beneficiaries of employment-based immigrant petitions after they have applied to adjust status.

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM E.5 - Chapter 5 - Job Portability after Adjustment Filing and Other AC21 Provisions

POLICY ALERT - Use of Discretion for Adjustment of Status

November 17, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating existing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding the discretionary factors to consider in adjudications of adjustment of status applications.

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM A.1 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

7 USCIS-PM A.10 - Chapter 10 - Legal Analysis and Use of Discretion

POLICY ALERT - Civics Educational Requirement for Purposes of Naturalization

November 13, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding the educational requirements for naturalization on the knowledge and understanding of the fundamentals of the history, and of the principles and form of government, of the United States (civics) under section 312 of the Immigration and Nationality Act. This guidance becomes effective December 1, 2020.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM E.2 - Chapter 2 - English and Civics Testing

POLICY ALERT - Age and “Sought to Acquire” Requirement under Child Status Protection Act

November 13, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding the Child Status Protection Act (CSPA), to include how USCIS calculates age under certain contexts and what actions satisfy the “sought to acquire” requirement.

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM A.7 - Chapter 7 - Child Status Protection Act

POLICY ALERT - Nonimmigrant Cultural Visitor (Q) Visa Classification

October 15, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding the nonimmigrant cultural visitor visa classification, commonly known as the “Q” visa category.

Read More

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM E - Part E - Cultural Visitors (Q)

POLICY ALERT - Temporary Protected Status and Eligibility for Adjustment of Status under Section 245(a) of the Immigration and Nationality Act

October 06, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding whether temporary protected status (TPS) beneficiaries are eligible for adjustment of status under section 245(a) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA).

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM B.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

POLICY ALERT - Inadmissibility Based on Membership in a Totalitarian Party

October 02, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address inadmissibility based on membership in or affiliation with the Communist or any other totalitarian party.

Read More

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM F.3 - Chapter 3 - Immigrant Membership in Totalitarian Party

Technical Update - Clarifying Requests for Relief Under INA 204(l)

September 22, 2020

This technical update clarifies how applicants and petitioners may request relief under INA 204(l).

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM A.9 - Chapter 9 - Death of Petitioner or Principal Beneficiary

POLICY ALERT - Residency Requirements for Children of Service Members and Government Employees Residing Outside of the United States for Purposes of Acquisition of Citizenship

September 18, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding residency requirements under Section 320 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA), as amended by the Citizenship for Children of Military Members and Civil Servants Act.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM H - Part H - Children of U.S. Citizens

12 USCIS-PM I - Part I - Military Members and their Families

POLICY ALERT - O Nonimmigrant Visa Classification

September 17, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to update and consolidate guidance related to O nonimmigrant classifications.

Read More

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM M - Part M - Nonimmigrants of Extraordinary Ability or Achievement (O)

Technical Update - Incorporating Existing Guidance into the Policy Manual

September 17, 2020

This technical update is part of an initiative to move existing policy guidance from the Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM) into the Policy Manual. This update does not make major substantive changes but consolidates and incorporates existing AFM guidance into the Policy Manual, streamlining USCIS' immigration policy while removing obsolete information. This guidance replaces Chapter 33 of the AFM, related appendices, and policy memoranda.

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM N - Part N - Athletes and Entertainers (P)

Technical Update - Clarifying Dates of Absence for Continuous Residence

September 15, 2020

This technical update clarifies the examples provided to illustrate the impact of absences from the United States for purposes of the continuous residence requirement for naturalization, including the hypothetical dates used in the examples.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM D.3 - Chapter 3 - Continuous Residence

POLICY ALERT - Fee Schedule and Changes to Certain Other Immigration Benefit Request Requirements Final Rule

September 02, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is revising its policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to align with the Fee Schedule and Changes to Certain Other Immigration Benefit Request Requirements Final Rule, published in the Federal Register on August 3, 2020. This guidance becomes effective October 2, 2020. For information regarding implementation, see Appendix: 2020 Fee Rule Litigation Summary.

Read More

Affected Sections

1 USCIS-PM A - Part A - Public Services

1 USCIS-PM B - Part B - Submission of Benefit Requests

2 USCIS-PM - Volume 2 - Nonimmigrants

7 USCIS-PM A - Part A - Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures

7 USCIS-PM F - Part F - Special Immigrant-Based (EB-4) Adjustment

7 USCIS-PM M - Part M - Asylee Adjustment

11 USCIS-PM A - Part A - Secure Identity Documents Policies and Procedures

Technical Update - Braille-Related Accommodations for the Naturalization Test

August 27, 2020

This technical update incorporates references to Braille-related accommodations for the naturalization test.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM C - Part C - Accommodations

Technical Update - Removing Exemption from Discretion for Asylum Applicants Seeking Employment Authorization under 8 CFR 274a.12(c)(8)

August 27, 2020

This technical update removes the exemption from discretion for asylum applicants seeking employment authorization under 8 CFR 274a.12(c)(8). The Asylum Application, Interview, and Employment Authorization for Applicants Final Rule (Final Rule) (effective August 25, 2020) amended 8 CFR 274a.13(a)(1) to eliminate the exemption. Accordingly, asylum applicants who file applications for employment authorization on or after August 25, 2020 are subject to discretion like other applicants seeking employment authorization under 8 CFR 274a.12(c). Note: On September 11, 2020, the U.S. District Court for the District of Maryland in Casa de Maryland et al v. Chad Wolf provided limited injunctive relief to members of two organizations, CASA de Maryland (CASA) and the Asylum Seeker Advocacy Project (ASAP), in the application of the Final Rule to Form I-589s and Form I-765s filed by asylum applicants who are also members of CASA or ASAP. Therefore, while the rule is preliminarily enjoined, we will continue to apply the prior regulatory language and exempt from discretion CASA and ASAP members who file a Form I-765 based on an asylum application.

Affected Sections

10 USCIS-PM A.5 - Chapter 5 - Reserved

POLICY ALERT - Clarifying Procedures for Terminating Asylum Status in Relation to Consideration of an Application for Adjustment of Status

August 21, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to update and clarify the procedures USCIS officers follow when termination of asylum status is considered in relation to adjudicating an asylum-based adjustment of status application.

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM M.6 - Chapter 6 - Termination of Status and Notice to Appear Considerations

Technical Update - Foreign Residency Requirement

August 06, 2020

This technical update provides clarification on the 2-year foreign residence requirement for certain exchange visitors subject to INA 212(e).

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM A.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

Technical Update - Incorporating Existing Guidance into the Policy Manual

July 30, 2020

This technical update is part of an initiative to move existing policy guidance from the Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM) into the Policy Manual. This update does not make major substantive changes but consolidates and incorporates existing AFM guidance into the Policy Manual, streamlining USCIS' immigration policy while removing obsolete information. This guidance replaces Chapters 22.3 and 26 of the AFM, related appendices, and policy memoranda.

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM H - Part H - Designated and Special Immigrants

7 USCIS-PM Q - Part Q - Rescission of Lawful Permanent Residence

POLICY ALERT - Clarifying Guidance for Deployment of Capital in Employment-Based Fifth Preference (EB-5) Category

July 24, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing clarifying policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding deployment of investment capital, including further deployment after the job creation requirement is satisfied.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM G.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

6 USCIS-PM G.4 - Chapter 4 - Immigrant Petition by Alien Investor (Form I-526)

POLICY ALERT - Applying Discretion in USCIS Adjudications

July 15, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is consolidating existing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding the discretionary analysis required in the adjudication of certain benefit requests, including certain applications for employment authorization.

Read More

Affected Sections

1 USCIS-PM E.8 - Chapter 8 - Discretionary Analysis

10 USCIS-PM A.5 - Chapter 5 - Reserved

Technical Update - Removing Obsolete Form I-508F

June 18, 2020

This technical update removes references to Form I-508F, Request for Waiver of Certain Rights, Privileges, Exemptions and Immunities. French nationals are covered by a special convention between France and the United States. Previously, French nationals were required to submit both Form I-508 and Form I-508F to USCIS. The 11/08/19 form edition combines information from both forms. Therefore, French nationals are now only required to submit Form I-508.

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM A.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

7 USCIS-PM F.6 - Chapter 6 - Certain G-4 or NATO-6 Employees and their Family Members

7 USCIS-PM O.3 - Chapter 3 - Children Born in the United States to Accredited Diplomats

Technical Update - Removing WA Food Assistance Program from the List of Public Benefits Considered

June 16, 2020

This technical update removes the WA Food Assistance Program for Legal Immigrants from the list of examples of state, local, and tribal cash assistance programs that are considered income maintenance for purposes of the public charge inadmissibility determination.

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM G - Part G - Public Charge Ground of Inadmissibility

Technical Update - Moving the Adjudicator's Field Manual Content into the USCIS Policy Manual

May 21, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating and incorporating relevant Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM) content into the USCIS Policy Manual. As that process is ongoing, USCIS has moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding USCIS Policy Manual Part, in PDF format, until relevant AFM content has been properly incorporated into the USCIS Policy Manual. To the extent that a provision in the USCIS Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the USCIS Policy Manual prevails. To find remaining AFM content, see the crosswalk (PDF, 350.49 KB) between the AFM and the Policy Manual.

Affected Sections

- 1 USCIS-PM - Volume 1 - General Policies and Procedures
- 2 USCIS-PM - Volume 2 - Nonimmigrants
- 3 USCIS-PM - Volume 3 - Humanitarian Protection and Parole
- 4 USCIS-PM - Volume 4 - Refugees and Asylees
- 5 USCIS-PM - Volume 5 - Adoptions
- 6 USCIS-PM - Volume 6 - Immigrants
- 7 USCIS-PM - Volume 7 - Adjustment of Status
- 8 USCIS-PM - Volume 8 - Admissibility
- 9 USCIS-PM - Volume 9 - Waivers and Other Forms of Relief
- 11 USCIS-PM - Volume 11 - Travel and Identity Documents
- 12 USCIS-PM - Volume 12 - Citizenship and Naturalization

Technical Update - National Interest Waiver Portability Provisions

May 20, 2020

This technical update clarifies guidance within the USCIS Policy Manual on portability for physicians with an approved immigrant petition based on a national interest waiver (NIW) applying for adjustment of status, and the applicability of the 2-year foreign residence requirement of INA 212(e) to certain NIW physicians.

Affected Sections

Technical Update - Incorporating Existing Guidance into the Policy Manual

May 15, 2020

This technical update is part of an initiative to move existing policy guidance from the Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM) into the Policy Manual. This update does not make major substantive changes but consolidates and incorporates existing AFM guidance into the Policy Manual, streamlining USCIS' immigration policy while removing obsolete information. This guidance replaces Chapters 1, 3.4, 10.2, 10.3(a), 10.3(c), 10.3(e), 10.3(i), 10.4, 10.22, 11.1(c), 13, 14, 17, 23.8, 31.7, 33.10, 34.5, 35, 41.6, 42, 44, 56.1, 56.3, 56.4, 62, 81, 82, 83.1, 83.2, and 83.3 of the AFM, related appendices, and policy memoranda.

Affected Sections

1 USCIS-PM E - Part E - Adjudications

2 USCIS-PM O - Part O - Religious Workers (R)

7 USCIS-PM O.5 - Chapter 5 - Other Special Laws

POLICY ALERT - False Claim to U.S. Citizenship Ground of Inadmissibility and Matter of Zhang

April 24, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding the false claim to U.S. citizenship ground of inadmissibility.

Read More

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM K - Part K - False Claim to U.S. Citizenship

Technical Update - Removing Obsolete Form I-864W

April 16, 2020

This technical update removes references to Form I-864W, Request for Exemption for Intending Immigrant's Affidavit of Support, which was discontinued by the Inadmissibility on Public Charge Grounds Rule and is no longer used by U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services.

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM A.4 - Chapter 4 - Documentation

7 USCIS-PM A.6 - Chapter 6 - Adjudicative Review

POLICY ALERT - Liberian Refugee Immigration Fairness

April 07, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding eligibility requirements, filing, and adjudication of adjustment of status applications based on the Liberian Refugee Immigration Fairness law.

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM P.5 - Chapter 5 - Liberian Refugee Immigration Fairness

Technical Update - Replacing the Term “Entrepreneur”

March 19, 2020

This technical update replaces instances of the term “entrepreneur” with “investor” throughout the Policy Manual in accordance with the EB-5 Immigrant Investor Program Final Rule.

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM A.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

7 USCIS-PM B.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

12 USCIS-PM G.5 - Chapter 5 - Conditional Permanent Resident Spouses and Naturalization

Technical Update - Use of Photographs as Biometrics

March 11, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is incorporating general information on USCIS' use of photographs as biometrics.

Affected Sections

1 USCIS-PM C - Part C - Biometrics Collection and Security Checks

POLICY ALERT - Submission of Benefit Requests

March 05, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding submission of benefit requests to USCIS.

Read More

Affected Sections

1 USCIS-PM B - Part B - Submission of Benefit Requests

POLICY ALERT - Effect of Breaks in Continuity of Residence on Eligibility for Naturalization

February 26, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address naturalization applicants' absences from the United States of more than 6 months but less than 1 year during the statutorily required continuous residence period.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM D.3 - Chapter 3 - Continuous Residence

POLICY ALERT - Implementation of Guidance on Inadmissibility on Public Charge Grounds

February 24, 2020

Note: On Nov. 2, 2020, the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois vacated the Public Charge Final Rule nationwide. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit later issued a stay of the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois' Nov. 2, 2020 decision. On Mar. 9, 2021, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit lifted the stay and the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois' order vacating the Public Charge Final Rule went into effect. USCIS immediately stopped applying the Public Charge Final Rule to all pending applications and petitions that would have been subject to the rule. For information on related litigation affecting implementation, see the Inadmissibility on Public Charge Grounds Final Rule: Litigation webpage. The alert text below and related guidance are no longer in effect.

This update incorporates into Volumes 2, 8, and 12 policy guidance that U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) announced February 5, 2020, implementing the Inadmissibility of Public Charge Grounds Final Rule. This guidance is in effect as of February 24, 2020 and applies nationwide to all applications and petitions postmarked on or after that date. Certain classes of aliens are exempt from the public charge ground of inadmissibility (such as refugees, asylees, certain VAWA self-petitioners, U petitioners, and T applicants) and therefore, are not subject to the Final Rule. For more information about the classes of [noncitizens] who are exempt from the Final Rule, see the appendices related to applicability. For information on related litigation affecting implementation, see the USCIS webpage on the injunction.

Read More

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM A.4 - Chapter 4 - Extension of Stay, Change of Status, and Extension of Petition Validity

8 USCIS-PM G - Part G - Public Charge Ground of Inadmissibility

12 USCIS-PM D.2 - Chapter 2 - Lawful Permanent Resident Admission for Naturalization

POLICY ALERT - Public Charge Ground of Inadmissibility

February 05, 2020

Note: On Nov. 2, 2020, the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois vacated the Public Charge Final Rule nationwide. The U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit later issued a stay of the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois' Nov. 2, 2020 decision. On Mar. 9, 2021, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit lifted the stay and the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Illinois' order vacating the Public Charge Final Rule went into effect. USCIS immediately stopped applying the Public Charge Final Rule to all pending applications and petitions that would have been subject to the rule. For information on related litigation affecting implementation, see the Inadmissibility on Public Charge Grounds Final Rule: Litigation webpage. The alert text below and related guidance are no longer in effect.

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address the final rule on the public charge ground of inadmissibility. This policy guidance is effective on February 24, 2020, and will apply to all applicants and petitioners filing applications and petitions for adjustment of status, extension of stay, and change of status, except for applicants and petitioners in the State of Illinois, whose cases will be adjudicated under prior policy, including the 1999 Interim Field Guidance (PDF) and AFM Ch. 61.1 (PDF). For additional information, see Public Charge Inadmissibility Determinations in Illinois. Certain classes of aliens are exempt from the public charge ground of inadmissibility (such as refugees, asylees, certain VAWA self-petitioners, U petitioners, and T applicants) and therefore, are not subject to the Inadmissibility on Public Charge Grounds final rule. For more information about the classes of [noncitizens] who are exempt from the final rule, see the appendices related to applicability.

Read More

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM A.4 - Chapter 4 - Extension of Stay, Change of Status, and Extension of Petition Validity

8 USCIS-PM G - Part G - Public Charge Ground of Inadmissibility

12 USCIS-PM D.2 - Chapter 2 - Lawful Permanent Resident Admission for Naturalization

POLICY ALERT - Accepting Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130) Abroad

January 31, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address the limited circumstances in which USCIS has delegated authority to the U.S. Department of State to accept and adjudicate the Form I-130 filed abroad at U.S. embassies and consulates. This guidance becomes effective February 1, 2020.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM B.3 - Chapter 3 - Filing

POLICY ALERT - Biometrics Services Updates

January 30, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address the availability of mobile biometrics services and clarify guidance on the validity period for fingerprint waivers.

Read More

Affected Sections

1 USCIS-PM C.2 - Chapter 2 - Biometrics Collection

POLICY ALERT - Replacing Permanent Resident Card

January 16, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding eligibility requirements, filing, and adjudication of requests to replace Permanent Resident Cards using the Application to Replace Permanent Resident Card (Form I-90).

Read More

Affected Sections

11 USCIS-PM B - Part B - Permanent Resident Cards

Technical Update - Naturalization of Spouses Subjected to Battery or Extreme Cruelty by U.S. Citizen Spouse

January 09, 2020

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to clarify that the spouse of a U.S. citizen who was subjected to battery or extreme cruelty by his or her U.S. citizen spouse does not need to establish that he or she is still married to the abusive spouse at the time he or she files the application for naturalization.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM G.3 - Chapter 3 - Spouses of U.S. Citizens Residing in the United States

POLICY ALERT - Effect of Travel Abroad by Temporary Protected Status Beneficiaries with Final Orders of Removal

December 20, 2019

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating the USCIS Policy Manual to clarify the effect of travel outside the United States by temporary protected status beneficiaries who have final removal orders.

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM A.3 - Chapter 3 - Filing Instructions

Technical Update - Naturalization for Surviving Spouse, Child, or Parent of Service Member

December 18, 2019

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is clarifying guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to indicate that the spouse, child, or parent of a deceased U.S. citizen member of the U.S. armed forces who died “during a period of honorable service” (instead of as the result of honorable service) may be eligible for naturalization as the surviving relative of the service member, consistent with the statutory language in INA 319(d).

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM I.9 - Chapter 9 - Spouses, Children, and Surviving Family Benefits

POLICY ALERT - Conditional Bar to Good Moral Character for Unlawful Acts

December 13, 2019

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual on unlawful acts during the applicable statutory period that reflect adversely on moral character and may prevent an applicant from meeting the good moral character requirement for naturalization.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM F.5 - Chapter 5 - Conditional Bars for Acts in Statutory Period

POLICY ALERT - Implementing the Decisions on Driving Under the Influence Convictions on Good Moral Character Determinations and Post-Sentencing Changes

December 10, 2019

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding how post-sentencing changes to criminal sentences impact convictions for immigration purposes and how two or more driving under the influence convictions affects good moral character determinations. These updates incorporate two recent decisions issued by the Attorney General.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM F.2 - Chapter 2 - Adjudicative Factors

12 USCIS-PM F.5 - Chapter 5 - Conditional Bars for Acts in Statutory Period

Technical Update - Health-Related Grounds of Inadmissibility

December 10, 2019

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating existing guidance based on revised Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Technical Instructions regarding tuberculosis, gonorrhea, and syphilis and the change in nomenclature from leprosy to Hansen's Disease. USCIS is also updating how USCIS submits a request to CDC for advisory opinion and removing the outdated vaccination chart.

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM B.1 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

8 USCIS-PM B.6 - Chapter 6 - Communicable Diseases of Public Health Significance

8 USCIS-PM B.8 - Chapter 8 - Drug Abuse or Drug Addiction

8 USCIS-PM B.9 - Chapter 9 - Vaccination Requirement

Technical Update - Implementation of Fees for Submission of Benefit Requests

December 02, 2019

This technical update incorporates into Volume 1 the policy guidance that U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) announced October 25, 2019, regarding submission and acceptance of fees for immigration benefit requests. USCIS published this guidance with an effective date of December 2, 2019. Note: On December 11, 2019, the Federal District Court for the Northern District of California in Seattle v. DHS enjoined the Department of Homeland Security from requiring use of the new version of Form I-912, Request for Fee Waiver. USCIS has noted this in the corresponding Policy Manual guidance and reinstated the prior fee waiver policy guidance at AFM 10.9 (PDF, 2.55 MB) and 10.10 (PDF, 2.55 MB).

Affected Sections

1 USCIS-PM B.3 - Chapter 3 - Fees

1 USCIS-PM B.4 - Chapter 4 - Fee Waivers

POLICY ALERT - Adjustment on New Basis After Termination of Conditional Permanent Residence

November 21, 2019

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to update and clarify when USCIS may adjust the status of an applicant whose conditional permanent resident (CPR) status was terminated.

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM B.7 - Chapter 7 - Other Barred Adjustment Applicants

POLICY ALERT - USCIS Special Immigrant Juvenile Classification

November 19, 2019

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating the USCIS Policy Manual regarding the special immigrant juvenile (SIJ) classification.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM J - Part J - Special Immigrant Juveniles

POLICY ALERT - EB-5 Immigrant Investor Program Modernization Final Rule

November 06, 2019

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is revising its policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to align with the EB-5 Immigrant Investor Program Modernization Final Rule, published on July 24, 2019, and effective November 21, 2019. Note: On June 22, 2021, the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California, in Behring Regional Center LLC v. Wolf, 20-cv-09263-JSC, vacated the EB-5 Immigrant Investor Program Modernization Final Rule (PDF). While USCIS considers this decision, USCIS will apply the EB-5 regulations and policies that were in effect before the rule was finalized on November 21, 2019.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM G.1 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

6 USCIS-PM G.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

6 USCIS-PM G.4 - Chapter 4 - Immigrant Petition by Alien Investor (Form I-526)

6 USCIS-PM G.5 - Chapter 5 - Removal of Conditions

7 USCIS-PM A.6 - Chapter 6 - Adjudicative Review

Technical Update - Implementation of Policy Guidance on Defining “Residence” in Statutory Provisions Related to Citizenship

October 29, 2019

This technical update incorporates into Volume 12 the policy guidance that U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) announced August 28, 2019 addressing requirements for “residence” in statutory provisions related to citizenship. This guidance became effective October 29, 2019.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM H - Part H - Children of U.S. Citizens

12 USCIS-PM I - Part I - Military Members and their Families

POLICY ALERT - Fees for Submission of Benefit Requests

October 25, 2019

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding submission and acceptance of fees for immigration benefit requests, with an effective date of December 2, 2019. Note: On December 11, 2019, the Federal District Court for the Northern District of California in Seattle v. DHS enjoined the Department of Homeland Security from requiring use of the new version of Form I-912, Request for Fee Waiver. USCIS has noted this in the corresponding Policy Manual guidance and reinstated the prior fee waiver policy guidance at AFM 10.9 (PDF, 2.87 MB) (PDF, 2.55 MB) and 10.10 (PDF, 2.87 MB) (PDF, 2.55 MB).

Read More

Affected Sections

1 USCIS-PM B.3 - Chapter 3 - Fees

Technical Update - Replacing the Term “Foreign National”

October 08, 2019

This technical update replaces all instances of the term “foreign national” with “alien” throughout the Policy Manual as used to refer to a person who meets the definition provided in INA 101(a)(3) [“any person not a citizen or national of the United States”].

Affected Sections

1 USCIS-PM - Volume 1 - General Policies and Procedures

2 USCIS-PM - Volume 2 - Nonimmigrants

6 USCIS-PM - Volume 6 - Immigrants

7 USCIS-PM - Volume 7 - Adjustment of Status

8 USCIS-PM - Volume 8 - Admissibility

9 USCIS-PM - Volume 9 - Waivers and Other Forms of Relief

10 USCIS-PM - Volume 10 - Employment Authorization

11 USCIS-PM - Volume 11 - Travel and Identity Documents

12 USCIS-PM - Volume 12 - Citizenship and Naturalization

Technical Update - Clarifying Policies and Procedures for Replacing Permanent Resident Cards

September 27, 2019

This technical update clarifies that, in circumstances involving the replacement or reissuance of a Permanent Resident Card, an Application to Replace Permanent Resident Card (Form I-90) is always required as outlined in form instructions and regulations. This may differ from the general reissuance policy.

Affected Sections

POLICY ALERT - Defining “Residence” in Statutory Provisions Related to Citizenship

August 28, 2019

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address requirements for “residence” in statutory provisions related to citizenship, and to rescind previous guidance regarding children of U.S. government employees and members of the U.S. armed forces employed or stationed outside the United States. This guidance becomes effective October 29, 2019.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM H - Part H - Children of U.S. Citizens

12 USCIS-PM I - Part I - Military Members and their Families

POLICY ALERT - Employment Authorization for Parolees

August 19, 2019

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating its existing policies on the exercise of discretion to address the use of discretion when assessing if certain foreign nationals who are paroled into the United States should be employment authorized.

Read More

Affected Sections

10 USCIS-PM B.2 - Chapter 2 - Employment-Based Nonimmigrants

Technical Update - Civil Surgeon Designation and Revocation

June 06, 2019

This technical update changes language to state that USCIS officers “may” refer proposed civil surgeon designation revocations to the USCIS Office of the Chief Counsel for review. Previously, the language specified that USCIS counsel “must” review any proposed civil surgeon designation revocation.

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM C.4 - Chapter 4 - Termination and Revocation

Technical Update - Fraud and Willful Misrepresentation and Department of State's 90-Day Rule

June 05, 2019

This technical update incorporates clarifications regarding the Department of State (DOS)'s "90-day rule." While this "rule" does not apply to USCIS because it is DOS policy, USCIS is clarifying that it may also find that an applicant made a willful misrepresentation due to a status violation or conduct in the United States that is inconsistent with the applicant's prior representations, especially where the violation or conduct occurred shortly after the consular interview or admission to the United States.

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM J.3 - Chapter 3 - Adjudicating Inadmissibility

POLICY ALERT - USCIS Public Services

May 10, 2019

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding services USCIS provides to the public, including general administration of certain immigration benefits, online tools, and up-to-date information.

Read More

Affected Sections

1 USCIS-PM A - Part A - Public Services

Technical Update - Medical Certification for Disability Exceptions

May 03, 2019

This technical update incorporates minor clarifying editorial changes to the policy guidance regarding the Medical Certification for Disability Exceptions (Form N-648).

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM E.3 - Chapter 3 - Medical Disability Exception (Form N-648)

Technical Update - Communicating with Centers for Disease Control and Prevention

May 03, 2019

This technical update removes references to sending documents to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) by mail or fax. CDC now prefers all requests for waiver consultations and any subsequent notifications from USCIS to be communicated by email.

Affected Sections

9 USCIS-PM D.2 - Chapter 2 - Waiver of Communicable Disease of Public Health Significance

9 USCIS-PM D.4 - Chapter 4 - Waiver of Physical or Mental Disorder Accompanied by Harmful Behavior

POLICY ALERT - Controlled Substance-Related Activity and Good Moral Character Determinations

April 19, 2019

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to clarify that violation of federal controlled substance law, including for marijuana, remains a conditional bar to establishing good moral character (GMC) for naturalization even where that conduct would not be an offense under state law.

Read More

Affected Sections

Technical Update - Implementation of Policy Guidance on Medical Certification for Disability Exceptions (Form N-648)

February 12, 2019

This technical update incorporates into Volume 12 the policy guidance that U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) announced December 12, 2018 regarding the Medical Certification for Disability Exceptions (Form N-648). This guidance became effective February 12, 2019.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM E.3 - Chapter 3 - Medical Disability Exception (Form N-648)

Technical Update - Visa Retrogression

February 06, 2019

This technical update removes language that restricted USCIS officers' ability to request a visa number from the Department of State in cases involving visa retrogression. As with all INA 245(a) adjustment cases, a visa must be available at the time of final adjudication.

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM A.6 - Chapter 6 - Adjudicative Review

Technical Update - Child Status Protection Act

January 23, 2019

This technical update clarifies that certain child beneficiaries of family-sponsored immigrant visa petitions who are ineligible for the Child Status Protection Act may continue their adjustment of status application if the petition is automatically converted to an eligible category.

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM A.7 - Chapter 7 - Child Status Protection Act

POLICY ALERT - Policies and Procedures for Secure Identity Documents

January 16, 2019

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address the general policies and procedures related to secure documents.

Read More

Affected Sections

11 USCIS-PM A - Part A - Secure Identity Documents Policies and Procedures

POLICY ALERT - Sufficiency of Medical Certification for Disability Exceptions (Form N-648)

December 12, 2018

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to update and clarify filing procedures and adjudications on the Medical Certification for Disability Exceptions (Form N-648). This guidance becomes effective February 12, 2019.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM E.3 - Chapter 3 - Medical Disability Exception \(Form N-648\)

POLICY ALERT - Immigrant Investors and Debt Arrangements

October 30, 2018

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is revising policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to clarify its policy on debt arrangements.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM G.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

POLICY ALERT - Use of Form G-325A

October 25, 2018

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to remove references to Biographic Information (Form G-325A).

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM A - Part A - Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures

7 USCIS-PM B - Part B - 245(a) Adjustment

7 USCIS-PM F - Part F - Special Immigrant-Based (EB-4) Adjustment

7 USCIS-PM L - Part L - Refugee Adjustment

7 USCIS-PM M - Part M - Asylee Adjustment

7 USCIS-PM O - Part O - Registration

POLICY ALERT - Validity of Report of Medical Examination and Vaccination Record (Form I-693)

October 16, 2018

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in Volume 8, Part B of the USCIS Policy Manual regarding the period of time during which a Form I-693 submitted in support of a related immigration benefits application is considered valid.

Read More

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM B - Part B - Health-Related Grounds of Inadmissibility

POLICY ALERT - Marriage and Living in Marital Union Requirements for Naturalization

October 12, 2018

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to clarify the marriage and living in marital union requirements under section 319(a) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA).

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM G.2 - Chapter 2 - Marriage and Marital Union for Naturalization

POLICY ALERT - Special Naturalization Provisions for Children

September 26, 2018

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance to amend the USCIS Policy Manual to clarify certain special naturalization provisions for children.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM G.3 - Chapter 3 - Spouses of U.S. Citizens Residing in the United States

12 USCIS-PM H.6 - Chapter 6 - Special Provisions for the Naturalization of Children

Technical Update - Authorized Medical Professionals

September 26, 2018

This technical update provides clarification on the medical professionals (medical doctors, doctors of osteopathy, and clinical psychologists) authorized to complete a written evaluation of medical condition in connection with an oath waiver request.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM J.3 - Chapter 3 - Oath of Allegiance Modifications and Waivers

POLICY ALERT - Geographic Area of a Regional Center

August 24, 2018

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding a regional center's geographic area, requests to expand the geographic area, and how such requests impact the filing of Form I-526, Immigrant Petition by Alien Entrepreneur.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM G - Part G - Investors

Technical Update - Certificates of Citizenship for U.S. National Children

August 15, 2018

This technical update clarifies that a person who is born a U.S. national and is the child of a U.S. citizen may acquire citizenship and may obtain a Certificate of Citizenship without having to establish lawful permanent resident status.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM H.4 - Chapter 4 - Automatic Acquisition of Citizenship after Birth (INA 320)

Technical Update - Rescinding Tenant-Occupancy Methodology

July 26, 2018

This technical update clarifies that the rescission of the policy regarding the tenant-occupancy methodology does not affect petitions pending on May 15, 2018 (the date USCIS announced the rescission).

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM G.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

POLICY ALERT - Child Status Protection Act

May 23, 2018

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual regarding the Child Status Protection Act (CSPA).

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM A.7 - Chapter 7 - Child Status Protection Act

POLICY ALERT - Adjustment of Status Interview Guidelines and Waiver Criteria

May 15, 2018

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating guidance regarding adjustment of status interview guidelines and interview waivers.

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM A.5 - Chapter 5 - Interview Guidelines

POLICY ALERT - Rescinding Tenant-Occupancy Methodology

May 15, 2018

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is revising policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to reflect that, as of May 15, 2018, USCIS no longer considers tenant occupancy to be a reasonable methodology to support economically or statistically valid forecasting tools.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM G.2 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

POLICY ALERT - Documentation of Conditional Resident Status for Investors with a Pending Form I-829

May 02, 2018

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance regarding the documentation of conditional permanent resident (CPR) status for employment-based fifth preference (EB-5) immigrants.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM G.5 - Chapter 5 - Removal of Conditions

POLICY ALERT - Acquisition of U.S. Citizenship for Children Born Out of Wedlock

April 18, 2018

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance to clarify certain requirements for U.S. citizenship for children born outside the United States and out of wedlock under INA 301 and 309. USCIS is making conforming edits to the USCIS nationality charts.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM H.3 - Chapter 3 - U.S. Citizens at Birth (INA 301 and 309)

Technical Update - Fraud and Willful Misrepresentation and Department of State's 90-Day Rule

March 28, 2018

This technical update incorporates changes that the Department of State (DOS) made to its Foreign Affairs Manual (FAM) regarding its interpretation of the term "misrepresentation."

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM J.3 - Chapter 3 - Adjudicating Inadmissibility

Technical Update - Military Accessions Vital to National Interest

March 21, 2018

This technical update clarifies that foreign nationals may apply for military naturalization after the certification of honorable service has been properly processed by the U.S. armed forces.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM I.3 - Chapter 3 - Military Service during Hostilities (INA 329)

Technical Update - Authority to Administer the Oath of Allegiance

March 21, 2018

This technical update clarifies that the Secretary of Homeland Security has, through the Director of USCIS, delegated the authority to administer the Oath during an administrative naturalization ceremony to certain USCIS officials who can successively re-delegate the authority within their chains of command.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM J.2 - Chapter 2 - The Oath of Allegiance

POLICY ALERT - Waiver Policies and Procedures

August 23, 2017

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance to address the general policies and procedures applicable to the adjudication of waivers of inadmissibility.

Read More

Affected Sections

9 USCIS-PM A - Part A - Waiver Policies and Procedures

POLICY ALERT - Biometrics Requirements for Naturalization

July 26, 2017

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to specify that every naturalization applicant must provide biometrics regardless of age, unless the applicant qualifies for a fingerprint waiver due to certain medical conditions.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM B.2 - Chapter 2 - Background and Security Checks

POLICY ALERT - Administrative Naturalization Ceremonies

June 28, 2017

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance on USCIS administrative naturalization ceremonies, to include guidance regarding participation from other U.S. government and non-governmental entities.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM J.5 - Chapter 5 - Administrative Naturalization Ceremonies

POLICY ALERT - Job Creation and Capital At Risk Requirements for Investors

June 14, 2017

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating the USCIS Policy Manual to provide further guidance regarding the job creation and capital at risk requirements for Form I-526, Immigrant Petition by Alien Entrepreneur, and Form I-829, Petition by Entrepreneur to Remove Conditions on Permanent Resident Status.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM G - Part G - Investors

Technical Update - Clarifying Intent to Reside in United States for Naturalization Purposes

January 05, 2017

This technical update clarifies that naturalization applicants are not required to intend to reside permanently in the United States after becoming U.S. citizens. This update is in accordance with current statutes; prior to 1994, a person who became a naturalized U.S. citizen was expected to hold the intention of residing permanently in the United States. See Section 104 of the Immigration and Nationality Technical Corrections Act of 1994, Pub. L. 103-416 (October 25, 1994).

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM D.7 - Chapter 7 - Attachment to the Constitution

Technical Update - Medical Codes for Purposes of Medical Certification for Disability Exceptions

January 05, 2017

This technical update clarifies that, for purposes of Form N-648, Medical Certification for Disability Exceptions, USCIS accepts the relevant medical codes recognized by the Department of Health and Human Services. This includes codes found in the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders and the International Classification of Diseases.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM E.3 - Chapter 3 - Medical Disability Exception (Form N-648)

POLICY ALERT - Registration of Lawful Permanent Resident Status

December 21, 2016

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance addressing registration of lawful permanent resident (LPR) status.

Read More

Affected Sections

POLICY ALERT - False Claim to U.S. Citizenship Ground of Inadmissibility

December 14, 2016

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing guidance to address the false claim to U.S. citizenship ground of inadmissibility under section 212(a)(6)(C)(ii) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA).

Read More

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM K - Part K - False Claim to U.S. Citizenship

Technical Update - Clarifying Designated Periods of Hostilities for Naturalization under INA 329

December 13, 2016

This technical update clarifies that, for purposes of naturalization under INA 329, the current period designated by Presidential Executive Order 13269 (July 3, 2002), as a period in which the U.S. armed forces are considered to be engaged in armed conflict with a hostile foreign force, is still in effect. In addition, this update adds information about the USCIS Military Help Line in this part.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM I.1 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

12 USCIS-PM I.3 - Chapter 3 - Military Service during Hostilities \(INA 329\)

POLICY ALERT - Employment-Based Fifth Preference Immigrants: Investors

November 30, 2016

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance regarding the eligibility requirements for regional centers and immigrant investors.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM G - Part G - Investors

POLICY ALERT - Definition of Certain Classes of Medical Conditions and Other Updates Relating to Health-Related Grounds of Inadmissibility

November 02, 2016

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating guidance regarding health-related grounds of inadmissibility in accordance with the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) rulemaking updating Title 42 of the Code of Federal Regulations, part 34 (42 CFR 34).

Read More

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM B - Part B - Health-Related Grounds of Inadmissibility

POLICY ALERT - Special Immigrant Juvenile Classification and Special Immigrant-Based Adjustment of Status

October 26, 2016

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance regarding the special immigrant juvenile (SIJ) classification and special immigrant-based (EB-4) adjustment of status, including adjustment based on classification as a special immigrant religious worker, SIJ, and G-4 international organization or NATO-6 employee or family member, among others.

Read More

Affected Sections

6 USCIS-PM J - Part J - Special Immigrant Juveniles

7 USCIS-PM F - Part F - Special Immigrant-Based (EB-4) Adjustment

POLICY ALERT - Determining Extreme Hardship

October 21, 2016

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance on determinations of extreme hardship to qualifying relatives as required by certain statutory waiver provisions. This guidance becomes effective December 5, 2016.

Read More

Affected Sections

9 USCIS-PM B - Part B - Extreme Hardship

Technical Update - Military Accessions Vital to National Interest Program and Time of Filing for Naturalization

October 19, 2016

This technical update clarifies that, in general, Department of Defense (DOD) Military Accessions Vital to National Interest (MAVNI) enlistees may file an application for naturalization during basic training in the U.S. armed forces.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM I.3 - Chapter 3 - Military Service during Hostilities \(INA 329\)

POLICY ALERT - Department of Defense Military Accessions Vital to National Interest Program

August 03, 2016

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance to provide information about the existing Department of Defense (DOD) Military Accessions Vital to National Interest (MAVNI) Program.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM I.3 - Chapter 3 - Military Service during Hostilities \(INA 329\)

POLICY ALERT - Effective Date of Lawful Permanent Residence for Purposes of Citizenship and Naturalization

July 27, 2016

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance regarding the date of legal permanent residence (LPR) for naturalization and citizenship purposes.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM D.2 - Chapter 2 - Lawful Permanent Resident Admission for Naturalization

12 USCIS-PM H.4 - Chapter 4 - Automatic Acquisition of Citizenship after Birth (INA 320)

POLICY ALERT - Removing Obsolete Form I-643 from Filing Requirements for Certain Adjustment Applications

June 22, 2016

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is updating policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to remove obsolete Form I-643, Health and Human Services Statistical Data for Refugee/Asylee Adjusting Status, from the filing requirements for applications for adjustment of status under section 209 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA).

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM L.4 - Chapter 4 - Documentation and Evidence

POLICY ALERT - Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures and 245(a) Adjustment

February 25, 2016

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance addressing the general policies and procedures of adjustment of status as well as adjustment under section 245(a) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA).

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM A - Part A - Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures

7 USCIS-PM B - Part B - 245(a) Adjustment

POLICY ALERT - Media Representatives (I) Nonimmigrant Visa Classification

November 10, 2015

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance regarding the foreign information media representative nonimmigrant visa classification, commonly known as the "I" visa category.

Read More

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM K - Part K - Media Representatives (I)

POLICY ALERT - Modifications to Oath of Allegiance for Naturalization

July 21, 2015

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance to clarify the eligibility requirements for modifications to the Oath of Renunciation and Allegiance for naturalization.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM J.3 - Chapter 3 - Oath of Allegiance Modifications and Waivers

Technical Update - Child Citizenship Act and Children of U.S. Government Employees Residing Abroad

July 20, 2015

This technical update clarifies that the child of a U.S. government employee temporarily stationed abroad is considered to be residing in the United States for purposes of acquisition of citizenship under INA 320.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM H.4 - Chapter 4 - Automatic Acquisition of Citizenship after Birth (INA 320)

12 USCIS-PM K.2 - Chapter 2 - Certificate of Citizenship

Technical Update - Multiple Absences and Residence and Physical Presence

July 20, 2015

This technical update clarifies that along with reviewing for absences of more than 6 months, officers review whether an applicant for naturalization with multiple absences of less than 6 months is able establish the required residence and physical presence for naturalization.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM D.3 - Chapter 3 - Continuous Residence

POLICY ALERT - Effect of Assisted Reproductive Technology (ART) on Immigration and Acquisition of Citizenship Under the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA)

October 28, 2014

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance relating to the use of Assisted Reproductive Technology (ART).

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM H - Part H - Children of U.S. Citizens

12 USCIS-PM H.2 - Chapter 2 - Definition of Child and Residence for Citizenship and Naturalization

12 USCIS-PM H.3 - Chapter 3 - U.S. Citizens at Birth (INA 301 and 309)

12 USCIS-PM H.4 - Chapter 4 - Automatic Acquisition of Citizenship after Birth (INA 320)

12 USCIS-PM H.5 - Chapter 5 - Child Residing Outside of the United States (INA 322)

Technical Update - Religious Missionaries Abroad and Residence and Physical Presence

October 21, 2014

This technical update clarifies who may be considered to be a missionary of a religious group for purposes of preserving residence and physical presence for naturalization while working abroad.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM D.5 - Chapter 5 - Modifications and Exceptions to Continuous Residence and Physical Presence

Technical Update - Treating Certain Peace Corps Contractors as U.S. Government Employees

October 21, 2014

This technical update clarifies that Peace Corps personal service contractors are considered U.S. Government employees under certain circumstances for purposes of preserving their residence for naturalization while working abroad.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM D.5 - Chapter 5 - Modifications and Exceptions to Continuous Residence and Physical Presence

POLICY ALERT - Nonimmigrant Trainees (H-3)

September 09, 2014

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance on the trainees (H-3) nonimmigrant visa category.

Read More

Affected Sections

2 USCIS-PM J - Part J - Trainees (H-3)

POLICY ALERT - Customer Service

August 26, 2014

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance on its standards in customer service.

Read More

Affected Sections

1 USCIS-PM A - Part A - Public Services

Technical Update - Validity of Same-Sex Marriages

July 01, 2014

This technical update addresses the Supreme Court ruling holding that Section 3 of the Defense of Marriage Act (DOMA) is unconstitutional.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM G.2 - Chapter 2 - Marriage and Marital Union for Naturalization

POLICY ALERT - Changes to Dates of Birth and Names on Certificates of Citizenship

June 17, 2014

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance relating to changes of dates of birth and names per court orders.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM K.2 - Chapter 2 - Certificate of Citizenship

12 USCIS-PM K.4 - Chapter 4 - Replacement of Certificate of Citizenship or Naturalization

POLICY ALERT - Validity Period of the Medical Certification on the Report of Medical Examination and Vaccination Record (Form I-693)

May 30, 2014

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing an update to policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual addressing the validity period of civil surgeon endorsements on the Report of Medical Examination and Vaccination Record, Form I-693.

Read More

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM B.4 - Chapter 4 - Review of Medical Examination Documentation

Technical Update - Civil Surgeon Applications and Evidentiary Requirements

April 08, 2014

This technical update clarifies that an applicant for civil surgeon designation must, at a minimum, submit a copy of the medical degree to show he or she is a Medical Doctor or Doctor of Osteopathy.

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM C.2 - Chapter 2 - Application for Civil Surgeon Designation

POLICY ALERT - Fraud and Willful Misrepresentation Grounds of Inadmissibility

March 25, 2014

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing guidance on the fraud and willful misrepresentation grounds of inadmissibility under INA 212(a)(6)(C)(i) and the corresponding waiver under INA 212(i).

Read More

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM J - Part J - Fraud and Willful Misrepresentation

9 USCIS-PM F - Part F - Fraud and Willful Misrepresentation

Technical Update - Vaccination Requirements for Pregnant or Immuno-Compromised Applicants

March 11, 2014

This technical update replaces the list of vaccines contraindicated for pregnant or immuno-compromised applicants with a reference to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC)'s Vaccination Technical Instructions. This ensures the Policy Manual guidance includes the most up-to-date information.

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM B.9 - Chapter 9 - Vaccination Requirement

POLICY ALERT - Refugee and Asylee-Based Adjustment of Status under Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) Section 209

March 04, 2014

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address adjustment of status applications filed by refugees and asylees under INA sections 209(a) and 209(b).

Read More

Affected Sections

7 USCIS-PM L - Part L - Refugee Adjustment

7 USCIS-PM M - Part M - Asylee Adjustment

POLICY ALERT - Health-Related Grounds of Inadmissibility and Waivers

January 28, 2014

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual on the health-related grounds of inadmissibility under INA 212(a)(1) and corresponding waivers under INA 212(g).

Read More

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM B - Part B - Health-Related Grounds of Inadmissibility

9 USCIS-PM D - Part D - Health-Related Grounds of Inadmissibility

POLICY ALERT - Civil Surgeon Designation and Centralization of the Designation Process at the National Benefits Center

January 28, 2014

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to centralize the civil surgeon designation process at the National Benefits Center, effective March 11, 2014.

Read More

Affected Sections

8 USCIS-PM C - Part C - Civil Surgeon Designation and Revocation

Technical Update - Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands

September 30, 2013

This technical update adds the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands to list of certain territories of the United States where, subject to certain requirements, persons may be U.S. citizens at birth.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM A.2 - Chapter 2 - Becoming a U.S. Citizen

Technical Update - Certified Court Dispositions

September 30, 2013

This technical update adds language addressing existing policy on circumstances where an applicant is required to provide a certified court disposition.

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM F.3 - Chapter 3 - Evidence and the Record

POLICY ALERT - Security-Related Positions Abroad

June 10, 2013

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) is issuing policy guidance in the USCIS Policy Manual to address amendments to section 1059(e) of the National Defense Authorization Act of 2006 by Public Law 112-227.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM D - Part D - General Naturalization Requirements

12 USCIS-PM D.5 - Chapter 5 - Modifications and Exceptions to Continuous Residence and Physical Presence

POLICY ALERT - Comprehensive Citizenship and Naturalization Policy Guidance

January 07, 2013

USCIS is issuing updated and comprehensive citizenship and naturalization policy guidance in the new USCIS Policy Manual.

Read More

Affected Sections

12 USCIS-PM - Volume 12 - Citizenship and Naturalization

Table of Contents

Updates

Search

Volume 1 - General Policies and Procedures

- Part A - Public Services
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Web-Based Information
 - Chapter 3 - Forms of Assistance
 - Chapter 4 - Service Request Management Tool
 - Chapter 5 - Requests to Expedite Applications or Petitions
 - Chapter 6 - Disability Accommodation Requests
 - Chapter 7 - Privacy and Confidentiality
 - Chapter 8 - Conduct in USCIS Facilities
 - Chapter 9 - Feedback, Complaints, and Reporting Misconduct
- Part B - Submission of Benefit Requests
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Signatures
 - Chapter 3 - Fees
 - Chapter 4 - Fee Waivers
 - Chapter 5 - Interpreters and Preparers
 - Chapter 6 - Submitting Requests
- Part C - Biometrics Collection and Security Checks
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Biometrics Collection
 - Chapter 3 - Security Checks [Reserved]
- Part D - Attorneys and Representatives
- Part E - Adjudications
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Record of Proceeding
 - Chapter 3 - Jurisdiction

- Chapter 4 - Burden and Standards of Proof
 - Chapter 5 - Verification of Identifying Information
 - Chapter 6 - Evidence
 - Chapter 7 - Interviews [Reserved]
 - Chapter 8 - Discretionary Analysis
 - Chapter 9 - Rendering a Decision
 - Chapter 10 - Post-Decision Actions
- Part F - Motions and Appeals
 - Part G - Notice to Appear

Volume 2 - Nonimmigrants

- Part A - Nonimmigrant Policies and Procedures
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - General Requirements [Reserved]
 - Chapter 3 - Maintaining Status [Reserved]
 - Chapter 4 - Extension of Stay, Change of Status, and Extension of Petition Validity
- Part B - Diplomatic and International Organization Personnel (A, G)
- Part C - Visitors for Business or Tourism (B)
- Part D - Exchange Visitors (J)
- Part E - Cultural Visitors (Q)
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements
 - Chapter 3 - Filing and Documentation
 - Chapter 4 - Adjudication
 - Chapter 5 - Admissions, Extensions of Stay, and Changes of Status
- Part F - Students (F, M)
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Reserved
 - Chapter 3 - Reserved
 - Chapter 4 - Reserved
 - Chapter 5 - Reserved
 - Chapter 6 - Employment

- Chapter 7 - Reserved
 - Chapter 8 - Change of Status
- Part G - Treaty Traders and Treaty Investors (E-1, E-2)
 - Part H - Specialty Occupation Workers (H-1B, E-3)
 - Part I - Temporary Agricultural and Nonagricultural Workers (H-2)
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility for Temporary Agricultural Worker (H-2A) Classification [Reserved]
 - Chapter 3 - Documentation and Evidence for Temporary Agricultural Worker (H-2A) Classification [Reserved]
 - Chapter 4 - Adjudication of Temporary Agricultural Worker (H-2A) Petitions [Reserved]
 - Chapter 5 - Post-Adjudication Issues related to Temporary Agricultural Worker (H-2A) Petitions [Reserved]
 - Chapter 6 - Temporary Agricultural Worker (H-2A) Petitions Requiring Special Handling [Reserved]
 - Chapter 7 - Eligibility for Temporary Nonagricultural Worker (H-2B) Classification [Reserved]
 - Chapter 8 - Documentation and Evidence for Temporary Nonagricultural Worker (H-2B) Classification [Reserved]
 - Chapter 9 - Adjudication of Temporary Nonagricultural Worker (H-2B) Petitions [Reserved]
 - Chapter 10 - Post-Adjudication Issues related to Temporary Nonagricultural Worker (H-2B) Petitions [Reserved]
 - Chapter 11 - Temporary Nonagricultural Worker (H-2B) Petitions Requiring Special Handling
 - Part J - Trainees (H-3)
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - H-3 Categories
 - Chapter 3 - Trainee Program Requirements
 - Chapter 4 - Special Education Exchange Visitor Program Requirements
 - Chapter 5 - Family Members of H-3 Beneficiaries
 - Chapter 6 - Adjudication
 - Chapter 7 - Admissions, Extensions of Stay, and Change of Status
 - Part K - Media Representatives (I)
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

- Chapter 2 - Eligibility
 - Chapter 3 - Distinction between News and Entertainment
 - Chapter 4 - Family Members
 - Chapter 5 - Adjudication
-
- Part L - Intracompany Transferees (L)
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - General Eligibility
 - Chapter 3 - Managers and Executives (L-1A)
 - Chapter 4 - Specialized Knowledge Beneficiaries (L-1B)
 - Chapter 5 - Ownership and Control
 - Chapter 6 - Key Concepts
 - Chapter 7 - Filing
 - Chapter 8 - Documentation and Evidence
 - Chapter 9 - Adjudication
 - Chapter 10 - Period of Stay
-
- Part M - Nonimmigrants of Extraordinary Ability or Achievement (O)
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility for O Classification
 - Chapter 3 - Petitioners
 - Chapter 4 - O-1 Beneficiaries
 - Chapter 5 - O-2 Beneficiaries
 - Chapter 6 - Family Members
 - Chapter 7 - Documentation and Evidence
 - Chapter 8 - Adjudication
 - Chapter 9 - Admission, Extension of Stay, Change of Status, and Change of Employer
-
- Part N - Athletes and Entertainers (P)
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements
 - Chapter 3 - Petitioners
 - Chapter 4 - Documentation and Evidence
 - Chapter 5 - Adjudication
 - Chapter 6 - Post-Adjudication Actions
-
- Part O - Religious Workers (R)
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - General Requirements
 - Chapter 3 - Petitioner Requirements

- Chapter 4 - Beneficiary Requirements
 - Chapter 5 - Adjudication
 - Chapter 6 - Admissions, Extensions of Stay, and Changes of Status
 - Chapter 7 - Period of Stay
- Part P - NAFTA Professionals (TN)
 - Part Q - Nonimmigrants Intending to Adjust Status (K, V)

Volume 3 - Humanitarian Protection and Parole

- Part A - Protection and Parole Policies and Procedures
- Part B - Victims of Trafficking
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements
 - Chapter 3 - Documentation and Evidence for Principal Applicants
 - Chapter 4 - Family Members
 - Chapter 5 - Documentation and Evidence for Family Members
 - Chapter 6 - Bona Fide Determinations [Reserved]
 - Chapter 7 - Adjudication
 - Chapter 8 - Annual Cap and Waiting List
 - Chapter 9 - Applicants in Removal Proceedings
 - Chapter 10 - Duration and Extensions of Status
 - Chapter 11 - Federal Benefits and Work Authorization
 - Chapter 12 - Travel
 - Chapter 13 - Revocation of Status
 - Chapter 14 - Confidentiality Protections and Prohibitions Against Disclosure
- Part C - Victims of Crimes
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements for U Nonimmigrant Status
 - Chapter 3 - Documentation and Evidence [Reserved]
 - Chapter 4 - Adjudication
 - Chapter 5 - Bona Fide Determination Process
 - Chapter 6 - Waiting List
 - Chapter 7 - Final Adjudication
 - Chapter 8 - Post-Adjudicative Matters [Reserved]
- Part D - Violence Against Women Act

- Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements and Evidence
 - Chapter 3 - Effect of Certain Life Events
 - Chapter 4 - Filing Requirements
 - Chapter 5 - Adjudication
 - Chapter 6 - Post-Adjudicative Matters
- Part E - Employment Authorization for Abused Spouses of Certain Nonimmigrants
 - Part F - Parolees
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Part G - International Entrepreneur Parole
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Requirements for Consideration
 - Chapter 3 - Documentation and Evidence
 - Chapter 4 - Adjudication
 - Chapter 5 - Additional Periods of Parole
 - Chapter 6 - Family Members
 - Chapter 7 - Conditions on Parole and Termination
 - Part H - Deferred Action
 - Part I - Humanitarian Emergencies
 - Part J - Temporary Protected Status

Volume 4 - Refugees and Asylees

Volume 5 - Adoptions

- Part A - Adoptions Overview
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Adoption Processes
 - Chapter 3 - U.S. Citizens Residing Outside the United States
 - Chapter 4 - Adoption Definition and Order Validity
 - Chapter 5 - Authorized Adoption Service Providers
- Part B - Adoptive Parent Suitability Determinations

- Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility, Documentation, and Evidence (Orphan Process)
 - Chapter 3 - Eligibility, Documentation, and Evidence (Hague Process)
 - Chapter 4 - Home Studies
 - Chapter 5 - Action on Pending or Approved Suitability Determinations
 - Chapter 6 - Adjudication
- Part C - Child Eligibility Determinations (Orphan)
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility
 - Chapter 3 - Identity and Age
 - Chapter 4 - Eligibility Requirements Specific to Orphans
 - Chapter 5 - Qualifying Adoptive or Custodial Relationship
 - Chapter 6 - Additional Requirements
 - Chapter 7 - Documentation and Evidence
 - Chapter 8 - Adjudication
 - Chapter 9 - Pre-Adoption Immigration Review Programs
 - Part D - Child Eligibility Determinations (Hague)
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose
 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility
 - Chapter 3 - Required Order of Immigration and Adoption Steps
 - Chapter 4 - Documentation and Evidence
 - Chapter 5 - Adjudication
 - Part E - Family-Based Adoption Petitions
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility
 - Chapter 3 - Hague Restrictions on Family-Based Petitions
 - Chapter 4 - Documentation and Evidence
 - Chapter 5 - Adjudication
 - Chapter 6 - Post-Adjudication Actions

Volume 6 - Immigrants

- Part A - Immigrant Policies and Procedures
- Part B - Family-Based Immigrants
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Principles Common to Family-Based Petitions [Reserved]

- Chapter 3 - Filing
 - Chapter 4 - Documentation and Evidence for Family-Based Petitions [Reserved]
 - Chapter 5 - Adjudication of Family-Based Petitions [Reserved]
 - Chapter 6 - Post-Adjudication of Family-Based Petitions [Reserved]
 - Chapter 7 - Spouses [Reserved]
 - Chapter 8 - Children, Sons, and Daughters
 - Chapter 9 - Parents of U.S. Citizens [Reserved]
 - Chapter 10 - Siblings of U.S. Citizens [Reserved]
- Part C - Adam Walsh Act
 - Part D - Surviving Relatives
 - Part E - Employment-Based Immigration
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements
 - Chapter 3 - Successor-in-Interest in Permanent Labor Certification Cases
 - Chapter 4 - Ability to Pay
 - Chapter 5 - Business Structure [Reserved]
 - Chapter 6 - Permanent Labor Certification
 - Chapter 7 - Schedule A Designation Petitions
 - Chapter 8 - Documentation and Evidence
 - Chapter 9 - Evaluation of Education Credentials
 - Chapter 10 - Decision and Post-Adjudication
 - Part F - Employment-Based Classifications
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Extraordinary Ability
 - Chapter 3 - Outstanding Professor or Researcher
 - Chapter 4 - Multinational Executive or Manager
 - Chapter 5 - Advanced Degree or Exceptional Ability
 - Chapter 6 - Physician
 - Chapter 7 - Skilled Worker, Professional, or Other Worker
 - Part G - Investors
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements
 - Chapter 3 - Regional Center Designation, Reporting, Amendments, and Termination [Reserved]
 - Chapter 4 - Immigrant Petition by Alien Investor (Form I-526)
 - Chapter 5 - Removal of Conditions

- Chapter 6 - Deference
- Part H - Designated and Special Immigrants
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Religious Workers
 - Chapter 3 - Panama Canal Zone Employees
 - Chapter 4 - Certain Physicians [Reserved]
 - Chapter 5 - Certain G-4 or NATO-6 Employees and their Family Members [Reserved]
 - Chapter 6 - Members of the U.S. Armed Forces
 - Chapter 7 - Certain Broadcasters [Reserved]
 - Chapter 8 - Certain Iraqi Nationals
 - Chapter 9 - Certain Afghan Nationals
 - Chapter 10 - Certain Iraqi and Afghan Translators and Interpreters
 - Chapter 11 - Decision and Post-Adjudication
- Part I - Family-Based Conditional Permanent Residents
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background [Reserved]
 - Chapter 2 - Terms and Conditions of CPR Status [Reserved]
 - Chapter 3 - Petition to Remove Conditions on Residence
 - Chapter 4 - Joint Petitions and Individual Filing Requests [Reserved]
 - Chapter 5 - Waiver of Joint Filing Requirement [Reserved]
 - Chapter 6 - Decision and Post-Adjudication [Reserved]
 - Chapter 7 - Effect of Removal Proceedings [Reserved]
- Part J - Special Immigrant Juveniles
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements
 - Chapter 3 - Documentation and Evidence
 - Chapter 4 - Adjudication
 - Chapter 5 - Appeals, Motions to Reopen, and Motions to Reconsider
 - Chapter 6 - Data
- Part K - CNMI Resident Status

Volume 7 - Adjustment of Status

- Part A - Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements
 - Chapter 3 - Filing Instructions

- Chapter 4 - Documentation
- Chapter 5 - Interview Guidelines
- Chapter 6 - Adjudicative Review
- Chapter 7 - Child Status Protection Act
- Chapter 8 - Transfer of Underlying Basis
- Chapter 9 - Death of Petitioner or Principal Beneficiary
- Chapter 10 - Legal Analysis and Use of Discretion
- Chapter 11 - Decision Procedures

- Part B - 245(a) Adjustment

- Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
- Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements
- Chapter 3 - Unlawful Immigration Status at Time of Filing (INA 245(c)(2))
- Chapter 4 - Status and Nonimmigrant Visa Violations (INA 245(c)(2) and INA 245(c)(8))
- Chapter 5 - Employment-Based Applicant Not in Lawful Nonimmigrant Status (INA 245(c)(7))
- Chapter 6 - Unauthorized Employment (INA 245(c)(2) and INA 245(c)(8))
- Chapter 7 - Other Barred Adjustment Applicants
- Chapter 8 - Inapplicability of Bars to Adjustment

- Part C - 245(i) Adjustment

- Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
- Chapter 2 - Grandfathering Requirements
- Chapter 3 - Eligibility and Filing Requirements
- Chapter 4 - Documentation and Evidence
- Chapter 5 - Adjudication and Decision

- Part D - Family-Based Adjustment

- Part E - Employment-Based Adjustment

- Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background [Reserved]
- Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements [Reserved]
- Chapter 3 - Immigrant Visa Availability and Priority Dates [Reserved]
- Chapter 4 - Documentation and Evidence [Reserved]
- Chapter 5 - Job Portability after Adjustment Filing and Other AC21 Provisions
- Chapter 6 - Adjudication [Reserved]
- Chapter 7 - National Interest Waiver Physicians [Reserved]

- Part F - Special Immigrant-Based (EB-4) Adjustment

- Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

- Chapter 2 - Religious Workers
 - Chapter 3 - International Employees of U.S. Government Abroad
 - Chapter 4 - Panama Canal Zone Employees
 - Chapter 5 - Certain Physicians
 - Chapter 6 - Certain G-4 or NATO-6 Employees and their Family Members
 - Chapter 7 - Special Immigrant Juveniles
 - Chapter 8 - Members of the U.S. Armed Forces
 - Chapter 9 - Certain Broadcasters
 - Chapter 10 - Certain Afghan and Iraqi Nationals
- Part G - Diversity Visa Adjustment
 - Part H - Reserved
 - Part I - Adjustment Based on Violence Against Women Act
 - Part J - Trafficking Victim-Based Adjustment
 - Part K - Crime Victim-Based Adjustment
 - Part L - Refugee Adjustment
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements
 - Chapter 3 - Admissibility and Waiver Requirements
 - Chapter 4 - Documentation and Evidence
 - Chapter 5 - Adjudication Procedures
 - Chapter 6 - Termination of Status and Notice to Appear Considerations
 - Part M - Asylee Adjustment
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements
 - Chapter 3 - Admissibility and Waiver Requirements
 - Chapter 4 - Documentation and Evidence
 - Chapter 5 - Adjudication Procedures
 - Chapter 6 - Termination of Status and Notice to Appear Considerations
 - Part N - Legalization
 - Part O - Registration
 - Chapter 1 - Presumption of Lawful Admission

- Chapter 2 - Presumption of Lawful Admission Despite Certain Errors Occurring at Entry
 - Chapter 3 - Children Born in the United States to Accredited Diplomats
 - Chapter 4 - Noncitizens Who Entered the United States Prior to January 1, 1972
 - Chapter 5 - Other Special Laws
- Part P - Other Adjustment Programs
 - Chapter 1 - Reserved
 - Chapter 2 - Reserved
 - Chapter 3 - Reserved
 - Chapter 4 - Reserved
 - Chapter 5 - Liberian Refugee Immigration Fairness
 - Chapter 6 - Reserved
 - Chapter 7 - Reserved
 - Chapter 8 - Reserved
 - Chapter 9 - Amerasian Immigrants
 - Chapter 10 - Reserved
 - Part Q - Rescission of Lawful Permanent Residence
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility
 - Chapter 3 - Rescission Process
 - Chapter 4 - Effective Date of Rescission
 - Chapter 5 - Adjudication Procedures
 - Part R - Abandonment of Lawful Permanent Residence

Volume 8 - Admissibility

- Part A - Admissibility Policies and Procedures
- Part B - Health-Related Grounds of Inadmissibility
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Medical Examination and Vaccination Record
 - Chapter 3 - Applicability of Medical Examination and Vaccination Requirement
 - Chapter 4 - Review of Medical Examination Documentation
 - Chapter 5 - Review of Overall Findings
 - Chapter 6 - Communicable Diseases of Public Health Significance
 - Chapter 7 - Physical or Mental Disorder with Associated Harmful Behavior
 - Chapter 8 - Drug Abuse or Drug Addiction

- Chapter 9 - Vaccination Requirement
 - Chapter 10 - Other Medical Conditions
 - Chapter 11 - Inadmissibility Determination
 - Chapter 12 - Waiver Authority
- Part C - Civil Surgeon Designation and Revocation
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Application for Civil Surgeon Designation
 - Chapter 3 - Blanket Civil Surgeon Designation
 - Chapter 4 - Termination and Revocation
 - Chapter 5 - Civil Surgeon List
 - Part D - Criminal and Related Grounds of Inadmissibility
 - Part E - Terrorism
 - Part F - National Security and Related Grounds of Inadmissibility
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background [Reserved]
 - Chapter 2 - [Reserved]
 - Chapter 3 - Immigrant Membership in Totalitarian Party
 - Part G - Public Charge Ground of Inadmissibility
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Definitions
 - Chapter 3 - Applicability
 - Chapter 4 - Prospective Determination Based on the Totality of the Circumstances
 - Chapter 5 - Statutory Minimum Factors
 - Chapter 6 - Affidavit of Support Under Section 213A of the INA
 - Chapter 7 - Consideration of Current and/or Past Receipt of Public Cash Assistance for Income Maintenance or Long-term Institutionalization at Government Expense
 - Chapter 8 - Waivers of Inadmissibility Based on Public Charge Ground
 - Chapter 9 - Adjudicating Public Charge Inadmissibility for Adjustment of Status Applications
 - Chapter 10 - Public Charge Bonds
 - Chapter 11 - Public Charge Bonds: Posting and Accepting Bonds
 - Chapter 12 - Public Charge Bonds: Maintaining, Substituting, and Canceling Bonds
 - Part H - Labor Certification and Select Immigrant Qualifications
 - Part I - Illegal Entrants and Other Immigration Violators

- Part J - Fraud and Willful Misrepresentation
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Overview of Fraud and Willful Misrepresentation
 - Chapter 3 - Adjudicating Inadmissibility
- Part K - False Claim to U.S. Citizenship
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Determining False Claim to U.S. Citizenship
 - Chapter 3 - Adjudication
 - Chapter 4 - Exceptions and Waivers
- Part L - Documentation Requirements
- Part M - Citizenship Ineligibility
- Part N - Noncitizens Previously Removed
- Part O - Noncitizens Unlawfully Present
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background [Reserved]
 - Chapter 2 - Reserved
 - Chapter 3 - Reserved
 - Chapter 4 - Reserved
 - Chapter 5 - Reserved
 - Chapter 6 - Effect of Seeking Admission Following Accrual of Unlawful Presence
- Part P - Noncitizens Present After Previous Immigration Violation
- Part Q - Practicing Polygamists, International Child Abductors, Unlawful Voters, and Tax Evaders

Volume 9 - Waivers and Other Forms of Relief

- Part A - Waiver Policies and Procedures
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Forms of Relief
 - Chapter 3 - Review of Inadmissibility Grounds
 - Chapter 4 - Waiver Eligibility and Evidence
 - Chapter 5 - Discretion
 - Chapter 6 - Validity of an Approved Waiver
 - Chapter 7 - Denials, Appeals, and Motions

- Part B - Extreme Hardship
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Extreme Hardship Policy
 - Chapter 3 - Adjudicating Extreme Hardship Claims
 - Chapter 4 - Qualifying Relative
 - Chapter 5 - Extreme Hardship Considerations and Factors
 - Chapter 6 - Extreme Hardship Determinations
 - Chapter 7 - Discretion
- Part C - Family Unity, Humanitarian Purposes, or Public or National Interest
- Part D - Health-Related Grounds of Inadmissibility
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Waiver of Communicable Disease of Public Health Significance
 - Chapter 3 - Waiver of Immigrant Vaccination Requirement
 - Chapter 4 - Waiver of Physical or Mental Disorder Accompanied by Harmful Behavior
 - Chapter 5 - Waiver of Drug Abuse and Addiction
- Part E - Criminal and Related Grounds of Inadmissibility
- Part F - Fraud and Willful Misrepresentation
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Adjudication of Fraud and Willful Misrepresentation Waivers
 - Chapter 3 - Effect of Granting a Waiver
- Part G - Unlawful Presence
- Part H - Provisional Unlawful Presence
- Part I - Immigrant Membership in Totalitarian Party
- Part J - Alien Smuggling
- Part K - Noncitizens Subject to Civil Penalty
- Part L - Refugees and Asylees
- Part M - Temporary Protected Status Applicants
- Part N - Special Immigrant Juvenile Adjustment Applicants

- Part O - Victims of Trafficking
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background [Reserved]
 - Chapter 2 - Waivers for Victims of Trafficking
 - Chapter 3 - INA 212(d)(13) Waivers
 - Chapter 4 - INA 212(d)(3) Waivers
 - Chapter 5 - Adjudication and Post-Adjudication Matters
- Part P - Crime Victims
- Part Q - Violence Against Women Act Applicants
- Part R - Other Waivers and Provisions Overcoming Inadmissibility
- Part S - Consent to Reapply

Volume 10 - Employment Authorization

- Part A - Employment Authorization Policies and Procedures
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements
 - Chapter 3 - Documentation and Evidence [Reserved]
 - Chapter 4 - Adjudication
 - Chapter 5 - Reserved
 - Chapter 6 - Card Production and Card Correction [Reserved]
 - Chapter 7 - Post-Decision Actions [Reserved]
- Part B - Specific Categories
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Employment-Based Nonimmigrants
 - Chapter 3 - Reserved
 - Chapter 4 - Reserved

Volume 11 - Travel and Identity Documents

- Part A - Secure Identity Documents Policies and Procedures
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - USCIS-Issued Secure Identity Documents
 - Chapter 3 - Reissuance of Secure Identity Documents
- Part B - Permanent Resident Cards

- Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Replacement of Permanent Resident Card
 - Chapter 3 - Expired Permanent Resident Cards
 - Chapter 4 - Commuter Cards
- Part C - Reentry Permits
 - Part D - Refugee Travel Documents
 - Part E - Advance Parole Documents
 - Part F - Arrival-Departure Records
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Application for Replacement/Initial Nonimmigrant Arrival-Departure Record (Form I-102)

Volume 12 - Citizenship and Naturalization

- Part A - Citizenship and Naturalization Policies and Procedures
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Becoming a U.S. Citizen
 - Chapter 3 - USCIS Authority to Naturalize
- Part B - Naturalization Examination
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Background and Security Checks
 - Chapter 3 - Naturalization Interview
 - Chapter 4 - Results of the Naturalization Examination
 - Chapter 5 - Motion to Reopen
 - Chapter 6 - USCIS Hearing and Judicial Review
- Part C - Accommodations
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Accommodation Policies and Procedures
 - Chapter 3 - Types of Accommodations
- Part D - General Naturalization Requirements
 - Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
 - Chapter 2 - Lawful Permanent Resident Admission for Naturalization
 - Chapter 3 - Continuous Residence

- Chapter 4 - Physical Presence
- Chapter 5 - Modifications and Exceptions to Continuous Residence and Physical Presence
- Chapter 6 - Jurisdiction, Place of Residence, and Early Filing
- Chapter 7 - Attachment to the Constitution
- Chapter 8 - Educational Requirements
- Chapter 9 - Good Moral Character

- Part E - English and Civics Testing and Exceptions

- Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
- Chapter 2 - English and Civics Testing
- Chapter 3 - Medical Disability Exception (Form N-648)

- Part F - Good Moral Character

- Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
- Chapter 2 - Adjudicative Factors
- Chapter 3 - Evidence and the Record
- Chapter 4 - Permanent Bars to Good Moral Character
- Chapter 5 - Conditional Bars for Acts in Statutory Period

- Part G - Spouses of U.S. Citizens

- Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
- Chapter 2 - Marriage and Marital Union for Naturalization
- Chapter 3 - Spouses of U.S. Citizens Residing in the United States
- Chapter 4 - Spouses of U.S. Citizens Employed Abroad
- Chapter 5 - Conditional Permanent Resident Spouses and Naturalization

- Part H - Children of U.S. Citizens

- Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
- Chapter 2 - Definition of Child and Residence for Citizenship and Naturalization
- Chapter 3 - U.S. Citizens at Birth (INA 301 and 309)
- Chapter 4 - Automatic Acquisition of Citizenship after Birth (INA 320)
- Chapter 5 - Child Residing Outside of the United States (INA 322)
- Chapter 6 - Special Provisions for the Naturalization of Children

- Part I - Military Members and their Families

- Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
- Chapter 2 - One Year of Military Service during Peacetime (INA 328)
- Chapter 3 - Military Service during Hostilities (INA 329)
- Chapter 4 - Permanent Bars to Naturalization
- Chapter 5 - Application and Filing for Service Members (INA 328 and 329)

- Chapter 6 - Required Background Checks
- Chapter 7 - Revocation of Naturalization
- Chapter 8 - Posthumous Citizenship (INA 329A)
- Chapter 9 - Spouses, Children, and Surviving Family Benefits

- Part J - Oath of Allegiance

- Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
- Chapter 2 - The Oath of Allegiance
- Chapter 3 - Oath of Allegiance Modifications and Waivers
- Chapter 4 - General Considerations for All Oath Ceremonies
- Chapter 5 - Administrative Naturalization Ceremonies
- Chapter 6 - Judicial and Expedited Oath Ceremonies

- Part K - Certificates of Citizenship and Naturalization

- Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background
- Chapter 2 - Certificate of Citizenship
- Chapter 3 - Certificate of Naturalization
- Chapter 4 - Replacement of Certificate of Citizenship or Naturalization
- Chapter 5 - Cancellation of Certificate of Citizenship or Naturalization

- Part L - Revocation of Naturalization

- Chapter 1- Purpose and Background
- Chapter 2 - Grounds for Revocation of Naturalization
- Chapter 3 - Effects of Revocation of Naturalization

Volume 1 - General Policies and Procedures

Part A - Public Services

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy

Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 10 - An Overview of the Adjudication Process (External) (PDF, 2.55 MB)

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

USCIS is the government agency that administers lawful immigration to the United States. USCIS has nearly 20,000 government employees and contractors working at more than 200 offices around the world. USCIS ensures its employees have the knowledge and tools needed to administer the lawful immigration system with professionalism. USCIS provides accessible, reliable, and accurate guidance and information about its public services.

This part provides guidance on USCIS public services, privacy, online tools, and other general administration topics.

B. Background

On March 1, 2003, USCIS assumed responsibility for the immigration service functions of the federal government. The Homeland Security Act of 2002 dismantled the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) and separated the agency into three components within the Department of Homeland Security (DHS).^[1]

The Homeland Security Act created USCIS to enhance the security and efficiency of national immigration services by focusing exclusively on the administration of benefit applications. The law also formed Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) and Customs and Border Protection (CBP) to oversee immigration enforcement and border security.

USCIS benefits from a legacy of more than 100 years of federal immigration and naturalization administration.^[2] The Agency History page on USCIS' website provides information about the agency's history, presents research from the History Office's historians, and makes selected historical documents available electronically.

C. Mission Statement

USCIS upholds America's promise as a nation of welcome and possibility with fairness, integrity, and respect for all we serve.^[3]

D. Legal Authorities

- Homeland Security Act of 2002, Pub. L. 107–296 (PDF)^[4] – Dismantled the INS and created USCIS to enhance the security and efficiency of national immigration services by focusing exclusively on the administration of benefit applications
- Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. 552a (PDF), as amended^[5] – Establishes a code of fair information practices that governs the collection, maintenance, use, and dissemination of information about persons that is maintained in systems of records by federal agencies
- Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, Pub. L. 93-112 (PDF)^[6] – Ensuring persons with a disability are not excluded from participation in or subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving federal financial assistance or under any program or activity conducted by any federal agency

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Homeland Security Act of 2002, Pub. L. 107–296 (PDF), 116 Stat. 2135 (November 25, 2002).

[^ 2] See the Organizational Timeline page on USCIS' website.

[^ 3] See the About Us page on USCIS' website.

[^ 4] See Pub. L. 107–296 (PDF), 116 Stat. 2135 (November 25, 2002).

[^ 5] See Pub. L. 93-579 (PDF), 88 Stat. 1896 (December 31, 1974).

[^ 6] See Section 504 of Pub. L. 93-112 (PDF), 87 Stat. 355, 394 (September 26, 1973).

Chapter 2 - Web-Based Information

A. Website

The USCIS website (uscis.gov) provides the public with access to current information about USCIS' work, as well as current news releases, alerts, and other updates.

The USCIS website provides the following:

- Timely and accurate information on immigration and citizenship services and benefits offered by USCIS;
- Easy access to forms, form instructions, agency guidance, and other information required to successfully submit applications and petitions;

- The latest news and policy updates, including progress in support of Executive Orders;
- Information on outreach events and efforts; and
- Information on ways to contact USCIS.^[1]

USCIS designed the website to accommodate easy navigation to highly trafficked pages directly from the home page, as well as a logical structure and search capability for easy access to all other pages.

In addition to uscis.gov, USCIS also hosts the following sub-sites:

- myUSCIS – Allows stakeholders to explore immigration options, create an online USCIS account, locate a physician to complete medical exams, practice the civics test, and complete other tasks online
- Citizenship Resource Center – Hosts information and resources designed to assist prospective citizens
- USCIS Policy Manual – The agency's centralized online repository for USCIS' immigration policies^[2]
- InfoPass – System used by USCIS Contact Center for scheduling in-person services at domestic field offices on behalf of benefit requestors and other interested parties.

USCIS makes every effort to provide complete and accurate information on its website. USCIS does its best to update information and correct errors brought to its attention as soon as possible. Both the English language and Spanish language pages are updated at the same time, as appropriate.

B. Social Media

Social media is an informal means of communication that also connects benefit requestors and other interested parties with core information and services on the USCIS website. In this way, social media complements the USCIS website and increases USCIS' ability to communicate with the public.

USCIS' social media presence includes:

- Twitter (Main and for E-Verify) – for concise information and news, usually accompanied by links back to uscis.gov
- Facebook – for information and news, usually accompanied by links back to uscis.gov
- YouTube – for videos
- Instagram – for photos and informational graphics

The USCIS Office of Public Affairs (OPA) manages all USCIS social media accounts, working with various USCIS leadership and other offices to develop content. USCIS' posts are visible to anyone with internet access.

USCIS generally uses social media to make information and services widely available to the general public, to promote transparency and accountability, and to help those seeking information or services from USCIS. USCIS posts information only after it has been appropriately approved and vetted by OPA. Only USCIS employees acting in their official capacity are authorized to post to USCIS social media sites.

Comments on USCIS' social media channels are visible to the public. To protect their privacy, commenters should not include full names, phone numbers, email addresses, Social Security numbers, case numbers, or any other private information in comments.

USCIS does not moderate user comments on its channels before posting, but reserves the right to remove any materials that pose a security risk or otherwise violate the USCIS social media policy. Any opinions expressed in comments, except as specifically noted, are those of the individual commenters and do not reflect any agency policy, endorsement, or action. USCIS does not collect or retain comments in its records.

Use of each social media site is governed by that site's privacy policy.^[3]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See the Contact Us page on USCIS' website.

[^ 2] The USCIS Policy Manual will ultimately replace the Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), the USCIS Immigration Policy Memoranda site, and other policy repositories.

[^ 3] See the USCIS website for information on Social Media Policy.

Chapter 3 - Forms of Assistance

A. In-Person

1. Local Field Office

Persons with case-specific inquiries who have tried using the online tools and have not been able to attain the information they are looking for may call the USCIS Contact Center at 1-800-375-5283 (TTY: 1-800-767-1833). In-person appointments at Field Offices are reserved for critical services that require a person's physical presence in the office to resolve the issue.

2. Community Outreach

USCIS engages in community outreach programs to educate and increase public awareness, increase dialogue and visibility, and solicit feedback on USCIS operations. During outreach events in local communities, USCIS employees do not respond to case-specific inquiries. Anyone asking case-specific questions at outreach events should be directed to submit their inquiry through appropriate channels.

The topics of community outreach programs are varied. Information on past and future outreach events can be found on the USCIS website. The website provides a list of future engagements and instructions on how to register to attend. Many events also have call-in numbers for those unable to attend in person. The website also contains notes and supporting documents from previous engagements.

B. Online

1. USCIS Online Account

USCIS online accounts allow applicants, petitioners, and representatives to access personalized, real-time information related to their individual case 24 hours a day through any internet-connected device. Persons can also communicate directly with the USCIS Contact Center through the secure messaging function to receive email responses to their case-specific inquiries. This is the easiest and most comprehensive way to communicate with USCIS regarding case-specific issues.

2. Online Messages

Benefit requestors can send messages and inquiries directly to the USCIS Contact Center, without an online account, and receive an email or phone response within 24 to 48 hours. Since these messages are outside of USCIS' secure online account experience, Contact Center staff are limited from sharing case-specific information to ensure the privacy of benefit requestors. The USCIS online account is the preferred method of contacting the agency for easy, timely, and effective responses to case-specific inquiries.

3. Emma and Live Web Chat

Emma is the USCIS Virtual Assistant. Emma can provide immediate responses to non-case-specific questions about immigration services and benefits, guide users through our comprehensive website, and connect benefit requestors and other interested parties to a live agent through web chat for more in-depth topics and questions.

4. Email

USCIS offices may provide designated email boxes for case-specific inquiries about a pending or adjudicated petition or application. Before submitting an inquiry, the person inquiring should review all available information listed on the USCIS Contact US web page to ensure that the inquiry is properly routed.

USCIS officers should use caution when responding to email inquiries requesting case-specific information, as issues of privacy and identity may arise.^[1]

C. Telephone

1. USCIS Contact Center

For the convenience of benefit requestors and other interested parties located within the United States, USCIS provides a toll-free phone number answered by the USCIS Contact Center available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Automated information accessed through a menu of interactive options is always available. For information on when live help through a USCIS representative is available, see the USCIS Contact Center web page.

The toll-free phone number for the USCIS Contact Center is 1-800-375-5283 (TTY for the deaf, hard of hearing, or person with a speech disability: 1-800-767-1833).

Multi-Tiered Structure

The USCIS Contact Center provides escalating levels of service to handle inquiries of increasing complexity, primarily through an Interactive Voice Response (IVR) system and a multi-tiered level of live assistance.

IVR – Callers initially have the opportunity to have their questions answered directly by the IVR system. If additional assistance is needed, callers may request live assistance by selecting that option from within the IVR.

Tier 1 – Tier 1 is the first level of live assistance. Tier 1 staff members, who are contract employees, provide basic case-specific and general non-case-specific information. These responses follow a formatted script.

Tier 2 – If Tier 1 is unable to completely resolve an inquiry, the call may be transferred to the Tier 2 level of live assistance to be answered by a USCIS officer.

Callers may, at any time, request to have a call directed to a supervisor.

If an inquiry involves a case physically located at a domestic USCIS field office or service center, the USCIS Contact Center may create a service request. The service request is automatically routed to the USCIS office that can best resolve the inquiry. If an inquiry involves a case physically located at an international USCIS field office, the USCIS Contact Center may provide the caller with that office's contact information and refer the inquiry, as appropriate.

2. International Service

Persons located outside of the United States should contact the international office with jurisdiction over their place of residence. USCIS provides a complete listing of international jurisdictions and field offices and their phone numbers on the International Immigration Offices page of the USCIS website.

3. Military Help Line

USCIS provides a toll-free military help line exclusively for members of the military and their families. For information on when USCIS military help line staff are available to answer calls, see the Military Help Line web page. After-hours callers will receive an email address they can use to contact USCIS for assistance.

The toll-free phone number for the military help line is 1-877-CIS-4MIL (1-877-247-4645) (TTY: for the deaf, hard of hearing, or person with a speech disability: 1-800-767-1833).

4. Premium Processing Line

USCIS provides a toll-free phone number exclusively for inquiries about petitions filed under the Premium Processing program.^[2] The toll-free phone number for the Premium Processing Line is 1-866-315-5718.

5. Intercountry Adoptions Line

USCIS provides a toll-free phone number exclusively for inquiries about domestically filed applications and petitions under the Orphan and Hague intercountry adoption programs.^[3] The toll-free phone number for the Intercountry Adoptions Line is 1-877-424-8374.

D. Traditional Mail or Facsimile

1. Traditional Mail

General mailing addresses are publicly available to allow the submission of applications and petitions, responses to requests for evidence, or service requests in a hard copy format.^[4] Dedicated mailing addresses are available, as appropriate, to aid specific USCIS processes.

Mailing addresses are available at the Find a USCIS Office page on the USCIS website.

2. Facsimile (Fax)

USCIS does not provide general delivery facsimile (fax) numbers. While USCIS does not publish dedicated fax numbers, USCIS offices have the discretion to provide a fax number when appropriate. For example, an officer may provide a fax number for the purpose of submitting documentation electronically to aid in the efficient resolution of a case or as a method to expedite delivery of requested documents or information. Documents should not be submitted by fax unless specifically requested by a USCIS employee.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Chapter 7, Privacy and Confidentiality [1 USCIS-PM A.7].

[^ 2] See the USCIS website for more information on Premium Processing Service. See Request for Premium Processing Service (Form I-907).

[^ 3] See the USCIS website for additional adoption-related contact information and more details about Orphan or Hague Process.

[^ 4] A service request is a tool that allows stakeholders to place an inquiry with USCIS for certain applications, petitions, and services. Service requests may also be submitted through the USCIS Contact Center or online. See Chapter 4, Service Request Management Tool [1 USCIS-PM A.4].

Chapter 4 - Service Request Management Tool

A. Generating Service Requests

1. USCIS-Generated

The Service Request Management Tool (SRMT) provides USCIS staff the ability to record and transfer unresolved service requests by benefit requestors and other interested parties to the appropriate USCIS service center, domestic USCIS field office, or USCIS asylum office where the application or petition is pending a decision or was adjudicated.

If an inquiry received through a call to the USCIS Contact Center cannot be resolved during the call, and the inquiry warrants creation of a service request, USCIS Contact Center staff will create a service request. Although the majority of service requests are created by staff at the USCIS Contact Center, officers in other locations may also create service requests. Using the SRMT to create a service request allows the person inquiring to receive a response without having to call the USCIS Contact Center again or return to a USCIS office in most instances.

2. Self-Generated

By using an online portal, a person may create a service request in the following categories:

- Change of address (COA) request (unless filing as a Violence Against Women Act (VAWA), T nonimmigrant, or U nonimmigrant applicant or petitioner);^[1]

- Request regarding a notice, card, or other document that was not received;
- Request regarding a case outside normal processing time;
- Request for accommodations;^[2] or
- Request for correction of a typographic error.

Benefit requestors may also submit a service request by mailing in a hard copy to a domestic USCIS field office.^[3]

B. Responding to Service Requests

1. Timely Response

The USCIS office receiving a service request should take the necessary steps to communicate directly with the benefit requestor about the inquiry or timely relocate the inquiry to another office or organization when appropriate.

USCIS categorizes a service request based upon the urgency and request type, and assigns a target completion date based on the category. USCIS completes requests within each category on a first-in, first-out basis. In general, the goal for resolution of service requests is 15 calendar days from the date of creation.

2. Prioritized Requests

The following requests receive processing priority and should be responded to within 7 calendar days from the date of creation:

Change of Address

USCIS must process change of address (COA) requests at the earliest opportunity to reduce the potential for undeliverable mail and associated concerns. The address recorded on all open associated application or petition receipts must be updated unless instructed otherwise by the person. Address changes are only limited to select identified receipts when the person explicitly requests the COA request be restricted.

When the address listed for the applicant in any request is different from the address listed in USCIS information systems, it is considered to be an address change request, regardless of whether the request was specifically for a COA or for another reason. The address in the request is then used to change address records on all directly related receipts.

However, no COA request is inferred if the service request was initiated by a representative and the address listed in the request is the representative's address. Also, in these situations, a copy of the response should be mailed to the petitioner or applicant at his or her address of record.

USCIS does not accept COA requests on a VAWA, T nonimmigrant, or U nonimmigrant-related application or petition that are received through an SRMT. A hard-copy, signed COA request submitted through traditional mail is required. Offices should respond to VAWA, T nonimmigrant, and U nonimmigrant COA requests using the standard language.^[4]

Expedite Requests^[5]

Expedite service requests are self-identified as urgent. The person requesting expedited service may be required to submit evidence to the office processing their case to support the expedite request.

Reasonable Accommodation^[6]

Reasonable accommodation service requests must be responded to in accordance with the disability accommodations policy.

Military Referral

Military referrals have implied urgency based upon the uncertainty of reassignments and deployments.

Footnotes

[^ 1] For information on COA in VAWA, T, U, see Chapter 7, Privacy and Confidentiality, Section E, VAWA, T, and U Cases [1 USCIS-PM A.7(E)].

[^ 2] See Chapter 6, Disability Accommodation Requests [1 USCIS-PM A.6].

[^ 3] See Chapter 3, Forms of Assistance, Section D, Traditional Mail or Facsimile [1 USCIS-PM A.3(D)].

[^ 4] See Section E, VAWA, T, and U Cases, Subsection 3, USCIS Assistance [1 USCIS-PM A.7(E) (3)].

[^ 5] Expedite requests are distinct from premium processing. For information on expedite requests and premium processing, see Chapter 5, Requests to Expedite Applications or Petitions [1 USCIS-PM A.5].

[^ 6] See Chapter 6, Disability Accommodation Requests [1 USCIS-PM A.6].

Chapter 5 - Requests to Expedite Applications or Petitions

Immigration benefit requestors may request that USCIS expedite the adjudication of their applications or petitions. USCIS considers all expedite requests on a case-by-case basis and may require additional documentation to support such requests. The decision to accommodate an expedite request is within the sole discretion of USCIS.^[1] Because granting an expedite request means that USCIS would adjudicate the requestor's benefit ahead of others who filed earlier, USCIS carefully weighs the urgency and merit of each expedite request.

Expedite Criteria or Circumstances

On or after June 9, 2021,^[2] USCIS may expedite a benefit request if it falls under one or more of the following criteria or circumstance:

- Severe financial loss to a company or person, provided that the need for urgent action is not the result of the petitioner's or applicant's failure: (1) to timely file the benefit request; or (2) to timely respond to any requests for additional evidence;^[3]
- Emergencies and urgent humanitarian reasons;
- Nonprofit organization (as designated by the Internal Revenue Service (IRS)) whose request is in furtherance of the cultural or social interests of the United States;
- U.S. government interests (including cases identified as urgent by federal agencies such as the U.S. Department of Defense (DOD), U.S. Department of Labor (DOL), National Labor Relations Board (NLRB), the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ), the U.S. Department of State (DOS), DHS, or other public safety or national security interests); or
- Clear USCIS error.

Severe Financial Loss as a Basis for Expedited Treatment

A company can demonstrate that it would suffer a severe financial loss if it is at risk of failing, losing a critical contract, or required to lay off other employees. For example, a medical office may suffer severe financial loss if a gap in a doctor's employment authorization would require the medical practice to lay off its medical assistants.

Job loss may be sufficient to establish severe financial loss for a person, depending on the individual circumstances. For example, the inability to travel for work that would result in job loss might warrant expedited treatment. The need to obtain employment authorization, standing alone, without evidence of other compelling factors, does not warrant expedited treatment.

In addition, severe financial loss may also be established where failure to expedite would result in a loss of critical public benefits or services.

Expedited Treatment Based on Emergency or Urgent Humanitarian Reason

In the context of an expedite request, humanitarian reasons are those related to human welfare. Examples may include, but are not limited to, illness, disability, extreme living conditions, death in the family, or a critical need to travel to obtain medical treatment in a limited amount of time.

An emergency may include an urgent need to expedite employment authorization for healthcare workers during a national emergency such as the COVID-19 pandemic. Additionally, an expedite request may be considered under this criterion in instances where a vulnerable person's safety may be compromised due to a breach of confidentiality if there is a delay in processing the benefit application.^[4] A benefit requestor's desire to travel for vacation does not, in general, meet the definition of an emergency.

Nonprofit Organization Seeking Expedited Treatment

A nonprofit organization seeking to expedite a beneficiary's benefit request must demonstrate an urgent need to expedite the case based on the beneficiary's specific role within the nonprofit in furthering cultural or social interests (as opposed to the organization's role in furthering social or cultural interests). Examples may include a medical professional urgently needed for medical research related to a specific "social" U.S. interest (such as the COVID-19 pandemic or other socially impactful research or project) or a university professor urgently needed to participate in a specific and imminent cultural program. Another example is a religious organization that urgently needs a beneficiary's specific services and skill set to continue a vital social outreach program. In such instances, the religious organization must articulate why the respective beneficiary is specifically needed, as opposed to pointing to a general shortage alone.

Expedited Treatment Based on U.S. Government Interests

U.S. government interests may include, but are not limited to, cases identified as urgent by other government agencies, including labor and employment agencies, and public safety or national security interests.

For expedite requests made by a federal agency, involving other public safety or national security interests, the national interest need must be immediate and substantive. If the need for the action is not immediate, expedited processing is not warranted. A substantive need does not mean that a delay would pose existential or irreversible consequences to the national interests but rather that the case at hand is of a scale or a uniqueness that requires immediate action to prevent real and serious harm to U.S. interests.

Expedite requests from DOL, NLRB, DOJ, EEOC, DOS, DHS, or another government agency (federal, state, or local) must be made by a senior-level official of that agency. If the request relates to employment authorization, the request must demonstrate that the need for a person to be employment-authorized is mission-critical and goes beyond a general need to retain a particular worker or person. Examples include, but are not limited to, a noncitizen victim or witness cooperating with a federal, state, or local agency who is in need of employment authorization because the respective agency is seeking back pay or reinstatement in court proceedings.

How USCIS Assesses Requests for Expedited Treatment

Not every circumstance that fits under one of the above listed categories or examples necessarily results in expedited processing.

USCIS generally does not consider expedite requests for petitions and applications where Premium Processing Service is available. However, a petitioner that is designated as a nonprofit organization by the IRS seeking a beneficiary whose services are needed in furtherance of the cultural or social interests of the United States may request that the benefit it seeks be expedited without a fee, even if premium processing is available for that benefit. USCIS retains discretion to not accommodate that request. The same petitioner may also request premium processing for the benefit like any other petitioner if it chooses to do so.

Expedited processing of benefit requests for noncitizens with final orders of removal or noncitizens in removal proceedings is coordinated between USCIS and U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE).^[5]

To increase efficiency in the review and processing of expedite requests, USCIS does not provide justification or otherwise respond regarding decisions on expedite requests.

In addition, some circumstances may prolong or inhibit USCIS' ability to expedite certain benefit requests. For example, where an application or petition requires an on-site inspection, USCIS can only expedite that application or petition once the on-site inspection is complete.^[6] Another example of a circumstance that delays USCIS' ability to expedite a benefit request is where the benefit is ancillary to a primary application or petition that is still pending. In such cases, requesting to expedite the primary application or petition (such as an Application to Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-539) or Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129)) instead of requesting to expedite the ancillary application (such as an Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765)) would better facilitate USCIS' ability to process the ancillary application faster.

USCIS provides more information on how to make an expedite request on the How to Make an Expedite Request webpage.

Footnotes

[^ 1] For more information on expedite requests for adjudications of asylum applications, see the Affirmative Asylum Procedures Manual (PDF, 1.83 MB), Section III.B. Categories of Cases, Part 7, Expedited Processing Required, and the Affirmative Asylum Interview Scheduling webpage.

Expedite requests for refugee cases should be made to the applicable U.S. Department of State Resettlement Support Center, which facilitates informing the appropriate party of the expedite request.

[^ 2] On June 9, 2021, USCIS updated its policy to, among other things, clarify criteria and circumstances under which USCIS generally considers expedite requests; the update became effective upon publication. See USCIS Policy Alert, USCIS Expedite Criteria and Circumstances [PA-2021-12 (PDF, 293.62 KB)].

[^ 3] A timely filed request or response means a request or response that was filed by the relevant deadline; the request need not be filed at the earliest opportunity. If the requestor failed to timely file a request or response, the requestor must show that such failure was due to circumstances beyond the requestor's control.

[^ 4] See 8 U.S.C. 1367.

[^ 5] See Part E, Adjudications, Chapter 3, Jurisdiction, Section A, Coordination in Cases Involving Removal Proceedings [1 USCIS-PM E.3(A)].

[^ 6] USCIS cannot expedite certain aspects of its processing, including on-site inspections.

Chapter 6 - Disability Accommodation Requests

A. Background

USCIS accepts requests for accommodations from benefit requestors, other interested parties, and other persons with disabilities who use USCIS services and access USCIS facilities. Accommodation requests may be made in advance for instances that include, but are not limited to:

- An interview with an officer;
- An oath ceremony; or
- A USCIS-sponsored public event.

Accommodations ensure compliance with Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973,[1] which states that “[n]o otherwise qualified individual with a disability in the United States . . . shall, solely by reason of her or his disability, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any program or activity receiving federal financial assistance or under any program or activity conducted by any Executive agency.”[2]

B. Reasonable Accommodation

The essential feature of an accommodation is that it allows the person with a disability to participate in the process or activity. While USCIS is not required to make major modifications that would result in a fundamental change to the processes or cause an undue burden for the agency, USCIS makes every effort to provide accommodations to persons with disabilities. Reasonable accommodations vary, depending on the situation and the person's disability.

Benefit requestors must satisfy all of the legal requirements to receive an immigration benefit; however, USCIS must provide reasonable accommodations to persons with disabilities to afford them the opportunity to meet those requirements.

Examples of accommodations include, but are not limited to:

- Those unable to use their hands may be permitted to take a test orally rather than in writing;
- Those who are deaf or hard of hearing may be provided with a sign language interpreter for a USCIS-sponsored event;^[3]
- Those unable to speak may be allowed to respond to questions in an agreed-upon nonverbal manner;^[4]
- Those unable to travel to a designated USCIS location for an interview due to a disabling condition may be interviewed at their home or a medical facility.

C. Requesting Accommodation

1. How to Make a Disability Accommodation Request

To request disability accommodation for any phase of the application process, benefit requestors, other interested parties, and other persons with disabilities who use USCIS services and access USCIS facilities, should generally submit the request online using the Disability Accommodations for Appointments tool.^[5] Requestors should submit accommodation requests to USCIS as soon as they are aware of the need for an accommodation for a particular event. The more advance notice USCIS has, the more likely it will be able to make appropriate arrangements for the accommodation request.
^[6]

2. USCIS Points-of-Contact

To ensure accountability, each field office, application support center (ASC), or asylum office must designate at least one employee to be responsible for handling accommodation requests. All employees should be aware of the procedures for handling such requests.

If a requestor contacts the field office, ASC, or asylum office directly to request a disability accommodation for an interview, the office may enter a service request into the Service Request

Management Tool (SRMT) to work with the requestor to respond to the request, and mark the request as fulfilled when it is complete so that the request and the response are recorded.

Offices are encouraged to provide reasonable accommodation requests made by walk-ins whenever practical. If the accommodation is not available, the office should inform the requestor that the office is not able to provide the accommodation at that time, but that arrangements can be made to provide the accommodation for a future appointment or event.

3. USCIS Review

USCIS evaluates each request for a reasonable accommodation on a case-by-case basis. The Public Disability Access Coordinator must generally concur on any alternative accommodation offered or any accommodation denial before the office communicates either action to the requestor.

While a requestor is not required to include documentation of a medical condition in support of a reasonable accommodation request, an office may need documentation to evaluate the request in rare cases. In these situations, the office must consult the Public Disability Access Coordinator for guidance before the USCIS office requests medical documentation to support an accommodation request.

4. Review Timeframe

In general, the affected USCIS office determines whether it may reasonably comply with the accommodation request within 7 calendar days of receiving the request, unless unusual circumstances exist.

If an accommodation is warranted, it should be provided on the date and time of the scheduled event; rescheduling should be avoided, if possible. If an accommodation cannot be provided for the originally scheduled event, the requestor should be notified as soon as possible. Any rescheduling should occur within a reasonable period of time.

5. Reconsideration of Denied Request

To request a reconsideration of a denial of a disability accommodation request, the requestor should call the USCIS Contact Center and provide any new information they have in support of their request. Upon receiving the request, the relevant office must review the prior request and any additional information provided. The office should contact the requestor if additional information is needed.

Generally, all affirmed denials must be approved by the Public Disability Access Coordinator, the field office director, ASC manager, or asylum office director, whichever applies.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Pub. L. 93-112 (PDF) (September 26, 1973).

[^ 2] See Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, Pub. L. 93-112 (PDF), 87 Stat. 355, 394 (September 26, 1973), codified at 29 U.S.C. 794(a). See 6 CFR 15.3 for applicable definitions relating to enforcement of nondiscrimination on the basis of disability in Department of Homeland Security (DHS) federal programs or activities, which includes those conducted by USCIS.

[^ 3] This applies to any member of the public who wants to attend the event, such as a naturalization ceremony or an outreach engagement.

[^ 4] Offices should understand that, while the inability to speak is considered a disability under the Rehabilitation Act, the inability to speak the English language (while being able to speak a foreign language) is not considered a disability under the Act. Therefore, no accommodation is required and one should not be provided if a requestor is unable to speak English. No request for an interpreter should be approved unless the requestor is otherwise eligible. See, for example, 8 CFR 312.4.

[^ 5] For additional instructions on how to submit a disability accommodation request, see the Disability Accommodations for the Public webpage. Applicants who cannot submit their request online should call the USCIS Contact Center at 1-800-375-5283 (TTY: 1-800-767-1833).

[^ 6] For more information on service requests, see Chapter 4, Service Request Management Tool [1 USCIS-PM A.4]. For information on handling disability accommodations related to asylum cases, see Chapter 7, Privacy and Confidentiality, Section F, Asylees and Refugees, Subsection 3, USCIS Assistance [1 USCIS-PM A.7(F)(3)].

Chapter 7 - Privacy and Confidentiality

A. Privacy Act of 1974

The Privacy Act provides that federal agencies must protect against the unauthorized disclosure of personally identifiable information (PII) that it collects, disseminates, uses, or maintains.^[1] The Privacy Act requires that personal information belonging to U.S. citizens and lawful permanent residents (LPRs) be protected from unauthorized disclosure. Violations of these requirements may result in civil and criminal penalties.

B. Fair Information Practice Principles

DHS treats all persons, regardless of immigration status, consistent with the Fair Information Practice Principles (FIPPs).^[2] The FIPPs are a set of eight principles that are rooted in the tenets of the Privacy Act of 1974. The principles are:

- Transparency;
- Individual participation;

- Purpose specification;
- Data minimization;
- Use limitation;
- Data quality and integrity;
- Security; and
- Accountability and auditing.

The table below provides a description of each principle.

Fair Information Practice Principles

DHS Framework for Privacy Policy

Principle	Description
Transparency	DHS provides transparency for how it handles sensitive information through various mechanisms, including Privacy Impact Assessments, System of Records Notices, Privacy Act Statements, and the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA).
Individual Participation	To the extent practicable, DHS should involve persons in the process of using their personal information, and they may always request information about themselves through a FOIA request.
Purpose Specification	DHS' default action should be to not collect information, and if it is otherwise necessary, DHS should articulate the authorities that permit collection and must clearly state the purposes of the information collection.
Data Minimization	DHS collects only information relevant and necessary to accomplish the purposes specified and special emphasis is placed on reducing the use of sensitive personal information, where practical.
Use Limitation	Any sharing of information outside of the agency must be consistent with the use or purpose originally specified.

Principle	Description
Data Quality and Integrity	DHS should, to the extent practical, ensure that PII is accurate, relevant, timely, and complete.
Security	DHS uses appropriate security safeguards against risks such as loss, unauthorized access or use, destruction, modification or unintended or inappropriate disclosure.
Accountability and Auditing	DHS has a number of accountability mechanisms, including reviews of its operations, training for employees, and investigations when appropriate.

C. Personally Identifiable Information

DHS defines PII as any information that permits the identity of a person to be directly or indirectly inferred, including any information which is linked or linkable to that person regardless of whether the person is a U.S. citizen, lawful permanent resident (LPR), visitor to the United States, or a DHS employee or contractor.^[3]

Sensitive PII is defined as information which, if lost, compromised, or disclosed without authorization, could result in substantial harm, embarrassment, inconvenience, or unfairness to a person.^[4] Some examples of PII that USCIS personnel may encounter include:

- Name;
- Address;
- Date of birth; and
- Certificate of Naturalization or Citizenship number.
- Alien number (A-number);
- Social Security number;
- Driver's license or state ID number;
- Passport number; and
- Biometric identifiers.

USCIS employees have a professional and legal responsibility to protect the PII the agency collects, disseminates, uses, or maintains. All USCIS employees must follow proper procedures when handling all PII and all information encountered in the course of their work. All USCIS employees processing PII must know and follow the policies and procedures for collecting, storing, handling, and sharing PII. Specifically, USCIS employees must:

- Collect PII only when authorized;
- Limit the access and use of PII;
- Secure PII when not in use;
- Share PII, only as authorized, with persons who have a need to know; and
- Complete and remain current with all privacy, computer security, and special protected class training mandates.

D. Case-Specific Inquiries

USCIS receives a variety of case-specific inquiries, including requests for case status updates, accommodations at interviews, appointment rescheduling, and the resolution of other administrative issues. USCIS personnel are permitted to respond to these inquiries if:

- The requestor is entitled to receive the requested case-specific information; and
- Disclosure of the requested case-specific information would not violate Privacy Act requirements or other special protected class confidentiality protections.

1. Verifying Identity of Requestor

USCIS employees must verify the identity of a person inquiring about a specific application or petition. For in-person inquiries, those present must provide a government-issued identity document so that USCIS can verify their identity.

For inquiries not received in person (for example, those received through telephone call or email), it may be difficult to verify the identity of the person making the request through a government-issued document. In these cases, USCIS employees should ask for specific identifying information about the case to ensure that it is appropriate to communicate case-specific information. Examples of identifying information include, but are not limited to: receipt numbers, A-numbers, full names, dates of birth, email addresses, and physical addresses.

If a person is unable to provide identifying information that an applicant, petitioner, or representative should reasonably know, USCIS employees may refuse to respond to the request, or direct the requestor to make an appointment at a local field office or create a myUSCIS account.

2. Disclosure of Information

Except for case types with heightened privacy concerns,^[5] USCIS employees may communicate about administrative case matters if the requestor is able to demonstrate his or her identity (for example, by showing government-issued identification during an in-person encounter), or provide verifying information sufficient to demonstrate that communication would be proper. Administrative case matters are generally any issues that do not involve the legal substance or merit of an application or petition.

USCIS employees should not disclose PII when responding to case-specific requests; inquiries can generally be resolved without any discussion of PII.^[6] To ensure that a USCIS employee is not disclosing PII, the USCIS employee can always require that the requestor first provide and confirm any PII at issue. In addition, a USCIS employee may take action that results in the resending of cards, notices, or documents containing PII to addresses on file instead of directly disclosing PII to a requestor.

Interested parties may be present at in-person appointments or during telephone calls, with the consent of the applicant or petitioner. Consent is usually implied if both the applicant or petitioner and the third party are present together. However, a USCIS employee may always ask the applicant or petitioner if he or she consents to the third-party's presence if there is any doubt.

3. Communication with Address on File

USCIS sends written responses and duplicate notices to the addresses on file. Before USCIS is able to send any correspondence to a different address, the person must initiate a service request to update his or her address in USCIS systems.^[7] Change of address requests associated with cases subject to confidentiality provisions must follow separate procedures.^[8]

4. Third-Party Information

Information from other agencies, such as Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE), the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), or the Department of State (DOS) may be located in USCIS files and systems. This information must not be released in response to an inquiry, although it may be appropriate to refer the inquiry to another agency.

5. Third-Party Government Inquiries

USCIS may share records covered under the Privacy Act with written consent from the person or pursuant to a routine use listed in the applicable System of Records Notices. Before sharing information with a government entity, USCIS must determine if the disclosure and use of information is compatible with an existing routine use. Planned uses must also be compatible with the purpose for which DHS originally collected the information. There are, however, enumerated exceptions of the Act that may apply.

Congress

One exception is for disclosures to either house of Congress, or any Congressional committee, subcommittee, joint committee, or subcommittee of a joint committee, if the matter is within its jurisdiction. For all other requests from members of Congress, such as constituent requests, the person whose information is to be released must have provided the member of Congress with a privacy release for USCIS to disclose any information related to that person.

The USCIS Office of Legislative and Intergovernmental Affairs (OLIA) and designated liaisons handle all inquiries and certain correspondence from Congress to USCIS. Members of Congress, congressional offices, and congressional committees should always go through OLIA when initiating an inquiry. The USCIS and Congress webpage on USCIS' website provides instructions on how members of Congress should interact with and contact USCIS. Non-liaison USCIS employees who are contacted directly with a congressional inquiry should refer it to OLIA so that it may proceed through the proper channels.

Law Enforcement Agencies

Information may be shared with other DHS components under the existing DHS information sharing policy,^[9] which considers all DHS components one agency, as long as there is a mission need in line with the requestor's official duties.

Requests from law enforcement agencies outside of DHS must go through DHS Single Point of Service (SPS) Request for Information (RFI) Management Tool, which requires an account. Account requests can be submitted to DHS-SPS-RFI@hq.dhs.gov.

Before referring any relevant RFI to USCIS, SPS ensures any RFI is consistent with the USCIS mission, has been reviewed and cleared by DHS Counsel and Privacy (as required), and is provided a tracking number. SPS then submits the RFI to Fraud Detection and National Security (FDNS) Intelligence Division (ID). FDNS ID logs official RFIs and takes the necessary steps to process and answer them, including review by USCIS Office of the Chief Counsel and Office of Privacy.

Federal Investigators

If an Office of Personnel Management or DHS Office of Inspector General (OIG) investigator requests information, the USCIS employee should provide the information upon verifying the requestor's identity. Disclosure of any information needs to meet a routine use or be covered by a data share agreement. USCIS employees and contractors must provide prompt access for auditors, inspectors, investigators, and other personnel authorized by the OIG to any files, records, reports, or other information that may be requested either orally or in writing, and supervisors may not impede this cooperation.

Other Third-Party Inquiries

Prior to responding to a non-congressional third-party case inquiry, a written, signed, and notarized privacy release must be obtained from the applicant or petitioner. Third parties should submit a written authorization and identify the information the person desires to be disclosed. USCIS staff can accept the authorization via facsimile or email as long as the signature on the original is handwritten, and not typed or stamped.^[10] The USCIS Office of Privacy will conduct an analysis for disclosure requests for PII on persons not covered by the Privacy Act or the Judicial Redress Act, absent another mechanism that confers a right or process by which a member of the public may access agency records.

E. VAWA, T, and U Cases

1. Confidentiality Provisions

Applicants and recipients of immigration relief under the Violence Against Women Act of 1994 (VAWA) [11] and the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Prevention Act of 2000^[12] (T and U nonimmigrant status for victims of trafficking and other serious crimes) are entitled to special protections with regard to privacy and confidentiality. The governing statute prohibits the unauthorized disclosure of information about petitioners and applicants for, and beneficiaries of VAWA, T, and U-related benefit requests to anyone other than an officer or employee of DHS, the Department of Justice (DOJ), or the Department of State (DOS) who has a need to know.^[13]

This confidentiality provision is commonly referred to as “Section 384” because it originally became law under Section 384 of the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act (IIRIRA) of 1996,^[14] which protects the confidentiality of victims of domestic violence, trafficking, and other crimes who have filed for or have been granted immigration relief.

An unauthorized disclosure of information which relates to a protected person can have significant consequences. USCIS employees must maintain confidentiality in these cases. Victims of domestic violence, victims of trafficking, and victims of crimes can be put at risk, as can their family members, if information is provided to a person who is not authorized.

Anyone who willfully uses, publishes, or permits any information pertaining to such victims to be disclosed in violation of the above-referenced confidentiality provisions may face disciplinary action and be subject to a civil penalty of up to $5,000 for each violation.

2. Scope of Confidentiality

Duration of Confidentiality Requirement

By law, the confidentiality provisions apply while a VAWA, T, or U case is pending and after it is approved, and ends when the application for immigration relief is denied and all opportunities for appeal of the denial have been exhausted.

Disclosure of Information

USCIS cannot release any information relating to a protected person until the identity of the requestor of information is verified and that person's authorization to know or receive the protected information is verified. Such identity and eligibility verification must be done before responding to any inquiry, expedite request, referral, or other correspondence. Upon identity verification, USCIS can provide protected information directly to the protected person or his or her representative authorized to receive 1367-protected information.

Exceptions for Disclosure of Information

USCIS is permitted to disclose information relating to a protected person in certain, limited circumstances. These circumstances include:

- Statistical Information – Disclosure of data and statistical information may be made in the manner and circumstances permitted by law.^[15]
- Legitimate Law Enforcement Purposes – Disclosure of information may be made to law enforcement officials to be used solely for a legitimate law enforcement purpose.
- Judicial Review – Information can be disclosed in connection with judicial review of a determination provided it is in a manner that protects the confidentiality of the information.
- Applicant Waives Confidentiality – Adults can voluntarily waive the confidentiality provision; if there are multiple victims in one case, they must all waive the restrictions.
- Public Benefits – Information may be disclosed to federal, state, and local public and private agencies providing benefits, to be used solely in making determinations of eligibility for benefits.
^[16]
- Congressional Oversight Authority (for example, Government Accountability Office audits) – The Attorney General and the Secretary of Homeland Security can disclose information on closed cases to the chairmen and ranking members of Congressional Committees on the Judiciary, for the exercise of Congressional oversight authority. The disclosure must be in a manner that protects the confidentiality of the information and omits PII (including location-related information about a specific person).
- Communication with Non-Governmental Organizations (NGO) – Government entities adjudicating applications for relief^[17] and government personnel carrying out mandated duties under the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA)^[18] may, with the prior written consent of the person involved, communicate with nonprofit NGO victims' service providers for the sole purpose of assisting victims in obtaining victim services. Agencies receiving referrals are bound by the confidentiality provisions.

- National Security Purposes – The Secretary of Homeland Security, the Secretary of State, or the Attorney General may provide in their discretion the disclosure of information to national security officials to be used solely for a national security purpose in a manner that protects the confidentiality of such information.
- To sworn officers or employees of the Department of State or Department of Justice, for legitimate Department, bureau, or agency purposes.

3. USCIS Assistance

USCIS employees must ensure confidentiality is maintained when an applicant, petitioner, or beneficiary of certain victim-based benefits requests assistance.

Change of Address

Applicants with VAWA, T, or U-related cases can request a change of address by submitting an Alien's Change of Address Card (Form AR-11) with an original signature to the Vermont Service Center (VSC) by mail.

If the requestor previously filed for a waiver of the I-751 joint filing requirement because of abuse, the requestor should file a Form AR-11 with an original signature with the USCIS office assigned to work the Form I-751. The requestor can find the appropriate USCIS office by referring to the receipt number issued in response to the Form I-751 filing.^[19]

An applicant may also appear in person at a USCIS field office to request a change of address, by calling the USCIS Contact Center at 1-800-375-5283 (TTY: 1-800-767-1833) to request an in-person appointment. The applicant's identity must be verified before making the requested change. If the case is at the VSC or the Nebraska Service Center (NSC), the field office must also notify the VSC or NSC of the change of address for VAWA, T, and U cases.

Telephonic Inquiries

The identity of the person inquiring about a confidential case must be verified and that person's eligibility to receive information must also be verified. Such verification cannot be made telephonically.

F. Asylees and Refugees

1. Confidentiality Provisions

Federal regulations generally prohibit the disclosure to third parties of information contained in or pertaining to asylum applications, credible fear determinations, and reasonable fear determinations.

^[20] This includes information contained in the legacy Refugee Asylum and Parole System (RAPS) or the legacy Asylum Pre-Screening System (APSS), and Global System (the 2018 replacement for RAPS/APSS) or related information as displayed in CIS2 and PCQS, except under certain limited circumstances. As a matter of policy, the confidentiality protections in these regulations are extended to Registration for Classification as Refugee (Form I-590), Refugee/Asylee Relative Petitions (Form I-730), and Applications for Suspension of Deportation or Special Rule Cancellation pursuant to NACARA (Form I-881).

These regulations safeguard information that, if disclosed publicly, could subject the claimant to retaliatory measures by government authorities or non-state actors in the event the claimant is repatriated. Such disclosure could also endanger the security of the claimant's family members who may still be residing in the country of origin.

Moreover, public disclosure might give rise to a plausible protection claim by the claimant where one would not otherwise exist. This is because such disclosure may bring an otherwise ineligible claimant to the attention of the government authority or non-state actor against which the claimant has made allegations of mistreatment.

2. Breach of Confidentiality

Confidentiality is breached when the unauthorized disclosure of information contained in or pertaining to, these protected classes allows the third party to link the identity of the applicant to:

- The fact that the applicant or petitioner has applied for asylum or refugee status;
- Specific facts or allegations pertaining to the individual asylum or refugee claim contained in an asylum or refugee application; or
- Facts or allegations that are sufficient to give rise to a reasonable inference that the applicant has applied for asylum or refugee status.

The same principles generally govern the disclosure of information related to credible fear and reasonable fear determinations, and applications for withholding or deferral of removal under Article 3 of the Convention Against Torture, which are encompassed within the Application for Asylum and for Withholding of Removal (Form I-589). As a matter of policy, USCIS extends the regulatory safeguards to include claims under the Safe Third Country Agreement, applications for suspension of deportation, special rule cancellation of removal under NACARA 203, refugee case information, as well as refugee and asylee relative information.

Disclosures may only be made to U.S. government officials or employees and U.S. federal or state courts where there is a demonstrated need-to-know related to certain administrative, law enforcement, and civil actions. Any other disclosure requires the written consent of the claimant or the express permission of the Secretary of DHS.

3. USCIS Assistance

USCIS employees must not disclose information contained in, or pertaining to, any asylum or refugee application or claim to any third party without the written consent of the applicant, except as permitted by regulation or at the discretion of the Secretary of DHS.^[21]

This includes neither confirming nor denying that a particular person filed a protection claim by submitting any of the following:

- An Application for Asylum and for Withholding of Removal (Form I-589);
- A Registration for Classification as Refugee (Form I-590);
- A Refugee/Asylee Relative Petition (Form I-730);
- A Request for a Safe Third Country Agreement Determination;
- A Request for a Credible Fear Determination;
- A Request for a Reasonable Fear Determination; and
- An Application for Suspension of Deportation or Special Rule Cancellation of Removal (Pursuant to Section 203 of Public Law 105-100 (NACARA) (Form I-881)).

USCIS employees should respond to inquiries related to Form I-589, Form I-881, requests for information pertaining to the Safe Third Country Agreement, credible fear and reasonable fear processes, Form I-590, and Form I-730 in different ways, depending on the inquiry:

Request for Disability Accommodation at an Upcoming Form I-589 Interview

Tier 2 staff members may use the Service Request Management Tool (SRMT) to record and transfer requests to the asylum office with jurisdiction over the pending application. The asylum office then contacts the applicant to arrange for disability accommodation at the interview. While officers must not confirm or deny the existence of a pending protection claim or NACARA 203 application, those making disability accommodation requests for upcoming asylum interviews should be told that the request is being recorded and will be forwarded to the appropriate office for follow-up.

Change of Address Request

Tier 2 staff members may create a service request and submit it to the asylum office or service center with jurisdiction over the pending Form I-589, Form I-881, or Form I-730 petition. The office then fulfills the service request. While staff members must not confirm or deny the existence of a pending protection claim, those making address change requests should be told that the request is being recorded and will be forwarded to the appropriate office.

USCIS Contact Center Status Inquiries for Form I-589, Form I-881, and Form I-730

USCIS Contact Center personnel may not respond to any status inquiries, and may not confirm or deny the existence of an application or petition. Instead, USCIS Contact Center personnel should direct the caller to the Case Status Online tool. If the caller needs further assistance than the Case Status Online tool can provide, USCIS Contact Center personnel should direct the caller to the local office with jurisdiction over the application. For information on office-specific in-person appointment requirement, see the Asylum Office Locator tool. The office with jurisdiction over the application must respond to the inquiry.

USCIS Contact Center Status Inquiries for Form I-590 Applications

USCIS Contact Center personnel may not respond to any status inquiries and may not confirm or deny the existence of an application or petition. Instead, USCIS Contact Center personnel should obtain all relevant information from the inquirer and refer the inquiry to the USCIS Headquarters International and Refugee Affairs Division (IRAD) for response.

Inquiries Regarding Subsequent Applications or Petitions Based on Underlying Form I-589, Form I-590, or Form I-730

Staff members may respond to inquiries regarding subsequent applications or petitions that are based on an underlying Form I-589, Form I-590, or Form I-730 (including Application for Travel Document (Form I-131), Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765), or Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (Form I-485)). Staff members may not confirm or deny the existence of the underlying application.

General Inquiries

USCIS employees may respond to general questions about the asylum program, the U.S. Refugee Admission Program (USRAP), and credible and reasonable fear screenings.^[22] However, for all specific case status questions relating to I-589 applications or I-730 petitions, the inquirers must be directed to contact the local asylum office or service center with jurisdiction over the application. For specific case status questions relating to I-590 refugee applications, the inquiry must be referred to RAD for response.

Asylum offices may accept case inquiries from the applicant or the applicant's attorney or representative with a properly completed Notice of Entry of Appearance as Attorney or Accredited Representative (Form G-28) on file.

Asylum offices may receive case inquiries in a variety of ways, such as by mail, email, phone, fax, or in person. When it is possible to verify the identity of the applicant or attorney or representative inquiring, offices may respond using any of those communication channels. If it is not possible to verify the identity of the inquirer, asylum offices should respond to inquiries by providing a written response to the last address the applicant provided.

RAD does not respond to inquiries over the phone, but instead asks the inquirer to put his or her request in writing so that the signature and return address can be compared to information on file. RAD responds to an inquiry received by email only if the email address matches the information the applicant submitted to the Resettlement Support Center or if the principal applicant provides written consent that includes the principal applicant's signature.

G. Temporary Protected Status

1. Confidentiality Provisions

Like refugee and asylum cases, information pertaining to Temporary Protected Status (TPS) cases may not be disclosed to certain third parties because unauthorized disclosure of information may place the applicant or the applicant's family at risk.^[23]

The law prohibits the release of information contained in the TPS application or in supporting documentation to third parties without the written consent of the applicant. A third party is defined as anyone other than:

- The TPS applicant;
- The TPS applicant's attorney or authorized representative (with a properly completed Notice of Entry of Appearance as Attorney or Accredited Representative (Form G-28) on file);
- A DOJ officer, which has also been extended to include a DHS officer following the transfer of certain immigration functions from DOJ to DHS; or
- Any federal or state law enforcement agency.

2. USCIS Assistance

USCIS may not release any information contained in any TPS application and supporting documents in any form to any third party, without a court order or the written consent of the applicant.^[24] Status inquiries may not confirm or deny the existence of a TPS application, or whether a person has TPS, until the identity of the inquirer has been confirmed and it has been determined the inquirer is not a third party to whom information may not be released.

USCIS employees must adhere to these same TPS confidentiality provisions regarding the disclosure of information to third parties, even if the information is contained in a TPS-related form such as:

- The Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765), which every TPS applicant must file;
- A TPS-related waiver requested on Application for Waiver of Grounds of Inadmissibility (Form I-601); or
- A TPS-related Application for Travel Document (Form I-131).

With respect to confidentiality, USCIS employees must treat these records as they do other TPS supporting documentation in the TPS application package.

USCIS employees may respond to general questions about the TPS program.^[25] However, for all case-specific questions relating to Form I-821 applications, USCIS employees must first confirm the identity of the person and his or her eligibility to receive such information.

Offices must not take or respond to inquiries about the status of a TPS application made by telephone, fax, or email because it is not possible to sufficiently verify the identity of the inquirer. Offices may accept written status requests signed by the applicant (or the applicant's attorney or representative with a properly completed Notice of Entry of Appearance as Attorney or Accredited Representative (Form G-28) on file).

3. Exceptions for Disclosure

Information about TPS applications and information contained in supporting documentation can be disclosed to third parties in two instances:

- When it is mandated by a court order; or
- With the written consent of the applicant.

Information about TPS cases can be disclosed to officers of DOJ, DHS, or any federal or state law enforcement agency since they are not considered third parties.^[26] Information disclosed under the requirements of the TPS confidentiality regulation may be used for immigration enforcement or in any criminal proceeding.

H. Legalization

1. Confidentiality Provisions

Statutory and regulatory provisions require confidentiality in legalization cases and Legal Immigration Family Equity (LIFE) Act legalization cases, prohibiting the publishing of any information that may be identified with a legalization applicant.^[27] The laws also do not permit anyone other than sworn officers and employees of DHS and DOJ to examine individual applications.

Information contained in the legalization application can only be used in the following circumstances:

- To make a determination on the legalization application;
- For criminal prosecution of false statements violations;^[28] or
- In preparation of certain reports to Congress.

A breach in confidentiality of legalization cases can result in a $10,000 fine.^[29]

2. USCIS Assistance

Case-specific information may be provided to the applicant and the applicant's attorney or authorized representative (with a properly completed Notice of Entry of Appearance as Attorney or Accredited Representative (Form G-28) on file) after the inquirer's identity has been verified. No others are authorized to receive legalization information unless one of the enumerated exceptions to disclosure noted below applies.

3. Exceptions for Disclosure

USCIS is permitted to disclose information pertaining to legalization cases in certain, limited circumstances. These circumstances include:

Law Enforcement Purposes

USCIS is required to disclose information to a law enforcement entity in connection with a criminal investigation or prosecution, when that information is requested in writing.

Requested by an Official Coroner

USCIS is also required to disclose information to an official coroner for purposes of affirmatively identifying a deceased person (whether or not the person died as a result of a crime).

Statistical Information

Disclosure of data and statistical information may be made in the manner and circumstances permitted by law.^[30]

Available from Another Source

USCIS may disclose information furnished by an applicant in the legalization application, or any other information derived from the application, provided that it is available from another source (for example, another application or if the information is publicly available).

I. Special Agricultural Workers

1. Confidentiality Provisions

Material in A-files filed pursuant to the Special Agricultural Workers (SAW) program is protected by strict confidentiality provisions.^[31] The statute provides that the employee who knowingly uses, publishes, or permits information to be examined in violation of the confidentiality provisions may be fined not more than $10,000.^[32]

In general, USCIS may not use information furnished by the SAW applicant for any purpose other than to make a determination on the application, for termination of temporary residence, or for enforcement actions relating to false statements in applications.^[33] The applicant may not waive the confidentiality provisions, which even survive the death of the applicant.

2. USCIS Assistance

In general, it is permissible for USCIS employees to disclose only that an applicant has applied for SAW and the outcome of the adjudication. Case information may be provided to the applicant and the applicant's attorney or authorized representative (with a properly completed Notice of Entry of Appearance as Attorney or Accredited Representative (Form G-28) on file) after the inquirer's identity has been verified. No other parties are authorized to receive SAW information, unless one of the enumerated exceptions to disclosure noted below applies.

3. Exceptions for Disclosure

It is appropriate for DHS and DOJ employees to have access to SAW material. The materials are subject to the above-mentioned penalties for unlawful use, publication, or release. USCIS is permitted to disclose information pertaining to SAW cases in certain, limited circumstances. These circumstances include:

Law Enforcement Purposes

USCIS is required to disclose information to a law enforcement entity in connection with a criminal investigation or prosecution, when that information is requested in writing.

Requested by an Official Coroner

USCIS is also required to disclose information to an official coroner for purposes of affirmatively identifying a deceased person (whether or not the person died as a result of a crime).

Criminal Convictions

Information concerning whether the SAW applicant has at any time been convicted of a crime may be used or released for immigration enforcement or law enforcement purposes.

J. S Nonimmigrant Visa Category

Nonimmigrants under the S visa category are noncitizen^[34] witnesses or informants. An S nonimmigrant is not readily identified in USCIS systems. However, if a USCIS employee discovers that an inquiry is from an S nonimmigrant or from someone who has applied for such status, the case must be handled carefully.

Inquiries regarding the following should come from a law enforcement entity:^[35]

- An Interagency Alien Witness and Informant Record (Form I-854A);
- An Interagency Alien Witness and Informant Adjustment of Status (Form I-854B); and
- An Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765) filed on the basis of being a principal nonimmigrant witness or informant in S classification.

If USCIS receives an inquiry regarding the status of a Form I-854 or a Form I-765 filed as an S nonimmigrant, the USCIS employee must neither confirm nor deny the existence of such applications and should inform the person that inquiries on these applications must be submitted through appropriate law enforcement channels.

Under no circumstances may USCIS employees ask questions about the S nonimmigrant's role in cooperating with law enforcement, the type of criminal activity for which the nonimmigrant is an informant or witness, or any specific information about the case in which the S nonimmigrant may be involved.

K. Witness Security Program

1. Program Participants

Participation in the Witness Security Program (commonly known as the Witness Protection Program) is not reflected in USCIS systems. Applicants in the Witness Security Program should not tell anyone, including USCIS employees, that they are participants in the program. A separate immigration file is created for a new identity of a participant in the program, and information from before and after the change in identity must be in separate files. However, one file will have documentation of a legal name change.

2. USCIS Assistance

If an applicant indicates that he or she is in the Witness Security Program, the applicant should be referred to the U.S. Marshals Service.^[36] Also, under no circumstances should USCIS employees ask questions about why or how the applicant was placed in the Witness Security Program or any specific information about the case which resulted in the applicant being placed in the Witness Security Program.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Privacy Act of 1974, Pub. L. 93-579 (PDF), 88 Stat. 1896 (December 31, 1974) (codified at 5 U.S.C. 552a (PDF)).

[^ 2] See DHS Privacy Policy Guidance Memorandum (PDF), issued April 25, 2017.

[^ 3] See Privacy Incident Handling Guidance (PDF), DHS Instruction Guide 047-01-008, issued December 4, 2017.

[^ 4] See Privacy Incident Handling Guidance (PDF), DHS Instruction Guide 047-01-008, issued December 4, 2017.

[^ 5] The enhanced privacy protections and other confidentiality protections associated with certain applications and petitions mean that merely acknowledging the existence of a pending petition or application could violate statutory and regulatory requirements. As a result, when responding to inquiries about these types of cases, including Violence Against Women Act (VAWA), T, U, and asylum cases, USCIS employees should follow the policies in place for those specific benefits. For more information, see Section E, VAWA, T, and U Cases [1 USCIS-PM A.7(E)] through Section K, Witness Security Program [1 USCIS-PM A.7(K)].

[^ 6] A case's status generally refers to its current posture in the adjudication process, which is dictated by the last action taken. For example, a case could be pending background checks, with an officer, awaiting response to a request for evidence (RFE), or with a decision issued on a given date.

[^ 7] See USCIS Change of Address web portal. See Chapter 4, Service Request Management Tool, Section B, Responding to Service Requests [1 USCIS-PM A.4(B)].

[^ 8] See Section E, VAWA, T, and U Cases, Subsection 3, USCIS Assistance [1 USCIS-PM A.7(E) (3)].

[^ 9] See The DHS Policy for Internal Information Exchange and Sharing.

[^ 10] For requests from federal, state, or local government agency representatives who want to review or want copies of documents from an A-file, USCIS employees should refer to USCIS records procedures regarding outside agency requests for USCIS files.

[^ 11] See Pub. L. 103-322 (PDF) (September 13, 1994).

[^ 12] See Pub. L. 106-386 (PDF) (October 28, 2000).

[^ 13] See 8 U.S.C. 1367.

[^ 14] See Pub. L. 104-208, 110 Stat. 3009-546, 3009-652 (September 30, 1996).

[^ 15] See 13 U.S.C. 8.

[^ 16] See 8 U.S.C. 1641(c).

[^ 17] This applies to application for relief under 8 U.S.C. 1367(a)(2).

[^ 18] See INA 101(i)(1).

[^ 19] For more information regarding change of address procedures, see the Change of Address Information webpage.

[^ 20] See 8 CFR 208.6.

[^ 21] See 8 CFR 208.6.

[^ 22] Examples of general inquiries include: who can apply for asylum or refugee status, how to apply for asylum or access the USRAP, bars to protection, whether applicants are eligible for work authorization, and number of days it normally takes before an interview is scheduled.

[^ 23] See INA 244(c)(6). See 8 CFR 244.16.

[^ 24] See 8 CFR 244.16 for exceptions.

[^ 25] Examples of general inquiries include: Who can apply for TPS, how to apply for TPS, bars to TPS, whether applicants are eligible for work authorization, and the number of days it normally takes to adjudicate an application for TPS.

[^ 26] See 8 CFR 244.16.

[^ 27] See INA 245A(c)(4)-(5) . See 8 CFR 245a.2(t), 8 CFR 245a.3(n) , and 8 CFR 245a.21.

[^ 28] See INA 245A(c)(6).

[^ 29] See INA 245A(c)(5)(E).

[^ 30] See 13 U.S.C. 8.

[^ 31] See INA 210 . This pertains to the 1987-1988 SAW program.

[^ 32] See INA 210(b)(6)(D).

[^ 33] See INA 210(b)(7).

[^ 34] In this Policy Manual, the term noncitizen, unless otherwise specified, means a person who is not a citizen or national of the United States. This term is synonymous with “alien” as defined in INA 101(a)(3) (8 U.S.C. 1101(a)(3)).

[^ 35] See 8 CFR 274a.12(c)(21).

[^ 36] Officers can find information on how to contact their local U.S. Marshals Service office (if they are in the United States) on the U.S. Marshals Service website. Officers should advise applicants to consult with the U.S. Marshals Service on how to handle the disclosure of their participation in the Witness Protection Program.

Chapter 8 - Conduct in USCIS Facilities

A. Privacy in USCIS Offices

When communicating about personal or case specific information, both USCIS employees and the public should note the importance of protecting privacy.^[1] Whenever possible, both USCIS employees and the public should take common sense steps to make communications as private as possible. For example, USCIS employees should:

- Avoid projecting so that others in the room can clearly hear conversations that involve personal information; and
- For in-person encounters about case-specific inquiries, ensure that inquirers are given sufficient space so that documents presented are not on display for others to see.

USCIS must strike a balance between quickly and accurately assisting large groups of benefit requestors on the one hand, and protecting the privacy of all persons on the other. USCIS employees and benefit requestors must work together to strike this balance as best as possible. Persons contacting USCIS regarding a matter with heightened privacy considerations should work with USCIS employees to ensure that their privacy is protected.

B. Electronic Devices

Visitors must abide by applicable policies established by the facility in which they are seeking services. Depending on the facility's policies, visitors may be permitted to possess cell phones, personal digital assistants, tablets, laptops, and other electronic devices.

No one may photograph or record at a USCIS office except when observing naturalization or citizenship ceremonies. In addition, phones should be silenced while in the waiting area and any conversations should be kept to a low level so as not to disrupt others. Phones should be turned off during interviews or while being served by USCIS staff at the information counter.

To ensure successful implementation of this guidance, USCIS field offices are encouraged to:

- Ensure all USCIS federal and contract employees are aware of the cell phone usage policies;
- Ensure all visitors are informed of the cell phone usage policies; and
- Display posters and signage regarding this guidance in common areas.

Footnote

[^ 1] See Chapter 7, Privacy and Confidentiality [1 USCIS-PM A.7].

Chapter 9 - Feedback, Complaints, and Reporting Misconduct

A. Feedback

1. USCIS Contact Center

USCIS conducts telephone interviews every month with callers who have used the USCIS Contact Center within the past 90 days. USCIS may contract with a private company to execute this task. The interviews that are conducted represent a statistically valid sample.

2. In-Person Appointments

Field offices may provide feedback forms in their waiting rooms. If such forms are provided, field offices should also provide a place within the office to deposit the feedback forms.

3. USCIS Website

In February 2010, USCIS implemented the American Customer Satisfaction Index (ACSI) Survey on the USCIS website. This recognized instrument is a voluntary, randomized, pop-up, online survey offered to USCIS website users. By participating in this survey, USCIS became part of the E-Government Satisfaction Index and joined more than one hundred other government organizations and agencies that have already implemented this survey and are receiving feedback.

USCIS reviews the results of the survey on a quarterly basis and identifies opportunities to improve the USCIS website. Survey data also informs USCIS where resources might best be used to affect overall satisfaction.

USCIS also reviews a wide assortment of research papers and other products available from the survey administrator to help USCIS in data gathering, analysis, and site improvement activities.

B. Complaints^[1]

1. Ways of Submitting Complaints

Complaint in USCIS Office

Persons can make a complaint in a USCIS office by asking to speak to a supervisor. In these situations, a supervisor must be made available within a reasonable amount of time. The supervisor should take the complainant's name and information about the nature of the complaint. The supervisor should attempt to resolve the issue before the complainant leaves the office.

Submit Written Complaint

Written complaints may include handwritten letters, emails, or faxes.^[2]

Contact Office of Inspector General Directly^[3]

Contact information for DHS Office of Inspector General (OIG) can be found on both the USCIS website and on the DHS website. OIG contact information must also be displayed in a public area and visible in every USCIS field office.

File Complaint with USCIS Headquarters

USCIS Headquarters (HQ) contact information is provided on USCIS' website. If the complaint is directed to the wrong directorate or program office, the complaint must be forwarded to the appropriate HQ entity.

Ask to Speak to Contact Center Supervisor

If a caller is dissatisfied with the service he or she received during a call to the USCIS Contact Center, the caller may ask to speak to a supervisor.^[4] Both Tier 1 and Tier 2 staff members must transfer the call to a supervisor.

2. Complaints Received

A person should not be expected to know where to first submit a complaint or how to elevate a complaint if they think that their issue has not been adequately addressed. Under no circumstances should a person's complaint be dismissed or disregarded because the proper process for filing a complaint was not followed. All complaints received must be handled appropriately.

All complaints should be responded to by providing a written response, telephone call, or if applicable, addressing the complaint in person upon submission. The response should explain steps taken to resolve the issue. In cases where the complaint cannot be resolved in a reasonable time, the response should acknowledge the receipt of the complaint, when a resolution is expected, and any additional action the person may take.

Applicants with complaints about being victimized by a person engaged in the unauthorized practice of immigration law (UPIL) should be directed to USCIS' website where they can find state-by-state reporting information, as well as information on how to report UPIL to the Federal Trade Commission.

C. Reporting Allegations of Misconduct

Benefit requestors and other interested parties should report allegations of misconduct by USCIS employees.^[5]

1. Employee Misconduct

Allegations of misconduct by USCIS employee and contractors should be reported immediately to the USCIS Office of Investigations (OI) or the DHS Office of the Inspector General (OIG). Allegations can include, but are not limited to:

- Fraud, corruption, bribery, and embezzlement;
- Sexual advances or sexual misconduct;
- Theft or misuse of funds and theft of government property;
- Perjury;
- Physical assault;^[6]
- Unauthorized release of classified or special protected class^[7] information;
- Drug use or possession;
- Unauthorized use or misuse of sensitive official government databases;
- Misuse of official position for private gain;
- Misuse of a government vehicle or property;
- Failure to properly account for government fund;
- Unauthorized use or misuse of a government purchase or travel card;
- Falsification of travel documents; and
- Falsification of employment application documents.

2. Reporting Employee Misconduct

Reporting Employee Misconduct

Contact Information^[8]

DHS Office	Phone and Fax	Mail
USCIS OI	202-233-2453 (Fax)	Office of Investigations Attn: Intake Mail Stop: 2275 U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services

DHS Office	Phone and Fax	Mail
		633 Third Street NW, 3rd Floor, Suite 350 Washington, DC 20529-2275
DHS OIG	Toll-free hotline: 800-323-8603 202-254-4297 (Fax)	DHS Office of Inspector General, Mail Stop: 0305 Attn: Office of Investigations - Hotline 245 Murray Lane, SW Washington, DC 20528-0305

USCIS OI makes every effort to maintain the confidentiality of informational sources. However, for investigations in which an allegation is substantiated and disciplinary action is proposed, the subject of such investigation is entitled to review documentation and evidence relied upon as the basis for the proposed action.

OI refers matters to DHS OIG for review and investigative determination as required, depending on the nature of the allegations included in the report. If the allegation either does not meet the criteria for referral to DHS OIG or is not accepted by DHS OIG for investigation, OI may resolve the matter by conducting an investigation; referring the matter for an official management inquiry, if appropriate; or referring the matter to the appropriate USCIS manager for information and action as necessary.

As a matter of procedure, OI does not provide a complainant, victim, witness, or subject of a complaint with the initial investigative determination of a complaint, since a disclosure of this nature could adversely impact the investigative process or agency resolution of the alleged behavior.

Any allegation may also be reported by contacting DHS OIG directly either through a local OIG field office,^[9] or by one of the methods above.

3. Allegations of Discrimination

Allegations of discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, parental status, protected genetic information, national origin, age, or disability should be promptly reported to a USCIS supervisor or to the DHS Office for Civil Rights and Civil Liberties (CRCL).^[10] In addition, allegations involving physical assault (such as grabbing, fondling, hitting, or shoving) should be reported to OI or DHS OIG. CRCL's website also contains detailed information about avenues for filing complaints with different offices and components of DHS.^[11]

Contact Information

Email	Fax	Mail
CRCLCompliance@hq.dhs.gov	202-401-4708	U.S. Department of Homeland Security Office for Civil Rights and Civil Liberties 245 Murray Lane, SW, Building 410 Mail Stop: 0190 Washington, DC 20528

D. Reporting Fraud, Abuse, and Scams

Benefit requestors and other interested parties should report fraud, abuse, and scams as indicated on the USCIS Contact Us page.

In addition, immigration fraud can be reported to:

- Immigration and Customs Enforcement;
- Department of Labor's Wage and Hour Division;
- The Federal Trade Commission; and
- State authorities.

The USCIS website also contains information on common scams and how to avoid scams.

Footnotes

[^ 1] This section specifically addresses complaints that do not involve egregious or criminal misconduct. For information on the Office of Security and Integrity's policy on reporting criminal and egregious misconduct, see Section C, Reporting Allegations of Misconduct [1 USCIS-PM A.9(C)].

[^ 2] See Appendix: Dissatisfaction with USCIS: Terms and Definitions [1 USCIS-PM A.9, Appendices Tab] for information on where to send complaints.

[^ 3] See Appendix: Dissatisfaction with USCIS: Terms and Definitions [1 USCIS-PM A.9, Appendices Tab] for information on how to contact the OIG.

[^ 4] See Chapter 3, Forms of Assistance, Section C, Telephone [1 USCIS-PM A.3(C)].

[^ 5] USCIS employees are also subject to mandatory reporting requirements for known or suspected misconduct by federal employees and contractors.

[^ 6] Physical assault may include grabbing, fondling, hitting, or shoving.

[^ 7] See Chapter 7, Privacy and Confidentiality [1 USCIS-PM A.7].

[^ 8] Allegations reported directly to the DHS OIG may also be reported through a local DHS OIG field office.

[^ 9] A list of OIG Office of Investigations field offices is available on the DHS OIG's website.

[^ 10] See the File a Civil Rights Complaint page on the DHS website.

[^ 11] See How to File a Complaint with the Department of Homeland Security.

Part B - Submission of Benefit Requests

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 10 - An Overview of the Adjudication Process \(External\) \(PDF, 2.55 MB\)

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

Those seeking immigration benefits in the United States must generally request benefits by filing the appropriate USCIS form(s) with USCIS.^[1] Proper submission of benefit requests provides USCIS the opportunity to determine whether a person is initially eligible for the benefit requested and facilitates an efficient management of requests.^[2]

B. Background

With the Immigration Act of 1891, the federal government assumed direct control of inspecting, admitting, rejecting, and processing all immigrants seeking admission to the United States.^[3] On January 2, 1892, the Immigration Service opened Ellis Island in New York Harbor. The Immigration Service began collecting arrival manifests from each incoming ship. Inspectors then questioned arrivals about their admissibility and noted their admission or rejection on the manifest records.^[4]

Over the years, different federal government departments and offices have adjudicated immigration benefit requests. The process of submitting benefit requests has also changed over time. Today, requestors generally seek benefits from USCIS by submitting specific forms; the forms also help guide requestors in collecting and submitting necessary evidence. USCIS uses forms to establish the record, verify identity, and adjudicate the benefit request.

USCIS is primarily funded by immigration and naturalization benefit request fees charged to applicants and petitioners.^[5] Fees collected from individuals and entities filing immigration benefit requests are deposited into the Immigration Examinations Fee Account (IEFA). These fee collections fund the cost of fairly and efficiently adjudicating immigration benefit requests, including those provided without charge to refugee, asylum, and certain other applicants.

Form Types

USCIS adjudicates immigration benefit requests in and outside the United States. The table below provides a list of the major benefits USCIS provides, the corresponding form(s), and corresponding Policy Manual guidance for more information.^[6]

Common USCIS-Issued Immigration Benefits

Benefit Sought	Relevant Form(s)	For More Information

Benefit Sought	Relevant Form(s)	For More Information
Nonimmigrant status	Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129)
	Petition for Alien Fiancé(e) (Form I-129F)
	Petition for U Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-918)	Volume 2, Nonimmigrants [2 USCIS-PM]
	Petition for Qualifying Family Member of a U-1 Nonimmigrant (Form I-929)
	Application to Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-539)

Benefit Sought	Relevant Form(s)	For More Information
Immigrant status	Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130)
	Immigrant Petition for Alien Worker (Form I-140)	Volume 6, Immigrants [6 USCIS-PM]
	Petition for Amerasian, Widow(er), or Special Immigrant (Form I-360)
	Immigrant Petition by Alien Investor (Form I-526)	Volume 6, Immigrants, Part G, Investors [6 USCIS-PM G]
	Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (Form I-485)	Volume 7, Adjustment of Status [7 USCIS-PM]
Refugee or asylee status	Application for Asylum and for Withholding of Removal (Form I-589)	Volume 4, Refugees [4 USCIS-PM] Volume 5, Asylees [5 USCIS-PM]
	Refugee/Asylee Relative Petition (Form I-730)
Temporary Protected Status	Application for Temporary Protected Status (Form I-821)	Volume 3, Protection and Parole [3 USCIS-PM]
Employment authorization	Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765)	Volume 10, Employment Authorization [10 USCIS-PM]

Benefit Sought	Relevant Form(s)	For More Information
Travel authorization (including reentry permit, humanitarian parole, and advance parole document)	Application for Travel Document (Form I-131)	Volume 11, Travel and Identity Documents [11 USCIS-PM]
Citizenship	Application for Naturalization (Form N-400)	Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization [12 USCIS-PM]
	Application for Certificate of Citizenship (Form N-600)
	Application for Citizenship and Issuance of Certificate Under Section 322 (Form N-600K)	Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization, Part H, Children of U.S. Citizens [12 USCIS-PM H]

Benefit Sought	Relevant Form(s)	For More Information
Overcoming Inadmissibility	Application for Permission to Reapply for Admission into the U.S. After Deportation or Removal (Form I-212)
	Application for Waiver of Grounds of Inadmissibility (Form I-601)
	Application by Refugee for Waiver of Grounds of Excludability (Form I-602)	Volume 9, Waivers and Other Forms of Relief [9 USCIS-PM]
	Application for Advance Permission to Enter as a Nonimmigrant (Form I-192)
	Application for Waiver of Grounds of Inadmissibility (Form I-690)

Each USCIS form has accompanying instructions that explain how to complete the form, as well as the necessary supporting evidence and fees that must be submitted with the completed form.^[7] In addition, some forms may require the submission of biometric information and an additional fee for biometric processing.^[8]

C. Legal Authorities

- INA 103 - Powers and duties of the Secretary, Under Secretary, and Attorney General
- 8 CFR 103.2 - Submission and adjudication of benefit requests
- 8 CFR 103.7 - Fees

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(1).

[^ 2] The terms “benefit request” and “immigration benefit request,” as used in this Part, include, but are not limited to, all requests funded by the Immigration Examinations Fee Account (IEFA). These terms may also refer to forms or requests not directly resulting in an immigration benefit, such as those resulting in an exercise of prosecutorial discretion by DHS.

[^ 3] See Pub. L. 55-551 (March 3, 1891).

[^ 4] See the USCIS History and Genealogy website for additional information. See Overview of Legacy Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) History (PDF, 284.73 KB).

[^ 5] See INA 286(m). See 8 CFR 103.7(c).

[^ 6] See the USCIS website for a complete list of all USCIS forms and form instructions.

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 103.2. For a list of all forms and form instructions, see the USCIS Forms page.

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(1).

Chapter 2 - Signatures

A. Signature Requirement

USCIS requires a valid signature on applications, petitions, requests, and certain other documents filed with USCIS.^[1] Except as otherwise specifically authorized, a benefit requestor must personally sign his or her own request before filing it with USCIS.^[2]

In order to maintain the integrity of the immigration benefit system and validate the identity of benefit requestors, USCIS rejects any benefit request with an improper signature and returns it to the requestor.^[3] USCIS does not provide an opportunity to correct (or cure) a deficient signature. The benefit requestor, however, may resubmit the benefit request with a valid signature. As long as all other filing requirements are met, including payment of the required fee, USCIS may accept the resubmitted benefit request.

If USCIS accepts a request for adjudication and later determines that it has a deficient signature, USCIS denies the request. If USCIS needs additional information to confirm that a person^[4] is authorized to sign on behalf of another person, corporation, or other legal entity, USCIS may issue either a Request for Evidence (RFE) or a Notice of Intent to Deny (NOID) to confirm that such signature authority existed at the time the document was submitted.

If USCIS issues a denial based on a deficient signature or unauthorized power of attorney (POA), the benefit requestor retains any motion and appeal rights associated with the applicable form.^[5]

B. Valid Signature

A valid signature consists of any handwritten mark or sign made by a person to signify the following:

- The person knows of the content of the request and any supporting documents;
- The person has reviewed and approves of any information contained in such request and any supporting documents; and
- The person certifies under penalty of perjury that the request and any other supporting documents are true and correct.

A valid signature does not need to be legible or in English, and may be abbreviated as long as this is consistent with how the person signing normally signs his or her name. A valid signature does not have to be in cursive handwriting. A person may use an “X” or similar mark as his or her signature. A signature is valid even if the original signature on the document is photocopied, scanned, faxed, or similarly reproduced. Regardless of how it is transmitted to USCIS, the copy must be of an original document containing an original handwritten signature, unless otherwise specified. The regulations do not require that the person signing submit an “original” or “wet ink” signature on a petition, application, or other request to USCIS.

When determining whether a signature is acceptable, officers should review any applicable regulations, form instructions, and policy to ensure that the signature on a particular benefit request is proper. USCIS does not accept signatures created by a typewriter, word processor, stamp, auto-sign, or similar device.

For benefit requests filed electronically as permitted by form instructions, USCIS accepts signatures in an electronic format. Benefit requestors must follow the instructions provided to properly sign electronically.^[6]

Acceptable and Unacceptable Signatures

Acceptable	Unacceptable
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Original signature• Handwritten “X,” or similar mark, in ink (including a fingerprint, if unable to write)	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Typed name on signature line• Signature by an attorney or representative signing for the requestor or requestor’s child

Acceptable	Unacceptable
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Abbreviated signature, if that is the normal signature Signature of parent or legal guardian of benefit requestor if requestor is under 14 years of age Signature by the benefit requestor's legal guardian, surrogate, or person with a valid durable power of attorney or a similar legally binding document^[7] An original signature on the benefit request that is later photocopied, scanned, faxed, or similarly reproduced, unless otherwise required by form instructions Electronic signature^[8] 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Signature created by a typewriter, word processor, stamp, auto-pen, or similar device^[9]

C. Who May Sign

The signer of a benefit request or any document submitted to USCIS affirms that the signer has authority to sign the document, has knowledge of the facts being represented in the document, and attests to the veracity of the facts and claims made in the document. Signers may be held accountable for any fraud or material misrepresentation associated with the benefit request.

For any particular benefit request, USCIS may specify the signature requirements, as well as related evidentiary requirements, to establish signatory authority. Benefit requestors should refer to the benefit request and any accompanying instructions for benefit-specific information on signature requirements.

1. Benefit Requestors Themselves

In general, any person requesting an immigration benefit must sign their own immigration benefit request, and any other associated documents, before filing it with USCIS.^[10] Therefore, corporations or other legal entities, attorneys, accredited representatives, agents,^[11] preparers, and interpreters generally may not sign a benefit request, or associated documents, for a requestor.

By signing the benefit request, the requestor certifies under penalty of perjury that the benefit request, and all evidence submitted with it, either at or after the time of filing, is true and correct.

2. Parents and Legal Guardians of Requestors

A parent may sign a benefit request on behalf of a child who is under 14 years of age.^[12] Children 14 years of age or older must sign on their own behalf. If a parent signs on behalf of a child, the parent must submit a birth certificate or adoption decree to establish the parent-child relationship.

A legal guardian^[13] may also sign a benefit request on behalf of a child who is under 14 years of age, as well as for a mentally incompetent person of any age.^[14]

By signing the benefit request, the parent or guardian certifies under penalty of perjury that the benefit request, and all evidence submitted with it, either at or after the time of filing, is true and correct.

Legal Guardian

A legal guardian is a person who a proper court or public authority has designated as the benefit requestor's legal guardian or surrogate and who is authorized to exercise legal authority over the requestor's affairs. Legal guardian does not include persons who were not appointed by the proper court or public authority, even if they have a legitimate interest in the legal affairs of the child or incapacitated adult, are acting in loco parentis, or are a family member.^[15]

USCIS requires documentation to establish the legal guardian's authority to sign a benefit request on behalf of the child or mentally incompetent requestor. Acceptable documentation includes, but is not limited to, official letters of guardianship or other orders issued by a court or government agency legally authorized to make such appointment under the law governing the place where the child or incapacitated requestor resides.

Designated Representative

For purposes of naturalization, a designated representative may also sign for the applicant who is unable to understand or communicate an understanding of the Oath of Allegiance because of a physical or developmental disability or mental impairment.^[16]

Durable Power of Attorney Requirements

USCIS accepts a durable POA or similar legally binding document only in the case of an incapacitated adult. A formal court appointment is not necessary if a person signs on behalf of an incapacitated adult under the authority of a POA.

A POA is a written authorization to act on another's behalf in private or business affairs or other legal matters. A durable POA is a contract signed while a person is still competent that assigns power of attorney in the event that the person becomes incapacitated at some point in the future.^[17]

In most cases, the language of the durable POA specifies steps that need to be taken in order for the durable POA to take effect. To assess whether a durable POA is valid and in effect, USCIS generally requires, at minimum, a copy of the durable POA, as well as evidence showing that the steps required for the durable POA to take effect have occurred. Often this evidence includes a physician's statement indicating that the durable POA is in effect as the result of the incapacitated adult's disability. USCIS accepts a durable POA only if it complies with the state laws where it was executed. It is the burden of the person making the request to demonstrate that a durable POA is valid and in effect under the applicable state law.

If the person providing signatory authority under the POA is also acting as the incapacitated benefit requestor's attorney or authorized representative for purposes of appearing before DHS, the person must submit a Notice of Entry of Appearance as Attorney or Accredited Representative (Form G-28), and meet other regulatory requirements.^[18]

3. Authorized Signers for Corporations or Other Legal Entities^[19]

Under the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA), corporations and other legal entities, such as limited partnerships (LP), professional corporations (PC or P.C.), limited liability companies (LLC), or limited liability partnerships (LLP), may file certain requests with USCIS. Such a filing may include a request to classify a noncitizen as an immigrant or nonimmigrant under a specific employment-based category, for example.

Benefit requests filed with USCIS by such legal entities may only be signed by a person with the authority to sign on behalf of the petitioning entity. Authorized persons may include, but are not limited to:

- An executive officer of a corporation or P.C. with authority to act on behalf of the corporate entity and legally bind and commit the corporate entity in all matters (for example, chief executive officer, president, or vice president);
- A managing partner or managing member of an LLC or LLP;
- A duly authorized partner of a partnership;
- An attorney employed in an employer-employee relationship by a corporation or other legal entity as its legal representative, or as a legal representative by the corporation or other legal entity's legal department in an employer-employee relationship (for example, in-house counsel, or other attorney employees or contractors);
- A person employed within the entity's human resources, human capital, employee relations, personnel, or similar department who is authorized to sign legal documents on behalf of the entity;
- An executor or administrator of an estate;
- A trustee of a trust or a duly appointed conservator; or

- Any other employee^[20] of the entity who has the authority to legally bind and commit the entity to the terms and conditions attached to the specific request and attestations made in the request.

A sole proprietor is the only person authorized to sign a request filed on behalf of a sole proprietorship.

In all cases involving authorized signers for corporations or other legal entities, the benefit request must contain a statement by the person signing the request, affirming that:

- He or she has the legal authority to file the request on the petitioning employer's behalf;
- The employer is aware of all of the facts stated in the request; and
- Such factual statements are complete, true, and correct.

If such affirmation if the form itself, a signature by the person filing the form may be sufficient to meet this requirement. If the affirmation specified above is not contained in the form, the authorized signer must provide a separate statement affirming that he or she has the authority to legally bind the corporation or other legal entity.

If USCIS has reason to doubt a person's authority to sign or act on behalf of a corporation or other legal entity, USCIS may request evidence that demonstrates the person has the requisite legal authority to sign the request. Such requested evidence may include, but is not limited to:

- Bylaws;
- Articles of organization;
- A letter reflecting delegation of such authority from a corporate officer or board member;
- Board of director's minutes reflecting the grant or the board's approval of such authority being exercised by the person in question; or
- A similar document that indicates the employee may legally bind the corporation or other legal entity with his or her signature.

D. Clarification Regarding Form G-28

An attorney or accredited representative may sign and submit a Notice of Entry of Appearance as Attorney or Accredited Representative (Form G-28) to certify that the person, corporation, or other legal entity named in the Form G-28 has authorized the attorney or representative to act on the person's or legal entity's behalf in front of Department of Homeland Security (DHS). However, a Form G-28 by itself does not authorize a representative to sign a request or other document on behalf of a person or legal entity. Further, an attorney or representative may not use a POA to sign a Form G-28 on behalf of a person or legal entity to authorize his or her own appearance.

Footnotes

[^ 1] Except as specifically authorized in the regulations, this guidance, or in the respective form instructions, an applicant, petitioner, or requestor must personally sign his or her own request before filing it with USCIS.

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(2). The term “request” refers to any written request for an immigration benefit, service, or request for action, whether the request is submitted on an Office of Management and Budget-approved form or is an informal written request submitted to USCIS. The term also includes any form supplements and any other materials that require the signature of the requestor. An example of an exception to this requirement is for naturalization applications where a designated representative may sign an application on behalf of an applicant who otherwise qualifies for an oath waiver under INA 337(a) because of a physical or developmental disability or mental impairment. For more information, see Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization, Part J, Oath of Allegiance, Chapter 3, Oath of Allegiance Modifications and Waivers, Section C, Waiver of the Oath [12 USCIS-PM J.3(C)].

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(7).

[^ 4] Unless otherwise specified, the term “person” as used in the Policy Manual refers to a natural person.

[^ 5] A rejection of a filing with USCIS may not be appealed, see 8 CFR 103.2(a)(7)(iii).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(2).

[^ 7] Must contain evidence (such as a physician's statement) indicating that the durable POA is in effect as a result of the person's disability.

[^ 8] For benefit requests filed electronically as permitted by form instructions, USCIS accepts signatures in an electronic format. Benefit requestors must follow the instructions provided to properly sign electronically, see 8 CFR 103.2(a)(2).

[^ 9] In certain instances, a stamped signature may be allowed as provided by the form instructions. For example, a health department physician who is acting as a blanket-designated civil surgeon and submitting a vaccination assessment for a refugee adjusting status on the Report of Medical Examination and Vaccination Record (Form I-693) may provide an original (handwritten) or stamped signature, as long as it is the signature of the health department physician. See Form I-693 instructions (PDF, 540.17 KB). See Volume 8, Admissibility, Part B, Health-Related Grounds of Inadmissibility, Chapter 4, Review of Medical Examination Documentation, Section C, Documentation Completed by Civil Surgeon, Subsection 3, Signatures [8 USCIS-PM B.4(C)(3)]. For benefit requests filed electronically as permitted by form instructions, USCIS accepts signatures in an electronic format.

Benefit requestors must follow the instructions provided to properly sign electronically, see 8 CFR 103.2(a)(2).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(2).

[^ 11] This Part does not address agents who are filing as a petitioner on behalf of a corporation or other legal entity seeking an H, O, or P nonimmigrant worker, as provided in 8 CFR 214.2(h)(2)(i)(F), 8 CFR 214.2(h)(5)(i)(A), 8 CFR 214.2(h)(6)(iii)(B), 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(i), 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(iv)(E), 8 CFR 214.2(p)(2)(i), and 8 CFR 214.2(p)(2)(iv)(E). See the governing regulations and Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) instructions for more information on the applicable signature requirements for these particular nonimmigrant categories.

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(2).

[^ 13] If a legal guardian signs on behalf of a requestor, the legal guardian must submit evidence to establish legal guardianship.

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(2).

[^ 15] Different jurisdictions may have different terms for legal guardians, including conservator, committee, tutor, or other titles designating a duly appointed surrogate.

[^ 16] See Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization, Part J, Oath of Allegiance, Chapter 3, Oath of Allegiance Modifications and Waivers, Section C, Waiver of the Oath, Subsection 2, Legal Guardian, Surrogate, or Designated Representative [12 USCIS-PM J.3(C)(2)].

[^ 17] This scenario specifically describes a “springing” durable POA (as distinguished from an “immediate” durable POA). See Black’s Law Dictionary, 2nd Ed. (“durable power of attorney”). Because USCIS only accepts durable POAs that are in effect as the result of an incapacitated adult’s disability, a valid durable POA accepted by USCIS would necessarily be springing.

[^ 18] See 8 CFR 292.

[^ 19] This section does not address agents who are permitted to act as a petitioner for a corporation or other legal entity seeking an H, O, or P nonimmigrant worker, as provided in 8 CFR 214.2(h)(2)(i)(F), (h)(5)(i)(A), (h)(6)(iii)(B), (o)(2)(i), (o)(2)(iv)(E), (p)(2)(i), or (p)(2)(iv)(E). See the particular nonimmigrant category’s regulations or the Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) instructions for the requirements governing the scope of an agent’s authority in those contexts.

[^ 20] The person’s title or department within the corporation or other legal entity is not determinative.

Chapter 3 - Fees

ALERT: On Sept. 29, 2020, the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California in Immigration Legal Resource Center et al., v. Wolf, et al., 20-cv-05883-JWS, preliminarily enjoined DHS from implementing or enforcing any part of the USCIS Fee Schedule and Changes to Certain Other Immigration Benefit Request Requirements rule (PDF).

See more

On Sept. 29, 2020, the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California in Immigration Legal Resource Center et al., v. Wolf, et al., 20-cv-05883-JWS, preliminarily enjoined DHS from implementing or enforcing any part of the USCIS Fee Schedule and Changes to Certain Other Immigration Benefit Request Requirements rule (PDF).

While the rule is preliminarily enjoined, we will continue to:

- Accept USCIS forms with the current editions and current fees; and
- Use the regulations and guidance currently in place to adjudicate applications and petitions. This includes accepting and adjudicating fee waiver requests as provided under Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM) Chapters 10.9 (PDF, 2.55 MB) and 10.10 (PDF, 2.55 MB).

ALERT: The Federal District Court for the Northern District of California in Seattle v. DHS has enjoined DHS from requiring use of the 10/24/19 edition of Form I-912, Request for Fee Waiver, and from adjudicating fee waiver requests in accordance with the October 25, 2019 USCIS Policy Alert or the USCIS Policy Manual Volume 1: General Policies and Procedures, Part B, Submission of Benefit Requests, Chapter 3, Fees and Chapter 4, Fee Waivers that were issued on October 25, 2019 and took effect on December 2, 2019.

See more

The Federal District Court for the Northern District of California in Seattle v. DHS has enjoined DHS from requiring use of the 10/24/19 edition of Form I-912, Request for Fee Waiver, and from adjudicating fee waiver requests in accordance with the October 25, 2019 USCIS Policy Alert or the USCIS Policy Manual Volume 1: General Policies and Procedures, Part B, Submission of Benefit Requests, Chapter 3, Fees and Chapter 4, Fee Waivers that were issued on October 25, 2019 and took effect on December 2, 2019.

DHS is also not requiring use of the 10/24/19 edition of Form I-912, Request for Fee Waiver, and will not apply the October 25, 2019 revisions to the USCIS Policy Manual Volume 1: General Policies and Procedures, Part B, Submission of Benefit Requests, Chapter 3, Fees and Chapter 4, Fee Waivers that took effect on December 2, 2019, or any of the other changes described by the October 25, 2019 USCIS Policy Alert (including supersession and rescission of the March 13, 2011 Policy Memorandum), pursuant to an order by the Federal District Court for the District of Columbia.

The 10/24/19 edition of the form and the provisions of Chapters 3 and 4 of the Policy Manual published on October 25, 2019 have been removed from the USCIS website. USCIS will accept the current 10/15/19 edition of Form I-912 and also accept prior editions or a written request. For applicable policies currently in effect, see Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM) Chapters 10.9 (PDF, 2.55 MB) and 10.10 (PDF, 2.55 MB).

Chapter 4 - Fee Waivers

ALERT: On Sept. 29, 2020, the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California in Immigration Legal Resource Center et al., v. Wolf, et al., 20-cv-05883-JWS, preliminarily enjoined DHS from implementing or enforcing any part of the USCIS Fee Schedule and Changes to Certain Other Immigration Benefit Request Requirements rule (PDF).

See more

On Sept. 29, 2020, the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California in Immigration Legal Resource Center et al., v. Wolf, et al., 20-cv-05883-JWS, preliminarily enjoined DHS from implementing or enforcing any part of the USCIS Fee Schedule and Changes to Certain Other Immigration Benefit Request Requirements rule (PDF).

While the rule is preliminarily enjoined, we will continue to:

- Accept USCIS forms with the current editions and current fees; and
- Use the regulations and guidance currently in place to adjudicate applications and petitions. This includes accepting and adjudicating fee waiver requests as provided under Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM) Chapters 10.9 (PDF, 2.55 MB) and 10.10 (PDF, 2.55 MB).

ALERT: The Federal District Court for the Northern District of California in Seattle v. DHS has enjoined DHS from requiring use of the 10/24/19 edition of Form I-912, Request for Fee Waiver, and from adjudicating fee waiver requests in accordance with the October 25, 2019 USCIS Policy Alert or the USCIS Policy Manual Volume 1: General Policies and Procedures, Part B, Submission of Benefit Requests, Chapter 3, Fees and Chapter 4, Fee Waivers that were issued on October 25, 2019 and took effect on December 2, 2019.

See more

The Federal District Court for the Northern District of California in Seattle v. DHS has enjoined DHS from requiring use of the 10/24/19 edition of Form I-912, Request for Fee Waiver, and from adjudicating fee waiver requests in accordance with the October 25, 2019 USCIS Policy Alert or the USCIS Policy Manual Volume 1: General Policies and Procedures, Part B, Submission of Benefit

Requests, Chapter 3, Fees and Chapter 4, Fee Waivers that were issued on October 25, 2019 and took effect on December 2, 2019.

DHS is also not requiring use of the 10/24/19 edition of Form I-912, Request for Fee Waiver, and will not apply the October 25, 2019 revisions to the USCIS Policy Manual Volume 1: General Policies and Procedures, Part B, Submission of Benefit Requests, Chapter 3, Fees and Chapter 4, Fee Waivers that took effect on December 2, 2019, or any of the other changes described by the October 25, 2019 USCIS Policy Alert (including supersession and rescission of the March 13, 2011 Policy Memorandum), pursuant to an order by the Federal District Court for the District of Columbia.

The 10/24/19 edition of the form and the provisions of Chapters 3 and 4 of the Policy Manual published on October 25, 2019 have been removed from the USCIS website. USCIS will accept the current 10/15/19 edition of Form I-912 and also accept prior editions or a written request. For applicable policies currently in effect, see Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM) Chapters 10.9 (PDF, 2.55 MB) and 10.10 (PDF, 2.55 MB).

Chapter 5 - Interpreters and Preparers

If an interpreter assists the benefit requestor in reading the instructions and questions on a benefit request, the interpreter must provide his or her contact information, sign, and date the benefit request in the section indicated.

If a preparer assists the benefit requestor in completing his or her benefit request, the preparer and any other person who assisted in completing the benefit request must provide their contact information, sign, and date the benefit request in the section indicated.

If the person who helped interpret or prepare the benefit request is an attorney or accredited representative, he or she must determine if the level of involvement and rules of professional responsibility require him or her to submit a signed and completed Notice of Entry of Appearance as Attorney or Accredited Representative (Form G-28) with the benefit request. If the person intends to represent the benefit requestor before USCIS, he or she must submit a completed Form G-28. The attorney or accredited representative of the benefit requestor cannot serve as an interpreter during the interview.^[1]

Footnote

[^ 1] Officers cannot make exceptions for good cause.

Chapter 6 - Submitting Requests

A. How to Submit

1. Traditional Mail

Benefit requestors may use traditional mail to file benefit requests involving fees with a USCIS Lockbox.^[1] Benefit requestors should refer to the form instructions and USCIS website for more information on where and how to submit a particular benefit request, and what initial evidence is expected.^[2]

Assembling and Submitting Application Package

USCIS recommends that benefit requesters assemble their benefit request packages in the order indicated for that particular benefit.^[3]

Application Intake Inquiries

Requestors who have questions or concerns about the intake of a benefit request should route their inquiries as indicated on the USCIS Contact Us webpage.

2. Electronic Submission

Some USCIS forms are available for submission online. Filing online allows users to:

- Set up and manage accounts;
- Submit benefit requests and supporting documents electronically;
- Manage and link paper-filed benefits with an online account;
- Receive and respond to notices and decisions electronically;
- Make payments online; and
- Access real-time information about the status of cases.

Information entered electronically in anticipation of filing online is saved for 30 days from the last time a person worked on the request. USCIS cannot accept the benefit request until the person completes the electronic submission process.

If a benefit requestor files a benefit request online, USCIS notifies the person electronically of any notices or decisions. In general, USCIS does not issue paper notices or decisions for electronically-filed benefit requests. However, an online filer may request that USCIS mail paper notices. USCIS may also, in its discretion, decide to issue a paper notice.^[4]

B. Intake Processing

Once USCIS receives a benefit request, USCIS assesses whether the request meets the minimum requirements for USCIS to accept the request. If all minimal requirements (including submission of initial evidence for intake purposes) for acceptance are not met, USCIS rejects the benefit request for improper filing.^[5]

USCIS only begins to adjudicate a benefit requests after USCIS accepts the request (and processes required fees).

In order for USCIS to accept a benefit request, a submission must satisfy all applicable acceptance criteria.^[6] USCIS generally accepts the request if it contains:

- A complete, properly executed form, with a proper signature;
- The correct fees,^[7] and
- The required initial evidence for intake purposes, as directed by the form instructions.^[8]

USCIS rejects benefit requests that do not meet these minimum requirements. Reasons for rejection may include, but are not limited to:

- Incomplete benefit request;^[9]
- Improper signature or no signature;^[10]
- Use of an outdated version of a USCIS form at time of submission;
- Principal application error (USCIS cannot process derivative or dependent applications if the related principal application is in error); and
- Incorrect fee, including missing fees or fees in the wrong amount.^[11]

In addition, USCIS rejects benefit requests for an immigrant visa if an immigrant visa is not immediately available to the applicant.^[12]

The rejection of a filing with USCIS may not be appealed.^[13] However, rejections do not preclude a benefit requestor from resubmitting a corrected benefit request. If the benefit requestor later resubmits a previously rejected, corrected benefit request, USCIS processes the case anew, without prejudice.^[14] The rejected case does not retain its original receipt date when resubmitted.

USCIS requires new fees with any new benefit request; a new filing date also generally applies.^[15]

Effect of Returned Payment

If, subsequent to receipting, a check or other financial instrument submitted for payment is returned as not payable, USCIS re-submits the payment to the remitter institution one time. If the instrument used to pay the fee is returned as non-payable a second time, USCIS rejects the benefit request as improperly filed and the receipt date is forfeited. USCIS assesses a $30 returned check fee and pursues collection using administrative debt collection procedures. A rejection of a filing with USCIS may not be appealed.^[16]

Returned Payment for an Underlying Petition

If a dishonored payment rejection occurs on an underlying petition that is accompanied by other filings that are dependent on the filing that is rejected, such as an Immigrant Petition for an Alien Worker (Form I-140) concurrently filed with an Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (Form I-485), even though the other filings' fees may be honored, USCIS administratively closes the dependent filings and refunds the fees.

Returned Payment for Premium Processing Service Requests

If a premium processing fee for a Request for Premium Processing Service (Form I-907) is dishonored when it is filed at the same time as a Petition for Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) or Immigrant Petition for Alien Workers (Form I-140), USCIS rejects the entire filing.

If USCIS has approved the petition and any fee, including one fee of a multiple fee filing, is dishonored, USCIS may revoke the approval. In this case, USCIS issues a Notice of Intent to Revoke (NOIR) to the requestor. If the requestor does not rectify the dishonored payment within the requisite NOIR time period, USCIS revokes the approval and retains (and does not refund) any fee that was honored in association with the approval.

For example, if the Form I-907 fee is dishonored after USCIS approves an associated Form I-140, USCIS revokes the Form I-140 approval (assuming the NOIR time period has passed without sufficient response). USCIS then retains the Form I-140 fee, administratively closes the Form I-485, and refunds the Form I-485 fee.

Response to a NOIR

If the benefit request was approved by USCIS, the approval may be revoked upon notice.^[17] If the approved benefit request requires multiple fees, approval may be revoked if any fee submitted is not honored. USCIS may retain (and not refund) other fees that were paid for a benefit request that is revoked because of a dishonored fee payment.

To sufficiently respond to a NOIR, the requestor must demonstrate that the payment was honored or that it was rejected by USCIS by mistake.^[18] If USCIS issues a NOIR and the request does not return sufficient evidence to reinstate the case to pending status, then USCIS reopens and denies the request. USCIS then sends a notice to the applicant informing him or her that USCIS has revoked the approval and denied the benefit request. In contrast with the rejection of a filing, a revocation of an approval due to a dishonored fee may be appealed to the USCIS Administrative Appeals Office.^[19] All revocation notices instruct the requestor on how they may appeal the revocation or denial due to a dishonored payment.^[20]

If USCIS does not have the authority to revoke or reopen and deny the benefit request, USCIS annotates the file to indicate that USCIS never received payment and notifies the benefit requestor of the payment deficiency. USCIS then notifies the applicant or petitioner that there is a payment deficiency. The officer should also request local counsel assess the applicant's actions and intentions and assist in determining the appropriate next steps on a per case basis.

If USCIS already denied or revoked the benefit request for other reasons, or determined that the requestor abandoned the benefit request, the existence of a dishonored payment does not affect that decision. USCIS pursues collection of all payment deficiencies, regardless of the outcome of adjudication.

C. Date of Receipt

USCIS considers a benefit request “received” on the date it is physically or electronically received. This date is also known as the filing date. Requestors may only obtain a date of receipt or filing date if their submission is accepted at the proper location, as designated on the USCIS website. USCIS does not assign a date of receipt or filing date to benefit requests that are rejected.^[21]

The date of receipt may impact eligibility for immigration benefits. For example, USCIS uses the date of receipt to determine whether an appeal, Application for Temporary Protected Status (Form I-821), or Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) should be rejected for failure to timely file or because an annual numerical limit has been reached.

The date of receipt may also be significant for purposes of seeking lawful permanent residence; the filing date is referred to as the priority date for an approved immigrant visa petition in certain preference categories.^[22] For approved petitions in preference categories that are not current, the priority date dictates how soon the beneficiary may file for permanent residence. Similarly, the filing date establishes the statutory period for various benefits, including naturalization.

Footnotes

[^ 1] Registration for Classification as a Refugee (Form I-590) must be completed with the assistance of the Resettlement Support Center (RSC) staff overseas after a referral to the U.S. Refugee Admissions Program (USRAP), and cannot be completed independently by a benefit requestor. As such, any information in this section regarding submitting or filing a benefit request does not apply to Form I-590. For more information, see the Refugees USCIS web page.

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(8)(ii). A benefit requestor may need to provide additional evidence to establish eligibility for the benefit sought at the time of an interview or in response to a Request for Evidence (RFE).

[^ 3] For tips on filing applications with USCIS, see General Tips on Assembling Applications for Mailing and Lockbox Facility Filing Tips.

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(19)(ii)(B).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 103.2.

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 103.2(a).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 103.7(a)(1). For information on fee waivers, see Request for Fee Waiver (Form I-912). For information on reduced fees, see Request for Reduced Fee (Form I-942).

[^ 8] For example, family-based or employment-based adjustment of status categories where an Affidavit of Support (Form I-864), if required, is submitted with the Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (Form I-485).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(1). Each benefit request must be properly completed and filed with all initial evidence required by applicable regulations and other USCIS instructions. Benefit requestors can determine which fields are required based on the form type and form instructions.

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(2).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 103.2(a). See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(1) (for location), 8 CFR 103.2(a)(7)(i) (for filing fee and signature), and 8 CFR 245.2(a)(2)(i) (available visas).

[^ 12] For more information, see Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part A, Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures, Chapter 3, Filing Instructions, Section B, Definition of Properly Filed, Subsection 4, Visa Availability Requirement [7 USCIS-PM A.3(B)(4)].

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(7)(iii).

[^ 14] USCIS treats the benefit request as if the requestor had not previously submitted it.

[^ 15] Some exceptions may apply. For example, see Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part A, Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures, Chapter 6, Adjudicative Review, Section C, Verify Visa Availability, Subsection 3, Priority dates [7 USCIS-PM A.6(C)(3)]. See 8 CFR 204.2(h).

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(7)(iii).

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 205.2.

[^ 18] Otherwise, USCIS considers the requestor to have failed to file the required fees. See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(1).

[^ 19] In accordance with 8 CFR 103.3 and the applicable form instructions.

[^ 20] See 8 CFR 103.3.

[^ 21] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(7)(ii).

[^ 22] For more information, see Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part A, Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures, Chapter 6, Adjudicative Review, Section C, Verify Visa Availability, Subsection 3, Priority Dates [7 USCIS-PM A.6(C)(3)] and the USCIS' webpage on Visa Availability and Priority Dates.

Part C - Biometrics Collection and Security Checks

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 10 - An Overview of the Adjudication Process \(External\) \(PDF, 2.55 MB\)

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

As part of its administration of immigration benefits, USCIS has the general authority to require and collect biometrics, which include fingerprints, photographs, and digital signatures, from any person^[1] seeking any immigration or naturalization benefit or request.^[2]

B. Background

Biometrics collection allows USCIS to verify a person's identity, produce secure documents, and facilitate required criminal and national security background checks to protect national security and public safety, as well as to ensure that the person is eligible for the benefit sought. Biometrics collection and security checks enhance national security and protect the integrity of the immigration process by ensuring that USCIS only grants benefits to eligible requestors.

In addition, depending on the particular application, petition, or request filed, USCIS conducts security checks, which may include conducting fingerprint-based background checks, requesting a name check from the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), and other DHS or inter-agency security checks.

USCIS promotes national security and public safety by conducting screening and vetting in all immigration programs. Screening and vetting standards include those needed for identity verification, which is crucial to protect against fraud and help USCIS determine if a person is eligible to receive an immigration benefit. Historically, USCIS collected biometrics (including photographs) for background and security checks. Presently, biometrics are also stored and used to verify a person's identity in subsequent encounters with DHS.

C. Legal Authorities

- 8 CFR 103.16 – Collection, use, and storage of biometric information
- 8 CFR 103.2 – Submission and adjudication of benefit requests
- INA 105 – Liaison with internal security officers
- INA 335; 8 CFR 335.1; 8 CFR 335.2 – Investigation and examination of applicants for naturalization

Footnotes

[^ 1] The term person includes any applicant, petitioner, beneficiary, sponsor, derivative, requestor, or person filing or associated with a benefit request.

[^ 2] The term biometrics refers to “the measurable biological (anatomical and physiological) or behavioral characteristics of a natural person, including the person’s fingerprints, photograph, or signature.”

Chapter 2 - Biometrics Collection

A. Application Support Center Appointments

After a person files an application, petition, or other benefit request, USCIS schedules a biometrics appointment at a local Application Support Center (ASC).^[1] The appointment notice (Notice of Action (Form I-797C)) indicates the date, time, and location of the ASC appointment. The person submitting biometrics must bring the Form I-797C and valid, unexpired photo identification (for example, Permanent Resident Card (Form I-551), passport, or driver's license) to the appointment, if required.

[2] Generally, if a person requests an exemption from the collection of a particular biometric modality, that request must be made at the ASC during the scheduled appointment.

USCIS considers a person to have abandoned his or her application, petition, or request if he or she fails to appear for the biometrics appointment unless, by the appointment time, USCIS receives a change of address or rescheduling request that it concludes warrants excusing the failure to appear.

[3]

B. Mobile Biometrics Collection

USCIS may provide domestic mobile biometric services for those with a disability or health reason that prevents them from appearing in person at an ASC.^[4] In other very limited circumstances, USCIS may in its sole discretion provide domestic mobile biometric services for those who are unable to attend scheduled ASC appointments in person.^[5]

Mobile biometrics collection refers to a service USCIS provides in which the agency collects biometrics (for example, fingerprints, photographs, etc.) from persons with pending benefit requests, at pre-determined locations outside of an ASC. Mobile biometrics collection is typically performed by USCIS employees or contractors.^[6] USCIS has discretion to conduct mobile biometrics collection.^[7]

Remote Locations

USCIS may, in its sole discretion and on a case-by-case basis, provide mobile biometrics collection services to those residing in remote locations within the United States who are unable to attend scheduled ASC appointments in person.^[8]

If USCIS determines that it is unable to provide mobile biometrics collection services due to a person's remote location, USCIS may, in its discretion and on a case-by-case basis, coordinate with local law enforcement agencies (LEA) or other DHS components to collect biometrics on behalf of USCIS.

In this case, USCIS directly provides a fingerprint card (Form FD-258)^[9] to the LEA or other DHS component and requires the LEA or DHS component to verify the applicant or petitioner's identity and complete an attestation to accompany the fingerprint cards. The attestation ensures that the fingerprint card's chain of custody remains with the LEA or DHS component from the time the biometrics are collected until it is returned to USCIS. The fingerprint card must never leave the presence of the LEA or DHS component that is responsible for collecting the fingerprints until it is provided to the carrier service to be returned to USCIS.

Persons in Custody

USCIS does not grant requests to collect biometrics from persons in custody at correctional institutions. USCIS officers and contract staff therefore do not travel to jails, prisons, or similar non-Department of Homeland Security (DHS) detention facilities to perform biometric collections for any detained or incarcerated persons (including applicants, petitioners, beneficiaries, derivatives, sponsors, or other requestors, regardless of their immigration status or country of citizenship). In the case of an incarcerated person, USCIS officers must continue to follow all applicable regulations and procedures in issuing ASC notices to those whose appearance is required for biometrics collection. Per intradepartmental agreement, U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE), Enforcement and Removal Operations (ERO) is responsible for completing background and security checks for those who are incarcerated at DHS facilities and applying for benefits with USCIS.

USCIS generally does not approve requests to reschedule a biometrics appointment for reason of detention or incarceration. The person must follow the procedures listed in the biometrics appointment notice to request their appointment be rescheduled.^[10]

C. Fingerprint Waivers

A person may qualify for a waiver of the fingerprint requirement if he or she is unable to provide fingerprints because of a medical condition,^[11] including but not limited to disability, birth defects, physical deformities, skin conditions, and psychiatric conditions.^[12] Only certain USCIS employees are authorized to grant a fingerprint waiver.

A USCIS employee responsible for overseeing a person's fingerprinting may grant the waiver if all of the following requirements are met:

- The applicant, petitioner, beneficiary, sponsor, derivative, requestor, or individual person filing or associated with a benefit request appeared in person for the biometrics collection;
- The officer or authorized technician attempted to fingerprint the person (or determined that such an attempt was impossible); and
- The officer determines that the person is unable to be fingerprinted at all or is unable to provide a single legible fingerprint.

A USCIS employee should not grant a waiver if the waiver is solely based on the following situations:

- The person has fewer than 10 fingers;
- The officer considers the person's fingerprints as unclassifiable; or

- The person's condition preventing the fingerprint collection is temporary.

If a fingerprint waiver is granted, the waiver is valid only for the particular application(s), petition(s), or benefit request(s) listed on the ASC notice for which biometrics are collected. The person must request a fingerprint waiver for each individual application, petition, or benefit request subsequently filed if the subsequent filing has a biometrics collection requirement.

A person who is granted a fingerprint waiver must bring local police clearance letters or other form-specific documentation^[13] covering the relevant periods to the interview. All clearance letters become part of the record. In cases where the person is granted a fingerprint waiver or has two unclassifiable fingerprint results, USCIS must take a sworn statement from the person covering the relevant periods.

USCIS' decision to deny a fingerprint waiver is final and may not be appealed.

D. Biometrics Collected [Partially Reserved]

1. Fingerprints [Reserved]

2. Photographs

USCIS imbeds a photograph when creating secure documents as a security feature.^[14] There are instances where USCIS requires a photograph be submitted with an application, petition, or request in order to create a secure document and the application, petition, or request does not have an associated biometrics collection requirement.^[15] Where the applicant, petitioner, or requestor fails to submit a photograph at time of filing, USCIS may issue a Request for Evidence.

3. Signatures [Reserved]

Footnotes

[^ 1] Requestors residing overseas may be fingerprinted by USCIS officers overseas, a U.S. consular officer at a U.S. embassy or consulate, or at a U.S. military installation abroad. An exception to the requirement to collect new biometrics exists in the case of military naturalization. For military naturalization cases, a biometric background check must be performed, but USCIS may use previously collected fingerprints from a different immigration filing or may use fingerprints collected as part of enlistment processing to perform the check.

[^ 2] For more information on how to prepare for a biometrics appointment, see the Preparing for Your Biometric Services Appointment webpage.

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(13)(ii).

[^ 4] The USCIS website provides a definition of the term accommodation; mobile biometrics is only one subset of accommodations. See the USCIS website for information on Disability Accommodations for the Public.

[^ 5] Please see the USCIS Contact Center webpage.

[^ 6] In some instances, USCIS may use other government agencies to perform remote biometrics collection. See Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act of 1998, Title I, Pub. L. 105-119 (PDF), 111 Stat. 2440, 2447-2448 (November 26, 1997); See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(9) and 8 CFR 103.16(a).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 103.16 and 8 CFR 103.2(b).

[^ 8] To request mobile biometric services based on residing in a remote location, contact the USCIS Contact Center. To request mobile biometric services for reasons related to a disability or health, make your request online at Disability Accommodations for Appointments.

[^ 9] A Form FD-258 is card stock paper that records basic biographic information as well as both rolled and pressed fingerprints.

[^ 10] If the person is no longer in custody, he or she must also submit a change of address request on an Alien's Change of Address Card (Form AR-11) for the appointment to be rescheduled at the new address.

[^ 11] The regulations at 8 CFR 204.3(c)(3) allow USCIS to waive the fingerprint requirement for prospective adoptive couples or additional adult members of the prospective adoptive parents' household when it determines that such adult is "physically unable to be fingerprinted because of age or medical condition." (Emphasis added.) As such, solely with respect to Petition to Classify Orphan as an Immediate Relative (Form I-600) and Application for Advance Processing of an Orphan Petition (Form I-600A) adjudications, USCIS must also consider whether the person is unable to be fingerprinted due to age in addition to medical condition.

[^ 12] The officer responsible for overseeing fingerprinting may request that a licensed mental health professional (that is, a psychologist, psychiatrist, or similar practitioner) or a licensed medical practitioner who has responsibility for the person's care submit reasonable documentation in accordance with the procedure laid out in Part A, Public Services, Chapter 6, Disability Accommodation Requests [1 USCIS-PM-A.6].

[^ 13] For example, affidavits under 8 CFR 204.310(b) for an Application for Determination of Suitability to Adopt a Child from a Convention Country (Form I-800A) if the person is "physically unable to comply" with biometrics collection.

[^ 14] For example, Permanent Resident Card (Form I-551) and Employment Authorization Document (Form I-766).

[^ 15] See the relevant form instructions for more information.

Chapter 3 - Security Checks [Reserved]

Part D - Attorneys and Representatives

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 12 - Attorneys and Other Representatives \(External\) \(PDF, 397.6 KB\)

Part E - Adjudications

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 10 - An Overview of the Adjudication Process \(External\) \(PDF, 2.55 MB\)

AFM Chapter 11 - Evidence \(External\) \(PDF, 189.21 KB\)

AFM Chapter 15 - Interview Techniques \(External\) \(PDF, 441.17 KB\)

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

In administering U.S. immigration laws, one of USCIS' primary functions is to adjudicate immigration benefit requests.

Upon proper filing, each benefit request must be thoroughly reviewed to determine jurisdiction, presence of required supporting documentation, existence of related files, and eligibility.

This part provides general guidance on how USCIS adjudicates across the various types of benefit requests.^[1] Variations in requirements and procedures may exist, depending on the benefit type, and are discussed in more detail in the program-specific parts of the Policy Manual.^[2]

B. Background [Reserved]

C. Legal Authorities

- Homeland Security Act of 2002^[3]
- Federal Records Act of 1950, 44 U.S.C. 31, as amended – Records management by federal agencies
- Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. 552a, as amended^[4] – Records maintained on individuals
- Freedom of Information Act, 5 U.S.C. 552 – Public information; agency rules, opinions, orders, records, and proceedings
- INA 103 – Powers and duties of the Secretary, Under Secretary, and Attorney General
- 8 CFR 103.2 – Submission and adjudication of benefit requests
- INA 291 – Burden of proof upon alien
- Delegation of Authority 0150.1 – Delegation to the Bureau of Citizenship and Immigration Services

Footnotes

[^ 1] For purposes of this Policy Manual part, the term requestor means the person, organization, or business requesting an immigration benefit from USCIS. This may include an applicant or petitioner, depending on the request. The term benefit request means any application, petition, appeal, motion, or other request submitted to USCIS for adjudication.

[^ 2] Certain immigration benefit requests, such as asylum or refugee applications, are governed by different regulations and procedures. Therefore, the guidance in this chapter may not apply to these immigration benefits governed by different regulations. Officers should consult the corresponding Policy Manual part and procedures for program-specific guidance.

[^ 3] See Pub. L. 107–296 (PDF), 116 Stat. 2135 (November 25, 2002).

[^ 4] See Pub. L. 93-579 (PDF), 88 Stat. 1896 (December 31, 1974).

Chapter 2 - Record of Proceeding

A. Maintaining a Record of Proceeding

A record of proceeding is the organized, official material constituting the record of any application, petition, hearing, or other proceeding before USCIS. A record of proceeding is typically contained within an Alien Registration File (A-File) or other agency file or electronic case management system, or a hybrid paper and electronic file.^[1]

B. A-Files

A-files are a series of records maintained on a person that document the person's immigration history. A-files are created when an application or petition for a long-term or permanent benefit is received, or when enforcement action is initiated.

A-files may exist in physical format, or they may be created in digital format in various electronic case management systems, or they may be a hybrid of both paper and electronic files.^[2]

A-files are stored and maintained by Department of Homeland Security (DHS) for persons born less than 100 years ago. For persons born 100 years ago or more, A-files are transferred to and stored by the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA).

Footnotes

[^ 1] Information contained in a record of proceeding is protected by the Privacy Act. For more information on the Privacy Act and confidentiality provisions, see Part A, Public Services, Chapter 7, Privacy and Confidentiality, [1 USCIS-PM A.7].

[^ 2] Digitized A-files may exist in the Enterprise Document Management System (EDMS) or STACKS.

Chapter 3 - Jurisdiction

A. Coordination in Cases Involving Removal Proceedings

In some cases, U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) may notify USCIS of an application or petition pending with USCIS for a person in removal proceedings that must be timely adjudicated. In these cases, USCIS attempts to issue a decision on the relevant petition or application within 30 calendar days of receiving the necessary file(s) if the person is detained. If the person is not detained, USCIS attempts to issue a decision within 45 calendar days of receiving the file(s). If the next hearing in the removal case is scheduled within the 30- or 45-day time frame, USCIS typically works with ICE, to the extent possible, to complete action on the petition or application before the hearing date. USCIS maintains communication with ICE regarding the progress and status of the case.

USCIS adjudicates all immigration benefit requests according to existing laws, regulations, and USCIS policies and procedures. If acting on ICE's request to adjudicate an application or petition might compromise those responsibilities or adherence to any law, regulation, policy or procedure, USCIS notifies ICE that the adjudication cannot be completed within the 30- or 45-day timeframe. USCIS continues to communicate with ICE about the status of the case.

To the extent ICE currently coordinates directly with USCIS service centers with respect to benefit requests pending at the service centers, this guidance does not supersede or amend those arrangements.

B. Transferring Jurisdiction

A pending application or petition may be transferred to a different office or jurisdiction for several reasons, including but not limited to:

- The application or petition was not filed in the proper jurisdiction;
- The benefit requestor now resides within another jurisdiction;
- An application or petition pending at a service center appears to warrant an in-person interview at a field office; or
- Regulations require transfer of an application or petition to another office for specific action.

For certain applications, such as an Application for Naturalization (Form N-400), the applicant must meet certain jurisdictional requirements relating to residency as of the date of filing; transferring jurisdiction alone may not adequately address such filing deficiency.^[1]

Footnote

[^ 1] See Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization, Part D, General Naturalization Requirements, Chapter 6, Jurisdiction, Place of Residence, and Early Filing [12 USCIS-PM D.6].

Chapter 4 - Burden and Standards of Proof

A. Burden of Proof

The burden of proof to establish eligibility for an immigration benefit always falls solely on the benefit requestor.^[1] The burden of proof never shifts to USCIS.

Once a benefit requestor has met his or her initial burden of proof, he or she has made a prima facie case. This means that the benefit requestor has come forward with the facts and evidence which show that, at a minimum, and without any further inquiry, he or she has proven initial eligibility for the benefit sought, though in certain cases the officer is then required to determine whether approval or denial is appropriate, in his or her discretion.

B. Standards of Proof

The standard of proof is different than the burden of proof. The standard of proof is the amount of evidence needed to establish eligibility for the benefit sought. The standard of proof applied in most administrative immigration proceedings is the preponderance of the evidence standard. Therefore, even if there is some doubt, if the benefit requestor submits relevant, probative, and credible evidence that leads an officer to believe that the claim is “probably true” or “more likely than not,” then the benefit requestor has satisfied the standard of proof.^[2]

If the requestor has not met this standard, it is appropriate for the officer to either request additional evidence or issue a notice of intent to deny, or deny the case.^[3]

The preponderance of the evidence standard of proof does not apply to those applications and petitions where a different standard is specified by law. The Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) provides for a higher standard in some cases, such as the clear and convincing evidence standard that is required when a beneficiary enters into a marriage while in exclusion, deportation, or removal proceedings, and to determine the citizenship of children born out of wedlock.^[4]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 291.

[^ 2] See INS v. Cardoza-Fonseca, 480 U.S. 421 (1987) (defining “more likely than not” as a greater than 50 percent probability of something occurring).

[^ 3] See Chapter 6, Evidence, Section F, Requests for Evidence and Notices of Intent to Deny [1 USCIS-PM E.6(F)] for more information.

[^ 4] See INA 245(e)(3). See INA 309(a)(1).

Chapter 5 - Verification of Identifying Information

As part of the adjudication of immigration benefits requests, USCIS reviews evidence and biometrics submitted by the benefit requestor, as well as USCIS systems, to verify identifying information.

A. Full Legal Name

In general, the requestor's full legal name is comprised of his or her:

- Given name (first name);
- Middle name(s) (if any); and
- Family name (last name).

The legal name is one of the following:

- The requestor's name at birth as it appears on the birth certificate (or other qualifying identity documentation when a birth certificate is unavailable);^[1] or
- The requestor's name following a legal name change.

For purposes of requesting immigration benefits, a married person may use a legal married name (spouse's surname), a legal pre-marriage name, or any form of either (for example, hyphenated name, pre-married name or spouse's surname). Requestors must submit legal documentation, such as that listed below, to show that the name used is the requestor's legal name:^[2]

- Civil marriage certificate;
- Divorce decree;
- Family registry;
- Country identity document;
- Foreign birth certificate;
- Certificate of naming; or
- Court order.

Construction of Foreign Names

Construction of foreign names varies from culture to culture. For example, certain countries' birth certificates display names in this order: family name, middle name, given name. This is in contrast to most birth certificates issued in the United States, which display names in this order: given name, middle name, family name.^[3]

B. Personal Information

1. Date of Birth [Reserved]

2. Gender

Where a person claims to have legally changed his or her gender, USCIS may recognize that claim based upon the following documentation:

- A court order granting change of sex or gender;
- A government-issued document reflecting the requested gender designation. Acceptable government-issued documents include an amended birth certificate, a passport, a driver's license, or other official document showing identity issued by the U.S. government, a state or local government in the United States, or a foreign government; or
- A letter from a licensed health care professional certifying that the requested gender designation is consistent with the person's gender identity.^[4] Generally, a licensed health care professional includes licensed counselors, nurse practitioners, physicians (Doctors of Medicine or Doctors of Osteopathy), physician assistants, psychologists, social workers, and therapists.

If submitting a health care certification letter,^[5] the letter must include the following information:

- The health care professional's full name, address, and telephone number;
- The health care professional's license number and the issuing state, country, or other jurisdiction of the professional license;
- Language stating that the health care professional has treated or evaluated the person in relation to the person's gender identity; and
- The health care professional's assessment of the person's gender identity.

USCIS may request additional evidence of the person's gender identity, as necessary to verify the requested change in gender designation.

Footnotes

[^ 1] There may be instances in which a birth certificate is unobtainable because of country conditions or personal circumstances. In these instances, a requestor may submit secondary evidence or affidavits to establish his or her identity. Any affidavit should explain the reasons primary evidence is unavailable. For more information, see the Department of State (DOS) Reciprocity Tables for identity documents that cannot be obtained in particular countries and during specific time periods. Asylum applicants may be able to establish their identity, including their full legal name, with testimony alone.

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 204.2. See 8 CFR 320.3. See 8 CFR 322.3.

[^ 3] For more information, see 8 Foreign Affairs Manual (FAM) 403.1, Name Usage and Name Change.

[^ 4] Proof of sex reassignment surgery or any other specific medical treatment is not required to show changed gender; a licensed health care professional's certification is sufficient.

[^ 5] See Appendix: Sample Language for Healthcare Certification [1 USCIS-PM A.5, Appendices Tab].

Chapter 6 - Evidence

Any evidence submitted in connection with a benefit request is incorporated into and considered part of the request.^[1] The purpose of gathering evidence is to determine some fact or matter at issue. When adjudicating a benefit request under the preponderance of evidence standard, the officer examines each piece of evidence for relevance, probative value, and credibility, both individually and within the context of the totality of the evidence, to determine whether the fact to be proven is "more likely than not" or "probably" true.^[2]

The administrative record created by an officer is often crucial in later proceedings relating to the same requestor, such as appeals, rescission proceedings, removal proceedings, applications for relief and protection from removal, other benefit requests, and investigations of fraud. Additionally, under the Jencks Act,^[3] anyone who provides a statement at an administrative proceeding, such as an immigration interview, is a potential government witness whose statement the government may be required to produce. Therefore, officers and other USCIS staff must retain and enter into the administrative record the following:

- Written and signed affidavits from statements, such as sworn statements;
- Recordings and transcripts of interviews;
- Original interview notes;
- Original notes made during site visits and surveillance operations; and

- Original drafts of reports concerning interviews or surveillance operations if they are the first written record of the interview or surveillance.

A requestor must establish eligibility for the requested benefit at the time of filing the benefit request and must continue to be eligible through adjudication. If the evidence the requestor provides meets their burden of proof to establish eligibility,^[4] USCIS approves the benefit request. If the law requires an exercise of discretion, USCIS can approve the request only if the requestor merits a favorable exercise of discretion and otherwise establishes eligibility.^[5] If the evidence is not sufficient to establish eligibility, USCIS may request evidence or proceed to denial, as appropriate.

A. Initial and Additional Evidence [Reserved]

B. Primary and Secondary Evidence

Each benefit request has specific eligibility requirements that a requestor must meet, which must be demonstrated by evidence. Any evidence the requestor submits in connection with a benefit request is incorporated into and considered part of the request.^[6]

Some evidence is considered primary evidence, and other evidence is considered secondary evidence. Primary evidence is evidence that on its own proves an eligibility requirement. For example, a divorce certificate is primary evidence of a divorce. Secondary evidence is evidence that may demonstrate a fact is more likely than not true, but the evidence does not derive from a primary, authoritative source. Records maintained by religious or faith-based organizations showing that a person was divorced at a certain time are an example of secondary evidence of the divorce.

Likewise, a government-issued birth certificate is an example of primary evidence of the birth of a child, whereas a baptismal certificate is an example of secondary evidence of the birth of a child.^[7]

USCIS requires primary evidence where such evidence is generally available according to the U.S. Department of State (DOS).^[8] If the requestor cannot obtain such primary evidence, the requestor must demonstrate that the required primary evidence does not exist or cannot be obtained and provide secondary evidence.^[9] Any secondary evidence submitted must overcome the unavailability of primary evidence.^[10]

However, for some applications and petitions, such as asylum applications and applications for classification as a refugee, testimony alone may meet the evidentiary requirements.^[11]

Primary Evidence that Does not Exist or Cannot be Obtained

Officers might encounter situations in which primary evidence is available according to DOS's U.S. Visa: Reciprocity and Civil Documents by Country webpage, but the applicant asserts it does not exist or cannot be obtained.^[12] This generally gives rise to a presumption of ineligibility, which is the requestor's burden to overcome.^[13] A requestor cannot simply assert that primary evidence does not exist.

In the absence of primary evidence as required by regulation,^[14] the requestor must:

- Demonstrate that the required document does not exist or cannot be obtained by providing a written statement from the appropriate issuing authority attesting to the fact that no primary record exists and the reason the record does not exist;^[15] and
- Submit secondary evidence that overcomes the unavailability of the primary evidence.

In the absence of primary and secondary evidence as required by regulation,^[16] the requestor must:

- Demonstrate that the required document does not exist or cannot be obtained by providing a written statement from the appropriate issuing authority attesting to the fact that the primary record does not exist and the reason the record does not exist;
- Demonstrate the unavailability of any secondary evidence; and
- Submit two or more affidavits by persons who are not parties to the benefit request and who have direct personal knowledge of the event and circumstances.^[17]

A requestor who is not able to provide a written statement of unavailability from the relevant foreign authority may instead submit evidence of repeated good faith attempts to obtain the required document or statement.^[18]

Primary Evidence that is Generally Available but is Unreliable

Officers may also encounter cases where primary evidence is generally available, but DOS reports that such documents are unreliable. Civil records may be considered unreliable or require additional scrutiny for various reasons, including inaccurate recording, date of issuance, inconsistent standards for issuance, or widespread fraud.

If foreign documents submitted as primary evidence are unreliable according to DOS,^[19] USCIS may request secondary evidence^[20] in support of the benefit request. In cases where the secondary evidence is insufficient, or where interview criteria indicate, USCIS may refer the benefit requestor for an in-person interview. In addition, petitioners or applicants should be encouraged to submit all evidence at their disposal in response to any Request for Evidence (RFE). Whether evidence establishes the eligibility requirements is evaluated by the totality and quality of the evidence presented.

C. Copies vs. Originals

When adjudicating an immigration benefit, officers need to verify facts such as dates of marriage, birth, death, and divorce, as well as criminal and employment history. The “best evidence rule” states that where the facts are at issue in a case, the officer should request the original document. For example, if evidence of a divorce decree is required and a submitted photocopy looks altered, the officer should request the original divorce decree.

1. When Originals Required and Photocopies Permitted

When a requestor files a paper form^[21] with USCIS, original documents may be required. Examples of supporting documents that requestors must generally present in the original are:

- Medical examinations;
- Affidavits; and
- Labor certifications.

Unless otherwise required, the requestor may submit a legible photocopy of any other supporting document at the time of filing.^[22]

2. Requesting Original Documents

USCIS may, at any time, request submission of an original document for review. The request sets a deadline for submission of the original document.

If a requestor does not submit the requested original of the document by the deadline, USCIS may deny the benefit request as abandoned, based on the record, or both.^[23]

3. Returning Original Documents

Upon completion of the adjudication, USCIS may return original documents if the submission was in response to a USCIS request. All retained originals become part of the record. Although USCIS does not automatically return originals that it did not request, offices are encouraged to voluntarily return submitted original documents.^[24]

To request return of originals that were not returned during the adjudication process, the requestor may submit a Request for the Return of Original Documents (Form G-884).

D. Types of Evidence

Strict rules of evidence used in judicial proceedings do not apply in administrative proceedings, including benefits requests before USCIS. Usually, requestors may submit any oral or documentary evidence for USCIS’ consideration when determining eligibility for the benefit sought.

Because the strict rules of evidence do not apply in administrative proceedings, officers may consider a wide range of oral or documentary evidence.

1. Documentary Evidence

Documentary evidence includes all types of documents, records, and writings and is subject to the same considerations regarding competency and credibility as is testimonial evidence discussed below. Documentary evidence may be divided into two categories: public documents and private documents.

Public Documents

Public documents are the official records of legislative, judicial, and administrative bodies. A requestor may submit public documents as evidence to demonstrate eligibility for the benefit sought. For example, a government-issued birth certificate is a public document.

Birth or baptismal records maintained by officials in religious or faith-based organizations are not considered public documents but may be accepted as secondary evidence of birth if the actual place of birth is indicated on the certificate.

Private Documents

Private documents include all documents other than the official records of legislative, judicial, or administrative bodies of government. Requestors often submit private documents as supporting evidence for benefit requests. Private documents can include, but are not limited to, business or tax records, bank statements, affidavits, education credentials, or photographs.

2. Testimonial Evidence

Officers frequently take testimony to determine eligibility for immigration benefits.^[25] An officer should only take testimony from a person who is mentally competent at the time set to testify. An officer should not attempt to take testimony from any person who might lack the mental capacity, such as:

- A person who has been found mentally incompetent by an appropriate authority;
- A person who is under the influence of drugs or alcohol; or
- A person the officer suspects is mentally incompetent. In those cases, the officer must clearly document their reason(s) for reaching that conclusion.

In any situation where the witness' competency is in doubt, officers should supplement the record with the testimony of another witness, with other evidence relating to the same matter or reschedule the interview, per local procedures.

When interviewing minors, officers should consider the child's age, stage of language development, and emotional maturity when eliciting testimony. Such interviews must be conducted with sensitivity and may warrant special considerations, including determining whether a trusted adult may be present.

Credibility of Testimony

Discrepancies in statements do not necessarily discredit the witness.^[26] A truthful witness, in speaking of a past event, might not repeatedly reproduce the facts in their entirety without some change in detail.

Witnesses who have signed statements might later indicate that they wish to retract the statement, or they might give contrary testimony when later called upon to testify. USCIS may not prevent such witnesses from retracting or changing prior statements. However, contradictory statements may adversely impact the credibility of the witness.^[27]

If an officer determines that the testimony of a witness is not credible, the written decision or interview notes or both should indicate this conclusion. However, it generally is not enough to simply say that the witness is not credible. Instead, the officer's decision should give the specific reason(s) for the conclusion and refer to evidence in the record that supports the conclusion.

Privileged Testimony

Officers may occasionally encounter the issue of privilege. A testimonial privilege allows the person who invokes it to bar testimony that would violate the privilege. Examples include the privilege against self-incrimination and spousal privileges.

Each privilege differs slightly in how it applies, such as whose testimony may be barred and who may invoke the privilege. The scope of the material covered by the privilege also differs.^[28]

Sworn Statements

An officer may also take a sworn statement. A sworn statement is a written declaration given under an oath (or affirmation). It must be witnessed and signed and contain an accurate record of the questions asked, and answers received. The sworn statement becomes part of the permanent, official record and may be used in a subsequent proceeding or prosecution. The determination of benefit eligibility may depend on the evidence in the sworn statement and the interview record it creates may be particularly important in complex cases, such as those involving national security or fraud concerns.

An officer taking a sworn statement must focus on gathering all necessary information to make a decision. The officer must structure the statement in a manner that is logical, using a clear progression of facts and questions. Officers should explore each relevant fact uncovered in a statement by further questioning to the extent necessary before changing topics.

When a sworn statement is taken and the affiant signs it, the affiant (the person making the statement) or authorized representative may request a copy of the statement. Upon request, USCIS provides a copy of the signed sworn statement to an affiant, without fee, at the conclusion of the interview where the statement was taken.^[29]

3. Expert and Opinion Evidence

On occasion, officers may require evidence from an expert to assist in completing an adjudication. For example, in cases involving handwritten, counterfeit, or altered documents, U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE)'s Homeland Security Investigations Forensic Laboratory may serve as experts.^[30] A requestor may also submit evidence from a non-DHS expert.

An expert is permitted to give an opinion on a particular set of facts or circumstances involving scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge. Knowledge, skill, experience, training, or education must qualify the expert. Officers may reject or afford lesser evidentiary weight to expert opinions that conflict with the evidence of record or are questionable.^[31]

E. Translations

1. Document Translations

Any document containing a foreign language submitted in support of a benefit request must be accompanied by a full English language translation.^[32] The translator must certify that the translation is complete and accurate, and that the translator is competent to translate from the foreign language into English.^[33] Sometimes the keeper of a record issues an "extract" version of a document. Such official extracts are acceptable, but only if they contain all the information necessary to make a decision on a case. Only extracts prepared by an authorized official (the "keeper of record") are acceptable. A summary of a document prepared by a translator is unacceptable.

2. Document Translators

If an officer takes a written statement in a foreign language and a translator translates it into English, it may be necessary to produce the translator at a subsequent interview or hearing. When there is evidence that a written statement might not be accurately translated, the translator may be called upon to testify not only as to knowledge of the English and the foreign language, but also to confirm the accuracy of the translation.^[34]

F. Requests for Evidence and Notices of Intent to Deny

Under the regulations, USCIS has the discretion to issue Requests for Evidence (RFEs) and Notices of Intent to Deny (NOIDs) for immigration benefit requests in appropriate circumstances.^[35] USCIS also has the discretion in some instances to issue a denial without first issuing an RFE or a NOID.

An officer should issue an RFE or NOI when the facts and the law warrant; an officer should not avoid issuing an RFE or NOI when one is needed. However, an officer should not issue an RFE or NOI if the officer determines the evidence already submitted establishes eligibility or ineligibility for the request. An unnecessary RFE or NOI can delay case completion and result in additional unnecessary costs to both the government and the benefit requestor.^[36]

Generally, USCIS issues written notices in the form of an RFE or NOI to request missing initial^[37] or additional evidence from benefit requestors. However, USCIS has the discretion to deny a benefit request without issuing an RFE or NOI. If the officer determines a benefit request does not have any legal basis for approval, the officer should issue a denial without prior issuance of an RFE or a NOI.^[38]

1. Evaluating Evidence and Eligibility

Unless otherwise specified, officers should generally follow these principles in each case:

- Understand the specific elements required to demonstrate eligibility for the benefit request.^[39]
- Understand the standard of proof that applies to the benefit request. In most instances, the benefit requestor must establish eligibility under the preponderance of the evidence standard. Under that standard, the benefit requestor must prove it is more likely than not that the requestor meets each of the required elements.^[40]
- Review all the evidence to determine if each of the essential elements has been satisfied by the applicable standard of proof.

If the officer determines that the benefit requestor is eligible for the benefit requested (all the essential elements have been satisfied by the applicable standard of proof, including but not limited to, when applicable, that a favorable exercise of discretion is warranted), the officer approves the benefit request without issuance of an RFE or NOI.^[41]

If the benefit requestor has not established eligibility under the applicable standard of proof, the officer generally issues an RFE or NOI to request evidence of eligibility. However, if the benefit request does not have a legal basis for approval, and the officer determines that there is no possibility that additional information or explanation will establish a legal basis for approval, then the officer generally should deny the benefit request without first issuing an RFE or NOI.^[42]

2. Considerations Before Issuing Requests for Evidence or Notices of Intent to Deny

Instead of or in addition to issuing an RFE or NOI, the officer may also:

- Perform additional research;
- If not already required for the benefit type, interview the benefit requestor or other witnesses; or

- Initiate an investigation.

Each option requires varying degrees of resources. Therefore, officers should carefully evaluate each option when deciding next steps.

Performing Additional Research

Although the burden of proof to establish eligibility for an immigration benefit is on the benefit requestor,^[43] an officer may assess, before issuing an RFE or a NOI, whether the information or evidence needed is available in USCIS records or systems. Officers have the discretion^[44] to validate assertions or corroborate evidence and information by reviewing USCIS (or other governmental) files, systems, and databases, or by obtaining publicly available information that is readily accessible.^[45]

For example, an officer may, in the exercise of discretion, verify information relating to a petitioner's corporate structure by consulting a publicly available government website or corroborate evidence relating to a person's history of nonimmigrant stays in the United States by searching a U.S. government database.

3. Requests for Evidence

If the benefit requestor either has not submitted all of the required initial evidence^[46] for the benefit request, or the evidence in the record does not establish eligibility for the benefit sought, the officer should issue an RFE or NOI requesting such evidence unless the officer determines that there is no legal basis for the benefit request and no possibility that additional information or explanation will establish a legal basis for approval.^[47]

Content of RFEs

RFEs should:

- Identify the eligibility requirement(s) that has not been established and why the evidence submitted is insufficient;
- Identify any missing evidence specifically required by the applicable statute, regulation, or form instructions;
- Identify examples of other evidence that may be submitted to establish eligibility; and
- Request that evidence.

An officer should not request evidence that is outside the scope of the adjudication or otherwise irrelevant to an identified deficiency.

The RFE should ask for all the evidence the officer anticipates needing to determine eligibility and should clearly state the deadline for response.

Avoiding Multiple RFEs

In certain instances, the evidence provided in response to an RFE may raise eligibility questions that the officer did not identify during initial case review or open new lines of inquiry. In such a case, the officer may issue a follow-up RFE or NOID. However, officers should include in a single RFE all the evidence they anticipate needing to determine eligibility. The officer's careful consideration of all the apparent deficiencies in the evidence minimizes the need for multiple RFEs.

Timeframe for Response

The maximum response time for an RFE is 12 weeks (84 days); regulations prohibit officers from granting additional time to respond to an RFE.^[48]

However, the regulations permit USCIS to assign flexible time frames for benefit requestors to respond to an RFE.^[49] To ensure consistency, officers should follow standard timeframes but may reduce the response time on a case-by-case basis after obtaining supervisory concurrence. This discretion should only be used when warranted by circumstances as determined by the officer and the supervisor.

The regulations state that when an RFE is served by mail, the response is timely filed if it is received no more than 3 days after the deadline, providing a total of 87 days for a response to be submitted if USCIS provides the maximum period of 84 days under the regulations.^[50]

However, USCIS has determined as a matter of policy that additional mailing time (14 days) should be given to benefit requestors residing outside the United States or when USCIS mails an RFE from an international USCIS field office.

The RFE should clearly state the deadline for response, which includes the extra days for mailed RFEs, when applicable.

Standard Timeframes

In compliance with the regulations, the guidelines in the table below provide standard timeframes for benefit requestors to respond to RFEs.^[51] These standard timeframes do not apply to circumstances in which a fixed maximum response time is specified by regulation.^[52]

Standard Timeframes for Response to an RFE

When Submitting Evidence Required For	Standard Response Time (Calendar Days)	Additional Mailing Time When Residing Inside the United States	Additional Mailing Time When Residing Outside the United States or When an International Field Office Issues RFEs
Application to Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-539) [53]	30	3	N/A
Application for Provisional Unlawful Presence Waiver (Form I-601A)[54]	30	3	N/A
All other form types, regardless of whether the request is for initial or additional evidence, or whether the evidence is available in the United States or from overseas sources[55]	84	3	14

4. Notices of Intent to Deny

Circumstances Under Which NOIDs are Required^[56]

USCIS issues a NOI before denying any immigration benefit requests submitted on the following forms:

- Application for Determination of Suitability to Adopt a Child from a Convention Country (Form I-800A) based on a mandatory denial ground;[57]
- Petition to Classify Convention Adoptee as an Immediate Relative (Form I-800) based on a mandatory denial ground;[58] or
- Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (Form I-485) filed by a physician because the physician failed to comply with the conditions attached to his or her national interest waiver.[59]

Derogatory Information Unknown to the Benefit Requestor

In general, USCIS is also required to issue a NOI when derogatory information is uncovered during the course of the adjudication that is not known to the benefit requestor and USCIS intends to deny the benefit request on the basis of that derogatory information.^[60] The benefit requestor may be either unaware of the derogatory information or unaware of its impact on eligibility.

When USCIS bases an adverse decision on derogatory information that may be unknown to the benefit requestor, USCIS must provide the requestor an opportunity to rebut that information.^[61] A NOI provides a benefit requestor with adequate notice and sufficient opportunity to respond and the opportunity to review and rebut derogatory information not known to the benefit requestor.

Any explanation, rebuttal, or information presented by or on behalf of the benefit requestor must be included in the record of proceeding.

Additional Circumstances Under Which USCIS May Issue NOIDs

While not required in other situations, a NOI also provides a benefit requestor with adequate notice and sufficient opportunity to respond to an intended denial because of a determination of ineligibility.
[62]

It is also appropriate for officers to issue NOIDs in the following circumstances:

- The benefit requestor submitted little or no evidence;^[63] or
- The benefit requestor has met the eligibility requirements for the requested benefit or action but has not established that he or she warrants a favorable exercise of discretion (where there is also a discretionary component to the adjudication).^[64]

Content of NOIDs

NOIDs should:

- Identify the reasons for the intended denial, including the eligibility requirement(s) that has not been established, and why the evidence submitted is insufficient;
- Explain the nature of the adverse information, if any.
- Identify any missing evidence specifically required by the applicable statute, regulation, or form instructions;
- Identify examples of other evidence that may be submitted to establish eligibility; and
- Request that evidence.

The NOI should also instruct the benefit requestor that a failure to respond may result in a denial and must clearly state the deadline for response.^[65]

Timeframe for Response

The maximum response time for a NOI is 30 days.^[66]

When a NOI is served by mail domestically, the response is timely if it is received no more than 3 days after the deadline, for a total of 33 days.^[67] USCIS has determined as a matter of policy that additional mailing time (14 days) should be given to benefit requestors residing outside the United States or when USCIS mails NOIs from an international USCIS field office.

The NOI must clearly include the required response date, which includes the extra days for mailed NOIs, when applicable.

Standard Timeframes

In compliance with the regulations, the guidelines in the table below provide standard timeframes for benefit requestors to respond to NOIs.^[68]

Standard Timeframes for Response to a NOI

When Submitting Evidence Required For	Standard Response Time (Calendar Days)	Additional Mailing Time When Residing Inside the United States	Additional Mailing Time When Residing Outside the United States or When an International Field Office Issues NOIs
All form types ^[69]	30	3	14

5. Responses to Requests for Evidence and Notices of Intent to Deny

Within the timeframe specified, benefit requestors may respond to an RFE or NOI in one of three ways:

- Submit a complete response containing all requested information;
- Submit a partial response, which is considered a request for a decision on the record; or
- Withdraw the application or petition.^[70]

Requested Materials Must Be Submitted Together

Whether in response to an RFE or a NOID, benefit requestors must submit all requested materials together at one time, along with the original RFE or NOID. USCIS treats any submission partially responding to an RFE or NOID as a request for a final decision on the record.^[71] USCIS does not wait for a second response or issue a second RFE simply because a response from the benefit requestor is a partial response.

Failure to Respond to an RFE or NOID

Failure to submit requested evidence that is relevant to the adjudication is grounds for denying the request.^[72] If a benefit requestor does not respond to an RFE or NOID by the required date,^[73] USCIS may:

- Deny the benefit request as abandoned;^[74]
- Deny the benefit request on the record; or
- Deny the benefit request for both reasons.^[75]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 103.2(b).

[^ 2] See Matter of Chawathe (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 369, 376 (AAO 2010). Certain documentation requirements do not apply to asylees adjusting status. See INA 212(a)(7)(A).

[^ 3] See 18 U.S.C. 3500. The Jencks Act requires that a statement that was made by a government witness be produced after the government witness has testified upon demand by the defense. Failure by the government to produce the statement requires the suppression of the testimony of that witness.

[^ 4] See INA 291.

[^ 5] See Chapter 8, Discretionary Analysis [1-USCIS PM E.8].

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(1).

[^ 7] Although birth certificates are primary evidence, when the birth certificate was not registered contemporaneously with the birth, the officer must consider the birth certificate, as well as all the other evidence of record and the circumstances of the case, to determine whether the petitioner has submitted sufficient reliable evidence to demonstrate the claimed relationship by a preponderance of the evidence. See Matter of Rehman, 27 I&N Dec. 124 (BIA 2017). In addition, as of September 30, 2010, all birth certificates that were issued in Puerto Rico before July 1, 2010 are invalid. For any benefit request received after September 30, 2010, officers should verify that the Puerto Rico birth certificate was issued by the General Vital Statistics Office of Puerto Rico (Puerto Rico Department of Health) on or after July 1, 2010. For additional information related to the legislation that amended Puerto Rico law with respect to the issuance and validity of birth certificates, see S.B. 1653, Law No. 68 of 2009.

[^ 8] Officers reference DOS's U.S. Visa: Reciprocity and Civil Documents by Country webpage for country-specific document standards.

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 103.2(b).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(2). For self-petitions under the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) and petitions and applications for T and U nonimmigrant status (for victims of human trafficking and other specified crimes), USCIS considers any credible evidence relevant to the petition or application. Requestors may submit any credible, relevant, and probative evidence to establish eligibility. The determination of what evidence is credible and the weight to be given that evidence is within the sole discretion of USCIS and determined on a case-by-case basis. See INA 204(a)(1)(J). See INA 214(p)(4). See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(2)(iii). See 8 CFR 204.1(f)(1). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(i). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(i). See 8 CFR 214.14(c)(4). See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(2) and 8 CFR 214.11(d)(5). VAWA self-petitioners may not be required to demonstrate that preferred primary or secondary evidence is unavailable. See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(2)(iii). See Volume 3, Humanitarian Protection and Parole [3 USCIS-PM].

[^ 11] See INA 208(b)(1)(B)(ii).

[^ 12] The DOS's website provides country-specific information on the availability of various foreign documents. If DOS shows that a record is generally not available in a particular country, USCIS may accept secondary evidence without requiring the written statement from the issuing authority. See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(2)(ii).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(2)(i).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 103.2(b).

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(2)(ii).

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 103.2(b).

[^ 17] Secondary evidence must overcome the unavailability of primary evidence, and affidavits must overcome the unavailability of both primary and secondary evidence. See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(2).

[^ 18] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(2)(ii).

[^ 19] See 8 CFR 204.1(f)(1). DOS's U.S. Visa: Reciprocity and Civil Documents by Country webpage provides country-specific information on the availability and reliability of various foreign documents. If DOS shows that a record is generally not reliable in a particular country, USCIS should request secondary evidence.

[^ 20] Secondary evidence may include optional submission of DNA results. In certain cases where primary and secondary evidence are not sufficient to demonstrate a claimed family relationship, USCIS may send the requestor a Request for Evidence (RFE) suggesting DNA testing to support a claim of a biological family relationship. DNA collection is voluntary and a decision to omit DNA evidence is not factored into an adjudicative decision. For additional information on voluntary DNA submission, see USCIS Response to COVID-19 webpage.

[^ 21] For benefit requests filed electronically as permitted by form instructions, requestors must follow the instructions provided to properly submit all required evidence. For additional information relating to electronic filings, see Part B, Submission of Benefit Requests, Chapter 6, Submitting Requests [1 USCIS-PM B.6].

[^ 22] For additional information on when USCIS requires original documents, see form-specific filing instructions.

[^ 23] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(4)-(5). See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(13).

[^ 24] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(5).

[^ 25] For example, an officer reviews all relevant records and considers the applicant's testimony to determine whether a naturalization applicant has met the required period of continuous residence.

[^ 26] Witnesses may include, but are not limited to, applicants, petitioners, and other benefit requestors.

[^ 27] Retraction of prior statements made under oath may, under certain conditions, render the witnesses liable for perjury. However, witnesses have a legal right to claim that written statements are not true, or that they were obtained by fraud or duress.

[^ 28] Officers should not confuse privileged testimony with confidentiality provisions. For more information on confidentiality, see Part A, Public Services, Chapter 7, Privacy and Confidentiality. [1 USCIS-PM A.7].

[^ 29] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(7).

[^ 30] If an officer intends to issue an adverse decision based on derogatory information of which the benefit requestor is unaware, the officer must disclose the information and provide the benefit requestor the opportunity to rebut the information and present information in the requestor's own behalf. See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(16)(i).

[^ 31] See Matter of Caron Int'l, Inc. (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 791, 795 (Comm. 1988).

[^ 32] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(3).

[^ 33] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(3).

[^ 34] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(3).

[^ 35] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(8). However, certain immigration benefits, such as refugee and asylum applications, are governed by different regulations and procedures regarding RFEs, NOIDs, denials, and failures to appear; therefore, the guidance in this chapter does not apply to these immigration benefits governed by different regulations. The terms “benefit request” and “immigration benefit request,” as used in this Policy Manual part, include, but are not limited to, all requests funded by the Immigration Examinations Fee Account (IEFA). These terms may also refer to forms or requests not directly resulting in an immigration benefit.

[^ 36] For purposes of this Policy Manual part, the terms “benefit requestor” and “requestor” mean the person, organization, or business requesting an immigration benefit from USCIS. In most instances, this will either be an applicant or a petitioner, depending on the request.

[^ 37] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(1). Each benefit request must be properly completed and filed with all initial evidence required by applicable regulations and other USCIS instructions.

[^ 38] For more information, see Chapter 9, Rendering a Decision, Section B, Denials, Subsection 1, Denials Based on Lack of Legal Basis [1 USCIS-PM E.9(B)(1)].

[^ 39] See the program-specific part of the Policy Manual for more information on eligibility requirements that apply to a particular benefit request.

[^ 40] For more information, see Chapter 4, Burden and Standards of Proof [1 USCIS-PM E.4].

[^ 41] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(8)(i).

[^ 42] See Chapter 9, Rendering a Decision, Section B, Denials, Subsection 1, Denials Based on Lack of Legal Basis [1 USCIS-PM E.9(B)(1)].

[^ 43] See INA 291. See Matter of Arthur (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 558 (BIA 1978).

[^ 44] However, under 8 CFR 103.2(b)(17), officers must verify the status of an applicant or petitioner who claims that he or she is a lawful permanent resident by reviewing USCIS records.

[^ 45] See INA 287(b). See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(16)(i).

[^ 46] For applications and petitions for T and U nonimmigrant status (for victims of trafficking and other specified crimes) and Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) benefit requests, USCIS considers any credible evidence relevant to the request. Requestors may submit any credible, relevant, and probative evidence to establish eligibility. See INA 204(a)(1)(J). See INA 214(p)(4). See 8 CFR

103.2(b)(2)(iii). See 8 CFR 204.1(f)(1). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(i). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(i). See 8 CFR 214.14(c)(4). See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(2) and 8 CFR 214.11(d)(5).

[^ 47] If there is no legal basis for the benefit request and no possibility that additional information or explanation will establish a legal basis, the officer may deny the request without first issuing an RFE or NOID. See Chapter 9, Rendering a Decision, Section B, Denials, Subsection 1, Denials Based on Lack of Legal Basis [1 USCIS-PM E.9(B)(1)].

[^ 48] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(8)(iv). In certain circumstances, USCIS may consider responses to RFEs submitted after the due date for response. For example, in response to the Coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic, USCIS announced that, for a limited amount of time, USCIS would accept responses received within 60 calendar days after the deadline before taking any action. USCIS typically announces such flexibilities on the USCIS website.

[^ 49] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(8). See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(11).

[^ 50] See 8 CFR 103.8(b).

[^ 51] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(8)(iv).

[^ 52] For example, USCIS generally provides an applicant for naturalization 30 days (33 if mailed) to respond to an RFE. See 8 CFR 335.7. See Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization, Part B, Naturalization Examination, Chapter 4, Results of the Naturalization Examination, Section B, Continuation of Examination, Subsection 1, Continuation to Request Evidence [12 USCIS-PM B.4(B)(1)].

[^ 53] Due to the relatively short processing times required by the Form I-539, a response time of only 30 days applies to RFEs for Form I-539 filings.

[^ 54] Due to the streamlined nature of the provisional unlawful presence waiver process and to avoid long delays in immigrant visa processing, a response time of 30 days applies to RFEs for the Form I-601A. Officers, in their discretion, may increase the response time for the Form I-601A after obtaining supervisory concurrence. This discretion should be used on a case-by-case basis when warranted by circumstances as determined by the officer and the supervisor.

[^ 55] Certain immigration benefits, such as refugee and asylum applications, are governed by different regulations and procedures regarding RFEs, NOIDs, denials, and failures to appear. Therefore, the guidance in this table does not apply to these immigration benefits governed by different regulations.

[^ 56] Certain immigration benefits, such as refugee and asylum applications, are governed by different regulations and procedures regarding RFEs, NOIDs, denials, and failures to appear. Therefore, the guidance in this section does not apply to these immigration benefits governed by different regulations.

[^ 57] See 8 CFR 204.309(a). See 8 CFR 204.309(c).

[^ 58] See 8 CFR 204.309(a). See 8 CFR 204.309(c).

[^ 59] See 8 CFR 245.18(i).

[^ 60] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(16).

[^ 61] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(16)(i).

[^ 62] However, if the officer determines that there is no legal basis for the benefit request, the officer generally denies the request. See Chapter 9, Rendering a Decision, Section B, Denials, Subsection 1, Denials Based on Lack of Legal Basis [1 USCIS-PM E.9(B)(1)].

[^ 63] USCIS generally issues RFEs when some required evidence is missing but may issue a NOI if all or most of the required evidence is missing. However, USCIS generally rejects incomplete benefit requests, including those with filing deficiencies, such as missing or invalid signatures. USCIS does not issue NOIDs for such filing deficiencies since the requests were never accepted for adjudicative review and therefore are not subject to approval or denial criteria. See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(7)(ii). See Part B, Submission of Benefit Requests, Chapter 6, Submitting Requests, Section B, Intake Processing [1 USCIS-PM B.6(B)].

[^ 64] For more information, see Chapter 8, Discretionary Analysis [1 USCIS-PM E.8].

[^ 65] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(13).

[^ 66] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(8)(iv). In certain circumstances, USCIS may consider responses to NOIDs submitted after the due date for response. For example, in response to the Coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic, USCIS announced that for a limited amount of time it would accept responses received within 60 calendar days after the deadline before taking any action. USCIS typically announces such flexibilities on the USCIS website.

[^ 67] See 8 CFR 103.8(b).

[^ 68] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(8)(iv).

[^ 69] Certain immigration benefits, such as refugee and asylum applications, are governed by different regulations and procedures regarding RFEs, NOIDs, denials, and failures to appear. Therefore, the guidance in this table does not apply to these immigration benefits governed by different regulations.

[^ 70] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(6). USCIS' acknowledgement of a withdrawal may not be appealed. See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(15).

[^ 71] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(11).

[^ 72] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(14).

[^ 73] Applications for asylum are not subject to denial under 8 CFR 103.2(b), like other benefit requests, generally. See 8 CFR 208.14(d).

[^ 74] The benefit requestor may not appeal a denial due to abandonment, but the benefit requestor may file a motion to reopen. See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(15). See Notice of Appeal or Motion (Form I-290B). A new proceeding will not be affected by the withdrawal or denial due to abandonment, but the facts and circumstances surrounding the prior benefit request will otherwise be material to the new benefit request. See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(15). See 8 CFR 1.2 (definition of benefit request).

[^ 75] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(13).

Chapter 7 - Interviews [Reserved]

Chapter 8 - Discretionary Analysis

Many immigration benefits require the requestor^[1] to demonstrate that the request merits a favorable exercise of discretion in order to receive the benefit.^[2] For these benefits, a discretionary analysis is a separate, additional component of adjudicating the benefit request. Whether to favorably exercise discretion is typically assessed after an officer has determined that the requestor meets all applicable threshold eligibility requirements.

The discretionary analysis involves the review of all relevant, specific facts and circumstances in an individual case. However, there are limitations on how the officer may exercise discretion; the officer may not exercise discretion arbitrarily, inconsistently, or in reliance on biases or assumptions.

In some contexts, there are regulations and case law that outline certain factors that officers must review and use as a guide in making a discretionary determination. However, there is no exhaustive list of factors that officers must consider. To perform a discretionary analysis, officers must weigh all positive factors present in a particular case against any negative factors in the totality of the record.^[3] The analysis must be comprehensive, specific to the case, and based on all relevant facts known at the time of adjudication. For complex or difficult cases, officers should consult with supervisors and local counsel.

A. Applicability

Congress generally provides discretionary authority explicitly in the statutory language that governs an immigration benefit. In some instances, however, discretionary authority is less explicit and must be inferred from the statutory language. Executive agencies may also outline their discretionary authority explicitly in regulations.^[4]

Many immigration benefit requests are filed under provisions of law that require the favorable exercise of discretion to administer the benefit.^[5] In these cases, the benefit requestor has the burden of demonstrating eligibility for the benefit sought and that USCIS should favorably exercise discretion.^[6] Where an immigration benefit is discretionary, meeting the statutory and regulatory requirements alone does not entitle the requestor to the benefit sought.

Certain immigration benefits are not discretionary.^[7] In these cases, if the requestor properly filed and meets the eligibility requirements then USCIS must approve the benefit request. There is no discretionary analysis as part of the adjudication, and these requests cannot be denied as a matter of discretion.

The following table provides a non-exhaustive overview of immigration benefits and whether discretion is involved in the adjudication of such benefits.

Immigration Benefits Involving Discretionary Review

Benefit Type	Discretion Involved (Yes or No)
Petition to classify an alien as a nonimmigrant worker ^[8]	No (with some exceptions)
Petition to classify an alien as a fiancé(e) of a U.S. citizen ^[9]	Yes
Application to extend or change nonimmigrant status ^[10]	Yes
Advance permission to enter as a nonimmigrant ^[11]	Yes
Humanitarian parole ^[12]	Yes
Temporary protected status ^[13]	Yes
Refugee status ^[14]	Yes (with some exceptions) ^[15]

Benefit Type	Discretion Involved (Yes or No)
Asylum ^[16]	Yes
Petition to classify an alien as a family-based immigrant ^[17]	No (with some exceptions)
Petition to classify an alien as an employment-based immigrant ^[18]	Yes
Petition to classify an alien as an immigrant investor ^[19]	Yes
Adjustment of status ^[20]	Yes (with some exceptions) ^[21]
Registration ^[22]	No
Recognition as an American Indian born in Canada ^[23]	No
Waivers of inadmissibility ^[24]	Yes
Consent to reapply for admission after deportation or removal ^[25]	Yes
Employment authorization ^[26]	Yes (with some exceptions)
Removal of conditions on permanent residence ^[27]	No (with some exceptions) ^[28]
Naturalization ^[29]	No
Application for a Certificate of Citizenship ^[30]	No

Benefit Type	Discretion Involved (Yes or No)

B. Overview of Discretion

1. Definition

The Board of Immigration Appeals (BIA) has described the exercise of discretion as:

- A balancing of the negative factors evidencing the person's undesirability as a permanent resident with the social and humane considerations presented on his or her behalf to determine whether relief appears in the best interests of this country.^[31]
- A matter of administrative grace where the applicant has the burden of showing that discretion should be exercised in his or her favor.^[32]
- A consideration of negative factors and the need for the applicant to offset such factors by showing unusual or even outstanding equities.^[33]

These characterizations imply that the exercise of discretion cannot be arbitrary, inconsistent, or dependent on intangible or imagined circumstances.

In short, discretion is defined as the ability or power to exercise sound judgment in decision-making. While the discretionary analysis gives the officer some autonomy in the way in which he or she decides a particular case after all applicable eligibility requirements are established, that autonomy may only be exercised within the confines of certain legal restrictions. These restrictions define the scope of the officer's discretionary authority.^[34]

2. Adjudicative Discretion

There are two broad types of discretion that may be exercised in the context of immigration law: prosecutorial (or enforcement) discretion^[35] and adjudicative discretion. The scope of discretion is defined by what type of discretionary decision is being made. This chapter only discusses the exercise of adjudicative discretion.

Adjudicative discretion requires an officer to decide whether to exercise discretion favorably when adjudicating a request for an immigration benefit. This decision is guided by the applicable statutes, regulations, and policies that outline the eligibility requirements for the benefit and the facts present in the case at issue. The U.S. Supreme Court has referred to adjudicative discretion as merit-deciding discretion.^[36]

In general, an officer may exercise favorable adjudicative discretion to approve a benefit request when the requestor has met the applicable eligibility requirements and negative factors impacting discretion are not present.^[37] An exercise of discretion to grant a benefit may also be appropriate when the requestor has met the eligibility requirements for the benefit, and the positive factors outweigh the negative factors. An exercise of discretion to deny, rather than to grant, may likewise be appropriate when the requestor has met the requirements of the request, but negative factors found in the course of the adjudication outweigh the positive factors.

3. Who Exercises Discretion

Congress expressly granted discretion to the Secretary of Homeland Security in deciding when to grant certain immigration benefits. For example, the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) states: “The Secretary of Homeland Security or the Attorney General, in the Secretary’s or the Attorney General’s discretion and under such regulations as the Secretary or the Attorney General may prescribe, may adjust to the status of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence the status of any alien granted asylum . . .”^[38]

The Secretary’s discretionary power is delegated to the officer, through DHS and USCIS. Therefore, when an officer exercises discretion in adjudicating a request for an immigration benefit, the officer is exercising discretion on behalf of the Secretary of Homeland Security.

In many cases, the INA still refers to the Attorney General’s discretion because the statutory text has not been changed to reflect the creation of DHS and the transfer of many functions from the U.S. Department of Justice (DOJ) to DHS.^[39] If USCIS has adjudicative authority over the benefit, the statute should be read as conferring the power to exercise discretion on the Secretary of Homeland Security.^[40]

4. Discretion

Eligibility Threshold

For discretionary benefits, there is never discretion to grant an immigration benefit if the benefit requestor has not first met all applicable threshold eligibility requirements.

It is legally permissible to deny an application as a matter of discretion without determining whether the requestor is otherwise eligible for the benefit.^[41] However, the record is essentially incomplete if USCIS denies an application, petition, or request in its exercise of discretion without making a determination concerning eligibility.

Therefore, as a matter of policy, officers should generally make a specific determination regarding eligibility before addressing the exercise of discretion. Where denying the benefit request is appropriate, the officer should generally include in the denial letter his or her determination on all eligibility requirements, including but not limited to discretionary grounds, if applicable, so that the reasons for the ultimate denial are clearly reflected in the record.

Lack of Negative Factors

A person's threshold eligibility for the benefit sought is generally also a positive factor. Therefore, absent any negative factors, USCIS ordinarily exercises discretion positively.^[42] Generally, if there are no negative factors to weigh against that positive factor, denial of the benefit would be an inappropriate use of discretion.

C. Adjudicating Discretionary Benefits

When adjudicating a discretionary benefit, the officer should first determine whether the requestor meets all threshold eligibility requirements. For example, in adjudicating an application for adjustment of status under INA 245(a), the officer should first determine:

- Whether the applicant was inspected and admitted or paroled or has an approved petition as a VAWA self-petitioner;
- Is eligible to receive an immigrant visa;
- Is admissible to the United States for permanent residence; and
- Has an immigrant visa immediately available to him or her at the time he or she files the adjustment application.^[43]

If the officer finds that the requestor does not meet the eligibility requirements but may be eligible for a waiver, exemption, or other form of relief, the officer should determine whether the requestor qualifies for a waiver, exemption, or other form of relief. Not all applications are concurrently filed, and in some instances, applicants must file a separate waiver application or application for relief and have that application approved before the applicant qualifies for the benefit.

If the officer finds that the requestor meets the eligibility requirements because of an approved waiver, exemption, or other form of relief, the officer must then determine whether the request should be granted as a matter of discretion. If the officer finds that the requestor does not meet all applicable eligibility requirements, the officer can still include a discretionary analysis in the denial. The discretionary determination is the final step in the adjudication of a benefit request. Adding a discretionary analysis to a denial is useful if an appellate body on review disagrees with the officer's conclusion that the requestor failed to meet the threshold eligibility requirements. In such a situation, the discretionary denial may still stand.

1. Basic Adjudication Steps

Officers should generally follow a three-step process when adjudicating a benefit request involving a discretionary analysis.

Basic Adjudication Steps Involving Discretion
Step One	Fact finding
Step Two	Determine whether requestor meets the threshold eligibility requirements
Step Three	Conduct discretionary analysis

Fact Finding^[44]

Fact finding refers to the process of gathering and assessing evidence. The focus of fact finding should be to obtain credible evidence relevant to a requestor's eligibility for the benefit, including the discretionary determination. If a requestor is interviewed, the officer should elicit information pertinent to fact finding during the interview. As part of fact finding, officers should evaluate relevant information present in the record. Depending on the benefit sought, such information might include, but is not limited to:

- Immigration history;
- Family ties in the United States;
- Any serious medical conditions;
- Any criminal history;
- Other connections to the community; or
- Information indicating a public safety or national security concern.

Background information may be relevant for eligibility determinations and to the exercise of discretion.

For discretionary benefits, the benefit requestor has the burden of showing that a favorable exercise of discretion is warranted through the submission of evidence.^[45] In cases where negative factors are present, the officer may ask the requestor directly why he or she warrants a favorable exercise of discretion. The officer should document any response, or lack thereof, in the record.

Determining Whether Requestor First Meets Threshold Eligibility Requirements

The discretionary analysis is the final step in the adjudication. Generally, the officer should first determine whether the requestor meets all threshold eligibility requirements before beginning the discretionary analysis. If the officer determines the requestor has not met the eligibility requirements for the benefit sought, the officer may deny the request without completing a discretionary analysis. However, an officer may include a discretionary analysis if a discretionary denial would be warranted even if the requestor had met the threshold statutory and regulatory requirements.

In the process of determining whether the requestor has met the eligibility requirements for the benefit sought, the officer might find that certain facts related to threshold eligibility for the specific benefit may also be relevant to the discretionary determination.

For example, if an officer finds that an adjustment applicant was convicted of a crime, the applicant might be inadmissible. The criminal conviction may also affect the discretionary analysis.

Conducting Discretionary Analysis

The act of exercising discretion involves the weighing of positive and negative factors and considering the totality of the circumstances in the specific case. In the immigration context, the goal is to assess whether, based on the totality of the circumstances, the person warrants a favorable exercise of discretion.^[46]

2. Identifying Discretionary Factors

Any facts related to the person's conduct, character, family ties, other lawful ties to the United States, immigration status, or any other humanitarian concerns may be appropriate factors to consider in the exercise of discretion. A person's conduct can include how he or she entered the United States and what he or she has done since arrival, such as employment, schooling, or any evidence of criminal activity. Whether the person has family members living in the United States also is relevant to the discretionary analysis. Ties to the United States may include owning real estate or a business; the conduct of that business (including maintenance of such business in compliance with the law) may also be relevant to the discretionary analysis. Humanitarian concerns may include, but are not limited to, health issues.

Precedent case law provides guidance on how to consider evidence and weigh the positive and negative factors present in a case. These precedent decisions and USCIS guidance provide a framework to assist officers in arriving at decisions which are consistent and fair.^[47]

Factors That May Be Considered

There are a number of factors or factual circumstances that are generally considered when conducting a discretionary analysis. Factors may include, but are not limited to:

- Whether the requestor is eligible for the benefit sought;^[48]

- The applicant or beneficiary's ties to family members in the United States and the closeness of the underlying relationships;^[49]
- Hardship due to an adverse decision;^[50]
- The applicant or beneficiary's value and service to the community;^[51]
- Length of the applicant or beneficiary's lawful residence in the United States and status held during that residence, including the age at which the person began residing in the United States;^[52]
- Service in the U.S. armed forces;^[53]
- History of employment;^[54]
- Property or business ties in the United States;^[55]
- History of taxes paid;
- Nature and underlying circumstances of any inadmissibility grounds at issue, the seriousness of the violations, and whether the applicant or beneficiary is eligible for a waiver of inadmissibility or other form of relief;^[56]
- Likelihood that lawful permanent resident (LPR) status will ensue soon;
- Evidence regarding respect for law and order, good character, and intent to hold family responsibilities (for example, affidavits from family, friends, and responsible community representatives);^[57]
- Criminal history (in the United States and abroad) and whether the applicant or beneficiary has rehabilitated and reformed;^[58]
- Community service beyond any imposed by the courts;
- Whether the person is under an unexecuted administratively final removal, deportation, or exclusion order;^[59]
- Public safety or national security concerns;^[60]
- Moral depravity or criminal tendencies reflected by a single serious crime or an ongoing or continuing criminal record, with attention to the nature, scope, seriousness, and recent occurrence of criminal activity.^[61]

- Findings of juvenile delinquency;^[62]
- Compliance with immigration laws;^[63]
- Previous instances of fraud or false testimony in dealings with USCIS or any government agency;
- Marriage to a U.S. citizen or LPR for the primary purpose of circumventing immigration laws;^[64]
- Other indicators of an applicant or beneficiary's character.^[65]

This is a non-exhaustive list of factors; the officer may consider any relevant fact in the discretionary analysis.

3. Weighing Factors

The act of exercising discretion involves weighing both positive and negative factors and considering the totality of the circumstances in the case before making a decision. Whether a favorable exercise of discretion is warranted is case-specific and depends on the evidence of positive and negative factors submitted by the requestor. As the negative factors grow more serious, a favorable exercise of discretion may not be warranted without the existence of unusual or outstanding equities in the case. [66]

Totality of the Circumstances: Evaluating the Case-Specific Considerations for Each Factor

An officer must consider the totality of the facts and circumstances of each individual case involving discretionary benefit requests. To do so, officers should ensure discretionary factors are considered in the context of all factors in the case.

There is no formula for determining the weight to be given a specific positive or negative factor. Officers should not attempt to assign numbers or points to a specific factor to determine if one factor is more or less favorable than another. Officers should consider each factor separately and then all the factors as a whole. The negative and positive factors should be balanced against each other and then evaluated cumulatively.^[67] The weight given to each factor may vary depending on the facts of a particular case as well as the relationship of the factor to other factors in the analysis.

Discretionary factors are often interrelated. Officers must therefore determine whether each particular factor is positive or negative and how it affects the other factors under consideration. Some factors are generally given more weight than others. A small number of positive factors may overcome a larger number of negative factors, and vice versa, depending on the specific factors.

For example, when weighing the positive and negative factors, the officer should not consider the various factors individually, in isolation from one another.^[68] When considering each factor individually, without considering how all the factors relate to each other, it becomes difficult to weigh the positive and negative factors properly.

Once the officer has weighed each factor individually, the officer should consider all the factors cumulatively to determine whether the unfavorable factors outweigh the favorable ones. If, after weighing all the factors, the officer determines that the positive factors outweigh the negative factors, then the requestor merits a favorable exercise of discretion. If the negative factors outweigh the positive factors, then the officer may decline to favorably exercise discretion and deny the benefit request. There may be instances where the gravity of a negative factor is of such significance that the factor by itself weighs heavily against a favorable exercise of discretion.^[69]

Cases that are denied on the basis of an unfavorable exercise of discretion must include an officer's explanation of why USCIS is not exercising discretion in the requestor's favor.^[70] The denial notice must clearly set forth the positive and negative factors considered and explain why the negative factors outweigh the positive factors.

4. Supervisory Review^[71]

Officers should discuss complex or difficult cases with their supervisors, as needed, particularly those involving criminality or national security issues, regardless of whether the outcome is favorable or unfavorable to the applicant. As appropriate, supervisors may raise issues with USCIS local counsel.

Sometimes a case, especially when coupled with government errors or delay and compelling humanitarian factors, may justify an exercise of discretion resulting in an extraordinarily favorable outcome for the applicant. Officers considering such action should carefully confirm the availability of such action under the law, weigh the factors as in every discretionary decision, consult with supervisors or counsel, and make a record of the analysis and consultation.

D. Documenting Discretionary Determinations

When issuing a decision that involves a discretionary determination, a careful explanation of the officer's findings and analysis (communicating the positive and negative factors considered and how the officer weighed these factors) helps ensure that the decision is legally sufficient and appropriate. The discretionary determination gives the officer authority to ultimately approve a benefit or form of relief or deny a benefit or form of relief when the applicant otherwise meets eligibility requirements. Officers, however, cannot exercise that authority arbitrarily or capriciously.

Favorable Exercise of Discretion

If no negative factors are present, the officer may provide a simple statement in the file noting the absence of negative factors (for example, comments indicating that the applicant is eligible, that there are no negative factors, and that therefore USCIS grants the benefit in the exercise of discretion).

If an officer grants a benefit in the exercise of discretion where negative factors are present but the positive factors outweigh the negative factors, the file should contain a record of the officer's deliberations. The officer should clearly annotate the favorable factors in the file. The officer should also annotate the file regarding any consultations that supported the approval in complex or difficult cases. In some situations, the file annotation may be the only record or documentation for other officers to understand the reasons for the decision.

The officer should indicate the rationale for the decision in a clear manner so that it is easily understandable to others reviewing the file. This may include the officer addressing the discretionary issues in the written decision or by making an annotation in the file.

Unfavorable Exercise of Discretion^[72]

If negative factors outweigh the positive factors and USCIS denies the benefit request, the written decision must contain an analysis of the factors considered in exercising discretion, where possible. [73]

Negative factors must never be analyzed in a generalized way. The decision must address negative factors on an individualized basis, applying the totality of the circumstances to the specific facts of the case. The decision should specify both the positive and negative factors that the officer identified and considered in support of the decision and should explain how the officer weighted the different factors. The denial notice should set forth the rationale for the decision so that the officer's deliberation may be understood by the requestor as well as any administrative reviewer (such as the Administrative Appeals Office or immigration judge) and the federal courts.

Articulating Analysis Separately for Discretion and Threshold Eligibility Requirements

In cases involving the negative exercise of discretion, officers should generally articulate clearly the legal analysis of whether the applicant meets the threshold eligibility requirements and then, separately, the discretionary analysis.

Denying Benefit Requests as a Matter of Discretion

If the officer denies a benefit request as a matter of discretion, the officer generally must, in the written notice to the requestor:^[74]

- Indicate the decision to deny was made as a matter of discretion;
- Identify, specifically, each positive factor presented by the facts of the case;
- Identify, specifically, each negative factor;
- Explain the relative decisional weight given to each negative and positive factor; and

- Explain the cumulative weight given to the negative and positive factors, and reason for the outcome.

By including the appropriate articulation of discretionary determinations in USCIS decision-making, officers enhance the quality of adjudications and provide appropriate explanation to the requestor.

Footnotes

[^ 1] For purposes of this Policy Manual part, the term requestor means the person, organization, or business requesting an immigration benefit from USCIS. This may include an applicant or petitioner, depending on the request.

[^ 2] See Matter of Patel (PDF), 17 I&N Dec. 597 (BIA 1980). See the program-specific Policy Manual part to determine whether the adjudication of a benefit request requires the exercise of discretion.

[^ 3] See Section C, Adjudicating Discretionary Benefits, Subsection 3, Weighing Factors [1 USCIS-PM E.8(C)(3)].

[^ 4] For example, see Kucana v. Holder, 558 U.S. 233 (2010) (comparing discretion provided in statutory language against regulations promulgated by the U.S. Department of Justice).

[^ 5] See, for example, INA 245(a) (adjustment of status).

[^ 6] See INA 291. See Matter of Patel (PDF), 17 I&N Dec. 597 (BIA 1980). See Matter of Leung (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 12 (BIA 1976). See Matter of Arai (PDF), 13 I&N Dec. 494 (BIA 1970).

[^ 7] See, for example, INA 316 (naturalization).

[^ 8] See Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129). See INA 101(a)(15). See INA 214 and 8 CFR 214.

[^ 9] See Petition for Alien Fiancé(e) (Form I-129F). See INA 101(a)(15)(K). See INA 214(d) and INA 214(r). See 8 CFR 214.2(k).

[^ 10] See Application To Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-539). See INA 214 and 8 CFR 214.

[^ 11] See Application for Advance Permission to Enter as a Nonimmigrant (Form I-192). See INA 212(d)(3)(A).

[^ 12] See Application for Travel Document (Form I-131). See INA 212(d)(5)(A).

[^ 13] See Application for Temporary Protected Status (Form I-821). See INA 244 and 8 CFR 244.

[^ 14] See Refugee/Asylee Relative Petition (Form I-730). See INA 207 and 8 CFR 207.

[^ 15] Except for following-to-join refugee adjudications. See 8 CFR 207.7.

[^ 16] See Application for Asylum and for Withholding of Removal (Form I-589). See INA 208 and 8 CFR 208. See Matter of Pula (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 467, 471 (BIA 1987).

[^ 17] See Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130). See INA 203(a) and INA 204(a)(1)(A)-(D). See 8 CFR 204.

[^ 18] See Immigrant Petition for Alien Workers (Form I-140). See INA 203(b) and INA 204(a)(1)(E)-(G). See 8 CFR 204.

[^ 19] See Immigrant Petition by Alien Investor (Form I-526). See INA 203(b) and INA 204(a)(1)(H). See 8 CFR 204.

[^ 20] See Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (Form I-485). For more information on how to conduct a discretionary analysis in the context of an adjustment application, see Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part A, Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures, Chapter 10, Legal Analysis and Use of Discretion [7 USCIS-PM A.10].

[^ 21] See, for example, INA 245(a) and INA 209(b). Exceptions include adjustment of status based on Nicaraguan Adjustment and Central American Relief Act of 1997 (NACARA), Title II of Pub. L. 105-100 (PDF), 111 Stat. 2160, 2193 (November 19, 1997); refugee-based adjustment under INA 209(a)(2); adjustment of status based on Haitian Refugee Immigration Fairness Act of 1998 (HRIFA), Section 902 of Division A, Title IX of Pub. L. 105-277 (PDF), 112 Stat. 2681, 2681-538 (October 21, 1998); adjustment of status based on Liberian Refugee Immigration Fairness (LRIF) law, Section 7611 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2020, Pub. L. 116-92 (PDF), 113 Stat. 1198, 2309 (December 20, 2019).

[^ 22] See Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (Form I-485). See INA 249. See 8 CFR 249. For more information, see Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part O, Registration [7 USCIS-PM O].

[^ 23] See INA 289 and 8 CFR 289.

[^ 24] See Application for Waiver of Grounds of Inadmissibility (Form I-601). See Application for Provisional Unlawful Presence Waiver (Form I-601A). See Application by Refugee for Waiver of Grounds of Excludability (Form I-602). See, for example, INA 209(c), INA 212(a)(9)(B)(v), INA 212(a)(9)(C)(iii), and INA 212(g)-(i). For more information on how to conduct a discretionary analysis in the context of a waiver application, see Volume 9, Waivers and Other Forms of Relief, Part A, Waiver Policies and Procedures, Chapter 5, Discretion [9 USCIS-PM A.5].

[^ 25] See Application for Permission to Reapply for Admission into the United States After Deportation or Removal (Form I-212). See INA 212(a)(9)(A)(iii) and INA 212(a)(9)(C)(ii).

[^ 26] See Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765). See INA 274A. See 8 CFR 274a.12. For more information, see Volume 10, Employment Authorization [10 USCIS-PM].

[^ 27] See Petition to Remove Conditions on Residence (Form I-751). See Petition by Investor to Remove Conditions on Permanent Resident Status (Form I-829). See INA 216 and INA 216A. See 8 CFR 216.

[^ 28] When a family-based conditional permanent resident files a Petition to Remove Conditions on Residence (Form I-751) as a waiver request based on termination of marriage, battery or extreme cruelty, or extreme hardship, it is a discretionary decision. See INA 216(c)(4).

[^ 29] See Application for Naturalization (Form N-400). See INA 316. For more information, see Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization [12 USCIS-PM].

[^ 30] See Application for Certificate of Citizenship (Form N-600). See INA 301, INA 309 and INA 320. For more information, see Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization, Part K, Certificates of Citizenship and Naturalization [12 USCIS-PM K].

[^ 31] See Matter of Marin (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 581, 584 (BIA 1978). See Matter of Buscemi (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 628, 633 (BIA 1988). See Matter of Edwards (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 191, 195 (BIA 1990). See Matter of Mendez-Morales (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 296, 300 (BIA 1996).

[^ 32] See Matter of Patel (PDF), 17 I&N Dec. 597 (BIA 1980) (adjustment of status). See Von Pervieux v. INS, 572 F.2d 114, 118 (3rd Cir. 1978). See Ameeriar v. INS, 438 F.2d 1028, 1030 (3rd Cir. 1971). See Matter of Marques (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 314 (BIA 1977).

[^ 33] See Matter of Ortiz-Prieto (PDF), 11 I&N Dec. 317 (BIA 1965).

[^ 34] See Subsection 4, Discretion [1 USCIS-PM E.8(B)(4)].

[^ 35] Prosecutorial discretion is a decision to enforce or not enforce the law against someone. Prosecutorial discretion is exercised when an agency makes a decision with respect to enforcing the law. USCIS, along with other DHS agencies such as U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement and U.S. Customs and Border Protection, has the authority to exercise prosecutorial discretion related to immigration enforcement actions it may take, particularly in the context of initiating removal proceedings through the issuance of a non-mandatory Notice to Appear. Prosecutorial discretion does not decrease USCIS' commitment to enforcing the immigration laws. Rather, it is a means to use agency resources in a way that best accomplishes the mission of administering and enforcing the immigration laws of the United States.

[^ 36] See INS v. Doherty (PDF), 502 U.S. 314 (1992).

[^ 37] See Matter of Arai (PDF), 13 I&N Dec. 494, 496 (BIA 1970) ("In the absence of adverse factors, adjustment will ordinarily be granted, still as a matter of discretion."). See Matter of Pula (PDF), 19 I&N

Dec. 467, 474 (BIA 1987) (“In the absence of any adverse factors, however, asylum should be granted in the exercise of discretion.”).

[^ 38] See INA 209(b).

[^ 39] As of March 1, 2003, in accordance with Section 1517 of the Homeland Security Act of 2002 (HSA), Pub. L. 107-296 (PDF), 116 Stat. 2135, 2311 (November 25, 2002), any reference to the Attorney General in a provision of the INA describing functions that were transferred from the Attorney General or other DOJ official to DHS by the HSA “shall be deemed to refer to the Secretary” of Homeland Security. See 6 U.S.C. 557 (codifying Section 1517 of the HSA).

[^ 40] See 6 U.S.C. 275.

[^ 41] See INS v. Abudu (PDF), 485 U.S. 94, 105 (1988). See INS v. Bagamasbad (PDF), 429 U.S. 24, 26 (1976). See INS v. Rios-Pineda (PDF), 471 U.S. 444 (1985).

[^ 42] See Matter of Arai (PDF), 13 I&N Dec. 494, 496 (BIA 1970). See Matter of Lam (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 432 (BIA 1978).

[^ 43] See INA 245(a). See Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part B, 245(a) Adjustment, Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements [7 USCIS-PM B.2].

[^ 44] See Chapter 6, Evidence [1 USCIS-PM E.6].

[^ 45] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(1).

[^ 46] See Matter of Marin (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 581, 586-587 (BIA 1978). See Matter of Buscemi (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 628, 633 (BIA 1988). See Matter of Edwards (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 191, 195 (BIA 1990).

[^ 47] See Matter of Arai (PDF), 13 I&N Dec. 494, 496 (BIA 1970). See Matter of Lam (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 432, 434 (BIA 1978). See Matter of Marin (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 581, 584 (BIA 1978). See Matter of Buscemi (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 628, 633 (BIA 1988). See Matter of Edwards (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 191, 195 (BIA 1990). See Matter of Mendez-Morales (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 296, 301 (BIA 1996).

[^ 48] See Matter of Mendez-Morales (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 296, 301 (BIA 1996) (In the context of waivers of inadmissibility requiring a showing of extreme hardship: “. . . those found eligible for relief under section 212(h)(1)(B) will by definition have already established extreme hardship to qualified family members, which would be a factor favorable to the alien in exercising discretion.”).

[^ 49] See Matter of Arai (PDF), 13 I&N Dec. 494, 496 (BIA 1970). See Matter of Marin (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 581, 584 (BIA 1978). See Matter of Buscemi (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 628, 633 (BIA 1988). See Matter of Edwards (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 191, 195 (BIA 1990). See Matter of Mendez-Morales (PDF), 21

I&N Dec. 296, 301-302 (BIA 1996) (“. . . if the alien has relatives in the United States, the quality of their relationship must be considered in determining the weight to be awarded this equity.”).

[^ 50] See Matter of Arai (PDF), 13 I&N Dec. 494, 496 (BIA 1970). See Matter of Marin (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 581, 585 (BIA 1978). See Matter of Buscemi (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 628, 633 (BIA 1988). See Matter of Edwards (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 191, 195 (BIA 1990). See Matter of Mendez-Morales (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 296, 301 (BIA 1996).

[^ 51] See Matter of Marin (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 581, 585 (BIA 1978). See Matter of Buscemi (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 628, 633 (BIA 1988). See Matter of Edwards (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 191, 195 (BIA 1990).

[^ 52] See Matter of Arai (PDF), 13 I&N Dec. 494, 496 (BIA 1970). See Matter of Marin (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 581, 584-85 (BIA 1978). See Matter of Buscemi (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 628, 633 (BIA 1988). See Matter of Edwards (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 191, 195 (BIA 1990). See Matter of Mendez-Morales (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 296, 301 (BIA 1996). Residence must be lawful to be considered a positive factor. See Matter of Lee (PDF), 17 I&N Dec. 275, 278 (Comm. 1978).

[^ 53] See Matter of Marin (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 581, 585 (BIA 1978). See Matter of Buscemi (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 628, 633 (BIA 1988). See Matter of Edwards (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 191, 195 (BIA 1990). See Matter of Mendez-Morales (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 296, 301 (BIA 1996).

[^ 54] See Matter of Lam (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 432, 434 (BIA 1978). See Matter of Marin (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 581, 585 (BIA 1978). See Matter of Buscemi (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 628, 633 (BIA 1988). See Matter of Edwards (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 191, 195 (BIA 1990). See Matter of Mendez-Morales (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 296, 301-302 (BIA 1996) (“. . . if the alien has a history of employment, it is important to consider the type of employment and its length and stability.”).

[^ 55] See Matter of Marin (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 581, 585 (BIA 1978). See Matter of Buscemi (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 628, 633 (BIA 1988). See Matter of Edwards (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 191, 195 (BIA 1990). See Matter of Mendez-Morales (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 296, 301 (BIA 1996).

[^ 56] See Matter of Mendez-Morales (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 296, 301 (BIA 1996).

[^ 57] See Matter of Marin (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 581, 585 (BIA 1978). See Matter of Buscemi (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 628, 633 (BIA 1988). See Matter of Edwards (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 191, 195 (BIA 1990).

[^ 58] See Matter of Marin (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 581, 585 (BIA 1978). See Matter of Buscemi (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 628, 633 (BIA 1988). See Matter of Edwards (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 191, 195 (BIA 1990). See Matter of Mendez-Morales (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 296, 301 (BIA 1996). However, reformation is not an absolute prerequisite to a favorable exercise of discretion. Rather, the discretionary analysis must be conducted on a case-by-case basis, with rehabilitation a factor to be considered in the exercise of discretion. See Matter of Edwards (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 191, 196 (BIA 1990) (considering rehabilitation a significant factor in view of the nature and extent of the respondent's criminal history, which spanned 10 years).

[^ 59] USCIS generally does not exercise discretion favorably to grant adjustment where the adjustment applicant has an unexecuted removal order. For information on the effect of an unexecuted removal order of an arriving alien on adjustment of status, see Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part A, Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures, Chapter 10, Legal Analysis and Use of Discretion, Section B, Discretion, Subsection 2, Issues and Factors to Consider [7 USCIS-PM A.10(B) (2)].

[^ 60] For definitions of public safety and national security concerns, see Updated Guidance for the Referral of Cases and Issuance of Notices to Appear (NTAs) in Cases Involving Inadmissible and Deportable Aliens (PDF) (PDF, 599.37 KB), PM-602-0050.1, issued June 28, 2018.

[^ 61] The officer should not go behind the record of conviction to reassess an applicant's ultimate guilt or innocence, but rather inquire into the circumstances surrounding the commission of the crime in order to determine whether a favorable exercise of discretion is warranted. See Matter of Edwards (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 191, 197 (BIA 1990).

[^ 62] USCIS considers findings of juvenile delinquency on a case-by-case basis, based on the totality of the evidence, to determine whether a favorable exercise of discretion is warranted. Therefore, an adjustment applicant must disclose all arrests and charges. If any arrest or charge was disposed of as a matter of juvenile delinquency, the applicant must include the court or other public record that establishes this disposition. See Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part A, Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures, Chapter 4, Documentation, Section A, Initial Evidence, Subsection 7, Certified Copies of Arrest Records and Court Dispositions [7 USCIS-PM A.4(A)(7)]. For more information, see Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part B, 245(a) Adjustment [7 USCIS-PM B] and Part F, Special Immigrant-Based (EB-4) Adjustment, Chapter 7, Special Immigrant Juveniles, Section C, Eligibility Requirements, Subsection 4, Admissibility and Waiver Requirements [7 USCIS-PM F.7(C)(4)].

[^ 63] See Matter of Marin (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 581, 584 (BIA 1978). See Matter of Lee (PDF), 17 I&N Dec. 275, 278 (Comm. 1978). See Matter of Buscemi (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 628, 633 (BIA 1988). See Matter of Edwards (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 191, 195 (BIA 1990). See Matter of Mendez-Morales (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 296, 301 (BIA 1996). However, the BIA found that a record of immigration violations standing alone does not conclusively support a finding of lack of good moral character. Further, how recent the deportation was can only be considered when there is a finding of a poor moral character based on moral turpitude in the conduct and attitude of a person which evinces a callous conscience. In such circumstances, there must be a measurable reformation of character over a period of time in order to properly assess an applicant's ability to integrate into society. In all other instances, when the cause for deportation has been removed and the person now appears eligible for issuance of a visa, the time factor should not be considered. See Matter of Lee (PDF), 17 I&N Dec. 275 (Comm. 1978).

[^ 64] Although this factor could lead to a statutory denial under INA 204(c).

[^ 65] See Matter of Marin (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 581, 584 (BIA 1978). See Matter of Buscemi (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 628, 633 (BIA 1988). See Matter of Edwards (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 191, 195 (BIA 1990). See Matter of Mendez-Morales (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 296, 301 (BIA 1996).

[^ 66] See Matter of Marin (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 581, 585 (BIA 1978). See Matter of Buscemi (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 628, 633 (BIA 1988). See Matter of Edwards (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 191, 195 (BIA 1990). See Matter of Mendez-Morales (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 296, 301 (BIA 1996). For example, USCIS generally does not favorably exercise discretion in certain cases involving violent or dangerous crimes except in extraordinary circumstances. See 8 CFR 212.7(d). For more information, see Volume 9, Waivers and Other Forms of Relief, Part A, Waiver Policies and Procedures, Chapter 5, Discretion, Section C, Cases Involving Violent or Dangerous Crimes [9 USCIS-PM A.5(C)]. See Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part A, Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures, Chapter 10, Legal Analysis and Use of Discretion, Section B, Discretion, Subsection 2, Issues and Factors to Consider [7 USCIS-PM A.10(B) (2)]. Another example relates to applicants seeking adjustment based on U nonimmigrant status: Depending on the nature of the adverse factors, applicants may be required to clearly demonstrate that denial of adjustment would result in exceptional and extremely unusual hardship. Even if the applicant makes such a showing, however, USCIS may still find favorable exercise of discretion is not warranted in certain cases. See 8 CFR 245.24(d)(11).

[^ 67] See Matter of Edwards (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 191, 200 (BIA 1990) (concurring opinion).

[^ 68] See Matter of Pula (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 467, 473-74 (BIA 1987).

[^ 69] See, for example, 8 CFR 212.7(d) (In adjudicating an application for a waiver of a criminal ground of inadmissibility involving a violent or dangerous crime, “depending on the gravity of the alien’s underlying criminal offense, a showing of extraordinary circumstances might still be insufficient to warrant a favorable exercise of discretion . . .”) For more information on discretion in the context of waivers of inadmissibility, see Volume 9, Waivers and Other Forms of Relief, Part A, Waiver Policies and Procedures, Chapter 5, Discretion [9 USCIS-PM A.5].

[^ 70] See 8 CFR 103.3(a).

[^ 71] Supervisory review is required in certain situations. The law provides for outcomes that may be extraordinarily favorable for the applicant but uphold principles of fairness and equity. See Munoz v. Ashcroft, 339 F.3d 950 (9th Cir. 2003) (stating, “It is true that equitable tolling is available in INA cases, as there is a ‘presumption, read into every federal statute of limitation, that filing deadlines are subject to equitable tolling [and that] the same rebuttable presumption of equitable tolling . . . applies in suits against private defendants and . . . in suits against the United States’”, but concluding that the April 1, 1990 (asylum application deadline to qualify under the Nicaraguan Adjustment and Central American Relief Act, Title II of Pub. L. 105-100 (PDF), 111 Stat. 2160 (November 19, 1997)) is a statute of repose that cannot be subject to equitable tolling). See Mohawk Power Corp. v. Federal Power

Commission, 379 F.2d 153, 160 (D.C. Cir. 1967) (“Conceptions of equity are not a special province of the courts but may properly be invoked by administrative agencies seeking to achieve ‘the necessities of control in an increasingly complex society without sacrifice of fundamental principles of fairness and justice.’”)

[^ 72] These analytical steps amplify guidance concerning denial notices, and do not replace them.

[^ 73] See 8 CFR 103.3(a). In some cases, the officer may not be able to fully reveal negative discretionary factors if they are classified. Additionally, an exception may be made for denial letters issued to applicants for admissions as a refugee under the U.S. Refugee Admissions Program, which contain only summary reasons for denials and are not required to contain detailed analysis of the basis for negative decisions.

[^ 74] See 8 CFR 103.3(a). In some cases, the officer may not be able to fully reveal negative discretionary factors if they are classified. Additionally, an exception may be made for denial letters issued to applicants for admissions as a refugee under the U.S. Refugee Admissions Program, which contain only summary reasons for denials and are not required to contain detailed analysis of the basis for negative decisions.

Chapter 9 - Rendering a Decision

A. Approvals

If the requestor properly filed the benefit request and the officer determines that the requestor meets all eligibility requirements, then the officer may approve the request. Upon approval, the officer updates all relevant electronic systems to reflect the approval.

B. Denials^[1]

If, after evaluating all evidence submitted (including in response to a Request for Evidence (RFE) or Notice of Intent to Deny (NOID), if applicable), the officer determines the requestor is ineligible for the benefit sought, the officer denies the benefit request.^[2] Upon denial of a request, the officer updates all relevant electronic systems and issues a written decision informing the requestor of the reason(s) for denial.^[3]

If the denial notice is returned as undeliverable, USCIS verifies the mailing address and places the notice, including the original mailing envelope, in the appropriate file as evidence of service of the decision.^[4]

Written decisions should use plain language that the requestor can understand. When applicable, the decision includes guidance on the procedures for filing appeals and motions, including instructions for where to find the appropriate forms.^[5]

1. Denials Based on Lack of Legal Basis

Generally, if a benefit request does not have a legal basis for approval, and the officer determines there is no possibility additional evidence could establish a legal basis for approval, the officer should issue a denial without first issuing an RFE or NOID.

This includes any filing in which the benefit requestor has no legal basis for the benefit sought or submits a request for an inactive or terminated program. For example, this includes family-based petitions filed for family members based on claimed relationships under categories not provided by statute (such as a grandparent filing a petition for a grandchild).

2. Abandonment Denials^[6]

USCIS denies the benefit request as abandoned if the requestor fails to appear for a required interview or biometrics appointment or fails to provide an original document or other evidence when requested to do so.^[7] When USCIS denies an application for abandonment, USCIS must notify the requestor, and the authorized representative, as appropriate, of the decision in writing.^[8] Such a denial is without prejudice to a later re-filing of the benefit request.^[9] The priority or processing date of a withdrawn or abandoned benefit request may not be applied to a later benefit request.^[10]

3. Discretionary Denials

Many immigration benefits require requestors to demonstrate that their request merits a favorable exercise of discretion. For these benefits, a discretionary analysis is a separate, additional component of adjudicating the benefit request. Whether to favorably exercise discretion is typically assessed after an officer has determined that the requestor meets all applicable threshold eligibility requirements.

The discretionary analysis involves the review of all relevant, specific facts and circumstances in an individual case, both favorable and unfavorable to the exercise of discretion. However, there are limitations on how the officer may exercise discretion; the officer may not exercise discretion arbitrarily, inconsistently, or in reliance on biases or assumptions.

If the officer denies a request as a matter of discretion, the denial will explain the reasons the request was not granted.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 103.3. Generally, applications for asylum are not subject to denial under 8 CFR 103.2(b), unlike most other benefit requests. See 8 CFR 208.14(d).

[^ 2] Except that, if an asylum applicant appears to be deportable, excludable, or removable, the asylum officer must either grant asylum or refer the application to an immigration judge for adjudication in deportation, exclusion, or removal proceedings. See 8 CFR 208.14.

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 103.3(a)(1)(i).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 103.8.

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 103.3(a)(1)(iii)(A) (appeal) and 8 CFR 103.5 (motion to reopen or reconsider). When USCIS denies a benefit request for lack of prosecution due to abandonment, the denial cannot be appealed (although the requestor can file a motion). See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(15).

[^ 6] Asylum officers should refer to asylum-specific procedures regarding abandonment of an asylum application.

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(13).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 103.3(a)(1)(i). A denial due to abandonment may not be appealed. See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(15).

[^ 9] A denial due to abandonment may not be appealed, but an applicant or petitioner may file a motion to reopen. See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(15).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(15).

Chapter 10 - Post-Decision Actions

A. Updating Systems [Reserved]

B. Notices to Appear [Reserved]

C. Action on an Approved Application or Petition

In most instances, once a benefit request is adjudicated and notices are sent to the relevant parties, no further action on the part of the officer is required. However, there are certain situations that may require additional actions. Such actions may be initiated by the requestor, ordinarily by filing an Application for Action on an Approved Application or Petition (Form I-824).

For example, Form I-824 may be filed, with fee, to request a duplicate approval notice or to transfer a visa petition requiring visa issuance from one consulate to another.

Jurisdiction to act on a Form I-824 lies with the office that originally approved the underlying benefit or, if the file has been transferred, with the office currently holding the file. Officers should follow local procedures for completing action on Form I-824.

D. Revocation [Reserved]

Part F - Motions and Appeals

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 10 - An Overview of the Adjudication Process \(External\) \(PDF, 2.55 MB\)

Part G - Notice to Appear

Volume 2 - Nonimmigrants

Part A - Nonimmigrant Policies and Procedures

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

A nonimmigrant is a noncitizen who is admitted to the United States for a specific temporary period of time. Section 101(a)(15) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) lists most categories of nonimmigrants; additionally, nonimmigrant categories may be authorized in legislation other than the INA.^[1] In order to be admitted to the United States as a nonimmigrant, the noncitizen must generally have a permanent residence abroad and qualify for the nonimmigrant classification sought.

B. Background

The U.S. Department of State (DOS) issues nonimmigrant visas at U.S. embassies and consulates abroad. Background and history specific to each nonimmigrant visa is discussed in the category-specific parts of the Policy Manual.

C. Legal Authorities

- INA 101(a)(15) – Nonimmigrant classifications
- INA 214; 8 CFR 214 – Admission of nonimmigrants and nonimmigrant classes; extension of stay
- INA 248; 8 CFR 248 – Change of nonimmigrant classification

Footnote

[^ 1] For example, certain professional nonimmigrants are authorized under the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) and implementing legislation and regulations. See 8 CFR 214.6.

Chapter 2 - General Requirements [Reserved]

Chapter 3 - Maintaining Status [Reserved]

Chapter 4 - Extension of Stay, Change of Status, and Extension of Petition Validity

A. Extension of Stay or Change of Status

Generally, certain nonimmigrants present in the United States admitted for a specified period of time, or their petitioners, may request an extension of their admission period in order to continue to engage in those activities permitted under the nonimmigrant classification in which they were admitted.^[1]

Also, certain nonimmigrants present in the United States or their petitioners may seek to change their status to another nonimmigrant classification if certain requirements are met.^[2]

A request for an extension of stay (EOS) or change of status (COS) is generally filed on a Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) or Application to Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-539),^[3] depending upon the nonimmigrant classification the petitioner or applicant seeks to extend or change.^[4]

B. Extension of Petition Validity

1. Significance of Prior USCIS Approvals and Deference

Deference to Previous Approvals

A request for an extension of petition validity, which is often submitted in conjunction with an EOS request, follows a previous finding of eligibility for the classification. Typically, these determinations are made by USCIS, although U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) and U.S. Department of State (DOS) also make these determinations. Although there is a previous finding of eligibility, the burden of proof in the request for an extension of petition validity remains on the petitioner.^[5]

Officers are not bound to approve subsequent petitions or applications seeking immigration benefits where eligibility has not been demonstrated strictly because of a prior approval (which may have been erroneous).^[6] USCIS decides each matter according to the evidence of record on a case-by-case basis.^[7] However, deviation from a previous approval carries important consequences and implicates predictability and consistency concerns.

As such, any deviation requires close consideration of the previous approval by USCIS. When adjudicating a subsequent petition or application involving the same parties (for example, petitioner and beneficiary) and the same underlying facts, officers should defer to a prior determination that the beneficiary or applicant is eligible for the nonimmigrant classification sought, where appropriate.

Deviating from Previous Approvals

Officers should not defer to prior approvals in cases where:

- There was a material error involved with previous approval(s);
- There has been a material change in circumstances or eligibility requirements;^[8] or

- There is new material information that adversely impacts the petitioner's or beneficiary's eligibility.^[9]

An officer who determines that deference to a prior approval is not appropriate must acknowledge the previous approval(s) in the denial, Request for Evidence (RFE), or Notice of Intent to Deny (NOID). In addition, the officer must articulate the reason for not deferring to the previous determination (for example, due to a material error, change in circumstances, or new adverse material information). Officers must provide the petitioner or applicant an opportunity to respond to the new information.^[10]

As mentioned above, an officer should not defer to a prior approval where new material information is available. This may include publicly available information that affects eligibility for a benefit. For example, an officer may be aware that a petitioner has recently gone out of business. This also includes information that affects national security or public safety garnered from security checks conducted on beneficiaries and petitioners. An officer should not defer to a prior approval when there are indicators of potential fraud or willful misrepresentation of a material fact. The officer must articulate the new material information in an RFE or NOID.

In all cases, officers must obtain supervisory approval before deviating from a prior approval in their final decision.

2. Cases Involving Previous Determinations by Other Agencies

USCIS officers consider, but do not defer to, previous eligibility determinations on petitions or applications made by CBP or DOS.^[11] Officers make determinations on the petition filed with USCIS and corresponding evidence on record, as provided above.

C. Split Decisions in Extension Requests

Officers may, when warranted, deny an applicant or petitioner's request to extend the nonimmigrant's stay in the United States in the same classification.^[12] Even if an applicant or petitioner continues to demonstrate eligibility for the nonimmigrant classification, an officer may determine that sufficient reason exists to deny the request for an extension of stay (such as inadmissibility factors or failure to maintain status).

This "split" decision process may result in approval of the petition for the same classification where the petitioner and the beneficiary relationship has not changed, and a simultaneous denial of the extension of stay request.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.1(a). See 8 CFR 214.1(c) for general requirements, such as those relating to passport validity and waivers of inadmissibility for an EOS.

[^ 2] See INA 248. See 8 CFR 248.

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.1(c). The application should be filed in accordance with the form instructions.

[^ 4] The instructions for Form I-539 and Form I-129 provide detailed information regarding who may file each form. Supplemental Information for Application to Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-539A) or Petition for a CNMI-Only Nonimmigrant Transitional Worker (Form I-129CW) may also be filed where applicable.

[^ 5] See INA 291. See Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications, Chapter 4, Burden and Standards of Proof [1 USCIS-PM E.4].

[^ 6] See Matter of Church Scientology International (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 593, 597 (Comm. 1988).

[^ 7] See Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications, Chapter 2, Record of Proceeding [1 USCIS-PM E.2] for information on what constitutes a record of proceeding.

[^ 8] This includes situations in which the regulations require criteria to be met after approval, such as the nonimmigrant treaty investor (E) classification at 8 CFR 214.2(e)(2)(i) (petitioner must be actively in the process of investing a substantial amount of capital in a bona fide enterprise), and the nonimmigrant intracompany transferee (L) classification at 8 CFR 214.2(l)(3)(v)(C) (a new office has 1 year from the date of the initial approval to support an executive or managerial position).

[^ 9] A fact is material if it would have a natural tendency to influence or is predictably capable of affecting the decision. See Kungys v. United States, 485 U.S. 759, 770-72 (1988). See Matter of D-R- (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 445, 450 (BIA 2011).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(16)(i).

[^ 11] For example, L-1, TN, E-1, E-2, and H-1B1 eligibility determinations.

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 214.1(c)(5).

Part B - Diplomatic and International Organization Personnel (A, G)

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 30 - Nonimmigrants in General \(External\) \(PDF, 426.43 KB\)

Part C - Visitors for Business or Tourism (B)

Part D - Exchange Visitors (J)

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 45 - Waiver of Section 212\(e\) Foreign Residence Requirement \(External\) \(PDF, 191.34 KB\)

Part E - Cultural Visitors (Q)

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

The Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) provides a nonimmigrant classification for noncitizen participants coming temporarily to the United States to participate "in an international cultural exchange program approved by the Secretary of Homeland Security for the purpose of providing practical training, employment, and the sharing of the history, culture, and traditions of the country of the alien's nationality and who will be employed under the same wages and working conditions as domestic workers.”^[1]

B. Background

In 1990, Congress created new immigration classification for cultural visitors, commonly known as the “Q” visa category.^[2] The implementing regulation establishes the process by which DHS evaluates both the proposed international cultural exchange program and the prospective Q nonimmigrants.^[3] The cultural exchange program must have a cultural component that “is an essential and integral part of the international cultural exchange visitor’s employment or training.”^[4] The Q nonimmigrants must meet age, qualifications for the job, and communication requirements. Petitions seeking Q-1 status may be filed for multiple participants.^[5]

C. Legal Authorities

- INA 101(a)(15)(Q) – Definition of Q nonimmigrant classification
- 8 CFR 214.2(q) – Cultural visitors

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 101(a)(15)(Q).

[^ 2] See INA 101(a)(15)(Q).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(q).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(3)(iii)(B).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(5)(ii).

Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

A. Petitioner Requirements

1. Qualified Employer

A qualified employer is a United States or foreign firm, corporation, non-profit organization, or other legal entity, including its U.S. branches, subsidiaries, affiliates, and franchises,^[1] which:

- Is actively doing business in the United States;^[2] and

- Administers a DHS-designated international cultural exchange program.^[3]

Doing business means the regular, systematic, and continuous provision of goods or services (including lectures, seminars and other types of cultural programs) by a qualified employer which has employees, and does not include the mere presence of an agent or office of the qualifying employer.^[4]

To establish eligibility as a qualified employer, the petitioner must provide evidence that it maintains an established international cultural exchange program.^[5]

2. Agent

A designated agent may file the petition if he or she is employed by the employer on a permanent basis in an executive or managerial capacity and is a U.S. citizen, a noncitizen lawfully admitted for permanent residence, or a noncitizen provided temporary residence status under INA 210 or INA 245A.^[6]

B. Program Requirements

1. Accessibility to the Public

The culture sharing must take place in a school, museum, business or other establishment where the American public, or a segment of the public sharing a common cultural interest, is exposed to aspects of a foreign culture as part of a structured program. A private home or an isolated business setting that is not open to direct access by the public would not qualify.^[7]

2. Cultural Component

The program must have a cultural component that is an essential and integral part of the participant's employment or training, and is designed to exhibit or explain the attitude, customs, history, heritage, philosophy, or traditions of the participant's country of nationality.^[8] The cultural component may include structured instructional activities, such as:

- Seminars;
- Courses;
- Lecture series; or
- Language camps.^[9]

3. Work Component

The participant's employment or training in the United States may not be independent of the cultural component of the international cultural exchange program. The work component must serve as the vehicle to achieve the objectives of the cultural component of the program. In other words, the participant's work or training in the United States must be tied to the cultural component which is to exhibit or explain attitude, customs, history, heritage, philosophy or traditions of the participant's country of nationality.

The sharing of the culture of the participant's country of nationality must result from his or her employment or training with the qualified employer in the United States.^[10]

4. Services in More than One Location

The participant may engage in employment or training in different locations for the same employer. If there are different locations, the petition must include an itinerary with the dates and locations of the services, labor, or training to be performed.^[11] The employment occurring at each location must meet the requirements of an international exchange program.

C. Participant Requirements

1. Participant Requirements

Participants in Q-1 cultural exchange programs must:^[12]

- Be at least 18 years of age at the time the petition is filed;
- Be qualified to perform the service or labor or receive the training stated in the petition; and
- Have the ability to communicate effectively about the cultural attributes of his or her country of nationality^[13] with the American public.

In addition, participants who have previously spent 15 months in the United States as a Q-1 nonimmigrant must have resided and been physically present outside the United States for the immediate prior year.^[14] Brief trips into the United States do not break the continuity of the 1-year foreign residency.^[15]

2. Family Members

The Q-1 nonimmigrant classification does not have a provision for any spouse or children to accompany or follow to join a Q-1 nonimmigrant. Therefore, any spouse or children wishing to enter the United States must qualify independently for a nonimmigrant classification.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(1)(iii) (definition of qualified employer).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(4)(i)(C).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(1)(iii) (definition of qualified employer).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(1)(iii) (definition of doing business).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(4)(i)(A).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(1)(iii) (definition of petitioner).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(3)(iii)(A). See Matter of R-C-C-S-D- (PDF, 356.08 KB), Adopted Decision 2016-04 (AAO Oct. 24, 2016).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(3)(iii)(B). See Matter of R-C-C-S-D- (PDF, 356.08 KB), Adopted Decision 2016-04 (AAO Oct. 24, 2016).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(3)(iii)(B). See Matter of R-C-C-S-D- (PDF, 356.08 KB), Adopted Decision 2016-04 (AAO Oct. 24, 2016).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(3)(iii)(C). See Matter of R-C-C-S-D- (PDF, 356.08 KB), Adopted Decision 2016-04 (AAO Oct. 24, 2016).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(5)(iii).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(3)(iv).

[^ 13] The country of nationality is the country of which the participant was a national at the time of filing. See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(1)(iii).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(7)(iv).

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(2)(ii).

Chapter 3 - Filing and Documentation

A. Filing Process

A qualified employer or its designated agent may file a Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129), with the Q-1 Classification Supplement and required fee, generally within the 6-month period before the participant's employment begins. A petitioner may include multiple participants on one petition.^[1] A participant may provide services, labor, or training for more than one employer at a time, provided each employer files a separate petition.^[2]

A petitioner must file a new petition on Form I-129, with the applicable fee, each time it wants to bring in additional international cultural exchange visitors. Each person named on an approved petition will be admitted only for the duration of the approved program. Replacement or substitution may be made for any person named on an approved petition, but only for the remainder of the approved program.^[3]

B. Evidence

1. Evidence Relating to the Employer

The petitioner must provide evidence that demonstrates that the employer:

- Has designated a qualified employee as a representative who will be responsible for administering the program and will serve as a liaison with USCIS;
- Is actively doing business in the United States (for example, the regular, systematic and continuous provisions of goods or services, including lectures, seminars and other types of cultural programs);
- Will offer the participant(s) wages and working conditions comparable to those accorded local domestic workers similarly employed; and
- Has the financial ability to remunerate the participant(s).^[4]

Evidence to demonstrate financial ability to remunerate the participants includes the organization's most recent annual report, business income tax return, or other form of certified accountant's report.

2. Evidence Relating to the Program

The petitioner must provide evidence that the employer maintains an established international exchange program that meets the factor listed in the Program Requirements section above.^[5] In addition to the position description, evidence that can show the program has a cultural component which is an essential and integral part of the participant's employment or training may include:

- Catalogs;
- Brochures;
- Curriculum; or
- Any other evidence describing the program.

The program's cultural component must be designed, on the whole, to exhibit or explain the attitude, customs, history, heritage, philosophy, traditions, or other cultural attributes (arts, literature, language) of the participant's country of nationality.^[6] If there are different locations, the petition must include an itinerary with the dates and locations of the services, labor, or training to be performed.^[7]

Multiple Petitions in Same Calendar Year

When petitioning to repeat a previously approved international cultural exchange program, petitioners may submit a copy of the initial program approval notice in lieu of the documentation required with an initial filing.^[8] Officers should request additional documentation only if clarification is needed.^[9]

3. Evidence Relating to the Participants

The record must contain documentation of the following information for each participant:

- Date of birth;
- Country of nationality;
- Level of education;
- Position title; and
- Job description. ^[10]

The petitioner must verify and certify that the participants are qualified to perform the service or labor, or receive the type of training, described in the petition.^[11] In addition, the petitioner must report the participants' wages and certify they are offered wages and working conditions comparable to those accorded to local domestic workers similarly employed.^[12]

For petitions involving multiple participants, the petitioner must include the name, date of birth, nationality, and other identifying information required on the petition for each participant. The petitioner must also indicate the U.S. consulate at which each participant will apply for a Q-1 visa. For participants who are visa-exempt,^[13] the petitioner must indicate the port of entry at which each participant will apply for admission to the United States.^[14]

Finally, if the participant has spent an aggregate of 15 months in the United States as a Q-1 nonimmigrant, the petitioner must document that the participant has resided and been physically present outside the United States for the immediate prior year.^[15]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(5)(ii).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(5)(iv).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(5)(i).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(4)(i)(B), (C), (D), and (E).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(4)(i)(A).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(3)(iii)(B).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(5)(iii).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(4)(i).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(4)(iii).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(4)(ii)(A).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(4)(ii)(A).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(4)(ii)(B). See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(11)(ii).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 212.1(a).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(5)(ii).

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(7)(iv).

Chapter 4 - Adjudication

A. Approvals

If the petitioner properly filed the Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) and the officer is satisfied that the petitioner has met the required eligibility standards, the officer should approve the petition. The approval period should not exceed the maximum period of stay allowed, which is the length of the approved program, or 15 months, whichever is shorter.^[1] The petitioner must demonstrate that the program will run 15 straight months in order to obtain a validity period of that length.^[2]

1. Substitution of Beneficiaries

A petitioner may substitute or replace a participant named on an approved petition for the remainder of the program without filing a new Form I-129.^[3] The substituting cultural exchange visitor must meet the qualifications for a participant.^[4]

Petitioners seeking to substitute a participant must submit a letter to the consulate at which the participant will apply for the visa or at the port of entry in the case of a visa-exempt noncitizen, along with a copy of the approval notice and the participant's information.^[5]

2. Revocation

The approval of any petition is automatically revoked if the qualifying employer:^[6]

- Goes out of business;
- Files a written withdrawal of the petition; or
- Terminates the approved international cultural exchange program before its expiration date.

No further action or notice by USCIS is necessary in the case of automatic revocation.

A notice of intent to revoke (NOIR) is necessary upon a determination that:^[7]

- The international cultural exchange visitor is no longer employed by the petitioner in the capacity specified in the petition, or if the international cultural exchange visitor is no longer receiving training as specified in the petition;
- The statement of facts contained in the petition was not true and correct;
- The petitioner violated the terms and conditions of the approved petition; or
- USCIS approved the petition in error.

The notice of intent to revoke should contain a detailed statement of the grounds for the revocation and the period of time allowed for the petitioner's rebuttal. USCIS must consider all relevant evidence presented in deciding whether to revoke the petition in whole or in part. If the petition is revoked in part, the remainder of the petition remains approved and USCIS sends a revised approval notice to the petitioner with the revocation notice.^[8]

The petitioner may appeal the decision to revoke a petition (in whole or in part) to the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) if USCIS revoked the petition on notice. Petitioners may not appeal an automatic revocation.^[9]

B. Denials

If the petitioner does not meet the eligibility requirements, the officer must deny the petition.^[10] The officer may deny a petition for multiple participants in whole or in part.^[11] If the officer denies the petition, he or she must prepare a final notice of action, which includes information explaining why the petition is denied.^[12] Additionally, officers should include information about appeal rights and the opportunity to file a motion to reopen or reconsider in the denial notice. The office that issued the decision has jurisdiction over any motion^[13] and the AAO has jurisdiction over any appeal.^[14]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(7)(iii).

[^ 2] See Matter of R-C-C-S-D- (PDF, 356.08 KB), Adopted Decision 2016-04 (AAO Oct. 24, 2016).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(6).

[^ 4] See Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements, Section C, Participant Requirements [2 USCIS-PM E.2(C)].

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(6).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(9)(ii).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(9)(iii).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(9)(iv).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(9)(v).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(8).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(8)(ii)

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(19). See 8 CFR 103.3. See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(8)(i).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 103.5(a)(1)(ii).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 103.3(a)(2).

Chapter 5 - Admissions, Extensions of Stay, and Changes of Status

A. Admission and Limits on Extensions of Stay

If approved for nonimmigrant international cultural exchange visitor (Q-1) classification and found otherwise admissible, a beneficiary may be admitted as a Q-1 nonimmigrant for a period of up to 15 months from the date of initial admission.^[1]

An officer should not approve petitions for participants who have an aggregate of 15 months in the United States as a Q-1 nonimmigrant, unless the participants have resided and been physically present outside the United States for the immediate prior year.^[2]

B. Change of Status

Generally, a beneficiary in a current valid nonimmigrant status who has not violated his or her status is eligible to change status to a Q-1 nonimmigrant in the United States without having to return to his or her home country for a visa interview. USCIS may grant such a beneficiary Q-1 status for up to 15 months.^[3]

To change nonimmigrant status, the petitioning employer or agent should file a Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) before the beneficiary's current status expires and indicate the request is for a change of status.^[4] The beneficiary cannot work in the new Q-1 nonimmigrant classification until USCIS approves the petition and the change of status request.

If USCIS determines that the beneficiary is eligible for Q-1 classification, but not a change of status, the beneficiary must depart the United States, apply for a Q-1 nonimmigrant visa at a U.S. consular post abroad (unless visa-exempt) and then be readmitted to the United States as a Q-1 nonimmigrant.^[5]

C. Change of Employer

Q-1 nonimmigrants may change employers without leaving the United States. A new employer must file a petition with all required evidence establishing the existence of an international cultural exchange program. The total period of stay in the United States, however, remains limited to 15 months.^[6] The beneficiary cannot work for the new employer until USCIS approves the petition and the change of status request.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(7)(iii).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(7)(iv).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(7)(iii).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 248.3(a).

[^ 5] There is no appeal from a change of status denial. See 8 CFR 248.3(g).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.2(q)(5)(v).

Part F - Students (F, M)

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

The F and M nonimmigrant visa categories are for noncitizens who seek to study in the United States. The nonimmigrant academic student (F-1) visa category allows a noncitizen to enter the United States as a full-time student at a U.S. college, university, seminary, conservatory, academic high school, private elementary school, other academic institution, or in a language training program.^[1]

The nonimmigrant vocational student (M-1) visa category includes students in established vocational or other recognized nonacademic programs but excludes language training programs.^[2]

B. Background [Reserved]

C. Legal Authorities

- INA 101(a)(15)(F) - Academic student definition
- INA 101(a)(15)(M) - Vocational student definition
- INA 214(m) - Nonimmigrant elementary and secondary school students
- INA 248; 8 CFR 248 - Change of nonimmigrant classification
- 8 CFR 214.2(f) - Students in colleges, universities, seminaries, conservatories, academic high schools, elementary schools, other academic institutions, and in language training programs
- 8 CFR 214.2(m) - Students in established vocational or other recognized nonacademic institutions, other than in language training programs
- 8 CFR 214.3 - Approval of schools for enrollment of F and M nonimmigrants
- 8 CFR 214.13 - SEVIS fee for certain F, J, and M nonimmigrants
- 8 CFR 274a.12(c) - Aliens who must apply for employment authorization
- 22 CFR 41.61 - Students - academic and nonacademic

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 101(a)(15)(f).

[^ 2] See INA 101(a)(15)(m). See 22 CFR 41.61(b)(1).

Chapter 2 - Reserved

Chapter 3 - Reserved

Chapter 4 - Reserved

Chapter 5 - Reserved

Chapter 6 - Employment

Subject to varied eligibility criteria, F-1 students may be eligible to engage in on-campus or off-campus employment. Not all types of F-1 employment require employment authorization from USCIS. This chapter describes the types of employment in which F-1 students may engage.

A. On-Campus Employment [Reserved]

B. Severe Economic Hardship [Reserved]

C. Severe Economic Hardship Due to Emergent Circumstances

DHS may suspend certain regulatory requirements for F-1 students experiencing severe economic hardship as a direct result of emergent circumstances.^[1] This suspension, also known as special student relief (SSR), first appeared in the Code of Federal Regulations in 1998.^[2]

Emergent circumstances are events that affect F-1 students from a particular region and create severe economic hardship. These events may include, but are not limited to, natural disasters, financial crises, and military conflicts.

The Secretary of Homeland Security may suspend duration of status, full course of study, and on-campus and off-campus employment regulatory requirements due to emergent circumstances. DHS designates SSR by publication of a Federal Register notice, which provides the start and end dates of the suspension of those requirements.

1. Lawful Status

Generally, DHS considers an F-1 student to be in lawful status if the student is pursuing a full course of study at an approved educational institution.^[3] However, when DHS designates SSR by publication of a Federal Register notice, eligible students may reduce their full course of study as a result of accepting employment authorized by the Federal Register notice.

DHS considers an F-1 student to be in lawful status during the period of authorized employment, subject to any other conditions specified in the notice, provided that for the duration of the authorized employment, the student is:

- Registered for at least the minimum number of semester or quarter hours of instruction per academic term as specified in the Federal Register notice; and
- Is continuing to make normal progress toward completing their course of study.

When DHS designates SSR by publication of a Federal Register notice, the number of semester or quarter hours of instruction per academic term cannot be less than 6 semester or quarter hours if the student is at the undergraduate level or one half of the credit hours normally required under a full course of study if an undergraduate student is enrolled in a term of different duration. A student at the graduate level must remain registered in a minimum of 3 semester or quarter hours of instruction.^[4]

Students enrolled in kindergarten through grade 12 at a private school or grades 9 through 12 at a public high school must maintain the minimum number of hours of class attendance per week prescribed by the academic institution for making normal progress toward graduation.^[5]

2. Eligibility Criteria

For an F-1 student to be eligible for SSR, the designated school official (DSO) must certify in the Student and Exchange Visitor Information System (SEVIS) that the student:

- Is a citizen of a country specified in the Federal Register notice or, if such eligibility is specified in the SSR notice, a person having no nationality who last habitually resided in the specified country;
- Was lawfully present in the United States in F-1 status on the date of publication of the Federal Register notice;
- Is enrolled in a school certified by U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement's (ICE) Student and Exchange Visitor Program (SEVP);
- Is currently maintaining F-1 status; and
- Is experiencing severe economic hardship as a direct result of the emergent circumstances specified in the Federal Register notice.

The DSO should note any specifics, as ICE SEVP recommends, in the remarks section of the F-1 student's Certificate of Eligibility for Nonimmigrant Student Status (Form I-20).

3. Documentation

On-Campus Employment

An F-1 nonimmigrant student authorized by the student's DSO to engage in on-campus employment by means of the Federal Register notice does not need to file an Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765) with USCIS.^[6]

To engage in on-campus employment more than 20 hours per week, consistent with a designation of SSR, the F-1 student must demonstrate to the DSO that the employment is necessary to avoid severe economic hardship resulting from the emergent circumstances, and the DSO must note the student's Form I-20 in accordance with the Federal Register notice.^[7]

Off-Campus Employment

An F-1 nonimmigrant student authorized by the student's DSO to engage in off-campus employment must file a Form I-765 with USCIS and include a copy of a properly endorsed Form I-20 with the filing. An F-1 student must receive employment authorization from USCIS before engaging in off-campus employment.^[8]

To engage in off-campus employment more than 20 hours per week consistent with a designation of SSR, the F-1 student must demonstrate to the DSO that the employment is necessary to avoid severe economic hardship resulting from the emergent circumstances, and the DSO must note the student's Form I-20 in accordance with the Federal Register notice.^[9]

USCIS may only grant off-campus employment authorization due to severe economic hardship for up to 1 year,^[10] unless the Secretary of Homeland Security suspends the applicability of this requirement through publication of a Federal Register notice. If the 1-year limitation is suspended, USCIS may grant SSR employment authorization for the duration of the Federal Register notice validity period, but the period of authorization may not exceed the F-1 student's academic program end date.

Existing Employment Authorization

If an F-1 student already has off-campus employment authorization, they may benefit from SSR without applying for a new Employment Authorization Document (EAD). To benefit from SSR in this context, the F-1 student must request that their DSO update the remarks field of the F-1 student's Form I-20, in accordance with the Federal Register notice.

An F-1 student authorized by a DSO for on-campus employment does not need to apply for an EAD solely because of publication of a Federal Register notice if the F-1 student does not seek to engage in off-campus employment. If consistent with the Federal Register notice, the F-1 student may drop below what would otherwise be the minimum course load. In such a case, the F-1 student must request that the DSO update the remarks field of the F-1 student's Form I-20, in accordance with the Federal Register notice.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.2(f)(5)(v). See 8 CFR 214.2(f)(9).

[^ 2] See 63 FR 31872 (PDF) (June 10, 1998). For more information on special student relief (SSR), see the Special Student Relief DHS webpage.

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(f)(5)(i).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(f)(5)(v).

[^ 5] As required under 8 CFR 214.2(f)(6)(i)(E).

[^ 6] For more information regarding on-campus employment, including locations where it must be performed and application procedures, see 8 CFR 214.2(f)(9)(i).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.2(f)(9)(i).

[^ 8] For general guidance on the adjudication of the Form I-765, see Volume 10, Employment Authorization, Part A, Employment Authorization Policies and Procedures, Chapter 4, Adjudication [10 USCIS-PM A.4].

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 214.2(f)(9)(ii).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.2(f)(9)(ii)(D). Employment authorization is automatically terminated whenever the student fails to maintain status. See 8 CFR 214.2(f)(9)(ii)(F)(2).

Chapter 7 - Reserved

Chapter 8 - Change of Status

A. General Eligibility for Change of Status to F-1

1. Eligible Nonimmigrants

In general, nonimmigrants who have been lawfully admitted to the United States and maintain the status in which they were admitted (or previously changed to) may seek to change from one visa classification under INA 101(a)(15) to another, with certain restrictions.^[1] The applicant must meet all eligibility criteria for the new visa classification.^[2]

Generally, a nonimmigrant may apply to change to F-1 status while remaining in the United States if:

- The applicant was lawfully admitted to the United States in a nonimmigrant status;
- The applicant's nonimmigrant status remains valid; and

- The applicant has not violated the conditions of their nonimmigrant status.^[3]

2. Timing and Effective Date

Academic Program Start Date

In general, upon approval of a change of status (COS) to F-1, F-1 students may not engage in any student activities (with certain exceptions)^[4] until 30 days before their academic program start date.

Officers grant the COS with an effective date of the applicant's F-1 status as the day of final adjudication (approval), regardless of whether it falls within 30 days of the academic program start date.

If a COS to F-1 application is approved more than 30 days before the program start date, the nonimmigrant must ensure that they do not violate their F-1 status during that period of time. The student must ensure they maintain status by not engaging in impermissible activities.

For example, engaging in any employment, including on-campus employment and practical training more than 30 days before the program start date, is a violation of F-1 status.^[5] In general, F-1 students admitted for duration of status who violate the terms of their status, begin to accrue unlawful presence on the day after USCIS or an immigration judge determines that they have violated their nonimmigrant status.^[6]

In all cases, the student must fully comply with all applicable requirements of the Student and Exchange Visitor Program (SEVP).

Duration of Status

Regulations define the nonimmigrant student's "duration of status" as the time during which an F-1 nonimmigrant is "pursuing a full course of study" at the approved educational institution.^[7] USCIS considers the period of time between the approval of the COS to F-1 classification and the F-1 program start date as falling within the provision of "pursuing a full course of study." This applies if the F-1 student continues to intend to pursue that course of study and does not otherwise violate their F-1 nonimmigrant status.

USCIS considers this period of time between the date of approval and the program start date as similar to the period of time and purpose a student is in the United States during summer vacation in F-1 status (such a break in classes does not interrupt status).

Deferring Program Start Date

If a COS to F-1 application is not approved before the program start date reflected on the initial "Certificate of Eligibility for Nonimmigrant Student Status" (Form I-20), the applicant must request that their Designated School Official (DSO) defer the program start date in the Student and Exchange Visitor Information System (SEVIS) before the current program start date has been reached.

The applicant can monitor the status of their pending COS application and, in accordance with instructions provided on the SEVP website, may contact the DSO if it appears that the program start date may need to be deferred. The applicant and the DSO are responsible for ensuring that the SEVIS record is not terminated while the COS is pending.

Background

USCIS historically only granted applications to change to F-1 status within 30 days of the program start date listed on the applicant's Form I-20. USCIS required nonimmigrants applying for COS to F-1 classification to continuously obtain nonimmigrant status up to 30 days before the start date of the program of study listed on the Form I-20, even if that required filing an initial extension and later a subsequent extension or extensions, or filing a COS and subsequent extension or extensions. This policy prevented students from incurring a "gap" in status prior to 30 days before the program's start date, but resulted in the potential filing and adjudication of multiple, duplicative COS or extension of stay (sometimes referred to as "bridging") applications.

In order to limit costs to applicants and the government, especially during periods of high volume and extended adjudication times, USCIS no longer requires the applicant to submit subsequent applications for extension or change of nonimmigrant status while the COS to F-1 application is pending with USCIS, provided that the applicant's nonimmigrant status is unexpired at the time of filing the initial COS to F-1 application, and the applicant otherwise remains eligible for a COS.

To avoid a "gap" in status in cases that are adjudicated more than 30 days prior to the academic program start date but are otherwise approvable, USCIS grants the COS to F-1 effective the day USCIS makes a final decision on the COS application, which may in some cases result in a student being granted F-1 status more than 30 days prior to the program start date.

3. Nonimmigrants Unable to Enroll in a Full Course of Study Seeking Change of Status to F-1 Classification

Certain nonimmigrants, including visitors for business or pleasure (B-1 or B-2), are prohibited from enrolling in a full course of study.^[8] Nonimmigrants who wish to enroll in a full course of study but are unable to do so in their current nonimmigrant status must first submit a COS application and request nonimmigrant student (F-1) status. These nonimmigrants must do so while they are still in lawful status.

4. Other Nonimmigrants Seeking Change of Status to F-1 Classification

Some nonimmigrant classifications (PDF) permit applicants to enroll in a full course of study incidental to their primary purpose for being in the United States, while other classifications do not. COS applicants in nonimmigrant classifications that permit such enrollment and who enroll in a full course of study may continue their studies, even if their COS to F-1 is approved more than 30 days before their program start date as listed on their Form I-20.^[9]

Nonimmigrants whose classifications do not permit enrolling in a course of study must first acquire F-1 status and may only enroll in a full course of study upon the program start date listed on Form I-20.

When an applicant applies for a COS to F-1 status, the applicant must wait until the COS is approved as well as 30 days before the new program start date before engaging in F status-specific activities (such as on-campus employment and practical training).^[10]

5. Travel Abroad and Consular Processing

A nonimmigrant who obtains an F-1 nonimmigrant visa through consular processing may not be admitted more than 30 days before the report date or program start date listed on the Form I-20.^[11] If a nonimmigrant travels abroad while their COS application is pending, USCIS considers that COS application abandoned.

If a nonimmigrant student travels abroad after USCIS has approved their F-1 COS application, regulations prohibit re-admission to the United States in F-1 status more than 30 days before the report date or program start date listed on the Form I-20.^[12]

6. Dependents (F-2 Nonimmigrants)

Any spouse and minor child(ren) of the student who wishes to change their status to F-2 dependent status must file their COS application while their current nonimmigrant status is valid and unexpired. Officers must review the expiration date of the applicant's nonimmigrant status as indicated on the applicant's Arrival/Departure Record (Form I-94) or other relevant document(s) to make this determination.

If USCIS denies the principal nonimmigrant's COS application, officers must deny any dependent's COS application as well.

B. Vocational Student (M-1) [Reserved]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 248.

[^ 2] According to INA 101(a)(15)(f), a noncitizen is eligible for F nonimmigrant classification if the noncitizen: has a residence in a foreign country which they have no intention of abandoning, is a bona fide student qualified to pursue a full course of study, and seeks to enter the United States temporarily and solely for the purpose of pursuing such a course of study consistent with INA 214(m) at an established college, university, seminary, conservatory, academic high school, elementary school, or other academic institution or in an accredited language training program in the United States.

[^ 3] Violations of status include, among others, engaging in unauthorized employment and certain criminal activity. See 8 CFR 214.1.

[^ 4] See Subsection 4, Other Nonimmigrants Seeking Change of Status to F-1 Classification [2 USCIS-PM F.8(A)(4)].

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(f)(9(i)).

[^ 6] See Adjudicator's Field Manual Chapter 40.9.2 (PDF, 1017.74 KB). Students may be subject to 3-year or 10-year bars on their readmission to the country, respectively, if they accrue more than 180 days or 1 year of unlawful presence. See INA 212(a)(9)(B).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.2(f)(5).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.2(b)(7).

[^ 9] Under 8 CFR 214.2(f)(15)(ii), an F-2 is permitted to enroll in post-secondary or vocational study at an SEVP-certified school so long as any study remains less than a full course of study.

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.2(f)(9(i)).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(f)(5)(i).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 214.2(f)(5)(i).

Part G - Treaty Traders and Treaty Investors (E-1, E-2)

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 34 - Other Employment Authorized Nonimmigrants \(E, I & R Classifications\) \(External\)
(PDF, 204.92 KB)

Part H - Specialty Occupation Workers (H-1B, E-3)

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 30 - Nonimmigrants in General \(External\) (PDF, 426.43 KB)

AFM Chapter 31 - Petitions for Temporary Workers \(H Classifications\) \(External\) (PDF, 605.62 KB)

AFM Chapter 34 - Other Employment Authorized Nonimmigrants \(E, I & R Classifications\) \(External\)
(PDF, 204.92 KB)

Part I - Temporary Agricultural and Nonagricultural Workers (H-2)

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 31 - Petitions for Temporary Workers \(H Classifications\) \(External\) (PDF, 605.62 KB)

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

The temporary agricultural worker (H-2A) nonimmigrant visa classification applies to a noncitizen seeking to perform agricultural labor or services of a temporary or seasonal nature in the United States.^[1]

The temporary nonagricultural worker (H-2B) nonimmigrant visa classification applies to a noncitizen seeking to perform temporary nonagricultural labor or services in the United States if U.S. workers are not available.^[2]

B. Background [Reserved]

C. Legal Authorities

- INA 101(a)(15)(H) – Noncitizens coming temporarily to the United States to perform services
- 8 CFR 214.2(h) – Temporary employees

Footnotes

[^ 1] USCIS defers to the U.S. Department of Labor's determination on the temporary labor certification for H-2A employment as to whether the position qualifies as agricultural.

[^ 2] The H-2B nonimmigrant visa classification does not apply to graduates of medical schools coming to the United States to perform services as members of the medical profession.

Chapter 2 - Eligibility for Temporary Agricultural Worker (H-2A) Classification [Reserved]

Chapter 3 - Documentation and Evidence for Temporary Agricultural Worker (H-2A) Classification [Reserved]

Chapter 4 - Adjudication of Temporary Agricultural Worker (H-2A) Petitions [Reserved]

Chapter 5 - Post-Adjudication Issues related to Temporary Agricultural Worker (H-2A) Petitions [Reserved]

Chapter 6 - Temporary Agricultural Worker (H-2A) Petitions Requiring Special Handling [Reserved]

Chapter 7 - Eligibility for Temporary Nonagricultural Worker (H-2B) Classification [Reserved]

Chapter 8 - Documentation and Evidence for Temporary Nonagricultural Worker (H-2B) Classification [Reserved]

Chapter 9 - Adjudication of Temporary Nonagricultural Worker (H-2B) Petitions [Reserved]

Chapter 10 - Post-Adjudication Issues related to Temporary Nonagricultural Worker (H-2B) Petitions [Reserved]

Chapter 11 - Temporary Nonagricultural Worker (H-2B) Petitions Requiring Special Handling

A. Temporary Workers on Guam and in the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands

1. General Eligibility Requirements

Exemption from Statutory Numerical Limitations^[1]

The Consolidated Natural Resources Act of 2008 (CNRA)^[2] includes a provision exempting H-2B workers performing labor or services on Guam and in the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands (CNMI) from the H-2B numerical limitation (H-2B cap) from November 28, 2009 to December 31, 2014.^[3] In 2014, Congress amended the CNRA to extend the transition period until December 31, 2019.^[4] In 2018, Congress further extended the Guam and CNMI H-2B and H-1B visa cap exemptions from 2019 to 2029.^[5]

The H-2B cap exemption does not apply to any employment to be performed outside of Guam or the CNMI. As such, to qualify for this cap exemption, the petition must include an approved temporary labor certification (TLC) for work locations on Guam or in the CNMI only. An H-2B worker granted H-2B status under this Guam or CNMI cap exemption who ceases to be employed in H-2B classification solely on Guam or in the CNMI is subject to the H-2B cap.

A subsequent petition filed for such an H-2B worker (for example, a change of employer petition with a request for an extension of stay) requesting employment located outside of Guam or the CNMI is also subject to the H-2B cap.

Exemption from H-2B Temporary Need Requirement Under the NDAA

The National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2018 (FY 2018 NDAA) created an exemption from the temporary need requirement for certain H-2B workers directly connected to or associated with the military realignment on Guam through September 30, 2023.^[6] Following the FY 2018 NDAA, the NDAA for Fiscal Year 2019 (FY 2019 NDAA)^[7] took immediate effect on August 13, 2018, and made amendments to the H-2B workers provision as it relates to the temporary need exemption eligibility for H-2B workers on Guam and in the CNMI, including in part:

- Extending its effectiveness through December 30, 2023;
- Eliminating a previous numerical limitation established by the FY 2018 NDAA by which not more than 4,000 H-2B workers could be admitted annually under the NDAA; and
- Providing an initial expansion of the eligible service or labor on Guam or in the CNMI.^[8]

Expansion of Eligible Services or Labor under FY 2021 NDAA

The NDAA for Fiscal Year 2021 (FY 2021 NDAA) took immediate effect on January 1, 2021, and provided further expansion of the services or labor eligible under the temporary need exemption.^[9] Specifically, the FY 2021 NDAA allows qualified H-2B workers to perform services or labor on Guam or in the CNMI that are either:

- Under any agreement entered into by a prime contractor or subcontractor calling for services or labor required for performance of a contract or subcontract for construction, repairs, renovations, or facility services that are directly connected to, supporting, associated with, or adversely affected by, the military realignment occurring on Guam and the CNMI, with priority given to federally funded military projects; or
- As a health care worker at a facility that jointly serves members of the U.S. armed forces, dependents, and civilians on Guam or in the CNMI.^[10]

An employer who qualifies under the above parameters is not required to demonstrate that the service or labor is temporary in nature if the employment start date is before December 31, 2023. Petitions with employment start dates on or after December 31, 2023 are subject to adjudication under the law and regulations that apply to the H-2B program at that time.

For H-2B petitions for employment on Guam and in the CNMI that do not qualify under the NDAA exemption, USCIS adjudicates the petitions according to existing DHS regulations and policy concerning the H-2B classification.

2. FY 2021 NDAA Exemption Eligibility Involving Military Realignment

H-2B Petition Eligibility Directly Connected to, Supporting, Associated with, or Adversely Affected by the Military Realignment on Guam or in the CNMI

With the exception of health care workers (discussed below), consistent with the FY 2021 NDAA, USCIS requires petitioners requesting the NDAA temporary need exemption to demonstrate that all services or labor to be performed by H-2B nonimmigrants on Guam or in the CNMI are:

- Performed as a result of an agreement entered into by a prime contractor or subcontractor;
- For services or labor required for performance of a contract or subcontract that is:
 - For construction, repairs, renovations, or facility services; and
 - Directly connected to, supporting, associated with, or adversely affected by the military realignment on Guam and in the CNMI.

As required by the FY 2021 NDAA, USCIS gives priority to services or labor performed under a contract or subcontract for federally funded military projects.^[11]

The “agreement” may be a “contract or subcontract.” To qualify for the NDAA exemption, any contract or subcontract for labor or services for construction, repairs, renovations, or facility services must be supporting, associated with, directly connected to, or adversely affected by the military realignment. It cannot be only incidentally or tangentially related to the realignment. The claimed relationship to the military realignment, whether directly connected to, associated with, supporting, or adversely affected by, cannot be based on assertions with no documentation to support the claim, that is, it cannot be purely speculative. The claimed relationship must be demonstrated by a preponderance of the evidence.

If the petition includes multiple agreements or otherwise applies to multiple service or labor projects, all such agreements and projects must have at least one of the above-described relationships to the military realignment. If any of the included agreements or projects lack a required relationship to the military realignment, the petition does not qualify under the NDAA exemption and USCIS adjudicates the petition according to existing DHS regulations and policy concerning the H-2B classification. After filling a petition, a petitioner may not request to remove or add agreements and projects to cure a deficient filing.^[12]

As stated above, while the H-2B temporary need exemption remains limited to contracts or subcontracts for “labor or services for construction, repairs, renovations, or facility services,” the FY 2021 NDAA language extends the previous exemption found in the FY 2019 NDAA to include those that are “supporting” or “adversely affected by” the military realignment, in addition to those that are directly connected to or associated with the realignment.

Eligibility for NDAA Exemption Must Relate to Military Realignment Occurring on Guam and CNMI

Under the FY 2021 NDAA, to qualify for the NDAA exemption, the direct connection, support, association, or adverse effect cannot relate to just any military activity on Guam or in the CNMI; rather, it must relate to “the military realignment occurring on Guam and the [CNMI].”^[13]

The term “military realignment” refers generally to the planned realignment of U.S. Marines from Okinawa, Japan to Guam, as well as other U.S. Department of Defense (DOD) force structure realignment in the Indo-Pacific region involving Guam and the CNMI stemming from DOD Records of Decision occurring in 2010 and 2015.

Guam has a long-established U.S. military presence (including U.S. Air Force and U.S. Navy bases) that predates this military realignment, including ongoing activities that are not related to the military realignment, and therefore would not be covered by the NDAA.

While some military activity on Guam or in the CNMI that is not specifically related to the U.S. Marines may come under the term “the military realignment,” distinguishing U.S. military activity that is “the realignment” as compared to other military activity on Guam or in the CNMI may be complex for USCIS officers.

The distinction essentially requires a determination of general military function, and the broader strategic goal supported by a particular contract or subcontract is unlikely to be evident from the contract documents themselves. As such, input from the DOD is particularly important to support petitions claiming eligibility as supporting, associated with, or directly connected to the military realignment, as further described below.^[14]

Furthermore, it is unlikely to be evident from the contract documents themselves how the military realignment negatively impacted a particular contract or subcontract. Therefore, input from the Guam Department of Labor (Guam DOL) describing the adverse effect is important, though not in itself determinative, to support petitions that claim that a contract or subcontract was negatively impacted, and that the adverse effect was due to the ongoing military realignment, as further described below.^[15]

In all cases, USCIS determines whether there is an adverse impact based on the totality of the facts and circumstances of the case, under the preponderance of the evidence standard.

Exemption for Contracts or Subcontracts Supporting, Associated with, or Directly Connected to the Military Realignment

The FY 2021 NDAA's addition of the term "supporting" to the terms "associated with" and "directly connected to" clarifies and emphasizes that the exemption may be granted with respect to agreements covering certain projects for construction, repairs, renovations, or facility services that do not have a specific contract or agreement with the military provided they support, are associated with, or are directly connected to the military realignment, as supported by documentation.

The FY 2021 NDAA's H-2B provision may apply, for example, to H-2B workers performing construction, repairs, renovations, or facility services or labor at a civilian parking garage, where evidence is presented that the garage was built near a U.S. military base specifically to accommodate increased parking demands related to military realignment projects, even though it is not likely directly connected to or associated with the military realignment. In such an instance, the performance of such services or labor may be considered to support the military realignment.

Conversely, a petitioner for labor or services performed at a civilian parking garage built to accommodate customers at local retail establishments may not be able to show a supporting relationship to the military realignment based solely on a claim that some of those retail customers could include military personnel. In this case, the claimed relationship between the labor or services and the military realignment could be considered merely incidental or tangential, even if there is a likelihood that some persons engaged in the military realignment project would, on a small island like Guam, use the parking garage on occasion.

Infrastructure improvements, such as utility or transportation systems, are likely to qualify for employment of H-2B workers under the NDAA exemption. In such cases, the petitioner must establish through presentation of facts and submission of supporting documentation that the contract or subcontract for such labor or services supports the military realignment on Guam or in the CNMI, given the small geographic areas of Guam and the CNMI and the inherent need for integrated utility and transportation system on the islands. This is the case even if the contract or subcontract for such improvements is not directly with the U.S. military.

Housing development projects are also likely to qualify for employment of H-2B workers under the NDAA exemption, given an inherent need for additional housing capacity to support the military realignment.^[16]

Accordingly, a petitioner should obtain a letter from the DOD that provides the DOD's view regarding whether the contract or subcontract is supporting, directly connected to, or associated with the military realignment, as well as any other documentation the petitioner believes appropriate to support its claim.^[17]

Exemption for Contracts or Subcontracts Adversely Affected by the Military Realignment

Contracts or subcontracts that are “adversely affected by” the military realignment might include, but are not limited to, projects for which the military realignment has caused a delay or cancellation of a contract or a negative impact on the availability of necessary labor or resources that are not based on assertions with no documentation to support the claim.

For projects occurring on Guam, a petitioner may obtain a letter from the Guam Department of Labor (Guam DOL)^[18] that provides Guam DOL’s description of the adverse effect and submit such letter together with any other documentation the petitioner believes will support its claim.^[19]

There is significant evidence that the military realignment has had an impact on the availability of necessary construction labor on Guam.^[20] If the petitioner submits the following evidence, USCIS would generally consider such evidence sufficient to demonstrate an adverse effect, by a preponderance of the evidence, in the absence of facts indicating otherwise:

- A signed letter from a Guam DOL official describing the adverse effect of the military realignment;^[21] and
- A detailed explanation or other evidence that credibly demonstrates how unavailability of construction workers has resulted in:
 - The petitioner’s contracts or subcontracts having been, or being likely to be, delayed, cancelled, or substantially scaled back; or
 - The petitioner’s inability to pursue additional contracts.

On the other hand, if a petitioner generally asserts that its inability to find workers necessary to undertake its current contracts or fulfill new contracts relates to the military realignment and provides only its TLC with no independent supporting documentation (such as a statement from Guam DOL and a more detailed explanation of the adverse effect relevant to the petition), USCIS would not consider such assertion to be sufficient to demonstrate an adverse effect caused by the military realignment.

While an approved TLC is sufficient to show a general shortage of available and qualified U.S. workers on Guam or in the CNMI, it does not address the effect of the military realignment occurring on Guam and in the CNMI.

3. NDAA Exemption Eligibility for Health Care Workers

For health care workers, consistent with the FY 2021 NDAA, USCIS requires petitioners requesting the NDAA temporary need exemption to demonstrate that all services or labor to be performed by H-2B nonimmigrants on Guam or in the CNMI are:

- As a health care worker (such as a nurse, physician assistant, or allied health professional), but excluding graduates of medical schools coming to Guam or the CNMI to perform service or labor as members of the medical profession;^[22] and
- At a facility that jointly serves members of the U.S. armed forces, dependents, and civilians on Guam or in the CNMI.

4. Documentation and Evidence

All petitioners that request their cases to be considered for eligibility under the NDAA H-2B temporary need exemption should submit a cover sheet indicating “NDAA Eligible” in large, bold letters along with their H-2B petition to facilitate efficient adjudication.

In addition, USCIS suggests petitioners submit the following documentation, if applicable.

If claiming eligibility directly connected to, supporting, or associated with the military realignment, petitioners should submit:

- A copy of any applicable agreement, contract, or subcontract for services or labor for construction, repairs, renovations, or facility services or other probative evidence that each requested H-2B position meets the requirement that the worker will perform services or labor on Guam or in the CNMI;^[23]
- A signed statement from an official within the DOD (including a branch of the U.S. armed forces) providing the DOD view regarding whether the applicable agreement, contract, or subcontract is directly connected to, supporting, or associated with the military realignment. The DOD statement may also explain that the services or labor are performed under a federally funded agreement, if applicable. If this DOD statement is not provided, the petitioner should establish why it could not be obtained; and
- Any other relevant documentation demonstrating that services or labor will be performed under a federally funded agreement to support priority consideration of NDAA eligibility, if applicable, if that information is not included in the DOD statement.

If claiming eligibility due to an adverse effect related to the military realignment on Guam and in the CNMI, the petitioner should submit:

- A copy of any applicable agreement, contract, or subcontract for services or labor for construction, repairs, renovations, or facility services, as well as other probative evidence that each requested H-2B position meets the requirement that the worker will perform services or labor on Guam or in the CNMI;

- A detailed explanation, accompanied by any relevant supporting evidence, explaining how and why the project has been adversely affected by the military realignment;^[24] and
- For services or labor on Guam, if a petitioner wishes to provide Guam DOL input on the adverse effect, a signed statement from an official with Guam DOL describing the adverse effect of the military realignment to the applicable agreement, contract, or subcontract.

If claiming eligibility directly connected to, supporting, or associated with, or due to an adverse effect related to, the military realignment, and the petition includes multiple agreements or otherwise applies to multiple projects, the petitioner must submit evidence demonstrating that all such agreements and projects are either directly connected to, supporting, associated with, or adversely affected by, the military realignment occurring on Guam or in the CNMI.

If claiming eligibility for healthcare workers, the petitioner should submit:

- A signed statement on company letterhead from a corporate officer or facility administrator having authority to speak on behalf of the company or facility providing its TRICARE or other applicable provider number and attesting to the fact that it jointly serves members of the U.S. armed forces, dependents, and civilians. The statement should, to the extent possible, also include the number of members of the U.S. armed forces, dependents, and civilians on Guam or in the CNMI that the petitioning facility has served in the preceding 12 months. USCIS uses this information to evaluate the use of the NDAA provision.

USCIS recognizes the limitations imposed upon health care facilities by patient confidentiality restrictions. Accordingly, USCIS does not expect and does not generally request that a petitioner submit facility records that would support that it is jointly serving members of the U.S. armed forces, dependents, and civilians on Guam or in the CNMI.

5. Adjudication

Petitioners bear the burden of establishing eligibility for the NDAA exemption.^[25] USCIS officers determine whether the petitioner has met its burden of demonstrating eligibility under the NDAA based on the totality of the evidence. When applicable, officers should give appropriate weight to the signed statement from the DOD, particularly with respect to determining the relationship between the services or labor and the military realignment, as opposed to other U.S. military activity. Similarly, when applicable, officers should review the contents of the signed letter from Guam DOL and give it appropriate weight. However, statements from the DOD and Guam DOL are not determinative. Again, the determination whether the NDAA exemption applies in a given case will be based on all of the facts presented, based on the preponderance of the evidence standard.

Under the FY 2021 NDAA, priority is given to contracts or subcontracts for services or labor for federally funded projects directly connected to, supporting, or associated with the military realignment

on Guam and in the CNMI.^[26]

Accordingly, a petition demonstrating that the applicable services or labor are performed under a federally funded agreement, contract, or subcontract has made a prima facie case that it qualifies for the NDAA exemption. This means that USCIS may accept, without any further evidence or inquiry, that the petitioner has established eligibility under the NDAA and is exempted from showing temporary need.

USCIS officers, however, still must determine whether the petition meets other H-2B requirements, such as an H-2B worker's eligibility for H-2B status, and in their discretion, may request additional evidence that the petition qualifies for the NDAA exemption.

If the USCIS officer determines that the case does not meet the NDAA exemption, then he or she should adjudicate the petition under existing H-2B policy and regulations, including the requirement that the petitioner establish temporary need.

For cases meeting the NDAA exemption regarding H-2B petitions for workers on Guam or in the CNMI, USCIS officers do not perform an analysis of whether the need for the H-2B position is temporary under otherwise applicable law and regulations.

USCIS officers, however, continue routine case processing, including reviewing whether the petition includes an approved TLC issued by the U.S. Department of Labor (DOL) or Guam DOL, as appropriate.^[27] As provided by DHS regulations, DOL or Guam DOL may approve a TLC for a period of up to 1 year, with the possibility for extension, for H-2B employment on Guam or in the CNMI, respectively.^[28]

6. Decision

If the officer determines that the petitioner has provided sufficient evidence to show that the beneficiary meets the applicable eligibility requirements, the officer should approve the petition.

Otherwise, the officer should request additional evidence or deny the petition.^[29] If USCIS denies a petition, the petitioner may appeal the decision to the USCIS Administrative Appeals Office.

Period of Admission for H-2B Workers on Guam or in the CNMI Under the NDAA

Before December 31, 2023,^[30] an H-2B worker whose services or labor meets the NDAA exemption may be admitted for a consecutive period of up to 3 years, depending on the specific need stated in the H-2B petition.^[31] Thereafter, he or she may again apply for admission under the NDAA exemption or as an H-2B worker in general after residing and being physically present outside the United States for the immediately preceding 3 months.^[32]

Because the provisions of the NDAA end on December 30, 2023, petitions with employment start dates on or after December 31, 2023 are subject to adjudication under the law and regulations that apply to the H-2B program at that time.

B. Reserved

Footnotes

[^ 1] The general statutory numerical limitations that apply to other H-2B workers are not applicable to special handling situations discussed in this section.

[^ 2] See Pub. L. 110-229 (PDF) (May 8, 2008).

[^ 3] See INA 214(g)(1)(B). See Section 702 of CNRA, Pub. L. 110-229 (PDF), 122 Stat. 754, 854 (May 8, 2008) (codified at 48 U.S.C. 1806(b)).

[^ 4] See Section 10 of the Consolidated and Further Continuing Appropriations Act of 2015, Pub. L. 113-235 (PDF), 128 Stat. 2130, 2134 (December 16, 2014) (codified at 48 U.S.C. 1806(d)).

[^ 5] See Section 3 of the Northern Mariana Islands U.S. Workforce Act of 2018, Pub. L. 115-218 (PDF), 132 Stat. 1547, 1547 (July 24, 2018).

[^ 6] See Section 1049 of the FY 2018 NDAA, Pub. L. 115-91 (PDF), 131 Stat. 1283, 1558 (December 12, 2017) (amending 48 U.S.C. 1806(b)). To qualify for H-2B classification, the petitioner generally must establish its need for the prospective worker's services or labor is temporary, regardless of whether the underlying job can be described as temporary.

[^ 7] See Section 1045 of the FY 2019 NDAA, Pub. L. 115-232 (PDF), 132 Stat. 1636, 1959 (August 13, 2018) (amending Section 6(b) of Pub. L. 94-241 (PDF) (March 24, 1976), as amended and codified at 48 U.S.C. 1806(b)).

[^ 8] Specifically, the FY 2019 provided temporary need exemption eligibility in two scenarios: (1) to perform service or labor on Guam or in the CNMI pursuant to any agreement entered into by a prime contractor or subcontractor calling for services or labor required for performance of a contract or subcontract for construction, repairs, renovations, or facility services that is directly connected to, or associated with, the military realignment occurring on Guam and in the CNMI; or (2) to perform service or labor as a health care worker (such as a nurse, physician assistant, or allied health professional) at a facility that jointly serves members of the U.S. armed forces, dependents, and civilians on Guam or in the CNMI, subject to the education, training, licensing, and other requirements of INA 212(a)(5)(C), as applicable, except that this clause may not be construed to include graduates of medical schools coming to Guam or the CNMI to perform service or labor as members of the medical profession.

[^ 9] See Section 9502 of the FY 2021 NDAA, Pub. L. 116-283 (PDF) (January 1, 2021) (amending Section 6(b) of Pub. L. 94-241 (PDF) (March 24, 1976), as amended and codified at 48 U.S.C. 1806(b)).

[^ 10] The FY 2021 NDAA did not amend the exemption eligibility for health care workers, which was initially provided in the FY 2019 NDAA. Eligibility for the health care worker temporary need exemption does not extend to members of the medical profession, as outlined in the prohibition under INA 101(a) (15)(H)(ii)(b). USCIS interprets this prohibition to include physicians.

[^ 11] See Section 9502 of the FY 2021 NDAA, Pub. L. 116-283 (PDF) (January 1, 2021) (amending Section 6(b) of Pub. L. 94-241 (PDF) (March 24, 1976), as amended and codified at 48 U.S.C. 1806(b)). For more information about the priority given to services or labor performed under a contract or subcontract for federally funded military projects, see Subsection 4, Documentation and Evidence [2 USCIS-PM I.11(A)(4)] and Subsection 5, Adjudication [2 USCIS-PM I.11(A)(5)].

[^ 12] The petitioner must establish eligibility at the time of filing the nonimmigrant visa petition. A visa petition may not be approved at a future date after the petitioner or beneficiary becomes eligible under a new set of facts. See Matter of Michelin Tire Corp. (PDF), 17 I&N Dec. 248 (Reg'l Comm'r 1978). See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(1).

[^ 13] See Section 9502 of the FY 2021 NDAA, Pub. L. 116-283 (PDF) (January 1, 2021) (amending Section 6(b) of Pub. L. 94-241 (PDF) (March 24, 1976), as amended and codified at 48 U.S.C. 1806(b)).

[^ 14] See Subsection 4, Documentation and Evidence [2 USCIS-PM I.11(A)(4)].

[^ 15] See Subsection 4, Documentation and Evidence [2 USCIS-PM I.11(A)(4)].

[^ 16] See, for example, Guam Construction Capacity Assessment - 2019 (PDF), prepared for the U.S. Department of the Navy (noting that “The main workforce challenge in meeting anticipated construction industry growth is workforce housing.”).

[^ 17] See Subsection 4, Documentation and Evidence [2 USCIS-PM I.11(A)(4)].

[^ 18] Guam DOL provides information for obtaining a “Request for the DOD letter on directly connected, associated or supporting projects” on its Alien Labor Processing and Certification Division webpage. Guam DOL intends to provide a similar process to request a letter describing the adverse effect of the military realignment to the applicable agreement, contract, or subcontract on its website.

[^ 19] See Subsection 4, Documentation and Evidence [2 USCIS-PM I.11(A)(4)].

[^ 20] See, for example, Guam DOL Bureau of Labor Statistics’ Economic Outlook for Guam Fiscal Year 2022 (stating “[t]he effect of the ongoing Marine Corps Relocation projects on Guam’s economy in FY 2022 will primarily be associated with substantial construction activity increases”). See Guam

Construction Capacity Assessment - 2019 (PDF), prepared for the U.S. Department of the Navy (noting “DoD planned construction activities from 2018–2030 are expected to peak at $939M (in FY12 $s) in 2022” and “This report re-affirms that Guam lacks an adequate organic labor pool to support the construction effort.”).

[^ 21] A letter from Guam DOL is only relevant for projects occurring on Guam, but the NDAA applies to services or labor on either Guam or in the CNMI. Petitioners may therefore submit other relevant documentation to establish, by a preponderance of the evidence, a claimed adverse effect on a project occurring in the CNMI.

[^ 22] USCIS interprets the NDAA limitation regarding the exclusion of “graduates of medical schools coming to Guam or the Commonwealth to perform service or labor as members of the medical profession” consistently with its long-standing interpretation of the general statutory limitation on the classification, to include physicians. See INA 101(a)(15)(H)(ii)(b) (“but this clause shall not apply to graduates of medical schools coming to the United States to perform services as members of the medical profession”).

[^ 23] The contract or subcontract must be directly connected to, supporting, or associated with the military realignment occurring on Guam or in the CNMI. This must be under an agreement entered into by a prime contractor or subcontractor calling for services or labor required for performance of a contract or subcontract for construction, repairs, renovations, or facility services that is directly connected to, supporting, or associated with the military realignment occurring on Guam or in the CNMI. Contracts or subcontracts showing that the labor or services are performed under a federally funded agreement may qualify for priority treatment under the NDAA. For more information, see Subsection 2, FY 2021 NDAA Exemption Eligibility Involving Military Realignment [2 USCIS-PM I.11(A)(2)] and Subsection 5, Adjudication [2 USCIS-PM I.11(A)(5)].

[^ 24] An adverse effect may include, but is not limited to, a delay or cancellation of a contract or a negative impact on the availability of necessary labor or resources. Supporting documentation may include, but is not limited to, studies that specifically find the military realignment has had an adverse impact on availability of labor within the industry or occupation relevant to the petition, or evidence that workers have left the project to take work related to the military realignment.

[^ 25] See INA 291.

[^ 26] For eligibility information, see Subsection 2, FY 2021 NDAA Exemption Eligibility Involving Military Realignment [2 USCIS-PM I.11(A)(2)]. For information regarding documentation and evidence as it relates to the priority given to services or labor performed under a contract or subcontract for federally funded military projects, see Subsection 4, Documentation and Evidence [2 USCIS-PM I.11(A)(4)].

[^ 27] Routine case processing also includes adjudication of H-2B petitions filed on behalf of beneficiaries who are nationals of a country not listed on the H-2A or H-2B Eligible Countries List. See

8 CFR 214.2(h)(6)(i)(E)(2).

[^ 28] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(6)(v).

[^ 29] For more information, see Chapter 9, Adjudication of Temporary Nonagricultural Worker (H-2B) Petitions [2 USCIS-PM I.9].

[^ 30] Because the FY 2019 NDAA exemption from the H-2B temporary need requirement expires on December 31, 2023, the last eligible requested employment start date is December 30, 2023.

[^ 31] Any single grant of a period of admission is limited to the validity period of the TLC, which may not exceed 1 year. If eligible, the worker may obtain extensions of stay for a total period of admission of up to 3 years.

[^ 32] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(13)(iv).

Part J - Trainees (H-3)

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 31 - Petitions for Temporary Workers \(H Classifications\) \(External\) \(PDF, 605.62 KB\)

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

The H-3 nonimmigrant visa category allows noncitizens to come temporarily to the United States as either a:

- Trainee who seeks to enter the United States at the invitation of an organization or person to receive training in any field of endeavor, other than graduate medical education or training;^[1] or

- Special Education Exchange Visitor who seeks to participate in a structured special education exchange visitor training program that provides for practical training and experience in the education of children with physical, mental, or emotional disabilities.^[2]

The H-3 nonimmigrant classification is not intended for productive employment. Rather, the H-3 program is designed to provide a person with job-related training that is not available in his or her country for work that will ultimately be performed outside the United States.

B. Background

The Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) of 1952 contained the precursor to today's H-3 nonimmigrant classification: "an alien having a residence in a foreign country which he has no intention of abandoning . . . who is coming temporarily to the United States as an industrial trainee[.]"^[3]

In 1970, Congress expanded the class of noncitizens eligible for nonimmigrant classification by deleting the word "industrial" as a modifier of "trainee" in the statute.^[4] However, Congress narrowed the H-3 classification in 1976 by inserting the following language into the statute: "other than to receive graduate medical education or training[.]"^[5]

Finally, the Immigration Act of 1990^[6] both limited and expanded the H-3 classification. Congress limited the H-3 nonimmigrant classification by adding the following language to the statute: "in a training program that is not designed primarily to provide productive employment[.]"^[7] However, Congress indirectly expanded the classification by creating the Special Education Exchange Visitor Program,^[8] which the legacy Immigration and Naturalization Service placed within the H-3 category.^[9] Congress has not amended the statute since 1990.^[10]

C. Legal Authorities

- INA 101(a)(15)(H)(iii) – H-3 definition
- 8 CFR 214.2(h)(1)(ii)(E) – H-3 definition
- 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7) – H-3 regulations
- 8 CFR 214.2(h)(8)(i)(D) – H-3 numerical limitations on special education exchange visitors
- 8 CFR 214.2(h)(9)(iii)(C) and 8 CFR 214.2(h)(9)(iv) – Validity of approved H-3 petitions and H-4 spouse and dependent(s)
- 8 CFR 214.2(h)(10) – Denial of petitions
- 8 CFR 214.2(h)(11) – Revocation of an approved H petition

- 8 CFR 214.2(h)(12) – Appeal of a denial or a revocation of a petition
- 8 CFR 214.2(h)(13) – Admission of H beneficiaries
- 8 CFR 214.2(h)(14) – Extension of H visa petition validity
- 8 CFR 214.2(h)(15)(ii)(D) – Extension of H-3 stay
- 8 CFR 214.2(h)(16)(ii) – Effect of approval of a permanent labor certification or filing of a preference petition on H classification
- 8 CFR 214.2(h)(17) – Effect of a strike

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 101(a)(15)(H)(iii). See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(i).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(iv).

[^ 3] See Section 101(a)(15)(H)(iii) of the INA, Pub. L. 82-414, 66 Stat. 163, 168 (June 27, 1952).

[^ 4] See INA of April 7, 1970, Pub. L. 91-225, 84 Stat. 116, amending INA 101(a)(15)(H)(iii).

[^ 5] See Section 601(b)(3) of the Health Professions Educational Assistance Act of 1976, Pub. L. 94-484 (PDF), 90 Stat. 2243, 2301 (October 12, 1976).

[^ 6] See Immigration Act of 1990 (IMMACT 90), Pub. L. 101-649, 104 Stat. 4978 (November 29, 1990).

[^ 7] See IMMACT 90, Pub. L. 101-649, 104 Stat. 5022 (November 29, 1990).

[^ 8] See IMMACT 90, Pub. L. 101-649, 104 Stat. 5028 (November 29, 1990).

[^ 9] See 56 FR 31553, 31554 (PDF) (Jul. 11, 1991) (proposed rule). See 56 FR 61111, 61119-61120 (PDF) (Dec. 2, 1991) (final rule).

[^ 10] See INA 101(a)(15)(H)(iii).

Chapter 2 - H-3 Categories

A. Trainees^[1]

H-3 trainees are noncitizens who have been invited to participate in a training program in the United States by a person, a business, or an organization. The training must be unavailable in the person's home country. There are no numerical limits on the number of people who can be granted H-3 visas as trainees each year.

An H-3 trainee cannot engage in productive employment in the United States unless such work is incidental and necessary to the training and must not be placed in a position which is in the petitioning entity's normal operation and in which citizens and resident workers are regularly employed. Finally, the training must benefit the person pursuing a career outside the United States.

An H-3 trainee must be invited by a person or organization for the purpose of receiving training (except as a physician), in any field including:

- A purely industrial establishment
- Agriculture
- Commerce
- Communications
- Finance
- Government
- Transportation
- Other professions^[2]

1. Externs^[3]

A hospital approved by the American Medical Association (AMA) or the American Osteopathic Association (AOA) for either an internship or residency program may petition to classify a medical student attending a medical school abroad as an H-3 trainee if the student's training will be done as an extern during his or her medical school vacation. The hospital must also satisfy the H-3 trainee petition requirements.

2. Nurses^[4]

A petitioner may seek H-3 classification for a nurse if:

- The nurse-beneficiary does not have H-1 status;
- Such training is designed to benefit both the nurse-beneficiary and the overseas employer upon the nurse's return to his or her country of origin; and

- The petitioner establishes that there is a genuine need for the nurse-beneficiary to receive a brief period of training that is unavailable in his or her native country.

Additionally, the petitioner must:^[5]

- Satisfy the H-3 trainee requirements;
- Establish that the nurse-beneficiary has a full and unrestricted license to practice professional nursing in the country where the beneficiary obtained a nursing education^[6] or that such education was obtained in the United States or Canada;^[7] and
- Include a statement certifying that the nurse-beneficiary is fully qualified under the laws governing the place where the training will be received and that under those laws the petitioner is authorized to give the beneficiary the desired training.^[8]

B. Special Education Exchange Visitors^[9]

H-3 special education exchange visitors are participants in a structured special education program that provides practical training and experience in the education of physically, mentally, or emotionally disabled children. This category is limited to an 18-month period of stay and to 50 visas per fiscal year.^[10]

Footnotes

1. [^] The H-3 nonimmigrant classification is defined in INA 101(a)(15)(H)(iii) as, “an alien having a residence in a foreign country which he has no intention of abandoning who is coming temporarily to the United States as a trainee, other than to receive graduate medical education or training, in a training program that is not designated primarily to provide productive employment ... ” The regulations impose additional requirements on the extern and nurse subcategories that do not apply to the general trainee category. See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(i).

2. [^] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7).

3. [^] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(i)(A).

4. [^] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(i)(B).

5. [^] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(i)(B)(1).

6. [^] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(i)(B)(1).

7. [^] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(i)(B)(1).

8. [^] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(i)(B)(2).

9. [^] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(iv).

10. [^] See Section 223 of the Immigration Act of 1990 (IMMACT 90), Pub. L. 101-649 (PDF), 104 Stat. 4978, 5028 (November 29, 1990). See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(iv) and 8 CFR 214.2(h)(8)(D). See 55 FR 2606, 2628 (PDF) (Jan. 26, 1990).

Chapter 3 - Trainee Program Requirements

A. Training Program Conditions

An H-3 petitioner is required to submit evidence demonstrating that:^[1]

- The proposed training is not available in the trainee's own country;
- The trainee will not be placed in a position that is in the normal operation of the business and in which United States citizen and resident workers are regularly employed;
- The trainee will not engage in productive employment unless it is incidental and necessary to the training; and
- The training will benefit the trainee in pursuing a career outside the United States.^[2]

B. Training Program Description

Each petition for a trainee must include a statement which:^[3]

- Describes the type of training and supervision to be given, and the structure of the training program;
- Sets forth the proportion of time that will be devoted to productive employment;
- Shows the number of hours that will be spent, respectively, in classroom instruction and in on-the-job training;
- Describes the career abroad for which the training will prepare the nonimmigrant;
- Indicates the reasons why such training cannot be obtained in the trainee's country and why it is necessary for the person to be trained in the United States; and
- Indicates the source of any remuneration received by the trainee and any benefit which will accrue to the petitioner for providing the training.^[4]

C. Training Program Restrictions

A training program for a trainee may not be approved if it: [5]

- Deals in generalities with no fixed schedule, objectives, or means of evaluation;
- Is incompatible with the nature of the petitioner's business or enterprise;
- Is on behalf of a trainee who already possesses substantial training and expertise in the proposed field of training;[6]
- Is in a field in which it is unlikely that the knowledge or skill will be used outside the United States;
- Will result in productive employment beyond that which is incidental and necessary to the training;
- Is designed to recruit and train nonimmigrants for the ultimate staffing of domestic operations in the United States;
- Does not establish that the petitioner has the physical plant and sufficiently trained workforce to provide the training specified; or
- Is designed to extend the total allowable period of practical training previously authorized a nonimmigrant student.[7]

D. Filing

The petitioner files the H-3 petition on the Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129). Multiple trainees may be requested on a single petition if the trainees will be receiving the same training for the same period of time and in the same location.[8]

Officers will review each piece of evidence for relevance, probative value, and credibility to determine whether the petitioner submitted sufficient evidence establishing that the petition is approvable.[9] The table below serves as a quick, non-exhaustive reference guide listing the forms and evidence required when filing a petition for an H-3 trainee.

Trainee (H-3) Petition Forms and Documentation

Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129), Including H supplement

Trainee (H-3) Petition Forms and Documentation

If the beneficiary is outside the United States, a copy of his or her passport

Application To Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-539) for dependents of an H-3 who are also in the U.S. dependents should fill out and sign this form, not the petitioner for the H-3 beneficiary (one Form I-539 and fee covers all dependents)

Copies of each dependent's I-94 or other proof of lawful immigration status and proof of the family relationship with the primary H-3 beneficiary (such as marriage and birth certificates)

Notice of Entry of Appearance as Attorney or Accredited Representative (Form G-28) (if applicable)

All Trainees Except Special Education Exchange Visitors Must Provide:

A detailed written statement from the petitioner containing:

- The overall schedule, including the type of training and supervision;
- The structure of the training program;
- The number of hours per week which will involve productive employment, if any;
- The number of hours per week in classroom study;
- The number of hours per week in on-the-job training;
- What skills the beneficiary will acquire (and how these skills relate to pursuing a career abroad); and
- The source of any remuneration.

Evidence that the beneficiary will not be placed in a position which, in the normal operation of the business, U.S. citizen and resident workers are regularly employed.

Proof that the petitioner has the physical facility and sufficiently trained staff to provide the training described in the petition.

Trainee (H-3) Petition Forms and Documentation

An explanation from the petitioner regarding benefits it will obtain by providing the training, including why it is willing to incur the cost of the training.

An explanation as to why the training must take place in the United States, instead of in the beneficiary's country along with evidence that similar training is not available in beneficiary's home country.

A summary of the beneficiary's prior relevant training and experience, such as diplomas and letters from past employers.

If the beneficiary is a nonimmigrant student, evidence that the proposed training was not designed to extend the total allowable period of practical training.

Petitioners seeking H-3 status for a nurse must also provide proof:

- That the beneficiary has a full and unrestricted nursing license to work in the country where his or her nursing education was obtained, or
- That the education took place in the United States or Canada.

In addition, petitioners seeking H-3 status for a nurse must also include a statement certifying:

- That the beneficiary is qualified under the laws governing the place where the training will be received;
- That under those laws the petitioner is authorized to provide the training;
- That there is a genuine need for the nurse to receive the training;
- That the training is designed to benefit the beneficiary upon returning to his or her country of origin; and
- That the training is designed to benefit the beneficiary's overseas employer.

Hospitals petitioning for externs must also:

Trainee (H-3) Petition Forms and Documentation

- Provide proof that the hospital has been approved by the American Medical Association (AMA) or the American Osteopathic Association (AOA) for either an internship or residence program, and
- Provide proof that the extern is currently attending medical school abroad.

If Requesting Premium Processing:

Request for Premium Processing Service (Form I-907) (see USCIS website for current fees)

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(ii)(A).

[^ 2] H-3 beneficiaries must also establish that they intend to return to their foreign residence upon the termination of their H-3 status. See INA 214(b) and INA 101(a)(15)(H)(iii).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(ii)(B). See 55 FR 2628-29 (PDF) (Jan. 26, 1990).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(ii)(B).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(iii). Additionally, externs and nurses have further requirements. A hospital petitioning for an H-3 extern must also demonstrate that: It has been approved by either the American Medical Association (AMA) or the American Osteopathic Association (AOA) for either an internship or residency program; the beneficiary is currently attending medical school abroad; and that the beneficiary will engage in employment as an extern for the petitioner during his or her medical school vacation. See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(i)(A). A petitioner seeking H-3 classification for a nurse must also provide a statement certifying that the beneficiary is fully qualified under the laws governing the place where the training will be received to engage in such training, and that under those laws the petitioner is authorized to give the beneficiary the desired training. See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(i).

[^ 6] A trainee may already be a professional in his or her own right and possess substantial knowledge in a field; however, such person may be using a training to further his or her skills or career through company-specific training that is only available in the United States. As always, the totality of the evidence must be examined and all other requirements must be met.

[^ 7] For additional information about the training program and factors to consider during adjudications, see Chapter 6, Factors to Consider [2 USCIS-PM J.6(B)].

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(2)(ii).

[^ 9] The standard of proof applied in most USCIS adjudications, including H-3 petitions, and administrative immigration proceedings is the “preponderance of the evidence” standard. Therefore, if the petitioner submits relevant, probative, and credible evidence that leads USCIS to believe that the claim is “probably true” or “more likely than not,” the applicant or petitioner has satisfied the standard of proof. See INS v. Cardoza-Fonesca, 480 U.S. 421 (1987) (defining “more likely than not” as a greater than 50 percent probability of something occurring). If the officer can articulate a material doubt, it is appropriate for the officer to either request additional evidence or, if that doubt leads the officer to believe that the claim is probably not true, deny the application or petition. See Matter of Chawathe, 25 I&N Dec. 369, 376 (AAO 2010) (citing Matter of E-M, 20 I&N Dec. 77, 79-80 (Comm. 1989)).

Chapter 4 - Special Education Exchange Visitor Program Requirements

There are requirements for H-3 petitions involving special education exchange visitors that are distinct from H-3 trainees. [1] An H-3 beneficiary in a special education training program must be coming to the United States to participate in a structured program which provides for practical training and experience in the education of children with physical, mental, or emotional disabilities. No more than 50 visas may be approved in a fiscal year, [2] and participants may remain in the United States for no more than 18 months. [3]

The petition must be filed by a facility which has: a professionally trained staff; and a structured program for providing:

- Education to children with disabilities; and
- Training and hands-on experience to participants in the special education exchange visitor program. [4]

The petition should include a description of:

- The training the applicant will receive;
- The facility’s professional staff; and
- The beneficiary’s participation in the training program. [5]

In addition, the petition must show that the special education exchange visitor:

- Is nearing the completion of a baccalaureate or higher degree program in special education;
- Has already earned a baccalaureate or higher degree in special education; or
- Has extensive prior training and experience teaching children with physical, mental, or emotional disabilities. [6]

Any custodial care of children must be incidental to the beneficiary's training.

Officers review each piece of evidence for relevance, probative value, and credibility to determine whether the petitioner submitted sufficient evidence establishing that the petition is approvable. [7] The table below serves as a quick, non-exhaustive, reference guide listing the forms and evidence required when filing a petition for an H-3 special education exchange visitor.

Special Education Exchange Visitor H-3 Petition Forms and Documentation

Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129), Including H supplement

If the beneficiary is in the United States, a copy of the I-94 or other proof of current lawful, unexpired immigration status (Note that Canadians who enter as a B-1 or a B-2 will not typically have an I-94)

Filing fee; see USCIS' website for current fees

Application To Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-539) for dependents of an H-3 who are also in the U.S. dependents should fill out and sign this form, not the petitioner for the H-3 beneficiary (one Form I-539 and fee covers all dependents)

Copies of each dependent's I-94 or other proof of lawful immigration status and proof of the family relationship with the primary H-3 beneficiary (such as marriage and birth certificates)

Notice of Entry of Appearance as Attorney or Accredited Representative (Form G-28) (if applicable)

A copy of his or her passport, if the beneficiary is outside the United States

A description of the structured training program for providing education to children with disabilities and for providing hands-on experience to participants in the special education program, including

Special Education Exchange Visitor H-3 Petition Forms and Documentation

noting the professionally trained staff, facilities, and how the exchange visitor will participate in the program

Evidence that any custodial care of children will be incidental to the training program

Evidence that participant has nearly completed a baccalaureate or higher degree in special education, already has a baccalaureate degree or higher degree in special education, or has extensive prior training and experience in teaching children with disabilities

If Requesting Premium Processing:

Request for Premium Processing Service (Form I-907) (see USCIS' website for current fees)

Footnotes

[^ 1] Requirements for trainee petitions are not applicable to petitions for special education exchange visitors. See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(ii) and 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(iii). See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(iv)(A)(3).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(8)(i)(D).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(13)(iv).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(iv)(A)(2).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(iv)(B)(1).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(iv)(B)(2).

[^ 7] The standard of proof applied in most USCIS adjudications, including H-3 petitions, and administrative immigration proceedings is the “preponderance of the evidence” standard.

Chapter 5 - Family Members of H-3 Beneficiaries

An H-3 nonimmigrant’s spouse and unmarried minor children may accompany the H-3 nonimmigrant to the United States as H-4 nonimmigrants. H-4 dependents of H-3 nonimmigrants are not permitted to work in the United States. [1]

Footnote

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(9)(iv).

Chapter 6 - Adjudication

A. Adjudicative Issues

Officers must carefully review each petition for an H-3 trainee to ensure compliance with the intent of the H-3 category to train those who will return to their home countries. Unless specifically provided otherwise, officers should apply a “preponderance of the evidence” standard when evaluating eligibility for the benefit sought.^[1] The burden of proving eligibility for the benefit sought rests entirely with the petitioner.^[2]

B. Factors to Consider

1. Career Abroad

The description of the training program should include a specific explanation of the position and duties for which the training will prepare the trainee.^[3] The trainee must demonstrate that the proposed training will prepare the beneficiary for an existing career outside the United States.

Trainings can be to prepare the trainee for something that is new and unavailable anywhere in the trainee's country. For instance, a trainee may already be a professional in his or her own right and possess knowledge in the field of proposed training, but will be using the training to further his or her skills or career through company-specific training that a corporate organization makes available in the United States. This could include cases of mid-level and senior-level employees who possess knowledge in their field, but seek to further develop their skills in the proposed field of training.^[4] As always, the totality of the evidence is evaluated for each case and all other requirements must be met.^[5]

Example: A U.S. company develops a new product for which training is unavailable in another country. The U.S. company may petition to train people to use that product, which will enable the trainees to train others to use the new product in their home country.

2. Instruction

Classroom-based Instruction

In cases where the program is entirely classroom-based, officers should review the evidence to ensure that the petitioner establishes by a preponderance of the evidence that the training cannot be made available in the beneficiary's home country.^[6]

If a petitioner claims that the classroom training portion of their proposed training programs will take place online, the petition must provide an explanation as to why the training cannot take place in the beneficiary's own country. Officers should also investigate whether the online training would be provided by an academic or vocational institution.^[7]

Online Instruction

In cases where the program is entirely online, officers must review each case and ensure that the petitioner has met their burden of proof (preponderance of the evidence) demonstrating that the training cannot be made available in the beneficiary's home country.^[8]

3. Description of the Training Program

The petitioner must specify the type of training, the level of supervision, and the structure of the training program.^[9] The petitioner should provide the officer with sufficient information to establish what the beneficiary will actually be doing, and should link the various tasks to specific skills that the beneficiary will gain by performing them.

On-The-Job Training Hours

The petitioner must specify the number of hours both supervised and unsupervised.^[10] The unsupervised work should be minimal and the supervised work should always be oriented toward training.

Shadowing

There are limited circumstances where a proposed training program that consists largely or entirely of on-the-job training may be approved. Officers should carefully evaluate the totality of the evidence against a preponderance of the evidence standard, including whether a U.S. worker is being displaced and if the on-the-job training would allow the trainee to be placed into a position which is in the normal operation of the business and in which U.S. citizens and legal residents are regularly employed.^[11]

4. Remuneration

The petitioner must indicate the source of remuneration received by the trainee, and explain any training program benefits accrued by the petitioning company.^[12] Remuneration may come from any source, domestic or international. When assessing remuneration, the officer may consider whether the salary is in proportion to the training position.^[13]

5. Placement into Normal Operation of Business^[14]

Officers should consider whether the beneficiary will be placed in a position which is in the normal operations of the business, and U.S. citizens and residents are regularly employed. Factors to consider include:

- Whether training that familiarizes the beneficiary with the individual operations of the petitioning company is similar to the training that would be expected of any new employee,
- Indications that the beneficiary may remain in the United States working with the petitioner, and
- Training where the beneficiary is trained alongside U.S. workers.^[15]

6. Practical Training

Petitioners frequently assert that beneficiaries will spend a certain amount of time in “practical training.” This assertion needs to be supported with a clear explanation of the type and degree of supervision that the beneficiary will receive during such periods.^[16] If the officer determines that the “practical training” would actually be productive employment, then the petitioner must establish that it would be incidental to and necessary to the training.^[17]

7. Productive Employment

The proportion of time that will be devoted to productive employment must be specified.^[18] Productive employment should be minimal because the beneficiary should be training and not performing productive work that displaces U.S. citizens or legal residents.^[19] A training program which devotes a significant percentage of time to productive employment should be closely scrutinized.^[20]

8. Substantial Training and Expertise in Field of Training

In order to establish that the beneficiary does not already possess substantial training and expertise in the proposed field of training,^[21] the petitioner should submit as much information regarding the beneficiary’s credentials as possible. If related to the proposed H-3 training program, copies of the beneficiary’s diplomas and transcripts should be submitted, including any training and education received in the United States, copies of any relevant forms (for example, Certificate of Eligibility for Nonimmigrant (F-1) Student Status-For Academic and Language Students (Form I-20), Certificate of Eligibility for Exchange Visitor (J-1) Status(Form DS-2019)). If possible, letters from prior employers detailing the beneficiary’s work experience should also be submitted.

9. Sufficiently Trained Staff

In order to establish that it has sufficiently trained staff to provide the training specified in the petition,^[22] the petitioner should provide the names and credentials of the persons who will provide the training. The petitioner should specify the amount of time each trainer will spend training the beneficiary. The petitioner should also explain how the trainers' normal responsibilities will be performed while they are training the beneficiary (this is especially important in cases involving relatively small entities, as larger percentages of their workforces will presumably be diverted in order to provide the training).^[23]

10. Unavailability of the Training in Beneficiary's Country

The petitioner must establish that the trainee cannot obtain the training in his or her country and demonstrate why it is necessary for the trainee to be trained in the United States.^[24]

C. Approvals

If all documentary requirements have been met and the petition appears approvable, officers should endorse the action block on the petition. The approval period should coincide with the period of training requested by the petitioner, but only up to 2 years for trainees and up to 18 months for special education training program participants.^[25]

When approving a special education training program participant, officers need to enter H-3B in CLAIMS and annotate H-3B on the petition. Because of the numerical limitations applicable to the H-3 Special Education Exchange Visitor category, officers must contact the USCIS Service Center Operations office to obtain authorization before approving an H-3 Special Education Exchange Visitor petition. The number assigned should be recorded on the front of the petition in the "Remarks" section. The approved petition should also be annotated "Approved Pursuant to Sec. 223 of Pub. L. 101-649."

D. Denials

If documentary requirements have not been met and the petition is not approvable, officers should prepare and issue a notice of denial and advise the petitioner of the right of appeal to the Administrative Appeals Office.

E. Transmittal of Petitions

USCIS sends all approved petitions to the Kentucky Consular Center (KCC). The KCC scans and uploads the documentation into the Consular Consolidated Database (CCD).^[26] Consular officers and Customs and Border Protection officers have access to the CCD to verify and review documents.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INS v. Cardoza-Fonseca (PDF), 480 U.S. 421 (1987) (defining "more likely than not" as a greater than 50 percent probability of something occurring). See Matter of Chawathe, 25 I&N Dec.

369, 376 (AAO 2010) (citing Matter of E-M, 20 I&N Dec. 77, 79-80 (Comm. 1989)).

[^ 2] See Matter of Brantigan, 11 I&N Dec. 493 (BIA 1966).

[^ 3] Generalized assertions that the proposed training will expand the trainee's skill set or make him or her more desirable to prospective employers are usually not sufficient to demonstrate the proposed training will prepare the beneficiary for an existing career abroad. See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(iii).

[^ 4] Even if a new employee or current employee possesses knowledge in the proposed field of training, he or she could be considered a trainee if the company or organization decides he or she needs the training, so long as all other requirements are met (for example, so long as beneficiary does not possess substantial training and expertise in the proposed field of training).

[^ 5] Although 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(iii)(C) states that a training program may not be approved if it is on behalf of a beneficiary who already possesses substantial training and expertise in the proposed field of training, this provision does not automatically prohibit professionals from participating in a training program. It remains the petitioner's burden to demonstrate by a preponderance of the evidence that the training program is approvable.

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(ii)(A)(1).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(1)(ii)(E)(1).

[^ 8] If the petitioner does not meet the burden of demonstrating that the online training cannot be made available in the beneficiary's home country, officers may consider issuing a Request for Evidence (RFE).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(ii)(B)(1). See Matter of Miyazaki Travel Agency, Inc., 10 I&N Dec. 644 (Reg. Comm. 1964) (denying petition for a trainee where the training program was deemed "unrealistic"). See Matter of Masauyama, 11 I&N Dec. 157 (Reg. Comm. 1965) (noting that the statute contemplates the training of a person rather than giving him further experience by day-to-day application of his skills).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(ii)(B)(3). See Matter of Frigon, 18 I&N Dec. 164, 166 (court noting that the number of hours devoted to on-the-job training without supervision is one of the factors to be considered).

[^ 11] See Matter of St. Pierre, 18 I&N Dec. 308 (Reg. Comm. 1982) (holding that even though training will consist primarily of on-the-job training, the subject matter by its very nature can only be learned in that setting and since the beneficiary will not receive any payment from the petitioner, and will merely be observing field tests and not actively conducting them, he will not be engaging in productive employment which would displace a resident worker).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(ii)(B)(6). See Matter of International Transportation Company, 12 I&N Dec. 389 (Reg. Comm. 1967) (even though training will be 75% on-the-job training, any “productive gain” received by the company from such work will be “offset by the time spent by employees in the training of the beneficiary”).

[^ 13] See Matter of Kraus Periodicals, Inc., 11 I&N Dec. 63 (Reg. Comm. 1964) (H-3 petition was denied where the petitioner failed to set forth a training program, the specific position, duties, or skills in which the beneficiary is to be trained, and where the substantial salary the beneficiary would have received suggested that the training position was productive employment which may displace a U.S. citizen). See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(ii)(B)(6).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(ii)(A)(3) and 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(iii)(F).

[^ 15] See Matter of Glencoe Press, 11 I&N Dec. 764, 766 (Reg. Comm. 1966).

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(ii)(B)(1) and 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(ii)(B)(2).

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(ii)(A)(3) and 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(iii)(E).

[^ 18] If the job description and the proffered wage seem suspect, the officer may request more specific information from the petitioner as described in 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(ii)(B).

[^ 19] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(ii)(B)(2) and 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(iii)(E).

[^ 20] The regulations prohibit the approval of a petition involving a training program that will result in productive employment beyond that which is incidental and necessary to the training. See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(iii)(E). Further, a significant percentage of time devoted to productive employment indicates that the beneficiary may be placed in a position which is in the normal operation of the business and in which U.S. workers are regularly employed. See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(ii)(A)(3), 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(iii)(E), and 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(ii)(F). See Matter of Miyazaki Travel Agency, Inc., 11 I&N Dec. 424, 425 (Reg. Comm. 1964) (“An industrial trainee shall not be permitted to engage in productive employment if such employment will displace a United States resident”). See Matter of Sasano, 11 I&N Dec. 363, 364 (Reg. Comm. 1965) (“[I]t is concluded [that] the beneficiary would be involved in full-time productive employment and that any training received would be incidental thereto”). See Matter of St. Pierre, 18 I&N Dec. 308, 310 (Reg. Comm. 1982) (“The petitioner has established that the beneficiary will not be engaged in productive employment that might displace a resident worker”).

[^ 21] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(iii)(C). See Matter of Masauyama, 11 I&N Dec. 157, 158 (Reg. Comm. 1965) (“It is conceded that practical day-to-day experience will increase proficiency in any line of endeavor. However, the statute involved here is one that contemplates the training of a person rather than giving him further experience by day-to-day application of his skills”). See Matter of Koyama, 11 I&N Dec. 424, 425 (Reg. Comm. 1965) (“While it is conceded that practical experience will increase a person's efficiency in any line of endeavor, the intent of the statute involved here is to train rather than to gain experience").

[^ 22] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(iii)(G).

[^ 23] There are, of course, situations where allocation of a significant percentage of the company's resources to train a single person would be reasonable and credible. As noted above, the regulation at 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(ii)(B)(6) requires the petitioner to describe "any benefit that will accrue to [it] for providing the training."

[^ 24] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(7)(ii)(B)(5). See Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg. Comm. 1972) (rejecting petitioner's argument that he only needs to go on record as stating that training is not available outside the United States).

[^ 25] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(9)(iii)(C) and 8 CFR 214.2(h)(13)(v).

[^ 26] See 9 FAM 402.10-9(A), Evidence Forming Basis for H Visa Issuance.

Chapter 7 - Admissions, Extensions of Stay, and Change of Status

A. Admissions

H-3 trainees and externs should be admitted for the length of the training program, but for no longer than 2 years.^[1] H-3 visa special education exchange visitors should be admitted for the length of the training program, but for no longer than 18 months.

H-3 trainees and special education exchange visitors who respectively, have spent 2 years or 18 months in the United States, in either H-visa or L-visa classifications may not seek extension of, change of status to, or be readmitted in, either H-visa or L-visa status unless they have resided outside the United States for the previous six months.^[2]

There are limited exceptions to this rule. For example, the limitation does not apply to an H-3 nonimmigrant whose H or L status was seasonal, intermittent, or lasted for an aggregate of 6 months or less per year.^[3]

Additionally, time spent as an H-4 dependent does not count against the maximum allowable periods of stay available to principals in H-3 status (or vice-versa). Thus, a person who was previously granted H-4 dependent status and subsequently is granted H-3 classification, or a person who was previously granted H-3 classification and subsequently is granted H-4 dependent status, may be eligible to remain in the United States for the maximum period of stay applicable to the classification.

For example, a husband and wife who come to the United States as a principal H-3 and dependent H-4 spouse may maintain status for one year, and then change status to H-4 and H-3 respectively, as long as the change of status application is properly filed before the principal H-3 has spent the maximum allowable period of stay in the United States.^[4]

B. Extensions of Stay

H-3 trainees and externs can only extend their stay if their original stay was less than 2 years, and the total period of stay, together with the extension period, does not exceed 2 years. H-3 special education exchange visitors can extend their stay in the United States only if their total period of stay does not exceed 18 months.^[5]

To file for an extension, the petitioner must file another Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) and H Classification Supplement to Form I-129, fully documented in the same manner as the first petition, and also include:

- A letter from the petitioner requesting an extension of status for the trainee, with an explanation of why the training has not yet been completed;
- A copy of the beneficiary's Arrival/Departure Record (Form I-94); and
- A copy of the beneficiary's first Notice of Action (Form I-797).

If the H-3 beneficiary has a dependent (a spouse, or unmarried child under the age of 21) in the United States, those dependents will need to submit an Application To Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-539).

C. Change of Status

Certain categories of nonimmigrants are eligible to change status to that of an H-3 nonimmigrant, including certain students and other temporary visa holders.^[6] Such change of status requests must establish that:

- The beneficiaries entered the United States legally;
- The beneficiaries have never worked in the United States illegally, or otherwise violated the terms of their visa; and
- The expiration date on the beneficiary's I-94 has not passed.^[7]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(9)(iii)(C)(1).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(13)(iv).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(13)(v).

[^ 4] Maintenance of H-4 status continues to be tied to the principal's maintenance of H status. Thus, H-4 dependents may only maintain such status as long as the principal maintains the relevant principal H status.

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(h)(15)(ii)(D).

[^ 6] Certain categories generally cannot change status if they are in the United States, including nonimmigrants who entered the United States with the following visas: C, Travel without a Visa, D, K-1 or K-2, J-1, or M-1. Other nonimmigrants, such as B-1 and B-2, may change status to H-3.

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 248.1(b) for information on timely filing and maintenance of status, and circumstances when failure to file timely may be excused in the discretion of USCIS.

Part K - Media Representatives (I)

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

The foreign information media representative nonimmigrant visa classification, commonly known as the "I" visa category, is intended to be used by representatives of the foreign media, including members of the following industries:

- Press;
- Radio;
- Film; and
- Print.

In addition, certain employees of independent production companies may also be eligible for a foreign information media representative visa classification under certain conditions.

B. Background

The foreign information media representative visa classification was created by the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) of 1952^[1] in order to facilitate the exchange of information among nations. Foreign information media representatives do not require a visa petition approved by USCIS.

Consular officers with the U.S. Department of State primarily adjudicate benefit requests for foreign information media representatives during the nonimmigrant visa application process. USCIS generally only receives a request for this visa classification when a nonimmigrant applies for a change of status or an extension of stay as a foreign information media representative.

C. Legal Authorities

- INA 101(a)(15)(I) – Representatives of foreign media
- 8 CFR 214.2(i) – Representatives of information media

Footnote

[^ 1] See Pub. L. 82-414 (PDF), 66 Stat. 163, 168-169 (June 27, 1952).

Chapter 2 - Eligibility

A foreign media representative is a noncitizen who:

- Is a bona fide representative of the foreign press, radio, film, or other foreign information media;
- Has a home office in a foreign country whose government grants reciprocity for similar privileges to representatives with home offices in the United States; and
- Seeks to enter or remain in the United States solely to engage in such a vocation.^[1]

Noncitizens who meet the above definition may be eligible for classification as a foreign information media representative. Foreign information media representative nonimmigrants are admitted for the duration of their employment with the same foreign media organization in the same information medium. Foreign information media representatives must obtain authorization from USCIS to change employers or work in a different medium.^[2]

Independent Production Companies^[3]

Employees of independent production companies may also be eligible for foreign information media representative nonimmigrant status if, in addition to the above:

- The employee holds a credential issued by a professional journalistic association;
- The film or video footage produced will be used by a foreign-based television station or other media to disseminate information or news to a foreign audience; and

- The film or video footage will not be used primarily for a commercial entertainment or advertising purpose.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 9 FAM 402.11, Information Media Representatives - I Visas. See Department of State's website, indicating that "[a]ctivities in the United States must be informational in nature and generally associated with the news gathering process and reporting on current events." See Chapter 3, Distinction between News and Entertainment [2 USCIS-PM K.3].

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(i).

[^ 3] See 9 FAM 402.11-6, Film/Video Work, for information on employees of independent production companies.

Chapter 3 - Distinction between News and Entertainment

A. Entertainment and Advertising

Camera persons and other workers engaged in producing films for entertainment or advertising purposes do not qualify under the foreign information media representative visa classification and should seek another visa classification for which they may qualify. For example, a noncitizen intending to work on entertainment-oriented materials may be better suited to apply for nonimmigrant status on the basis of extraordinary ability or achievement; as an entertainer; or, if applicable, on the basis of providing essential support to certain O or P nonimmigrants.^[1]

Even if a camera person or other workers receive no payment from sources in the United States and the film or video footage produced is solely for foreign distribution as entertainment or advertisement, applicants under such circumstances may not qualify under the foreign information media representative visa classification.

B. Nonfiction Documentaries

Increasingly, because of the growing popularity of documentary-type biographies and similar nonfiction film productions, the distinction between commercial filmmaking for entertainment and genuine news gathering is less clear. For example, filmed biographies may be regarded as documentary filmmaking or as news gathering. In adjudicating such cases, the officer should consider whether the intended use is journalistic, informational, or educational, as opposed to entertainment. The officer should also consider the foreign distribution of the film or video footage in addition to other factors, including the timeliness of the project relative to the subject event.

C. Intended Use

An officer should examine the type of organization that employs the foreign information media representative and the proposed foreign distribution of the film or other produced material. Applicants should not use the foreign information media representative visa classification as a way of avoiding mandatory consultation required to obtain visa classification on the basis of extraordinary ability or achievement or as an entertainer.^[2]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 101(a)(15)(O) for visa classification based on extraordinary ability or achievement (O visa category). See INA 101(a)(15)(P) for visa classification based on being an entertainer (P visa category).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(5). See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(7).

Chapter 4 - Family Members

A foreign information media representative's spouse and unmarried children (under age 21) may accompany the foreign media representative and be admitted under the "I" nonimmigrant visa classification.^[1] If approved, such dependents may attend school in the United States without changing to F-1 nonimmigrant student status. However, the dependents are not authorized to work in the United States while in the foreign information media representative dependent status.

Footnote

[^ 1] Note that there is no separate classification for dependents of foreign media representative nonimmigrants (for example, there is no I-2 classification). See codes of admission in Chapter 5, Adjudication, Section B, Approvals [2 USCIS-PM K.5(B)].

Chapter 5 - Adjudication

A. Extension of Stay or Change of Status

USCIS officers may receive an application for a change of status to that of a foreign information media representative nonimmigrant, or a request from a foreign information media representative nonimmigrant to change employers or information medium.

The applicant applies for a change of status or extension of stay by filing an Application To Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-539) together with evidence of current status and evidence from the employing media organization describing the employment and establishing that the applicant is a bona fide representative of that foreign media organization.

When reviewing a Form I-539 application involving a foreign information media representative, the officer must ensure the applicant:

- Meets or continues to meet all the eligibility requirements for the foreign information media representative visa classification;
- Is admissible to the United States;^[1] and
- Has not violated any terms or conditions of his or her current nonimmigrant status.^[2]

B. Approvals

If the applicant properly filed the Form I-539 application, meets all the eligibility requirements, and satisfies all the admission requirements, the officer may approve the application.

The table below provides a list of the classifications for foreign information media representatives. The code of admission is “I-1” for all eligible classes of applicants.

Classes of Applicants and Corresponding Codes of Admission

Applicant	Code of Admission
Foreign Information Media Representative (Principal)	I-1
Spouse of a Principal Foreign Information Media Representative	I-1
Child of a Principal Foreign Information Media Representative	I-1

C. Denials, Motions to Reopen, and Motions to Reconsider

If the applicant does not provide sufficient evidence to establish eligibility for status as a foreign information media representative, the officer prepares a denial notice explaining the specific reasons for the denial. If USCIS denies an application, the applicant may file a Motion to Reopen and/or Reconsider (Form I-290B).

There is no appeal from a denial of an application to change status or extend stay as a foreign information media representative.^[3] In certain situations, USCIS may certify the matter to the Administrative Appeals Office.^[4]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 248(a). See 8 CFR 214.1(a)(3)(i). See Volume 8, Admissibility [8 USCIS-PM].

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(i). See 8 CFR 214.1(c)(4) and 8 CFR 248.1(b).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.1(c)(5). See 8 CFR 248.3(g).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 103.4.

Part L - Intracompany Transferees (L)

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

The L-1 nonimmigrant visa classification enables a U.S. employer that is part of an international organization to temporarily transfer employees from one of its related foreign offices to locations in the United States.^[1] Specifically, the L-1A classification applies to intracompany transfers of managers and executives, while the L-1B classification applies to intracompany transfers of employees with specialized knowledge relating to the organization's interests.

B. Background

1. 1970 Amendments to the Immigration and Nationality Act

In 1970, Congress created the L-1 program after concluding that existing immigration laws had restricted the transfer and development of personnel from abroad who were vital to the interests of U.S. businesses.^[2] Congress created the L-1 visa classification for noncitizens who:

"Immediately preceding the time of [their] application for admission into the United States, [had] been employed continuously for one year by a firm or corporation or other legal entity or an affiliate or subsidiary thereof and who [seek] to enter the United States temporarily in order to continue to render [their] services to the same employer or a subsidiary or affiliate thereof in a capacity that is managerial, executive, or involves specialized knowledge..."^[3]

Congress believed that the L-1 classification would enable companies to freely transfer managerial, executive, and specialized knowledge personnel within their organizations (intracompany transferees), but the legislative history indicates that Congress intended for the class of eligible persons to be narrowly drawn and carefully regulated. Congress anticipated that the L-1 petition process would be administered speedily and efficiently, so that while the review would be thorough, it would not hinder international companies with undue delays.^[4]

2. Immigration Act of 1990

The Immigration Act of 1990 (IMMACT 90) created the L-1 visa classification as it substantially exists today.^[5] It increased the maximum period of admission for executives and managers from 6 to 7 years, while limiting persons possessing specialized knowledge to a maximum period of 5 years. IMMACT 90 also allowed noncitizens to qualify for L-1 classification by serving the organization abroad for 1 of the 3 years preceding admission. The 1970 amendments had required that the employment abroad occur within the year immediately preceding admission.

IMMACT 90 also codified the blanket petition process first created by legacy Immigration and Naturalization Service regulation in 1983^[6] meant to streamline the admission of L-1 beneficiaries.^[7] Further, it eliminated the presumption of immigrant intent within the L classification.^[8] IMMACT 90 also provided definitions of managerial capacity, executive capacity, and specialized knowledge, and expanded the definition of affiliate to include the international partnership agreements used by international accounting firms.^[9]

3. Nursing Relief for Disadvantaged Areas Act of 1999

The Nursing Relief for Disadvantaged Areas Act of 1999 expanded the definition of affiliate to include the international partnership agreements used by international management consulting firms.^[10]

4. L-1 Visa Reform Act of 2004

Congress established further requirements for the adjudication of L-1B petitions when it enacted the L-1 Visa and H-1B Visa Reform Act of 2004 (VRA).^[11] This legislation addressed the outsourcing of L-1B beneficiaries to third-party work sites as labor for hire. The VRA requires that any beneficiary with specialized knowledge who will be primarily located offsite must be controlled and supervised by the petitioning company. Additionally, the beneficiary must be working at the offsite location in connection with an exchange of products or services between the petitioning company and the unaffiliated company for which specialized knowledge specific to the petitioning company is required.

In addition, the VRA requires petitioners to pay a fraud prevention and detection fee of $500 for certain L-1 petitions, in addition to the filing fee required for all L-1 petitions.^[12] The L-1 petitioner must pay this fee when petitioning for an initial L-1 grant for the beneficiary or when the beneficiary is already an L-1 nonimmigrant and is changing employers.

5. Emergency Supplemental Appropriations for Border Security for Fiscal Year 2010

The Emergency Supplemental Appropriations for Border Security for the Fiscal Year Ending September 30, 2010 required certain L-1 petitioners to pay a fee of $2,250 in addition to the filing fee for all L-1 petitions and the fraud prevention and detection fee.^[13] This fee only applied to petitioners who employed at least 50 employees in the United States, and more than 50 percent of these U.S. employees were L-1 or H-1B nonimmigrants. If the petitioner met these criteria, then it was required to pay this fee when petitioning for an initial L-1 grant for the beneficiary or when the beneficiary already was an L-1 nonimmigrant and was changing employers. Initially due to sunset on October 1, 2014, Congress extended collection of this fee through September 30, 2015.^[14]

6. The Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2016

The Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2016^[15] increases fees for certain H-1B and L-1 petitioners. These petitioners must submit an additional fee of $4,000 for certain H-1B petitions and $4,500 for certain L-1A and L-1B petitions postmarked on or after December 18, 2015. The additional fees apply to petitioners who employ 50 or more employees in the United States, with more than 50 percent of those employees in H-1B or L-1 (including L-1A and L-1B) nonimmigrant status. These petitioners must submit the additional fees with an H-1B or L-1 petition filed:

- Initially to grant status to a nonimmigrant described in subparagraph (H)(i)(b) or (L) of section 101(a)(15) of the Immigration and Nationality Act; or
- To obtain authorization for a nonimmigrant in such status to change employers.

The Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2016 fee increases are in addition to the base processing fee, fraud prevention and detection fee, and the premium processing fee, if applicable. The Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2016 fees remain effective through September 30, 2027.^[16]

C. Legal Authorities

- INA 101(a)(15)(L) – Definition of L nonimmigrant classification
- INA 101(a)(44) – Definition of managerial capacity and executive capacity
- INA 214(c)(2) – Petition of importing employer for L nonimmigrant
- INA 214(c)(12) – Fraud prevention and detection fee
- 8 CFR 214.2(l) – Intracompany transferees

Footnotes

[^ 1] The term L-1 is used for visa issuance and admission purposes. USCIS uses the "A" and "B" distinctions internally for statistical and other purposes.

[^ 2] See H.R. Rep. 91-851 (1970).

[^ 3] See Pub. L. 91-225 (PDF), 84 Stat. 116 (April 7, 1970), amending INA 101(a)(15)(L).

[^ 4] See H.R. Rep. 91-851 (1970).

[^ 5] See Pub. L. 101-649 (PDF), 104 Stat. 4978 (November 29, 1990).

[^ 6] See 48 FR 41142 (PDF) (Sept. 14, 1983).

[^ 7] See INA 214(c)(2)(A).

[^ 8] This allowed noncitizens to seek temporary classification as an L nonimmigrant while also intending to reside permanently in the United States. Therefore, the approval of a permanent labor certification or the filing of an immigrant visa petition on behalf of a noncitizen beneficiary cannot be the basis for denying an L-1 petition or the beneficiary's application for admission as an L nonimmigrant. See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(16).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(L)(3).

[^ 10] See Pub. L. 106-95 (PDF), 113 Stat. 1312 (November 12, 1999).

[^ 11] See Division J, Title IV of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2005, Pub. L. 108-447 (PDF), 118 Stat. 2813, 3351 (December 8, 2004).

[^ 12] For more information on the current L-1 filing fee, see the H and L Filing Fees for Form I-129, Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker webpage.

[^ 13] See Title IV of Pub. L. 111-230 (PDF), 124 Stat. 2485, 2487 (August 13, 2010).

[^ 14] See James Zadroga 9/11 Health and Compensation Act of 2010, Pub. L. 111-347 (PDF), 124 Stat. 3623 (January 2, 2011).

[^ 15] See the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2016, Pub. L. 114-113 (PDF), 129 Stat. 2242 (December 18, 2015).

[^ 16] For comprehensive information on relevant fees, see the Filing Fees webpage.

Chapter 2 - General Eligibility

A noncitizen may qualify as an L-1 intracompany transferee if:

- The noncitizen was employed abroad continuously for 1 of the 3 years preceding the application for admission to the United States;
- The 1 year of continuous employment abroad was in a managerial or executive capacity or in a position that involved specialized knowledge;
- The noncitizen is seeking to enter the United States temporarily to render their services to the same employer (which includes a branch of the foreign employer) or its parent, affiliate, or subsidiary; and
- The position in the United States will be in a managerial or executive capacity or will involve specialized knowledge.^[1]

In addition, the qualifying employer who intends to temporarily transfer an employee to work in the United States must demonstrate that:

- There is a qualifying relationship between the entity in the United States and the foreign operation that employs the beneficiary abroad;
- The petitioning employer will continue to do business both in the United States and in at least one other country, either directly or through a parent, branch, subsidiary, or affiliate for the duration of the beneficiary's stay in the United States;
- The beneficiary has been employed abroad continuously by the foreign office for at least 1 of the last 3 years;^[2] and
- The beneficiary's prior year of employment abroad was in a managerial, executive, or specialized knowledge capacity^[3] and that the prospective employment in the United States will be in a managerial, executive, or specialized knowledge capacity.^[4]

In addition, the petitioner must establish that the beneficiary's duties in the U.S meet the criteria for either specialized knowledge or managerial or executive capacity and the beneficiary engaged in either specialized knowledge or managerial or executive duties for at least 1 year. However, the beneficiary does not have to be transferred to the United States in the same capacity in which they were employed abroad. For example, a manager abroad could be transferred to the United States in a specialized knowledge capacity or vice versa.^[5]

If the beneficiary will be in a specialized knowledge capacity and primarily be working at a location other than the petitioner's, then the beneficiary must be:

- Under the primary control and supervision of the petitioner; and

- Providing a product or service for which specialized knowledge specific to the petitioner is necessary.

A. L-1 Blanket Petitions

The blanket petition program allows a petitioner to seek continuing approval of itself, its parent, and its branches, subsidiaries, and affiliates as qualifying organizations and, later, classify under the L nonimmigrant category any number of beneficiaries employed by itself, its parent, or some of its branches, subsidiaries, and affiliates. USCIS adjudicates blanket L petitions based on the same general principles used in adjudicating the qualifying relationship of individual L-1 petitions. However, some differences exist.

Who May File Blanket Petition

The blanket L-1 procedure is intended for larger international organizations. Only entities involved in commercial trade or services may use the blanket petition.^[6] Therefore, noncommercial organizations, like churches, may not use the blanket petition.

A U.S. petitioner may file a blanket petition to receive continuing approval of itself and its parent, branches, specified subsidiaries, and affiliates as qualifying organizations.

B. Blanket Petitioner Requirements

The petitioner must show that:

- The petitioner and each of the entities included are engaged in commercial trade or services;
- The petitioner has an office in the United States that has been doing business for 1 year or more;
- The petitioner has three or more domestic and foreign branches, subsidiaries, or affiliates; and
- The petitioner and the other qualifying organizations have obtained approval of petitions for at least 10 “L” managers, executives, or specialized knowledge workers during the previous 12 months; or have U.S. subsidiaries or affiliates with combined annual sales of at least $25 million; or have a U.S. work force of at least 1,000 employees.^[7]

C. Qualifying Organizations Under the Blanket Petition

The petitioner must list all the foreign entities and all the U.S. entities that it wants to have approved and establish who has ownership and control of all the entities. USCIS can only approve those entities meeting the definition of a qualifying organization.^[8]

If there is a question about ownership or control for any of the petitioned entities (or both), officers should issue a Request for Evidence to make a determination. USCIS names all approvable entities on a list included with the approval notice of the blanket petition.

D. Beneficiaries of L-1 Blanket Petitions

Once a blanket petition is approved, individual beneficiaries may receive L-1 classification under the approved blanket petition. The focus of the adjudication is the individual beneficiary's qualifications and eligibility, as the approved blanket petition will have already resolved issues relating to the organization's qualifications. Petitioners seeking to classify the individual beneficiary under the approved blanket petition must establish that the beneficiary was employed abroad for 1 of the 3 years prior to the individual petition filing in a qualifying capacity and must establish that the beneficiary will be employed in a qualifying capacity in the United States. For blanket L-1 purposes, a qualifying capacity is:

- Managerial;
- Executive; or
- Specialized knowledge professional.

E. Family Members of L-1 Beneficiaries

The spouse and unmarried dependent children (under the age of 21) of an L-1 beneficiary may, if eligible, be granted L-2 classification and be given the same validity dates as the L-1 principal.^[9] L-2 dependents are not included on the L-1 petition. Although a separate petition is not required of L-2 dependents, such persons must apply for an L-2 visa at the U.S. consulate based on the L-1 principal's petition, or they can file an Application to Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-539).

As of November 12, 2021, USCIS considers certain L-2 nonimmigrant dependent spouses employment authorized incident to status^[10] who are no longer required to obtain employment authorization before engaging in employment.^[11] Notwithstanding this change, L-2 spouses may continue to apply for an Employment Authorization Document to obtain evidence of identity and employment authorization by properly filing an Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765), with the appropriate fee, if applicable. L-2 dependent children may be given the same validity dates as the L-1 principal until the day they marry or reach the age of 21, whichever comes first. L-2 dependent children may not accept employment in the United States but may attend school.^[12]

The continued validity of the L-1 principal's status and the L-2 dependent's status depends on the L-1 principal's qualifying employment with the petitioning employer. When the employer-employee relationship is terminated, or the nature of the employment no longer qualifies for L-1 purposes, the L status is no longer valid.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 101(a)(15)(L). See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(A).

[^ 2] See Matter of Kloeti (PDF), 18 I&N Dec. 295 (Reg. Comm. 1982).

[^ 3] A beneficiary need not have worked exclusively in one of these three types of positions during the entire qualifying period of employment. As long as the beneficiary was primarily employed in an executive, managerial, or specialized knowledge capacity, USCIS considers the petitioner to have sufficiently met the regulatory requirement at 8 CFR 214.2(l)(3)(iv).

[^ 4] In the case of an L-1A beneficiary who is coming to the United States to set up a new office, the 1 year of experience abroad must have been in an executive or managerial capacity. See Chapter 8, Documentation and Evidence, Section B, Evidence for Beneficiary (New Office) [2 USCIS-PM L.8(B)].

[^ 5] See Matter of Vaillancourt (PDF), 13 I&N Dec. 654 (Reg. Comm. 1970).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(4)(i)(A).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(4)(i).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(4)(iv)(B) and 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(G).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(17)(v).

[^ 10] See Volume 10, Employment Authorization, Part B, Specific Categories, Chapter 2, Employment-Based Nonimmigrants [10 USCIS-PM B.2].

[^ 11] USCIS issues an Employment Authorization Document (Form I-766) as evidence of employment authorization.

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(17)(v) and 8 CFR 248.3(e).

Chapter 3 - Managers and Executives (L-1A)

The L-1A classification is reserved for certain managers and executives.^[1] Executive or managerial capacity requires a certain level of authority and can consist of a mix of job duties.^[2] There are two main types of managers, function managers and personnel managers.^[3] Managers and executives plan, organize, direct, and control an organization's major functions and work through other employees to achieve the organization's goals. First-line supervisors, such as those who plan, schedule, and supervise the day-to-day work of nonprofessional employees, are not employed in an executive or managerial capacity, even though they may be referred to as managers in their organization.

In addition, persons who primarily perform the tasks necessary to produce the product or provide the service of an organization are not employed in an executive or managerial capacity.^[4]

The same managerial and executive capacity definitions apply to the nature of the beneficiary's position abroad and in the United States. However, the beneficiary need not perform the same work in the United States that they performed abroad.^[5] In addition, the work abroad may have been in more than one capacity.

A. Determining Managerial or Executive Job Duties

To determine managerial or executive capacity, officers must look first to the petitioner's description of the job duties to determine that the duties are primarily of an executive or a managerial nature. This standard ensures that a beneficiary not only has the requisite authority, but that a majority of their duties relate to operational or policy management, not to the supervision of nonprofessional employees, performance of the duties of another type of position, or other involvement in the operational activities of the company.

This does not mean that the executive or manager cannot apply their technical or professional expertise to a particular problem. Certain positions necessarily require a manager to apply their technical or professional expertise on an incidental basis from time to time, and that is permissible. That said, the regulations specifically require that the beneficiary be engaged primarily in a managerial or executive capacity. Accordingly, officers should focus on the primary duties of the beneficiary in determining whether the beneficiary qualifies as a manager or executive.

To determine whether a beneficiary's job duties will be primarily managerial or executive, an officer must consider the totality of the evidence in the record and weigh all relevant factors. Such factors may include:

- The nature and scope of the petitioner's business;
- The petitioner's organizational structure, staffing levels, and the beneficiary's position within the petitioner's organization;
- The scope of the beneficiary's authority;
- The work performed by other staff within the petitioner's organization, including whether those employees relieve the beneficiary from performing operational and administrative duties; and

- Any other factors that contribute to understanding a beneficiary's actual duties and role in the business.^[6]

B. Determining Whether Job Duties are Primarily Managerial or Executive

USCIS does not consider a beneficiary to be acting in a managerial or executive capacity (as previously defined) merely based on the number of employees that they:

- Supervise or have supervised; or
- Direct or have directed.

If staffing levels are used as a factor in determining whether a beneficiary is acting in a managerial or executive capacity, officers should consider the reasonable needs of the:

- Organization;
- Component; or
- Function.

L-1 Beneficiary May Own the Organization

The beneficiary may own the foreign or U.S. organization in whole or in part. However, maintaining a ceremonial title and position, such as Director or President, without being primarily engaged in the management of the organization, is not qualifying for L-1 purposes.^[7]

Footnotes

[^ 1] For the definitions of L-1 executives and managers, see INA 101(a)(44), 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(B), and 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(C). Notably, in the legal construction of the L-1A regulations, there is no clause of “and” or “in addition to” or any other qualifier between 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(B) governing L-1A managerial beneficiaries and 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(C) governing L-1A executive beneficiaries that requires beneficiaries to meet the regulatory criteria of both discreet subcategories for L-1A beneficiaries. Therefore, a beneficiary is either an L-1A manager under 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(B) or an L-1A executive under 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(C), meeting either one criteria or the other. A beneficiary does not have to meet both.

[^ 2] For definitions of executive and managerial capacity, see Chapter 6, Key Concepts [2 USCIS-PM L.6].

[^ 3] For more information on function managers, see Chapter 6, Key Concepts, Section C, Managerial Capacity, Subsection 2, Function Manager [2 USCIS-PM L.6(C)(2)].

[^ 4] See Matter of Church Scientology Int'l (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 593 (Comm. 1988).

[^ 5] For example, someone who had specialized knowledge abroad could enter the United States as a manager or executive. See 9 FAM 402.12-12(F), Beneficiary Need Not Perform Same Work in the United States as Abroad.

[^ 6] See Matter of Z-A-, Inc. (PDF), Adopted Decision 2016-02 (AAO Apr. 14, 2016). While the case does not address whether a beneficiary will be working primarily as a manager of personnel or as an executive, and the analysis should not be used in those cases, officers should continue to analyze L-1A petitions where the position is for a personnel manager or an executive as they were doing before Matter of Z-A-, Inc. was designated as an adopted decision.

[^ 7] See Matter of Aphrodite Investments (PDF), 17 I&N Dec. 530 (Comm. 1980).

Chapter 4 - Specialized Knowledge Beneficiaries (L-1B)

The L-1B classification is reserved for certain persons having specialized knowledge and, in the case of persons seeking L-1B classification under an approved blanket petition specialized knowledge professionals.^[1]

A. Specialized Knowledge Capacity

To establish eligibility for approval, the L-1B petitioner must show that:

- The beneficiary possesses specialized knowledge;
- The position offered involves the specialized knowledge held by the beneficiary; and
- The beneficiary has at least 1 continuous year of employment abroad in a managerial, executive, or specialized knowledge capacity with the petitioning employer or any qualifying organization (collectively referred to as the petitioning organization) within the preceding 3 years. If the beneficiary will be located primarily at the workplace of an unaffiliated company, the petitioner also must establish that the beneficiary is eligible for L-1B classification under the requirements of the Visa Reform Act.^[2]

B. Application of Specialized Knowledge

1. Special or Advanced Knowledge

A beneficiary may establish specialized knowledge by possessing either special or advanced knowledge, or both. Determining whether a beneficiary has special knowledge requires review of the beneficiary's knowledge of how the petitioning organization manufactures, produces, or develops its products, services, research, equipment, techniques, management, or other interests (or in brief, its products or services).

Determinations concerning advanced knowledge, on the other hand, require review of the beneficiary's knowledge of the specific petitioning organization's processes and procedures. With respect to either special or advanced knowledge, the petitioner ordinarily must demonstrate that the beneficiary's knowledge is not commonly held throughout the industry. As discussed in detail below, however, a beneficiary's knowledge need not be proprietary in nature, unique, or narrowly held within the petitioning organization to be considered specialized.

Determining whether knowledge is special or advanced inherently requires a comparison of the beneficiary's knowledge against that of others. The petitioner bears the burden of establishing such a favorable comparison. Because special knowledge concerns knowledge of the petitioning organization's products or services and its application in international markets, the petitioner may meet its burden through evidence that the beneficiary has knowledge that is distinct or uncommon in comparison to the knowledge of other similarly employed workers in the particular industry.

Alternatively, because advanced knowledge concerns knowledge of a petitioning organization's processes and procedures that is not commonly found in the relevant industry, the petitioner may meet its burden through evidence that the beneficiary has knowledge of or expertise in the petitioning organization's processes and procedures that is greatly developed or further along in progress, complexity, and understanding in comparison to other workers in the employer's operations.

2. Factors to Consider

It is not sufficient to demonstrate that the beneficiary has general knowledge of processes and procedures common to the industry; the focus here is primarily on whether the beneficiary's knowledge of the processes and procedures used specifically by the petitioning organization is advanced. Evidence must support that such knowledge is apart from the elementary or basic knowledge possessed by others in the petitioning organization and the relevant industry.

The following is a non-exhaustive list of factors that officers may consider when determining whether a beneficiary's knowledge is specialized:

- The beneficiary possesses knowledge of foreign operating conditions that is of significant value to the petitioning organization's U.S. operations;
- The beneficiary has been employed abroad in a capacity involving assignments that have significantly enhanced the employer's productivity, competitiveness, image, or financial position;
- The beneficiary's claimed specialized knowledge is normally gained only through prior experience with the petitioning organization;

- The beneficiary possesses knowledge of a product or process that cannot be easily transferred or taught to another person without significant economic cost or inconvenience (because, for example, such knowledge may require substantial training, work experience, or education);^[3]
- The beneficiary has knowledge of a process or a product that either is sophisticated or complex, or of a highly technical nature, although not necessarily unique to the petitioning organization; or
- The beneficiary possesses knowledge that is particularly beneficial to the petitioning organization's competitiveness in the marketplace.

The presence of one or more of these (or similar) factors, when assessed in the totality of the circumstances, may be sufficient to establish, by a preponderance of the evidence, that a beneficiary has specialized knowledge. As noted above, this list of factors is meant to be illustrative, not exhaustive, and it does not impose requirements that a petitioner must meet.

Specialized Knowledge Generally Cannot Be Commonly Held, Lacking in Complexity, or Easily Imparted to Others

One of the several factors that may be considered in determining whether knowledge is specialized is the amount and type of training, work experience, or education required to develop that knowledge.^[4] Knowledge generally may not be considered special or advanced if it is commonly held, lacks some complexity, or can be easily imparted from one person to another.

On the other hand, knowledge generally may be considered specialized if a petitioner can demonstrate through credible and relevant evidence that the knowledge possessed by the beneficiary would be difficult to impart to another person without significant economic cost or inconvenience to the petitioning organization.^[5]

Depending on the totality of the circumstances, significant economic cost or inconvenience may be a relevant factor. However, USCIS does not require a petitioner to establish significant economic cost or inconvenience if it can otherwise establish specialized knowledge.

Specialized Knowledge Need Not Be Proprietary or Unique

Although specialized knowledge ordinarily cannot be knowledge generally possessed or easily transferrable, it need not be proprietary or unique to the petitioning organization. A petitioner is not required to demonstrate that it is the only company where the beneficiary could have acquired the knowledge, or that it is the only company that trades in the technologies, techniques, products, services, or processes that are the subject of the beneficiary's knowledge.

Although a petitioner may provide evidence that knowledge is proprietary or unique in support of its claim that the knowledge is also special or advanced, and therefore specialized, the L-1B classification does not require such a finding.

L-1B Classification Does Not Involve Test of U.S. Labor Market

The petitioner must ordinarily demonstrate that the beneficiary's knowledge is not generally or commonly held in the relevant industry. Such a determination, however, does not involve a test of the U.S. labor market. A petitioner is not required to demonstrate the lack of readily available workers to perform the relevant duties in the United States.^[6]

The relevant inquiry is not whether U.S. workers with the beneficiary's knowledge are available to the employer; rather, it is whether there are so many such workers that the knowledge is generally or commonly held in the relevant industry, and therefore not specialized. If there are numerous workers in the United States who possess knowledge that is generally like the beneficiary's, it is the petitioner's burden to establish that the beneficiary's knowledge nevertheless is truly specialized.

Specialized Knowledge Need Not Be Narrowly Held Within Petitioning Organization

Although comparisons with other employees of the petitioning organization may be useful in determining whether the beneficiary's knowledge is special or advanced, such knowledge need not be narrowly held within the petitioning organization. Multiple employees within a company may have obtained the experience, training, or education necessary to possess the same type of specialized knowledge. Some companies may use technologies or techniques that are so advanced or complex that nearly all employees working on the relevant products or services possess specialized knowledge.

The mere existence of other employees with similar knowledge should not, in and of itself, be a ground for denial. Depending on the facts of the case, where there are already a significant number of employees in the U.S. organization with the same claimed specialized knowledge as that of the beneficiary, a question may arise as to whether the relevant position needs to be filled by a person having specialized knowledge. Accordingly, officers should consider, as in other L-1B cases, whether the evidence of record demonstrates the organization's need to transfer the beneficiary to the United States. Further factors to consider may include:

- Whether the petitioner has shown the need for another person with similar knowledge in the organization's U.S. operations and the difficulty in transferring or teaching the relevant knowledge to a person other than the beneficiary;
- How the duties to be performed by the beneficiary that require their claimed specialized knowledge may or may not differ from those already employed in the organization's U.S. operations;
- The extent to which the petitioning organization would suffer economic inconvenience or disruption to its U.S. or foreign-based operations if it were unable to transfer the beneficiary.^[7]

- Whether and to what degree the beneficiary's claimed specialized knowledge would be beneficial to the successful conduct of the petitioner's operations; and
- Whether the total compensation^[8] provided to the beneficiary is comparable in dollar value to similarly situated peers in such U.S. operations.^[9]

Specialized Knowledge Workers Need Not Occupy Managerial or Similar Positions or Command Higher Compensation

Unlike the L-1A nonimmigrant classification, the L-1B nonimmigrant classification does not require that the beneficiary be a manager or executive. Nor does the L-1B classification require that the beneficiary be an officer or supervisor or hold any other similar position within the petitioning organization. Although rank and compensation are factors that may be considered when analyzing whether a beneficiary possesses specialized knowledge, there is no requirement that the beneficiary be of a certain rank within the organization or that the beneficiary's compensation be elevated compared to their peers within the organization or the particular industry.

There may be valid business reasons that one employee may be earning more or less than their peers. A company in its early development, for example, may not yet have generated sufficient income to pay the beneficiary a greater salary. In creating the L-1B classification, Congress focused on the beneficiary's knowledge, not their position on a company's organizational chart or pay scale.

Beneficiaries Must Have Required Specialized Knowledge at Time of Filing

As with all eligibility criteria, the petitioner must show that the beneficiary meets the requisite criteria and is eligible for the benefit at the time of filing.

The beneficiary may have acquired specialized knowledge while working for the foreign organization either in a specialized knowledge, executive, or managerial capacity. The petitioner bears the burden to show that the beneficiary has the required specialized knowledge at the time of filing.

Eligibility for Another Nonimmigrant Classification is Not a Bar to Eligibility for L-1B Classification

The requirements for L-1B classification are distinct from other visa classifications. Eligibility for one classification does not preclude eligibility for another. A beneficiary may possess characteristics that make him or her potentially qualified for two or more distinct nonimmigrant classifications, but may only hold one classification at a time while in the United States.

For example, the beneficiary may have characteristics that make him or her eligible as a nonimmigrant specialized knowledge worker (L-1B) and a nonimmigrant specialty occupation worker (H-1B). Similarly, a beneficiary may qualify for L-1B nonimmigrant status while at the same time possessing the extraordinary ability or achievement necessary for O-1 nonimmigrant status. Possession of such dual qualifications does not render the beneficiary ineligible for either classification. Officers should only consider the requirements for the classification sought in the petition, without considering eligibility requirements for other classifications.

Beneficiaries Working at a Worksite Outside the Petitioning Organization – The Visa Reform Act

L-1B status is not permitted if the beneficiary will be stationed primarily at the worksite of an employer other than the petitioner or an affiliate, subsidiary, or parent and will be principally under the control and supervision of the unaffiliated employer.^[10] The officer must conduct the Visa Reform Act analysis if the beneficiary will be stationed offsite as described above.

If a beneficiary's work-related activities will be physically performed at the petitioner's or its affiliates' locations, to the extent that such time can be considered to be down time rather than time actually performing the services described in the petition, a beneficiary might be subject to the bar (since, in this example, the majority of the beneficiary's actual work time is spent at an unaffiliated company or companies' work site).

The number of non-affiliated worksite locations where the beneficiary might be stationed, by itself, is not relevant; what is relevant is the location where the beneficiary will be employed as specified in the underlying petition. To remain eligible for L-1B classification, any beneficiary with specialized knowledge who will be stationed primarily at the worksite of another employer must:

- Be controlled and supervised by the petitioning employer; and
- Be provided in connection with an exchange of products or services between the petitioning employer and the unaffiliated employer for which specialized knowledge specific to the petitioning employer is necessary, as opposed to an arrangement that is essentially to provide labor for hire to the unaffiliated employer.^[11]

Even if the beneficiary is to be stationed primarily outside the petitioning organization, that fact alone does not establish ineligibility for L classification. For the ground of ineligibility to apply, control and supervision of the beneficiary at the non-affiliated worksite must be principally by the unaffiliated employer. Officers should use the common dictionary meaning of the term principally. The adjective principal means "most important, consequential, or influential."^[12]

Therefore, even if the non-affiliated entity exercises some control or supervision over the work performed, if such control and supervision lie first and foremost within the petitioning organization, and the petitioning organization retains ultimate authority over the worker, the ground of ineligibility does not apply.

The unaffiliated employer may provide input, feedback, or guidance as to their needs and goals, and may even direct specific tasks and activities. So long as the ultimate authority over the L-1 worker's daily duties remains within the petitioning organization, however, the fact that there may be some intervening third-party supervision or input between the worker and the petitioning organization does not render the worker ineligible for L-1B classification.

A beneficiary is ineligible for L classification if the placement at the unaffiliated worksite is essentially an arrangement to provide labor for hire for the unaffiliated employer rather than a placement in connection with the provision of a product or service for which specialized knowledge specific to the petitioning employer is necessary.

Whether an arrangement is essentially to provide labor for hire is inherently a factual inquiry. Officers therefore must look at all aspects of the activity or activities in which the beneficiary will be engaged away from the petitioner's worksite. In general, if the off-site activity or activities require specialized knowledge of the petitioner's product or services, if such knowledge bears a reasonable relationship to the performance of the off-site activities, the activities are not prohibited.

For example, a beneficiary would be ineligible for L classification if a petitioner is essentially in the business of placing beneficiaries with various unaffiliated companies, irrespective of the beneficiary's specialized knowledge of the petitioner's particular product or service, where the off-site activities to be performed do not require specialized knowledge specific to the worker placement industry.

On the other hand, if the petitioner is primarily engaged in providing a specialized service, and typically sends its specialized knowledge personnel on projects located on the work site of its unaffiliated clients to perform such services, then, assuming the beneficiary remains under the principal control and supervision of the petitioning employer, and otherwise meets the basic requirements for L classification, the beneficiary would not be subject to the bar. In such cases, the petitioning employer must show they retain ultimate authority over the L-1B beneficiary, and the L-1B beneficiary must provide a product or service to the offsite employer for which specialized knowledge specific to the petitioner is necessary.

Footnotes

[^ 1] For the definition of L-1 specialized knowledge professional, see INA 214(c)(2)(B), 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(D), and 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(E). For the definition of specialized knowledge, see Chapter 6, Key Concepts, Section E, Specialized Knowledge [2 USCIS-PM L.6(E)].

[^ 2] See Division J, Title IV of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2005, Pub. L. 108-447 (PDF), 118 Stat. 2813, 3351 (December 8, 2004).

[^ 3] One factor that may be relevant in weighing economic inconvenience is the time-sensitivity of the petitioning organization's need in its U.S. operations for an employee with the particular type of specialized knowledge, and the harm the organization would suffer if it could not fulfill its time-sensitive personnel need through transfer of the beneficiary. See Fogo de Chao (Holdings) Inc. v. DHS, 769 F.3d 1127, 1142 (D.C. Cir. 2014) (observing that a "natural prox[y] for economic inconvenience” is “the amount of in-house training a company’s employees would have to receive to acquire the knowledge in question”).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(3)(v) (requiring petitioner to submit evidence of the beneficiary’s prior education, training, and employment).

[^ 5] See Fogo de Chao (Holdings) Inc. v. DHS, 769 F.3d 1127, 1142 (D.C. Cir. 2014).

[^ 6] In Fogo de Chao (Holdings) Inc. v. DHS, 769 F.3d 1127, 1145 (D.C. Cir 2014), the D.C. Circuit noted that the Immigration Act of 1990 precludes USCIS from requiring evidence establishing that the specialized knowledge in question is not readily available in the U.S. labor market. An inquiry into whether knowledge is generally or commonly held in a given industry—and therefore not special, as that term is naturally understood—is separate from an inquiry into whether there are U.S. workers available to perform a given job.

[^ 7] See Fogo de Chao (Holdings) v. DHS, 769 F.3d 1127, 1142-43 (D.C. Cir 2014).

[^ 8] For this limited purpose, what constitutes total compensation is fact-dependent, but may include, besides wages or salary, other guaranteed forms of payment made to an employee for services rendered for the petitioner. The petitioner may pay such compensation in the form of money, a commodity, a service, or a privilege, including food, transportation, and housing allowances, as well as guaranteed bonuses. Any such payment, however, must principally be for the convenience or benefit of the employee and agreed upon by the petitioner and beneficiary before filing the petition. The petitioner bears the burden of establishing the actual value of any claimed compensation.

[^ 9] Evidence that a significant number of employees within the petitioning organization’s U.S. operations share the beneficiary’s knowledge, yet the petitioner will pay the beneficiary substantially less than those similarly situated employees, may indicate that the beneficiary lacks the requisite specialized knowledge. As described, however, there may be valid business reasons for the wage discrepancy. Officers should generally evaluate justification for the variance in consideration of the skills, experience, and other factors pertinent to the entire spectrum of employees in the U.S. operations who possess the requisite specialized knowledge.

[^ 10] The L-1 Visa and H-1B Visa Reform Act added anti-job shopping provisions. See Section 412(a) of Division J, Title IV of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2005, Pub. L. 108-447 (PDF), 118 Stat. 2813, 2905 (December 8, 2004). See INA 214(c)(2)(F).

[^ 11] See Division J, Title IV of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2005, Pub. L. 108-447 (PDF), 118 Stat. 2813, 3351 (December 8, 2004).

[^ 12] See Merriam-Webster Dictionary’s definition of “principal.” See Oxford English Dictionary’s definition of “principal.”

Chapter 5 - Ownership and Control

The petitioner for an intracompany transferee must be a qualifying organization seeking to transfer a foreign employee to the United States temporarily from one of its operations outside the United States. Accordingly, to be eligible for L-1 nonimmigrant classification, there must be a qualifying relationship between the foreign and U.S. entities. In the United States, business entities usually take the form of a sole proprietorship, partnership, corporation, or limited liability company (LLC). State law generally governs the formation, operation, and dissolution of such business entities. Since each state has its own rules for business entities, officers should refer to the relevant state authority's website if there is a specific question about a business entity.

An organization cannot transfer someone to work in the United States as an L-1 nonimmigrant, unless the organization has a qualifying U.S. entity to employ the L-1 beneficiary.^[1] The source of the beneficiary's salary and benefits while in the United States (for example, whether the beneficiary will be paid by the United States or foreign affiliate of the petitioning company) is generally not controlling in determining eligibility for L status.^[2]

Evidence of Ownership and Control, Generally

Depending on the nature of the petitioner, USCIS may require different types of evidence to demonstrate ownership and control for purposes of establishing the qualifying L-1 relationship. USCIS considers ownership of more than 50 percent of an organization as evidence of control. Control based on ownership of more than 50 percent is called de jure control.^[3] However, it is possible for an owner of 50 percent or less of a company to exercise de facto control over the organization.^[4]

Large, established organizations may submit a statement by the entity's president, corporate attorney, corporate secretary, or other authorized official describing the ownership and control of each qualifying organization, accompanied by other evidence such as a copy of its most recent annual report, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission filings, or other documentation that lists the parent and its subsidiaries.

In addition to a statement of an authorized official regarding ownership and control of each qualifying organization, organizations should submit other evidence of ownership and control, which may include but is not limited to: records of stock ownership, partnership agreements, operating or LLC agreements, member certificates, audited financial statements, profit and loss statements or other accountant's reports, tax returns, or articles of incorporation, by-laws, and minutes of board meetings.

Not-for-profit Entities – Ownership and Control and Doing Business

Not-for-profit or nonprofit entities are eligible to use the L classification if all requirements are met.^[5] These entities sometimes have difficulty demonstrating ownership and control, because their ownership and organizational structure does not perfectly align with the for-profit entities that are more commonly seen in the L context. Often a non-profit will indicate that they have a branch relationship in which they demonstrate that the employing entity is the same organization operating in another location. However, there may be some regional or country-specific requirement that the entity register as a separate entity.

In these cases, or any other claims of a qualifying relationship, ownership and control must be established. In the case of a nonprofit, there may be no traditional evidence of ownership such as equity certificates. Accordingly, to establish the existence of a qualifying relationship involving a nonprofit organization, a petitioner must demonstrate that the relevant person, group, or entity owns or manages sufficient assets to directly or indirectly control both the U.S. and foreign entities involved. Factors considered may include a person, entity, or group's obligation to fund capital needs of the nonprofit, any rights to receive distribution of assets on liquidation, or any rights to direct how the assets of the nonprofit may be used, purchased, or sold. Control of a nonprofit entity means the direct or indirect legal right and authority to direct the establishment, management, and operation of the nonprofit organization. In determining what constitutes 'control' with respect to nonprofit organizations, USCIS takes into consideration the structure of the organization's management and governance including the authority of the organization's senior officers, board members and trustees.

Generally, to demonstrate a qualifying relationship, non-profit petitioners may submit, as applicable, Internal Revenue Service (IRS) filings, state filings, annual reports, and audited financial statements to demonstrate the relevant relationship between entities. As applicable, petitioners may also submit proof of a qualifying relationship by the submission of articles of incorporation or similar organizational documents, bylaws or similar operating documents, meeting minutes, or other appropriate documentation. These examples are illustrative and not exhaustive.

In addition, demonstrating that a non-profit entity is doing business may look different in comparison to a for-profit entity. USCIS considers an entity may also qualify if it is providing such goods or services in a regular, systematic, and continuous way to others within its organization, if the record demonstrates how that activity generates revenue or otherwise facilitates the organization's purpose. USCIS recognizes that many non-profit organizations do not generate revenue by providing goods or services. In these cases, doing business refers to performing the activities that serve to advance the underlying goals and purpose of the organization.

Opening New Office in United States

If the beneficiary is coming to the United States to open a new office, USCIS requires proof of ownership and control, in addition to financial viability. The petitioners' statement of ownership and control should therefore be accompanied by appropriate evidence such as evidence of capitalization of the company or evidence of financial resources committed by the foreign company, operating or LLC agreements, partnership agreements, articles of incorporation, by-laws, and minutes of board of directors' meetings, corporate bank statements, profit and loss statements, accountant's reports, or tax returns.^[6]

The following sections discuss some aspects of different business structures as they relate to L adjudications.

A. Sole Proprietorships

A sole-proprietorship may not file an L-1 petition on behalf of the owner, as it is not a distinct legal entity separate from the owner.^[7] Generally, no special documents are executed when a sole proprietorship is created and commences doing business. In the United States, a sole proprietorship is not required to execute or file any documents of creation and may use the owner's own social security number as its Employer's Identification Number.

The most common document provided as evidence of the ownership and control of a sole proprietorship is the owner's individual federal tax return. In addition, the petitioner may submit contracts, such as leases, employment contracts, or sales agreements that the owner executed on behalf of the sole proprietorship.

In cases where the business is not a separate legal entity from the owner, the petitioner must also provide other evidence that identifies the owner of the business. This evidence may include, but is not limited to, a license to do business, record of registration as an employer with the IRS, business tax returns, or other evidence that identifies the owner of the business.

A sole proprietorship may employ other persons, so a sole proprietorship may file an L-1 petition on behalf of an employee. A qualifying L-1 relationship can exist between a sole proprietorship and a related entity if the common ownership and control of both legal entities can be established.^[8]

B. Joint Venture

A joint venture is a business relationship wherein two or more parties agree to share funds, resources, and skills to undertake a particular business project. There are two general types of joint venture business enterprises: equity joint ventures and non-equity joint ventures.

An equity joint venture is created under corporate law and exists when two or more companies create a separate entity and contribute capital to that entity in furtherance of the joint venture. A qualifying L-1 relationship can exist between a contributing company and the resulting venture if the contributing company owns at least 50 percent of the venture and exercises control over the venture.

A non-equity joint venture, on the other hand, is typically a contractual arrangement in which no separate entity is formed. In a non-equity joint venture, cooperative agreements are entered into between the contributing companies to provide noncapital resources (such as manufacturing processes, patents, trademarks, managerial know-how, or other essential services). A non-equity joint venture does not establish a qualifying L-1 relationship, because no separate entity is formed. Therefore, the requisite common ownership and control will not be present in a non-equity joint venture, as the joint venture stands alone outside the two parties that entered into the contractual arrangement.^[9]

C. Partnerships

A partnership is the shared ownership of a business, that is, a relationship existing between two or more persons who join to carry on a trade or business.^[10] A partnership may meet the requirements for a qualifying organization if it meets one of the regulatory definitions of a parent, branch, subsidiary, or affiliate.^[11] When submitting evidence of ownership and control of a partnership, the petitioner must submit a copy of the partnership agreement. To establish what the partnership owns and controls, other evidence may be necessary. For example, petitioners generally provide partnership agreements and the partnership's IRS Form 1065 to establish who owns and controls a partnership.

By law, international partnerships that provide accounting services or management consulting services may meet the criteria as qualifying organizations for L-1 purposes. USCIS does not require extensive documentation in such cases.

D. Corporations

A corporation is a separate legal entity, owned by its shareholders. It is an association of individual natural persons or organizations created by state law that exists as an entity with powers and liabilities that are independent of its owners.^[12] Corporations may meet the requirements for a qualifying organization if it meets one of the regulatory definitions of a parent, branch, subsidiary, or affiliate.^[13] A corporation may file an L-1 on behalf of a noncitizen stockholder, as the corporation is a distinct legal entity.

E. Limited Liability Companies

An LLC is a hybrid entity. Earnings and losses pass through to the owners, who include those earning and losses on their personal tax returns. An LLC may file an L-1 petition on behalf of a member (owner), as an LLC is deemed to be a distinct legal entity.

F. Franchises

In order to establish a qualifying relationship in an L-1 visa petition that involves franchises, the petitioner must show that the required relationship exists between the foreign entity and the petitioner, not the franchise owned and operated by the petitioner.

USCIS regulations indicate that a petitioner can establish a qualifying relationship by showing ownership and control of the entities.^[14] If a franchise agreement only outlines how two independently owned companies can use or license a name or a product, then such agreement does not generally create a qualifying relationship between franchisor and franchisee. A contractual agreement of this nature can be terminated, as opposed to the more permanent association that is created through common ownership.^[15]

Claims made by the foreign entity's shareholder and franchisor statements alone are not sufficient to establish the beneficiary's claimed employee status. A petitioner's unsupported statements are of very limited weight and are normally insufficient to carry its burden of proof, particularly when supporting documentary evidence would reasonably be available.^[16] The petitioner must support its assertions with relevant, probative, and credible evidence.^[17]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Matter of Penner (PDF), 18 I&N Dec. 49 (Comm. 1982). Penner also discusses the obsolete proprietary knowledge requirement not contained in the current regulations; that portion of the Penner decision therefore is therefore not binding on officers.

[^ 2] See 9 FAM 402.12-12(b), Intracompany Transferees - L Visas.

[^ 3] De jure means by law and is a straightforward form of control.

[^ 4] De facto means in fact. See Matter of Hughes (PDF), 18 I&N Dec. 289 (Comm. 1982).

[^ 5] See Matter of Church Scientology Int'l (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 593 (Comm. 1988).

[^ 6] See documentary requirements for new office cases in 8 CFR 214.2(l)(3)(v) and the discussion in Matter of Leblanc (PDF), 13 I&N Dec. 816 (Reg. Comm. 1971).

[^ 7] See Matter of United Investment Group (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 248, 250 (Comm. 1984).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(G).

[^ 9] See Matter of Siemens Medical Systems, Inc. (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 362, 364 (BIA 1986).

[^ 10] See the U.S. Small Business Administration's Choose a business structure webpage.

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii).

[^ 12] See Internal Revenue Service's (IRS) Forming a Corporation webpage. See IRS's Definition of a Corporation webpage.

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(l)-(L).

[^ 15] See Matter of Schick (PDF), 13 I&N Dec. 647, 649 (Reg. Comm. 1970).

[^ 16] See Matter of Soffici (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 158, 165 (Comm. 1998) (citing Matter of Treasure Craft of California (PDF), 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg. Comm. 1972)). See Matter of Chawathe (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 369, 376 (AAO 2010).

[^ 17] See Matter of Chawathe (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 369, 376 (AAO 2010).

Chapter 6 - Key Concepts

A. Qualifying Organization

A qualifying organization for L-1 purposes is a U.S. or foreign firm, corporation, or other legal entity which:

- Meets exactly one of the qualifying relationships specified in the definitions of parent, branch, affiliate, or subsidiary;
- Is or will be doing business^[1] as an employer in the United States and in at least one other country directly or through a parent, branch, affiliate, or subsidiary for the duration of the L-1 beneficiary's stay in the United States as an intracompany transferee; and
- Otherwise meets the statutory definition of a nonimmigrant intracompany transferee.^[2]

1. Qualifying Relationship

A qualifying relationship exists when the U.S. employer is a branch, affiliate, parent or a subsidiary of the foreign firm, corporation, or other legal entity. To establish a qualifying relationship, the petitioner must show that the beneficiary's foreign employer and the proposed U.S. employer are either the same employer (for example, a U.S. entity with a foreign branch office) or related as a parent and subsidiary or as affiliates.

In situations where the petitioner has submitted documentation of a qualifying relationship through possession of proxy votes, the petitioner must show that the proxy votes are irrevocable from the time of filing through the time of adjudication.

Further, any approval is conditioned on evidence demonstrating that the qualifying relationship will continue to exist during the approval period requested. Any changes of ownership and control of the organization post-adjudication require the petitioner to file an amended petition, as such changes may constitute a material change in circumstances or represent new, material information.^[3]

Stock certificates or other evidence of ownership interests, standing alone, generally are not sufficient to establish that a qualifying relationship exists. For instance, in the case of a corporation, documents such as the corporate stock certificate ledger, stock certificate registry, corporate bylaws, and the minutes of relevant annual shareholder meetings when appropriate, should also be examined to determine the total number of shares issued, the exact number issued to the shareholder, and the subsequent percentage ownership and its effect on corporate control.

When appropriate, officers should ask a petitioning company to provide all agreements relating to the voting rights of owners, the distribution of profits, the management and direction of the petitioning company, and any other factor affecting actual control of the entity. Without full disclosure of all relevant documents, officers may be unable to determine the elements of ownership and control.^[4] Officers may require evidence of the acquisition of the actual ownership interest (such as capital investment, wire transfers, stock purchase agreements, or others) as additional supporting evidence.^[5]

The most common types of business relationships that are not qualifying under the L category are those based on contractual, licensing, and franchise agreements. Additional non-qualifying relationships include arrangements such as less than 50-50 joint ventures and charter membership arrangements.^[6]

Publicly traded companies regulated by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) may submit copies of annual reports, where probative, as evidence of their affiliates and subsidiaries. Most annual reports list the company's foreign affiliates and subsidiaries, along with the company's ownership interest (for example, controlling, not controlling, and joint venture). Annual reports are frequently prepared by major accounting firms and include audited financial statements. Evidence may also include copies of SEC Forms 10K and 10Q.

Where one or both of the qualifying entities has undergone or will undergo a corporate reorganization (such as merger, spin-off, or acquisition), officers must determine whether the qualifying relationship between the entities will exist following the reorganization. Officers should therefore review standard documents from the merger, including but not limited to: the letter of intent, minutes from shareholder meetings, the Hart-Scott-Rodino antitrust filings (if applicable), as well as the ultimate merger agreement. Unless the company is publicly traded, officers may encounter privacy concerns regarding proprietary or confidential transactional and financial information. In such a case, if a petitioner is unable or unwilling to provide information, adjudicators should determine whether the existing record leads to a finding that the petitioner's burden has been met.

2. Parent and Subsidiary

A parent is a firm, corporation, or other legal entity that owns another firm, corporation, or other legal entity that qualifies as its subsidiary.^[7] A parent owns a subsidiary when it:

- Owns more than 50 percent (directly or indirectly) of the entity and controls the entity;
- Owns 50 percent (directly or indirectly) of the entity and controls the entity;
- Owns 50 percent (directly or indirectly) of the entity that is a 50-50 joint venture and has equal control and veto power over the entity; or
- Owns less than 50 percent (directly or indirectly) of the entity but in fact controls the entity.^[8]

Therefore, ownership and control are two of the factors that officers must examine in determining whether a qualifying L-1 relationship exists between the foreign employer and the U.S. employer.

Ownership means the legal right of possession with full power and authority to control. Control means the right and authority to direct the management and operations of the business entity.^[9]

3. Affiliate

An affiliate meets one of the following:

- One of two or more subsidiaries, all of which are owned and controlled^[10] by the same parent;
- One of two or more legal entities owned and controlled by the same person;
- One of two or more legal entities owned and controlled by the same group of persons, each person owning and controlling approximately the same share or proportion of each entity;^[11] or
- In the case of a partnership organized to provide accounting or management consulting services, an entity inside the United States is an affiliate of an entity outside the United States if:
 - The entities market their accounting or management consulting services (directly or indirectly) using the same internationally recognized name, under an agreement with the same worldwide coordinating organization; and
 - The worldwide coordinating organization is collectively owned and controlled by the member accounting or management consulting entities or by their elected members (that is, partners, shareholders, members, employees).

Once these entities meet this definition of affiliate, they continue to be affiliates even if they subsequently enter a plan of association with a successor worldwide coordinating organization that is not collectively owned and controlled by its member entities or their elected members.

4. Branch

Branch means an operating division or office of the same organization housed in a different location.
^[12] Probative evidence that the U.S. employer is a branch office may include but is not limited to one or more of the following:^[13]

- A state or territorial business license establishing that the foreign corporation is authorized to engage in business activities in the United States;
- Copies of the U.S. Income Tax Return of a Foreign Corporation (IRS Form 1120-F);
- Copies of the Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return (IRS Form 941) listing the branch office as the employer;
- Copies of the Wage and Tax Statement (IRS Form W-2) listing the branch office as the employer; or
- Copies of a lease for office space in the United States.

If the petitioner seeks to transfer the beneficiary from a foreign branch office, the petition should include comparable evidence to establish that the foreign employer is a branch office of a qualifying entity.

B. Doing Business

Doing business is the regular, systematic, and continuous provision of goods or services by a qualifying organization. Therefore, the mere presence of an organization's office or agent in the United States does not, in and of itself, constitute doing business.^[14] Both the U.S. employer and at least one qualifying organization abroad must be doing business for the entire duration of the beneficiary's stay in the United States as an intracompany transferee.^[15] Doing business requires activity, not just registration of the business or office or presence of an agent.^[16]

An exception exists for petitioners filing for an L-1 beneficiary coming to be employed by a U.S. organization that has been doing business for less than 1 year. Such a petitioner does not have to be actively engaged in doing business at the time of filing the petition. Instead, the petitioner must submit evidence that it has secured sufficient physical premises to house the new office, and the intended U.S. operation, within 1 year of the approval of the petition, will support an executive, managerial, or specialized knowledge position.^[17]

1. Foreign Employer Must Continue to Do Business

There must be a qualifying organization abroad that continues to engage in the regular, systematic, and continuous provision of goods and services for the entire duration of the L-1 beneficiary's stay for a qualifying relationship to exist.^[18]

The presence of a dormant corporation, an agent, or a holding company abroad is not sufficient to establish a qualifying relationship for L-1 purposes. However, the organization does not have to be the same organization that employed the beneficiary abroad.

2. Determination of Doing Business

While the petitioner must show the organization is involved in the continuous provision of goods or services, there is no statutory or regulatory minimum level of business activity that must be conducted for the U.S. and the foreign organizations to meet this eligibility requirement.

However, the organization must be conducting business in a manner that would require the services of a person primarily engaged in a managerial, executive, or specialized knowledge capacity.^[19]

In order to make a determination that the organization is conducting sufficient business to require the services of a managerial capacity, executive capacity, or specialized knowledge employee, the organization's personnel structure and the beneficiary's stated duties must be placed in the context of the level of business that is being conducted by the organization.

C. Managerial Capacity

Managerial capacity means an assignment within an organization in which the employee primarily:^[20]

- Manages the organization, or a department, subdivision, function, or component of the organization;
- Supervises and controls the work of other supervisory, professional, or managerial employees, or manages an essential function within the organization or a department or subdivision of the organization;
- If another employee or other employees are directly supervised, has the authority to hire and fire or recommend those as well as other personnel actions (such as promotion and leave authorization) or, if no other employee is directly supervised, functions at a senior level within the organization hierarchy or with respect to the function managed; and
- Exercises discretion over the day-to-day operations of the activity or function for which the employee has authority.^[21]

This means that the definition of managerial capacity has two parts:

- The petitioner must show that the beneficiary will perform certain high-level responsibilities;^[22] and
- The petitioner must prove that the beneficiary will be primarily engaged in managerial duties, as opposed to ordinary operational activities alongside the petitioner's other employees.^[23]

The statutory definition of managerial capacity allows for both personnel managers and function managers.^[24]

1. Personnel Manager

Personnel managers must primarily supervise and control the work of other supervisory, professional, or managerial employees. A first line supervisor is not acting in a managerial capacity merely by virtue of the supervisor's supervisory duties unless the employees supervised are professional.^[25]

If a beneficiary directly supervises other employees, the beneficiary must also have the authority to hire and fire those employees, or recommend those actions for HR personnel to take, and take other personnel actions.^[26]

If staffing levels are to be used as a factor in determining whether the beneficiary has acted or will be acting in a managerial capacity, officers must consider the reasonable needs of the organization, component, or function in light of the overall purpose and stage of development of the organization, component, or function.^[27]

Officers should evaluate a position that is primarily supervisory in nature as a personnel manager.^[28]

2. Function Manager

As noted above, an L-1 beneficiary may qualify for L-1A classification as a manager based upon their management of an essential function or a core activity.^[29] This is known as a function manager.

If a petitioner claims that a beneficiary will manage an essential function, the petitioner must clearly describe the duties to be performed in managing the essential function. That includes identifying the function with specificity, articulating the essential nature of the function, and establishing the proportion of a beneficiary's daily duties dedicated to managing the essential function.^[30]

In addition, the petitioner's description of a beneficiary's daily duties must demonstrate that the beneficiary will manage the function rather than perform the duties related to the function.

To qualify as a function manager, the petitioner must demonstrate that:^[31]

- The function is a clearly defined activity;
- The function is essential (that is, core to the organization);
- The beneficiary will primarily manage, as opposed to perform, the function;
- The beneficiary will act at a senior level within the organizational hierarchy or with respect to the function managed; and

- The beneficiary will exercise discretion over the function's day-to-day operations.

D. Executive Capacity

Executive capacity means an assignment within an organization in which the employee primarily:

- Directs the management of the organization or a major component or function of the organization;
- Establishes the goal and policies of the organization, component, or function;
- Exercises wide latitude in discretionary decision; and
- Receives only general supervision or direction from higher level executives, the board of directors, or stockholder of the organization.^[32]

All four criteria must be met to qualify as an executive.^[33]

An L-1 beneficiary is not acting in an executive capacity merely based on the number of employees that the beneficiary directs or has directed. However, if staffing levels are used as a factor in determining whether an L-1 beneficiary has acted or will be acting in an executive capacity, officers must consider the reasonable needs of the organization, component, or function in light of the overall purpose and stage of development of the organization, component, or function.^[34]

An executive directs the management of the organization, major component, or essential function of a given organization by controlling the work of managerial or lower-level executive employees. This control could either take the form of direct supervision of those managers or executives or could be more indirect under some circumstances. For example, a chief financial officer may not have managerial or executive subordinates, but still may have authority over the company's financial function that is binding on managers elsewhere in the company and affects their work.

Like managerial capacity, the definition of executive capacity has two parts. To demonstrate executive capacity, the petitioner must:

- Show that the beneficiary will perform certain high-level responsibilities;^[35] and
- Prove that the beneficiary will be primarily engaged in executive duties, as opposed to ordinary operational activities alongside the petitioner's other employees.^[36]

Reciting the beneficiary's vague job responsibilities or broadly-cast business objectives is not sufficient – the petitioner must provide a detailed description of the beneficiary's daily job duties. The actual duties themselves will reveal the true nature of the employment.^[37]

E. Specialized Knowledge

Specialized knowledge means:

- Special knowledge of the petitioning organization's product, service, research, equipment, techniques, management, or other interests and its application in international markets; or
 - An advanced level of knowledge or expertise in the organization's processes and procedures.
- [38]

The corresponding regulation similarly defines specialized knowledge in terms of special or advanced knowledge: “[S]pecial knowledge possessed by an individual of the petitioning organization's product, service, research, equipment, techniques, management, or other interests and its application in international markets, or an advanced level of knowledge or expertise in the organization's processes and procedures.”[39]

Because the statute and regulations do not define the terms special or advanced, USCIS refers to their common dictionary definitions, as well as the agency's practice and experience in this context. The term special is defined in leading dictionaries as “surpassing the usual,” “distinct among others of a kind,” “distinguished by some unusual quality,” “uncommon,” or “noteworthy.”[40]

The term advanced is defined in various dictionaries as “greatly developed beyond an initial stage,” or “ahead or far or further along in progress, complexity, knowledge, skill, etc.”[41]

Applying these definitions to the statutory and regulatory text, a beneficiary seeking L-1B classification for certain specialized knowledge persons and professionals[42] should, as a threshold matter, possess:

- Special knowledge, which is knowledge of the petitioning organization's product, service, research, equipment, techniques, management, or other interests and its application in international markets that is distinct or uncommon in comparison to that generally found in the industry; or
- Advanced knowledge, which is knowledge of or expertise in the petitioning organization's specific processes and procedures that is not commonly found in the relevant industry and is greatly developed or further along in progress, complexity, and understanding than that generally found within the employer.

F. New Office

A new office is an organization that has been doing business in the United States through a parent, branch, affiliate, or subsidiary for less than 1 year.[43]

Because the term organization in the definition of new office is not separately defined, it can be either a U.S. or foreign corporation or other legal entity.[44] The requisite less than 1 year limitation applies to the new offices that meet any of the four individual entity types – parent, branch, subsidiary, or affiliate.

[45] Among the factors to be considered are the amount of investment, intended personnel structure, product or service to be provided, physical premises, and viability of the foreign operation.

G. One-Year Foreign Employment Requirement

To qualify for L-1 nonimmigrant classification, among other requirements, the L-1 beneficiary must have been employed abroad by the qualifying organization for 1 continuous year out of the preceding 3 years.

1. Qualifying Employment Must Occur Outside the United States

The 1-year foreign employment requirement is only satisfied by the time a beneficiary spends physically outside the United States working full-time for the petitioner or a qualifying organization.^[46] A petitioner cannot use any time that the beneficiary spent in the United States to meet the 1-year foreign employment requirement, even if the qualifying foreign entity paid the beneficiary and continued to employ the beneficiary while the beneficiary was in the United States. Furthermore, the continuous year of foreign employment must be qualifying; that is, the petitioner must demonstrate that the beneficiary worked abroad during that period in a managerial, executive, or specialized knowledge capacity.

2. Requirement Must be Satisfied When Petitioner Files L-1 Petition

The beneficiary must meet the 1-year foreign employment requirement at the time that the petitioner files the L-1 petition.

The 1-year foreign employment requirement ensures the continuity of a beneficiary's lawful employment with the same international qualifying organization, consistent with the purpose of the intracompany transferee nonimmigrant classification. Therefore, the proper reference point for determining the 1-year foreign employment requirement is the date the petitioner files the initial L-1 petition on the beneficiary's behalf, the starting point in the noncitizen's application for admission in L-1 status.

When the petitioner requests an extension of L-1 status (including a change from L-1A to L-1B status, or a change from L-1B to L-1A status), the 1-year requirement must have been met at the time of the filing of the initial L-1 petition.

3. Brief Visits to United States and Tolling of 1-Year Period

Brief visits for business or pleasure in B-1 or B-2 status do not interrupt the 1-year foreign employment requirement. While a qualifying foreign entity employs a beneficiary abroad, brief trips to the United States for business or pleasure in B-1 or B-2 status toll^[47] the one continuous year of employment abroad. Therefore, in such cases, officers should subtract the number of days the beneficiary spent in the United States from the time the qualifying foreign entity employed the beneficiary abroad.

For example, if the qualifying foreign entity began employing the beneficiary on January 1, 2016, and the beneficiary made brief trips to the United States that year for a total of 60 days, the beneficiary would need to accrue at least an additional 60 days of qualifying employment abroad after January 1, 2017 to meet the 1-year foreign employment requirement.

4. Working in United States for Qualifying Organization Results in Adjustment of 3-Year Period

Time a beneficiary spent working in the United States for a qualifying organization does not count towards the 1-year foreign employment requirement; however, this time does result in an adjustment of the 3-year period, in that the running of the 3-year period is tolled during that period.

USCIS considers a nonimmigrant in the United States to have come to this country to work for the qualifying organization if the nonimmigrant is employed by that organization as a principal beneficiary of an employment-based nonimmigrant petition or application, such as H-1B or E-2 executive, supervisory, or essential employee. If the beneficiary was admitted to work for the qualifying organization, their U.S. employment for the qualifying organization need not be in a managerial, executive, or specialized knowledge capacity to affect the dates of the relevant 3-year period used to determine whether the 1-year foreign employment requirement has been satisfied.

For example, if a beneficiary worked in the United States in valid H-1B status for a qualifying organization from January 2, 2017 through January 2, 2018, and the petitioner filed for L-1 nonimmigrant status for the employee on January 2, 2018, the relevant 3-year period is from January 1, 2014 to January 1, 2017.

On the other hand, the time a beneficiary spent working while in a dependent status does not result in an adjustment of the 3-year period. For example, time spent by a beneficiary in L-2 status does not result in an adjustment of the 3-year period, because the beneficiary was admitted as an L-2 to join the L-1 principal and not to work for a qualifying organization.

Likewise, if a beneficiary was admitted as an F-1 nonimmigrant and later applies for optional practical training (OPT) employment with the qualifying organization, the time spent in F-1 nonimmigrant status does not result in an adjustment to the 3-year period, because the purpose of admission was for study and not to work for the qualifying organization.

The time a beneficiary spent in the United States working for an unrelated employer, or not working at all, also does not result in an adjustment of the 3-year period. A break longer than 2 years in employment with the qualifying organization during the 3 years preceding the filing of the L-1 petition renders the beneficiary unable to meet the 1-year foreign employment requirement.

Periods the beneficiary spent in the United States without working (except for brief visits for business or pleasure in B-1 or B-2 status), or while working for an unrelated employer, interrupt the 1-year continuous foreign employment requirement, and officers should not adjust the 3-year period.

An otherwise eligible beneficiary may again qualify for the L-1 classification following a new 1-year period during which the beneficiary is employed by the qualifying organization abroad in a managerial, executive, or specialized knowledge capacity.

The relevant point in time for an officer to determine whether a beneficiary satisfies the 1-year foreign employment requirement is the date on which the petitioner filed the initial L-1 petition, regardless of when the beneficiary was, or will be, admitted to the United States.

5. Calculating 1-Year Period

Officers should take the following steps when determining whether the petitioner has established the 1-year foreign employment requirement. Officers should always look back 3 years from the date the initial L-1 petition was filed and then follow the steps listed in the table below.

Determining Whether Petitioner Established 1-Year Foreign Employment Requirement

Step 1: Determine the dates the beneficiary worked for the qualifying organization abroad.

Step 2: Determine lengths of any breaks in the beneficiary's qualifying employment during the 3-year period immediately before petitioner filed the L-1 petition. If the beneficiary has lawfully worked for a qualifying organization in the United States as a principal beneficiary of an employment-based nonimmigrant petition or application, adjust the 3-year period accordingly.

Step 3: Subtract the total length of all the breaks identified in Step 2 from the relevant 3-year period. If the result is a continuous 1-year period within the relevant 3-year period, then the petitioner has met the 1-year foreign employment requirement.

Footnotes

[^ 1] For more information about doing business, see Section B, Doing Business [2 USCIS-PM L.6(B)].

[^ 2] See INA 101(a)(15)(L). See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(G).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(7)(i)(C).

[^ 4] See Matter of Siemens Medical Systems, Inc. (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 362 (Comm. 1986).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(3)(viii).

[^ 6] See discussions of various qualifying and non-qualifying relationships in Matter of Schick (PDF), 13 I&N Dec. 647 (Reg. Comm. 1970); Matter of Del Mar Ben, Inc. (PDF), 15 I&N Dec. 5 (Reg. Comm. 1974); Matter of Aphrodite Investments, Ltd. (PDF), 17 I&N Dec. 530 (Comm. 1980); Matter of Tessel, Inc. (PDF), 17 I&N Dec. 631 (Acting Assoc. Comm. 1981); Matter of Barsai (PDF), 18 I&N Dec. 13 (Reg. Comm. 1981); Matter of Hughes (PDF), 18 I&N Dec. 289 (Comm. 1982); and Matter of Siemens Medical Systems, Inc. (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 362 (Comm. 1986).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(I).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(K).

[^ 9] See Matter of Church Scientology International (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 593 (Comm. 1988). See Matter of Siemens Medical Systems, Inc. (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 362 (Comm. 1986). See Matter of Hughes (PDF), 18 I&N Dec. 289 (Comm. 1982).

[^ 10] Ownership and control are two of the factors that officers must examine in determining whether an affiliated relationship exists.

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(L).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(J).

[^ 13] No single piece of evidence listed, or lack thereof, necessarily establishes the existence or non-existence of a branch office in all cases. Accordingly, the probative value of the evidence submitted varies on a case-by-case basis.

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(H).

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(G). See Matter of Chartier (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 284 (BIA 1977).

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(H).

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(3)(v). See Chapter 8, Documentation and Evidence, Section B, Evidence for Beneficiary (New Office) [2 USCIS-PM L.8(B)].

[^ 18] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(G). See Matter of Chartier (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 284 (BIA 1977).

[^ 19] See Family Inc. v. USCIS, 469 F.3d 1313, 1316 (9th Cir. 2006). See Champion World, Inc. v. INS, 940 F.2d 1533 (9th Cir. 1991) (unpublished table decision).

[^ 20] See Chapter 3, Managers and Executives (L-1A) [2 USCIS-PM L.3].

[^ 21] See INA 101(a)(44)(A). See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(B).

[^ 22] See Champion World, Inc. v. INS, 940 F.2d 1533 (9th Cir. 1991) (unpublished table decision).

[^ 23] See Family Inc. v. USCIS, 469 F.3d 1313, 1316 (9th Cir. 2006). See Champion World, 940.F.2d 1533 (9th Cir. 1991) (unpublished table decision).

[^ 24] See INA 101(a)(44)(A)(i) and INA 101(a)(44)(A)(ii).

[^ 25] See INA 101(a)(44)(A)(iv). See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(B)(4).

[^ 26] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(B)(3).

[^ 27] See INA 101(a)(44)(C).

[^ 28] See INA 101(a)(44)(A)(ii).

[^ 29] An organization may have more than one core activity.

[^ 30] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(3)(ii).

[^ 31] See Matter of G- Inc. (PDF, 130.68 KB), Adopted Decision 2017-05 (AAO Nov. 8, 2017).

[^ 32] See INA 101 (a)(44)(B). See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(C).

[^ 33] See INA 101 (a)(44)(B). See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(C).

[^ 34] See INA 101(a)(44)(C).

[^ 35] See Champion World, Inc. v. INS, 940 F.2d 1533 (9th Cir. 1991) (unpublished table decision).

[^ 36] See Family Inc. v. USCIS, 469 F.3d 1313, 1316 (9th Cir. 2006). See Champion World, Inc. v. INS, 940.F.2d 1533 (9th Cir. 1991) (unpublished table decision).

[^ 37] See Fedin Bros. Co., Ltd. v. Sava, 724 F. Supp. 1103, 1108 (E.D.N.Y. 1989), aff'd, 905 F.2d 41 (2nd Cir. 1990).

[^ 38] See INA 214(c)(2)(B). See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(D).

[^ 39] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(D).

[^ 40] See Merriam-Webster Dictionary's definition of "special." See Oxford English Dictionary's definition of "special."

[^ 41] See Merriam-Webster Dictionary's definition of "advanced." See Oxford English Dictionary's definition of "advanced."

[^ 42] See Chapter 4, Specialized Knowledge Professionals (L-1B) [2 USCIS-PM L.4].

[^ 43] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(F). See Chapter 8, Documentation and Evidence, Section B, Evidence for Beneficiary (New Office) [2 USCIS-PM L.8(B)].

[^ 44] For the definition of qualifying organization, see Section A, Qualifying Organization [2 USCIS-PM L.6(A)].

[^ 45] The regulations separately define parent, branch, subsidiary, and affiliate in 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii) (8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(I), (J), (K), and (L), respectively). The regulations define a branch as “an operating division or office of the same organization housed in a different location,” illustrating that the organization is not limited to only one location in the United States.

[^ 46] For the definition of qualifying organization, see Subsection 1, Qualifying Organization [2 USCIS-PM L.7(D)(1)].

[^ 47] The term toll means that the beneficiary’s time in the United States will count neither towards nor against the 1-year foreign employment requirement.

Chapter 7 - Filing

A. General

USCIS requires a petitioning employer to file a Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) with the required fee in order to classify a beneficiary as an L-1 nonimmigrant.^[1] Form I-129 must be filed in accordance with DHS regulations and the Form I-129 instructions.^[2] To properly submit an L-1 petition on Form I-129, the petitioner should designate the filing as either a:

- Petition for a nonimmigrant worker; or
- Nonimmigrant petition based on blanket petition.

When petitioning USCIS to classify the beneficiary as an L-1 nonimmigrant either individually or under an approved blanket petition, the petitioner must file Form I-129 with USCIS at the proper filing location, with the correct fee and signature.^[3] This petition must be filed with the service center that has jurisdiction over L-1 petitions in the geographic area of intended employment.^[4]

Nonimmigrant Petition Based on Blanket Petition

If a currently valid L-1 blanket approval is in place,^[5] a petitioner may seek to classify the beneficiary as an L-1 nonimmigrant under the approved L-1 blanket petition (but may also file a regular individual L petition for the beneficiary). This is done by filing the Nonimmigrant Petition Based on Blanket L

Petition (Form I-129S) either with USCIS at the service center that approved the L-1 blanket petition, with the U.S. Department of State (DOS) at a U.S. embassy or consulate abroad, or with U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) at a port-of-entry.

In most cases, the L-1 beneficiary submits the Form I-129S to DOS when applying for an L-1 visa at a U.S. embassy or consulate. If the beneficiary is exempt from the visa requirement, the petitioner may file the Form I-129S with USCIS at the proper filing location.^[6]

When the temporary employment will be in different locations, the state or territory where the petitioning company or organization's primary office is located determines the appropriate service center to send the Form I-129S package, regardless of where in the United States the various worksites are located.^[7]

The filing location for a petition seeking an extension of stay may be different from the location for a petition requesting original classification.

Time of Filing

A petitioner may not file the L-1 petition with USCIS more than 6 months before the beneficiary's start date. The petitioner indicates the start date on the Form I-129. In general, USCIS should process L petitions within 30 days of receipt.^[8] The petitioner must fulfill all eligibility requirements as of the filing date of the petition.^[9]

B. Fees

The appropriate filing fees must accompany an L-1 petition. In addition to the base filing fee, there are additional fees imposed by statute.

Base Filing Fee

There is a base filing fee for petitions filed on a Form I-129. There is no base filing fee for a Form I-129S. USCIS posts current fee information on the Filing Fees webpage.

Fraud Prevention and Detection Fee

In addition to the base filing fee, the L-1 petitioner must pay a Fraud Prevention and Detection Fee of $500 when:

- The petition is for an initial grant of L-1 classification for the beneficiary;
- The petition is for a change of status to L-1 classification; or
- The petition is to obtain authorization for an L-1 beneficiary to change employers.^[10]

If one of the above scenarios applies, the petitioner must pay the fee regardless of the type of petition filed or where or with which agency it is filed.

If the beneficiary is changing status from H-1B with the same employer, the $500 fraud fee is required because such a change is considered an initial grant of L-1 classification.

Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2016

On December 18, 2015, the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2016 (referred to as Public Law 114-113) became law.^[11] Public Law 114-113 imposes an additional fee of $4,500 for certain L-1A and L-1B petitions beyond the base fee, Fraud Prevention and Detection Fee, as well as any premium processing fee, if applicable. This Public Law 114-113 fee is in effect until September 30, 2027.

A nonimmigrant petition for L-1 status postmarked on or after December 18, 2015, through September 30, 2027, must include this fee if the petition requests:

- An initial grant of L-1A or L-1B status or authorization to change employers; and
- The petitioner employs 50 or more employees in the United States, and more than 50 percent of those employees are in H-1B or L-1 status.

USCIS requires this fee when the petitioner requests a change of status from H-1B to an initial grant of L-1 for the same beneficiary to perform essentially the same job.

All the petitioner's employees in the United States should be counted when determining whether it is subject to the Public Law 114-113 fee. If a petitioner claims exemption from this fee based on a combination of employees within a controlled group of corporations, a Request for Evidence may be appropriate to request clarification about the number of the petitioner's employees in the United States.

When determining the total number of employees in the United States for the purpose of the Public Law 114-113 fee, petitioners should not include:

- Employees from partnerships, proprietorships (or others), which are under common control;
- Employees from affiliated service groups; and
- Leased employees.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(1).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(1). In addition, see the Direct Filing Addresses for Form I-129, Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker webpage.

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 103.2.

[^ 4] See the Direct Filing Addresses for Form I-129, Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker webpage. Canadian L-1 beneficiaries seeking admission under the blanket petition L process have the option of applying for L-1 classification in conjunction with their application for L-1 admission to the United States. In these cases, the beneficiary presents the signed petition, fees, and supporting documentation to a CBP officer at certain ports-of-entry (POEs) on the United States-Canada land border or at a U.S. pre-clearance or pre-flight inspection station in Canada (pre-flight station).

[^ 5] Once a petitioner meets the filing requirements for L-1 blanket petitions and USCIS determines there are qualifying entities, USCIS prepares a list of all qualifying entities. USCIS sends the list with the approval notice for the petition. The approval notice means that it is permissible for any of the qualifying entities to petition to transfer an employee from any approved foreign entity to any approved U.S. entity.

[^ 6] Canadian L-1 beneficiaries have the option of applying for L-1 classification under the approved blanket in conjunction with an application for L-1 admission to the United States. In these cases, the beneficiary presents the signed Form I-129, applicable fees, and supporting documentation to a CBP officer at certain POEs or certain pre-flight inspection stations.

[^ 7] For example, if the beneficiary will work in Arizona and Texas, and the petitioning company's primary office is in New York, then USCIS treats New York as the workplace for filing location purposes. If the beneficiary will work in Florida and Georgia, and the petitioning company's primary office is in California, then USCIS treats California as the workplace for filing purposes. USCIS requires the petitioner to provide certain evidence if an L-1B beneficiary is to be stationed in the United States primarily at a worksite outside that of the petitioner (or its parent, branches, affiliates, or subsidiaries). The offsite placement must be in connection with an exchange of products or services between the petitioning company and the unaffiliated company for which specialized knowledge specific to the petitioning company is required.

[^ 8] See INA 214(c)(2)(C). See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(7)(i).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(1) and 8 CFR 103.2(b)(12).

[^ 10] See INA 214(c)(12)(A).

[^ 11] See Pub. L. 114-113 (PDF) (December 18, 2015).

Eligibility at Time of Filing

USCIS regulations affirmatively require a petitioner to establish eligibility for the benefit sought at the time the petitioner files the petition.^[1] A petition may not be approved based on speculation of future eligibility or after the petitioner or beneficiary becomes eligible under a new set of facts.^[2]

Named Beneficiary

The petitioner must name the beneficiary of an L-1 petition on the petition.

Multiple Beneficiaries on a Petition Not Permitted

A petitioner may not file for multiple beneficiaries on an L-1 petition. USCIS permits only one beneficiary on an L-1 petition.

Signature

An authorized signatory of the petitioner must sign the petition.^[3] USCIS may deny an L-1 petition for failing to establish eligibility for the benefit sought if the petition was accepted as signed, but it was not signed by an authorized signatory.

Burden of Proof^[4]

It is the petitioner's burden to provide the documentation required to establish eligibility for L classification. The regulations do not require submission of extensive evidence of business relationships or of the beneficiary's prior and proposed employment. In some cases, completion of the items on the petition and supplementary explanations by an authorized official of the petitioning company may be sufficient. In doubtful or marginal cases, officers may require other appropriate evidence which they deem necessary to establish eligibility in a particular case.

Amended Petition

An amended petition requires the same base filing fee, if applicable, as a new petition. USCIS may not require certain additional fees. Because the amended petition supplements the original petition, USCIS does not require duplicate documents submitted with the original filing. However, a petitioner must provide evidence addressing the change that led to the filing of the amended petition. Changes requiring amended petitions include:

- Changes in approved relationships;
- Additional qualifying organizations under a blanket petition;
- Change in capacity of employment (for example, from specialized knowledge position to a managerial or executive position); or

- Any information that would affect the beneficiary's eligibility under INA 101(a)(15)(L).^[5]

A. Evidence for Beneficiary (Non-New Office)

When seeking L-1 classification on behalf of a beneficiary, the petitioner must submit the following:

- Evidence that the petitioner is a qualifying organization. If the petitioner is included on an L-1 blanket approval, then the petitioner must submit evidence that the approved blanket petition included this evidence and meets this requirement. If there is no L-1 blanket approval, the petitioner must provide the following evidence to demonstrate that it is a qualifying organization:
 - Evidence that the petitioner is a U.S. or foreign firm, corporation, or other legal entity;
 - Evidence that the petitioner is a parent, branch, affiliate, or subsidiary;
 - Evidence that the petitioner is doing business as an employer in the United States and at least one other country directly or through a parent, branch, affiliate, or subsidiary and will be doing such business for the duration of the beneficiary's stay in the United States as an L-1 nonimmigrant;
 - Evidence that the beneficiary's prospective L-1 employment in the United States will be primarily in a managerial or executive capacity, or will involve specialized knowledge; and
 - Evidence that the beneficiary was employed abroad by the petitioner, or its parent, branch, affiliate, or subsidiary, on a full-time basis for at least 1 of the last 3 years in a managerial, executive, or specialized knowledge capacity.^[6] The company does not have to transfer the beneficiary to the United States in the same capacity in which the beneficiary was employed abroad. For example, a company may transfer a manager abroad to the United States as an L-1 beneficiary to work in a position that primarily involves specialized knowledge.^[7]

Evidence of Doing Business

Primary documentary evidence of an organization's business activities includes, but is not limited to:

- Annual reports, containing audited or reviewed financial statements;
- Audited financial statements;
- Reviewed financial statements; and
- Federal tax returns.

However, the petitioner may submit a variety of documents to establish that the U.S. and foreign organizations are doing business. For example, a petitioner may submit a letter that describes the nature and level of business activity conducted by the organization. If requesting a beneficiary to perform duties that are primarily managerial or executive in nature, the petitioner may provide a statement that clearly describes the organization's manner of doing business, such as:

- The business activities in which the employing organization engages.
- How the beneficiary's position is, or was, related to the organization's strategic or operational goals.
- The records may also contain various documents as evidence of the organizations' business activities. The documentary evidence the petitioner submitted should corroborate the petitioner's statements. Depending on the totality of the evidence, a descriptive letter may meet the petitioner's burden of proof.

Annual Reports

All publicly traded corporations in the United States publish annual reports. Many foreign organizations also publish annual reports. Annual reports provide information describing the organization's:

- Products and services;
- Management and personnel structure;
- Ownership and control;
- Subsidiaries, affiliates, joint ventures, and branch offices; and
- Current and long-term objectives.

In addition, annual reports should include audited or reviewed financial statements for the past year.

Federal Tax Returns

In general, organizations conducting business in the United States must file federal tax returns each year. Federal tax returns are designed to present information in a manner that is similar to the income statement and balance sheet format.

Internal Revenue Service (IRS) Tax Returns: Form Numbers and Corresponding Information Provided

If organization is a...	Tax return is Form...	Tax return provides a modified income statement	Tax return provides a modified balance sheet

If organization is a...	Tax return is Form...	Tax return provides a modified income statement	Tax return provides a modified balance sheet
Corporation	1120 or 1120EZ	X	X
S Corporation	1120S or 1120EZ	X	X
Partnership	1065	X	X
Sole Proprietorship	1040, with Schedule C	X
Non-Profit	990 or 990EZ	X	X
Limited Liability Company (LLC)	1120 or 1065 (may be 1040 with Schedule C for a single member LLC owned by a person)	X

Foreign Tax Documentation

Officers should consider the following regarding foreign tax documentation:

- The petitioner may provide copies of foreign tax returns as evidence of the business activities of the foreign entity;
- Canada and most Western European countries require tax returns that are very similar to the United States' tax returns and are usually credible; and
- Many other countries rely on hand-written tax returns and receipts that are less reliable.

Calendar or Fiscal Year

Organizations publish annual reports and financial statements, and file tax returns based on either a calendar or fiscal year.

Annual Reporting Timelines

If reporting year is a...	Then the year starts on...	And ends on...
Calendar year	January 1st	December 31st
Fiscal Year	The 1st day of any month other than January	The last day of any month other than December

Change of Year for Tax Purposes

An organization cannot change its year for tax purposes (for example, from a fiscal year to a calendar year) without permission from the IRS. Tax returns for consecutive years that have different reporting years may be an indication that the documents are fraudulent. In addition, the ending balances on the balance sheet for 1 year should match the beginning balances for the next year.

B. Evidence for Beneficiary (New Office)

Officers may grant an otherwise eligible petitioner a request for classification as a new office in cases where an established company opens a new office in a new location in the United States, provided it meets the definition of a new office.^[8] The petition must clearly indicate that the petitioner is requesting adjudication under the new office provisions and explain how the new office meets the applicable requirements discussed below.^[9] A petition submitted for what would otherwise appear to be a new office, but that does not contain this request, may be adjudicated under the same standards and requirements applicable to a typical (non-new office) petition.

Special Consideration: L-1A New Office Petitions

The L-1A new office petitioner must establish that the intended operation, within 1 year of petition approval, will support an executive or managerial position.^[10] Therefore, the petitioner must provide information regarding:

- The proposed nature of the office describing the scope of the entity as well as its organizational structure and financial goals;
- The size of the U.S. investment and the financial ability of the foreign entity to remunerate the beneficiary; and
- The organizational structure of the foreign entity.

If coming to the United States to fill a managerial or executive capacity role, the beneficiary's qualifying experience abroad must have been in a managerial or executive capacity.^[11] Unlike other L-1 petitions, eligibility for L-1A new office approval may not be established through qualifying experience involving specialized knowledge.^[12]

A manager or executive who is required to open a new business or office may be more actively involved in day-to-day operations during the initial phases of the business, but the manager or executive must also have authority and intent to hire staff and have wide latitude in making decisions about the goals and management of the organization.

In addition, the petitioner must demonstrate that sufficient physical premises to house the new office have been secured.^[13]

Special Consideration: L-1B New Office Petitions

If the U.S. entity has been doing business for 1 year or less, the beneficiary, as is the case of other L-1B beneficiaries, must have specialized knowledge. Additionally, the petitioner must demonstrate that sufficient physical premises to house the new office have been secured and that it has the financial ability to remunerate the beneficiary and to commence doing business in the United States.^[14]

Extension of L-1 New Office Petitions

The initial approval of a new office individual petition is limited to a period not to exceed 1 year.^[15] After the first year, the validity of the new office petition may be extended for the same beneficiary for a period of up to 2 years. Extension of the new office petition requires that the petitioner provide the following:^[16]

- Evidence that the United States and foreign entities are still qualifying organizations;^[17]
- Evidence that the United States entity has been doing business;^[18]
- A statement of the duties performed by the beneficiary for the previous year and the duties the beneficiary will perform under the extended petition;
- A statement describing the staffing of the new operation, including the number of employees and types of positions held accompanied by evidence of wages paid to employees when the beneficiary will be employed in a managerial or executive capacity; and
- Evidence of the financial status of the U.S. operation. As an example, evidence may include, but is not limited to, evidence of capitalization of the company or evidence of financial resources committed by the foreign company, articles of incorporation, by-laws, minutes of board of directors' meetings, corporate bank statements, profit and loss statements or other accountant's reports, or tax returns.

Following approval of the initial extension of a new office petition, the petitioner is no longer subject to the new office extension provisions; any future extension filing is treated as a regular individual L extension.^[19]

C. Special Considerations

Attestations for L-1A

Petitions

An attestation that foreign staff will support a position in the United States without supporting evidence generally is not enough to demonstrate eligibility. It is the petitioner's burden to meet the preponderance of the evidence standard. Types of evidence submitted include, but are not limited to:

- Organizational charts (U.S. and foreign);
- A roster of employees;
- Position descriptions;
- Payroll records with job titles of the staff supporting the U.S. entity; and
- Invoices for services provided by the foreign entity to U.S. entity, other accounting records between the entities (or both).

A petitioner may submit any evidence it believes will prove its case, and officers must consider the totality of all the evidence submitted.^[20]

Evidence Related to Managerial or Executive Positions for L-1A Petitions

The employing organization must be doing business in a manner that would require the beneficiary to perform duties that are primarily managerial or executive in nature. The petitioner may provide a statement that clearly describes:

- The business activities in which the employing organization engages; and
- How the beneficiary's position relates to organization's strategic or operational goals.

The record may also contain various documents as evidence of the organizations' business activities. The documentary evidence submitted should corroborate the petitioner's statements.

To make an accurate determination of the eligibility of the beneficiary's position, either in or outside the United States, the petitioner must provide a description of the beneficiary's duties placed in the context of:

- The personnel structure of the organization; and

- The nature and scope of the business that it conducts.

Where an organization employs only a few people yet claims that the majority of its employees are primarily engaged as managers or executives, officers may request complete position descriptions and hourly breakdowns for the duties performed by all of the people employed by the organization, including one for the beneficiary, as well as copies of corroborative payroll documentation.

Officers may use the position descriptions and payroll documentation to determine who is performing the non-qualifying, operational duties of the business. The entity may be substantial in size, but the department or division where the beneficiary is, or will be, employed may be top-heavy with managers and executives. If the employer is a large organization, officers should limit detailed staffing inquiries to the department or division where the beneficiary has been or will be employed.

On the other hand, the evidence may indicate that the business employs only one or two people, including the beneficiary. In such cases, officers may find it helpful to try to determine who is performing the non-managerial operational duties of the business. The business may not directly employ people to perform the non-managerial services of the business. Instead, the business may contract out some of its functions such as accounting, sales, warehousing, and personnel.

When evaluating the nature of a claimed managerial or executive position, the officer must review the petition and supporting evidence to establish that the beneficiary's employment qualifies for L-1 purposes.

The evidence must demonstrate the employer's business activities in a manner that allows for a clear understanding of the products and services that it provides, and how the beneficiary's position fits into its organizational hierarchy.

A petitioner may not claim to employ a beneficiary as a hybrid executive-manager and rely on partial sections of the two statutory definitions. If the petitioner chooses to represent the beneficiary as both an executive and a manager, it must still establish that the beneficiary is engaged in duties that are primarily either managerial or executive and that the beneficiary meets all four criteria of that definition.

L-1B Petitions

Officers can perform their adjudicatory function most effectively when the petitioner explains in detail the specific nature of the industry or field involved, the nature of the petitioning organization's products or services, the nature of the specialized knowledge required to perform the beneficiary's duties, and the need for the beneficiary's specialized knowledge. To show that the offered position in the United States involves specialized knowledge, the petitioner must submit a detailed description of the services to be performed.^[21]

A petitioner's statement may be persuasive evidence if detailed, specific, and credible. Officers may, in appropriate cases, however, request further evidence to support a petitioner's statement, bearing in mind that there may be cases involving circumstances that may be difficult to document other than through a petitioner's own statement.

The petitioner must also submit evidence that the beneficiary's prior education, training, and employment qualifies the beneficiary to perform the intended services in the United States.^[22] While the petitioner is required in all cases to compare the beneficiary's knowledge to that of others, the petitioner may also be able to demonstrate the nature of the claimed specialized knowledge by, among other things, indicating how and when the beneficiary gained such knowledge or explaining the difficulty of imparting such knowledge to others without significant cost or disruption to its business.

Other evidence that a petitioner may submit to demonstrate that a person's knowledge is special or advanced, includes, but is not limited to:

- Documentation of training, work experience, or education establishing the number of years the beneficiary has been using or developing the claimed specialized knowledge as an employee of the petitioning organization or in the industry;
- Evidence of the impact, if any, the transfer of the beneficiary would have on the petitioning organization's U.S. operations;
- Evidence that the beneficiary is qualified to contribute significantly to the U.S. operation's knowledge of foreign operating conditions as a result of knowledge not generally found in the petitioning organization's U.S. operations;
- Contracts, statements of work, or other documentation that shows that the beneficiary possesses knowledge that is particularly beneficial to the petitioning organization's competitiveness in the marketplace;
- Evidence, such as correspondence or reports, establishing that the beneficiary has been employed abroad in a capacity involving assignments that have significantly enhanced the petitioning organization's productivity, competitiveness, image, or financial position;
- Personnel or in-house training records that establish that the beneficiary gained the claimed specialized knowledge through prior experience or training with the petitioning organization;
- Curricula and training manuals for internal training courses, financial documents, or other evidence that may demonstrate that the beneficiary possesses knowledge of a product or process that the organization cannot transfer or teach to another person without significant economic cost or inconvenience;

- Evidence of patents, trademarks, licenses, or contracts awarded to the petitioning organization based on the beneficiary's work, or similar evidence that the beneficiary has knowledge of a process or a product that either is sophisticated or complex, or of a highly technical nature, although not necessarily proprietary or unique to the petitioning organization; and
- Payroll documents, federal, state, or other governmental wage statements, documentation of other forms of compensation, resumés, organizational charts, or similar evidence documenting the positions held and the compensation provided to the beneficiary and parallel employees in the petitioning organization.

Knowledge that is commonly held, lacking in complexity, or easily imparted to others is not specialized knowledge. A petitioner may submit any other evidence it chooses. In all cases, USCIS reviews the entire record to determine whether the petitioner has established, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the beneficiary has specialized knowledge under the totality of the circumstances, in accordance with the standards set forth in the relevant statutes and regulations.

Merely stating that a beneficiary's knowledge is somehow different from others or greatly developed does not, in and of itself, establish that the beneficiary possesses specialized knowledge. Ultimately, it is the weight and type of evidence that establishes whether the beneficiary possesses specialized knowledge.

L-1 Blanket Petitions

A petitioner may seek continuing approval of itself and some or all its parent, branches, subsidiaries, and affiliates as qualifying organizations by filing an L-1 blanket petition. A blanket petition is not filed on behalf of a beneficiary, but, rather, to obtain preapproval of related entities. In support of a blanket petition, the petitioner must submit evidence:

- That each of the entities included in the requested list of entities are engaged in commercial trade or services;
- That the petitioning organization has an office in the United States that has been doing business for 1 year or more;
- That the petitioning organization has three or more domestic and foreign branches, subsidiaries, or affiliates;
- That the petitioner and the other qualifying organizations have:
 - Obtained approval of petitions for at least 10 "L" managers, executives, or specialized knowledge workers during the previous 12 months;
 - U.S. subsidiaries or affiliates with combined annual sales of at least $25 million; or

- A U.S. workforce of at least 1,000 employees;^[23]
- That each entity is doing business; and
- Of the ownership and control of all the entities as USCIS can only approve those entities meeting the definition of a qualifying organization.

The petitioner should list all the foreign entities and all the U.S. entities for which it seeks blanket preapproval.^[24]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(1).

[^ 2] See Matter of Michelin Tire Corp. (PDF), 17 I&N Dec. 248 (Reg. Comm. 1978). See Matter of Katigbak (PDF), 14 I&N Dec. 45, 49 (Reg. Comm. 1971).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(2). See Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part B, Submission of Benefit Requests, Chapter 2, Signatures [1 USCIS-PM B.2].

[^ 4] The burden of evidence is a preponderance, which means it is more likely than not. See INS v. Cardoza-Fonseca (PDF), 480 U.S. 421 (1987) (defining more likely than not as a greater than 50 percent probability of something occurring). See Matter of Chawathe (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 369, 376 (AAO 2010) (citing Matter of E-M (PDF)-, 20 I&N Dec. 77, 79-80 (Comm. 1989)). See Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications, Chapter 4, Burden and Standards of Proof [1 USCIS-PM E.4].

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(7)(i)(C).

[^ 6] For more information on the 1-year foreign employment requirement, see Chapter 6, Key Concepts, Section G, One-Year Foreign Employment Requirement [2 USCIS-PM L.6(G)].

[^ 7] See Matter of Vaillancourt (PDF), 13 I&N Dec. 654 (Reg. Comm. 1970).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(F). For the definition of new office, see Chapter 6, Key Concepts, Section F, New Office [2 USCIS-PM L.6(F)].

[^ 9] Ideally, this should include an affirmative response to the corresponding question on the Petition for Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129). However, if no response is given, but it is clear to the officer based on the materials submitted that the petitioner seeks approval for a new office, the officer may proceed accordingly.

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(3)(v)(C).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(3)(v)(B).

[^ 12] In contrast to the L-1A new office beneficiary, a beneficiary of an L-1B new office petition may qualify for such classification through employment in a managerial, executive, or specialized knowledge capacity.

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(3)(v)(A).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(3)(vi).

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(7)(i)(A)(3).

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(14)(ii).

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(G).

[^ 18] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(H).

[^ 19] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(14)(i).

[^ 20] Matter of Z-A-, Inc. (PDF, 162.89 KB), Adopted Decision 2016-02 (AAO Apr. 14, 2016), does not change the fact that it is the petitioner's burden to demonstrate by a preponderance of evidence standard that the duties of the beneficiary's position will be primarily managerial in nature.

[^ 21] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(3)(ii).

[^ 22] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(3)(iv).

[^ 23] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(4)(i).

[^ 24] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(4)(iv)(B) and 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(G).

Chapter 9 - Adjudication

A. General Issues

Officers must carefully review each petition for an L-1 intracompany transferee to ensure compliance with the intent of the L-1 category to allow foreign businesses to transfer certain employees to their U.S. operations. Unless specifically provided otherwise, officers should apply a preponderance of the evidence standard when evaluating eligibility for the benefit sought.^[1] It is the petitioner's burden to prove eligibility for the benefit sought.^[2]

B. Evaluating Primary Evidence

There are various categories of evidence routinely submitted to document an organization's business activities. The submission of what USCIS considers to be credible evidence is not equivalent to meeting the eligibility criteria. In other words, the petitioner may submit a tax return and it may be considered credible evidence, but the information provided on the tax return may fail to establish that the eligibility requirement has been met.

Primary evidence of an organization's business activities should corroborate the statements made in the petitioner's letter. In the instance where documentation conflicts with the petitioner's statements, the officer should request further clarification, along with corroborative documentary evidence.

Requests for Evidence

A Request for Evidence (RFE) may be appropriate when the initial review of the record does not establish that the petitioner has met all the eligibility requirements.^[3] In addition, an RFE^[4] should be sent where:

- The record contains evidence of material fraud or misrepresentation; or
- The officer has knowledge of previous mala fide petitions from the same petitioner.

The RFE should:

- Identify each of the areas of eligibility the petitioner has not met;
- Discuss what is deficient with any evidence already provided; and
- Provide examples of evidence that the petitioner could provide to meet the area of eligibility.

C. Special Adjudicative Issues

1. Iran Sanctions

Executive Order 12959^[5] imposed economic sanctions against Iran that prohibit, among other things, the importation of Iranian services where the noncitizen is performing such service as an agent, employee, or contractor of the Iranian government or a business or other organization in Iran. However, a Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) for an Iranian citizen may be approved if the Iranian is:

- Not normally a resident of Iran; and
- Not working in a way connected to:
 - The Iranian government (excluding diplomatic and consular services);
 - An Iranian business;

- An Iranian organization; or
- Any person located in Iran.^[6]

2. USMCA (formerly NAFTA) Petitions

Petitions filed pursuant to the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) were forwarded, and U.S.-Mexico-Canada Agreement (USMCA) L-1 petitions from ports of entry (POEs) continue to be forwarded, from U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) to USCIS.^[7] These petitions have already been adjudicated, all the information on the petitions (including the approval stamp) has been completed, and the beneficiaries have already entered the country.^[8]

The U.S.-Mexico-Canada Agreement

USMCA is a trade agreement between the three countries named in the agreement and replaces NAFTA. The USMCA entered into force on July 1, 2020.^[9] The USMCA does not make any changes to the immigration chapter of NAFTA. Even though the USMCA replaces NAFTA, the USMCA retains all substantive elements of the former NAFTA, as well as all other classifications.^[10]

D. Decision

1. Approvals

An approval is appropriate if the necessary supporting documents are present, and the petition appears to be approvable in all respects. The initial approval period is up to 3 years, except that, if the petitioner is a new office, the approval period is limited to 1 year.^[11]

A blanket petition may be approved for an initial period of 3 years and may be extended indefinitely afterwards if the qualifying organizations have complied with the program requirements.^[12]

Extensions of stay are granted in 2-year increments. The dates of employment (admission and extension periods), however, must be within the statutory limits for the L nonimmigrant classification: 7 years for executive and managerial employment (L-1A nonimmigrants), and 5 years for specialized knowledge (L-1B nonimmigrants).

2. Revocations

USCIS may revoke a petition at any time, even after the expiration of a petition.^[13] USCIS must send the petitioner a notice of intent to revoke the petition based on one or more of the following grounds of revocation:

- One or more entities are no longer qualifying organizations;

- The beneficiary is no longer eligible under INA 101(a)(15)(L);
- A qualifying organization violated the requirements of INA 101(a)(15)(L) and 8 CFR 214.2(l);
- The statement of facts contained in the petition was not true and correct;
- Approval of the petition involved gross error;^[14] or
- None of the qualifying organizations in a blanket petition have used the blanket petition procedure for 3 consecutive years.^[15]

USCIS must consider all relevant evidence in deciding whether to revoke the petition.^[16]

3. Denials

Notice of Intent to Deny

When an adverse decision is proposed based on the evidence submitted by the petitioner, USCIS may notify the petitioner of the intent to deny the petition and the basis for the denial.^[17] In that situation, the notice of intent to deny (NOID) specifies the basis for the proposed denial sufficient to give the petitioner adequate notice and sufficient information to respond, and the maximum response time provided cannot exceed 30 days.^[18]

When an adverse decision is based on derogatory information considered by USCIS and of which the petitioner is unaware, USCIS must notify the petitioner of the intent to deny the petition and the basis for the denial.^[19] USCIS provides 30 days from the date of the notice of intent to deny (NOID) for the petitioner to inspect and rebut the derogatory evidence.^[20] Any explanation, rebuttal, or information presented by or on behalf of the petitioner shall be included in the record of proceeding.^[21]

The NOID should contain:

- A statement that identifies the specific areas of eligibility that the petitioner does not appear to have met;
- A description of the specific reasons for the determination that the areas of eligibility have not been met; and
- A discussion of the most persuasive evidence the petitioner could submit to overcome the reasons for denial.

Denial Notices

If USCIS denies the petition, USCIS provides a notice that includes the reasons for denial and any rights to appeal the denial.^[22]

The denial order should discuss all areas of eligibility not met by the petitioner and include a description of the reason or reasons for the determination.

In cases involving an extension of stay or change of status request, USCIS may find the nonimmigrant petition warrants approval, but the evidence of record reveals that the beneficiary is ineligible to extend or change their nonimmigrant status. In these instances, a separate denial notice must be prepared that addresses the ineligibility of the beneficiary for the requested change or extension of stay.^[23]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INS v. Cardoza-Fonseca (PDF), 480 U.S. 421 (1987) (defining more likely than not as a greater than 50 percent probability of something occurring). See Matter of Chawathe (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 369, 376 (AAO 2010) (citing Matter of E-M- (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 77, 79-80 (Comm. 1989)).

[^ 2] See Matter of Brantigan (PDF), 11 I&N Dec. 493 (BIA 1966).

[^ 3] For a full discussion on RFEs, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications, Chapter 6, Evidence, Section F, Requests for Evidence and Notices of Intent to Deny [1 USCIS-PM E.6(F)].

[^ 4] Officers may issue a Notice of Intent to Deny (NOID) consistent with USCIS guidance.

[^ 5] See Prohibiting Certain Transactions with Respect to Iran (PDF), 60 FR 24757 (May 6, 1995).

[^ 6] See 31 CFR 560.306(d).

[^ 7] Filing of L-1 petitions for Canadian citizens under NAFTA may be made at a class A POE located on the United States-Canada land border or United States pre-flight station in Canada. See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(17)(ii).

[^ 8] From April 30, 2018 to April 30, 2020, the California Service Center and the CBP Blaine, Washington POE participated in a joint agency pilot program for Canadian citizens seeking L-1 nonimmigrant status under NAFTA.

[^ 9] See the United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement Implementation Act, Pub. L. 116-113 (PDF) (January 29, 2020).

[^ 10] For example, the TN designation continues to be used for NAFTA-USMCA professionals. TN admissions under NAFTA were governed by the list of professionals in Appendix 1603.D.1 to Annex 1603 of NAFTA. Under the USMCA, TN admissions are governed by the (identical) list of professionals in USMCA, Chapter 16, Appendix 2.

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(7)(i)(A).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(7)(i)(B).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(9)(i).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(9)(iii)(A).

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(9)(iii)(A).

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(9)(iii)(B).

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(8)(iii) (explaining that USCIS may deny the petition, issue an RFE, or notify the petitioner of the intent to deny). For more information, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications, Chapter 9, Rendering a Decision, Section B, Denials [1 USCIS-PM E.9(B)].

[^ 18] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(8)(iv).

[^ 19] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(16)(i).

[^ 20] Plus 3 days if by mail. See 8 CFR 103.8(b).

[^ 21] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(9)(iii)(B).

[^ 22] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(8)(ii).

[^ 23] There is no appeal from the denial of an application for extension of stay. See 8 CFR 214.1(c)(5).

Chapter 10 - Period of Stay

A. Limitations on Periods of Stay

A beneficiary who has spent the maximum period of 5 years in the United States in a specialized knowledge capacity or 7 years in the United States in a managerial or executive capacity, or as a temporary worker (H nonimmigrant) or intracompany transferee (L nonimmigrant),^[1] may not be readmitted to the United States as a temporary worker or intracompany transferee, and USCIS may not approve a new individual petition for such classification, unless and until the beneficiary has resided and been physically present outside the United States for the immediate prior year.^[2] Brief trips to the United States for business or pleasure do not interrupt the required 1 year outside the United States, but do not count towards fulfillment of that requirement.^[3]

The limitations on periods of stay do not apply to beneficiaries:

- Who do not reside continually in the United States; and
- Whose employment in the United States is seasonal, intermittent, or consists of an aggregate of 6 months or less per year.^[4]

In addition, the limitations do not apply to beneficiaries who reside abroad and regularly commute to the United States to engage in part-time employment. The burden is on the petitioner and the beneficiary to establish that the beneficiary qualifies for an exception.^[5]

Maximum Periods of Stay

If Classification is ...	The Maximum Period of Stay is ...
Manager or executive (L-1A nonimmigrant)	7 years
Specialized knowledge (L-1B nonimmigrant)	5 years
L-1 blanket petition	3 years for initial petition, with an extension for an indefinite period possible

B. Extensions of Stay

Extensions can be granted in up to 2-year increments until the maximum period of stay is reached.^[6] Officers should combine periods of stay in the H and L categories in determining whether the beneficiary has reached the 5- or 7-year limitation, including periods of H or L stay for previous employers and not just the current employer.^[7]

An initial blanket petition is approvable for 3 years. Approving an amended blanket petition during this validity period does not affect a beneficiary's period of stay; the validity period end date of the amended petition remains the same as the end date of the original approval. Requests to extend a blanket petition on a Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) may be filed up to 6 months before the expiration of the initial 3-year validity period, and the petitioner may request that such validity be extended indefinitely. If USCIS approves the blanket petition extension, the validity period begins the day after the expiration of the initial approval and continues indefinitely. If the petitioner fails to file for an extension before the initial blanket petition's validity expires or if USCIS denies the extension request, the petitioner and its qualifying organizations must wait 3 years to file another blanket petition. In the interim, organizations must file individual petitions for beneficiaries.^[8]

If a petitioner is requesting an extension of the L-1 blanket petition, the petitioner must provide the following evidence:^[9]

- A list of the beneficiaries admitted under the blanket petition during the preceding 3 years, with the following information for each beneficiary:
 - Positions held during that period;
 - The employing entity; and
 - The dates of initial admission and final departure, if applicable, of each beneficiary;
- A statement from the petitioner indicating whether it still meets the blanket petition criteria; and
- Documentation to support any changes in approved relationships and additional qualifying organizations.

C. Change from Specialized Knowledge Capacity to Manager or Executive (or vice versa)

When a beneficiary is initially admitted to the United States in a specialized knowledge capacity and is later promoted to a managerial or executive position, the beneficiary must have been employed in the managerial or executive position for at least 6 months to be eligible for the total period of stay of 7 years.^[10]

If the 6-month rule is met, and the beneficiary qualifies as a manager or executive, then USCIS may approve the extension of stay request. However, if the beneficiary travels outside the United States and seeks readmission, the beneficiary must consular process and obtain the appropriate visa to be readmitted to the United States.

Extensions for managers or executives where the prior approval was limited to a short period could be an indicator that the beneficiary was not eligible to extend beyond the 5-year mark due to the regulatory requirement. The beneficiary must qualify to be classified as a manager or executive at the time of filing.^[11]

The change to managerial or executive capacity must have been approved by USCIS in an amended, new, or extended petition at the time that the change occurred.^[12]

D. Change of Status

In addition to all the requirements governing the L classification, change of status requests to the L classification from another nonimmigrant classification must establish that:

- The beneficiary entered the United States legally;

- The beneficiary has never worked in the United States illegally, or otherwise violated the terms of their visa or nonimmigrant status; and
- The expiration date on the beneficiary's I-94 has not passed.^[13]

Footnotes

[^ 1] Under INA 101(a)(15)(H) or INA 101(a)(15)(L).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(12)(i).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(12)(i).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(12)(ii).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(12)(ii).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(15).

[^ 7] For example, a beneficiary is present in the United States in L-1B nonimmigrant status for 3 years; the beneficiary was in H-1B nonimmigrant status for the 2-year period immediately preceding the change to L-1B status. The beneficiary is subject to the 5-year limit because the combined H and L stay in the United States is 5 years. As a result, the beneficiary cannot obtain an extension of L status.

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(4)(iii)(B).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(4)(iii)(A).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(15)(ii).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(15)(ii).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(15)(ii).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 248.1(b) for information on timely filing and maintenance of status, and circumstances when failure to file timely may be excused in the discretion of USCIS.

Part M - Nonimmigrants of Extraordinary Ability or Achievement (O)

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

The Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) and implementing regulations provide that certain employers or agents may petition in the O-1 visa category for nonimmigrants who have extraordinary ability in the sciences, arts, education, business, or athletics, which has been demonstrated by sustained national or international acclaim.^[1] The O-1 visa category may also include those who have demonstrated a record of extraordinary achievement in the motion picture and television industry.^[2]

The INA and implementing regulations also provide that certain employers or agents may petition for accompanying noncitizens (O-2 classification) who seek to enter the United States temporarily and solely for the purpose of accompanying and assisting in the artistic or athletic performance by the O-1 artist or athlete.^[3]

B. Background

The Immigration Act of 1990 added the O nonimmigrant classification, providing for the admission of persons of extraordinary ability.^[4] However, because of the passage of the Armed Forces Immigration Adjustment Act, implementation of certain O classification provisions were delayed until April 1, 1992.^[5] Before Congress enacted these laws, artists, athletes, and other performers were admitted under the H-1 (distinguished merit and ability), H-2, or B-1 visa categories.

C. Legal Authorities

- INA 101(a)(15)(O) - Definition of O nonimmigrant classification
- INA 101(a)(46) - Definition of extraordinary ability in the arts
- INA 214 - Admission of nonimmigrants
- 8 CFR 214.2(o) - Special requirements for admission, extension, and maintenance of status ("Aliens of extraordinary ability or achievement")

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(i).

[^ 2] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(i).

[^ 3] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(ii).

[^ 4] See Pub. L. 101-649 (PDF), 104 Stat. 4978 (November 29, 1990).

[^ 5] See Pub. L. 102-110 (PDF), 105 Stat. 555 (October 1, 1991).

Chapter 2 - Eligibility for O Classification

A. General

The O nonimmigrant classification allows the following noncitizens to enter the United States or change status from another nonimmigrant category:

- Nonimmigrants of extraordinary ability in the sciences, arts, education, business, or athletics (O-1 nonimmigrants);
- Nonimmigrants of extraordinary achievement in the motion picture or television industry (O-1 nonimmigrants); and
- Certain nonimmigrants accompanying and assisting an O-1 nonimmigrant (O-2 nonimmigrants).

B. Eligibility Requirements

In general, the beneficiary of a petition for O nonimmigrant classification must meet certain eligibility requirements, among others, as applicable:

O-1 Extraordinary Ability in Sciences, Education, Business, or Athletics (commonly referred to as O-1A)

- The beneficiary has extraordinary ability in the sciences, education, business, or athletics, which has been demonstrated by sustained national or international acclaim; and
- The beneficiary seeks to enter the United States to continue work in the area of extraordinary ability.^[1]

O-1 Extraordinary Ability in Arts (commonly referred to as O-1B (Arts))

- The beneficiary has extraordinary ability in the arts, which has been demonstrated by sustained national or international acclaim; and
- The beneficiary seeks to enter the United States to continue work in the area of extraordinary ability.^[2]

O-1 Extraordinary Achievement in Motion Picture or Television Industry (commonly referred to as O-1B (MPTV))

- The beneficiary has a demonstrated record of extraordinary achievement in motion picture or television productions; and

- The beneficiary seeks to enter the United States to continue work in the area of extraordinary achievement.^[3]

O-2 Accompanying Principal O-1 Beneficiary (Essential Support Personnel)

- The O-2 beneficiary seeks to enter the United States temporarily and solely for the purpose of accompanying and assisting in the artistic or athletic performance by an O-1 beneficiary who is admitted for a specific event or events;
- Is an integral part of such actual performance(s) or event(s);
- Has critical skills and experience with the O-1 beneficiary, which are not of a general nature and are not possessed by a U.S. worker; and
- Has a foreign residence which the O-2 has no intention of abandoning.

In cases involving a motion picture or television production, the O-2 beneficiary must also have skills and experience with the O-1 beneficiary that are not of a general nature and are critical either:

- Based on a pre-existing longstanding working relationship; or
- With respect to a specific production because significant production (including pre- and post-production work) will take place both inside and outside the United States and the continuing participation of the O-2 beneficiary is essential to the successful completion of the production.^[4]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(i). See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(1)(ii)(A)(1).

[^ 2] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(i). See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(1)(ii)(A)(1).

[^ 3] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(i). See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(1)(ii)(A)(2).

[^ 4] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(ii). See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(1)(ii)(B).

Chapter 3 - Petitioners

A. Eligible Petitioners

A U.S. employer may file an O-1 or O-2 Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129). A U.S. agent may also file such a petition when it involves workers who are traditionally self-employed or workers who use agents to arrange short-term employment on their behalf with numerous employers, and in cases where a foreign employer authorizes the agent to act in its behalf. A U.S. agent may be:

- The actual employer of the beneficiary;
- The representative of both the employer and the beneficiary; or
- A person or entity authorized by the employer to act for, or in place of, the employer as its agent.
[1]

An O beneficiary may not petition for himself or herself.^[2]

B. Petitioner Obligations

In the case of an O-1 or O-2 beneficiary whose employment terminates for reasons other than voluntary resignation, the employer whose offer of employment formed the basis of such nonimmigrant status and the petitioner (if different from the employer) are jointly and severally liable for the reasonable cost of return transportation of the beneficiary to his or her last place of residence prior to his or her entry into the United States.^[3]

A petitioner must immediately notify USCIS of any changes in the terms and conditions of employment of a beneficiary that may affect eligibility under INA 101(a)(15)(O) and 8 CFR 214.2(o). The petitioner should file an amended petition when the petitioner continues to employ the beneficiary. If the petitioner no longer employs the beneficiary, the petitioner must send a letter explaining the change(s) to the USCIS office that approved the petition.^[4]

C. Agents^[5]

A U.S. agent may file a petition in cases involving workers who are traditionally self-employed or workers who use agents to arrange short-term employment on their behalf with numerous employers, and in cases where a foreign employer authorizes the agent to act in its behalf. A U.S. agent may be:

- The actual employer of the beneficiary;
- The representative of both the employer and the beneficiary; or
- A person or entity authorized by the employer to act for, or in place of, the employer as its agent.
[6]

A petition filed by an agent is subject to several conditions. A petition involving multiple employers may be filed by a person or company in business as an agent that acts as an agent for both the employers and the beneficiary, if:

- The supporting documentation includes a complete itinerary of the event or events;
- The itinerary specifies the dates of each service or engagement, the names and addresses of the actual employers, and the names and addresses of the establishments, venues, or locations where the services will be performed;

- The contracts between the employers and the beneficiary are submitted; and
- The agent explains the terms and conditions of the employment and provides any required documentation.^[7]

An agent may be the actual employer of the beneficiary. In order to be eligible to file a petition on behalf of the beneficiary as his or her agent and on behalf of other (multiple) employers of the beneficiary, the petitioner must meet the conditions described above and establish that it is "in business as an agent" (as described below).

The regulations do not specify the evidence for establishing that the petitioner of multiple employers is "in business as an agent." Officers consider evidence that shows that it is more likely than not that the petitioner is in business as an agent for the series of events, services, or engagements that are the subject of the petition. The focus is on whether the petitioner can establish that it is authorized to act as an agent for the other employers for purposes of filing the petition. This means that the petitioner does not have to demonstrate that it normally serves as an agent outside the context of the petition.

The petitioner seeking to serve as an agent for the beneficiary or for other employers must establish that it is duly authorized to act as their agent. An officer may determine that this requirement has been satisfied if, for example, the petitioner presents a document signed by the beneficiary's other employer(s) that states that the petitioner is authorized to act in that employer's place as an agent for the limited purpose of filing the petition with USCIS.^[8]

Other examples of probative evidence that may demonstrate that the petitioner "is in business as an agent" may include:

- A statement confirming the relevant information (itinerary, names and addresses of the series of employers) signed by the petitioner and the series of employers;
- Other types of agency representation contracts;
- Fee arrangements; or
- Statements from the other employers regarding the nature of the petitioner's representation of the employers and beneficiary.

While evidence of compensation could help establish that the petitioner is in business as an agent, compensation is not a requirement to establish an agency. Again, the officer must evaluate each case based on the facts presented.

Assuming that the petition is approvable and the petitioner has established that it is authorized to act as an agent in order to file the petition on behalf of the other employers, the validity period should last for the duration of the qualifying events, not to exceed the maximum allowable validity period for the classification being sought.^[9] If the petition is approvable but the petitioner has not established that it is authorized by the other employers to file the petition on behalf of the other employers (including after responding to a Request for Evidence), the validity period should be limited to the qualifying events for which the petitioner will be directly employing the beneficiary. The validity period cannot exceed the maximum allowable validity period for the classification being sought.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(iv)(E).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(i).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(16).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(8)(i)(A).

[^ 5] Much of the USCIS policy relating to agents derives from USCIS Memorandum, PM HQ 70/6.2.18, HQ 70/6.2.19, “Requirements for Agents and Sponsors Filing as Petitioners for the O and P Visa Classifications (PDF, 790.07 KB),” issued on November 20, 2009.

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(iv)(E). For more information on agents, see the O Nonimmigrant Classifications: Question and Answers webpage.

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(iv)(B) and 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(iv)(E)(2). All O petitions must include contracts between the employers and the beneficiary. See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(iv)(E)(2).

[^ 8] No particular form or specific language is required to be submitted with a petition to establish agency. Officers should not issue Requests for Evidence requiring a particular form or specific language in the agency agreement, but should focus on whether the petitioning agent has shown that it has obtained authorization from the other employer(s) to file a petition on their behalf.

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(6)(iii) and 8 CFR 214.2(o)(12)(ii). See Chapter 9, Admission, Extension of Stay, Change of Status, and Change of Employer [2 USCIS-PM M.9].

Chapter 4 - O-1 Beneficiaries

A. Standard for Classification

In order to qualify as a person of “extraordinary ability” in the sciences, education, business, or athletics (commonly referred to as O-1A), or in arts (commonly referred to as O-1B (Arts)), a beneficiary must have “sustained national or international acclaim.”^[1] With regard to classification to work in motion picture and television productions (commonly referred to as O-1B (MPTV)), a beneficiary must have a demonstrated record of extraordinary achievement.^[2] In all cases, an O-1 beneficiary's achievements must have been recognized in the field through extensive documentation.^[3]

The regulations define "extraordinary ability" as applied to the O-1 classification as follows:

- In the field of science, education, business, or athletics: a level of expertise indicating that the person is one of the small percentage who have arisen to the very top of the field of endeavor.^[4]
- In the field of arts: distinction, defined as a high level of achievement in the field of arts, as evidenced by a degree of skill and recognition substantially above that ordinarily encountered to the extent that a person described as prominent is renowned, leading, or well-known in the field of arts.^[5]

"Extraordinary achievement" in reference to persons in the motion picture or television industry (including both performers and others) means a very high level of accomplishment in the motion picture or television industry, as evidenced by a degree of skill and recognition significantly above that ordinarily encountered to the extent that the person is recognized as outstanding, notable, or leading in the motion picture or television field.^[6]

Determining the Relevant Standard for Artists with Some Connection to MPTV

Some petitions may have elements of both O-1B (Arts) and O-1B (MPTV) classifications and it may not be clear which O-1B classification and definitional standard an officer should apply. For instance, if the beneficiary would be coming to the United States to work as an artist, but some of the artist's work will be in the motion picture or television industry, it might be unclear whether an officer should apply the requirements for O-1B (Arts) or O-1B (MPTV).^[7] In addition, as new forms of media productions, including various types of internet content, emerge, it can be more difficult for officers to determine which productions constitute motion picture or television productions.

Analysis of whether a production is within the motion picture or television industry is not limited to whether it will air on a television screen or in a movie theater, as the industry has grown to encompass some online content. While static web materials and self-produced video blogs and social media content generally do not fall into the MPTV category, USCIS considers streaming movies, web series, commercials, and other programs with formats that correspond to more traditional motion picture and television productions to generally fall within the MPTV industry's purview. This interpretation of whether a beneficiary is working on a motion picture or television production, and is therefore subject to the O-1B MPTV requirements, generally aligns with that of industry organizations.^[8] Accordingly, USCIS may properly consider work on such productions to fall under the O-1B (MPTV) classification.

USCIS interprets the eligibility requirements for O-1B (MPTV) to apply if the beneficiary will perform services for motion picture or television productions while in the United States regardless of other prospective services outside the MPTV industry.^[9] If, however, an artist's work or appearance on an MPTV production is incidental to their non-MPTV work as an artist, the O-1B (MPTV) classification may not be appropriate, and the person may instead seek classification under O-1B (Arts). For example, USCIS does not necessarily consider artists who will be interviewed or will otherwise appear discussing, demonstrating, or promoting their work as an artist in an MPTV production to be working in the MPTV industry.^[10] This interpretation reflects USCIS' longstanding practice, and is consistent with the statute, which includes more stringent consultation requirements for persons "seeking entry for a motion picture or television production," and describes eligibility for persons in this industry separately from those in the "arts," notwithstanding the artistic nature of their work.^[11]

USCIS generally does consider the people employed by the production company to conduct the interview, film the broadcasts, or otherwise perform as paid professionals, to be working in the MPTV industry. Similarly, USCIS considers persons such as hosts or judges cast in a reality-based production to be working in the MPTV industry whereas USCIS does not consider the contestants to be working in the MPTV industry.

B. Determining Eligibility for O-1 Classification

For an O-1 Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129), the officer must determine whether the beneficiary meets the relevant standard outlined in the statute and regulations."^[12] The regulations describe the various types of evidence the petitioner must submit in support of a petition for each type of O-1 beneficiary. In general, the petition must be accompanied by either evidence of receipt of (or in some categories nomination for) a qualifying award, or at least three alternate forms of evidence. However, an officer cannot make a favorable determination simply because the petitioner has submitted the forms of documentation described in the regulations.

As explained in the preamble to the final rule, the evidentiary requirements are not the standard for the classification, but are instead the mechanism for establishing whether the standard is met.^[13] Accordingly, the fact that the petitioner has produced evidence satisfying at least three evidentiary criteria does not necessarily establish that the beneficiary is eligible for the O-1 classification.^[14] Rather, USCIS must determine eligibility based on whether the totality of the evidence submitted demonstrates that the beneficiary meets the relevant standard.

More specifically, an officer first determines whether the petitioner has submitted evidence meeting the minimum number of criteria or submitted evidence that the beneficiary received a qualifying award (or nomination, if applicable). If the petitioner meets the evidentiary requirements, the officer must then consider all the evidence in the record in its totality to determine if the beneficiary is a person of extraordinary ability or achievement as defined in INA 101(a)(15)(O)(i) and 8 CFR 214.2(o).

Satisfying the Evidentiary Requirements

The analysis in this step is limited to determining whether the evidence submitted is comprised of either a qualifying award (or nomination, if applicable), or at least three of the applicable alternate criteria. In determining whether an evidentiary criterion is met, an officer should evaluate the evidence to determine if it falls within the parameters of the applicable regulation. While an officer should consider whether the submitted evidence meets the language of the regulations to determine whether a particular regulatory criterion has been met, no determination is made during this step as to whether or not the evidence is indicative that the beneficiary meets the applicable definitional standard for the classification.^[15]

Totality Determination

Providing required evidence does not, in itself, establish that the beneficiary meets the standard for classification as a person of extraordinary ability or extraordinary achievement. Accordingly, when the evidentiary requirements specified above are satisfied, an officer proceeds to evaluate the totality of all the evidence in the record to determine whether it establishes that the:

- O-1A beneficiary has sustained national or international acclaim and is one of the small percentage who have arisen to the very top of his or her field;^[16]
- O-1B (Arts) beneficiary has sustained national or international acclaim and has achieved distinction in the field of arts;^[17] or
- O-1B (MPTV) beneficiary has a record of extraordinary achievement in the motion picture and television industry such that he or she has a very high level of accomplishment in the motion picture or television industry evidenced by a degree of skill and recognition significantly above that ordinarily encountered to the extent that the person is recognized as outstanding, notable, or leading in the field.^[18]

If the officer determines that the petitioner has failed to meet these standards, the officer should articulate the specific reasons as to why the petitioner, by a preponderance of the evidence, has not demonstrated that the beneficiary is a person of extraordinary ability or achievement based on the relevant statutory and regulatory language.

C. O-1A Beneficiaries in Sciences, Education, Business, or Athletics

1. Establishing Eligibility

In support of an O-1A Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129), the petitioner must establish that the beneficiary:

- Has extraordinary ability in the sciences, education, business, or athletics, which has been demonstrated by sustained national or international acclaim;
- Has achievements that have been recognized in the field through extensive documentation; and
- Is coming to continue work in the area of extraordinary ability (but not necessarily that the particular duties to be performed require someone of such extraordinary ability).^[19]

2. Supporting Documentation

The supporting documentation for an O-1A petition must include evidence that the beneficiary has received a major internationally recognized award (such as the Nobel Prize) or at least three of the following forms of evidence:

- Documentation of the beneficiary's receipt of nationally or internationally recognized prizes or awards for excellence in the field of endeavor;
- Documentation of the beneficiary's membership in associations in the field for which classification is sought, which require outstanding achievements of their members, as judged by recognized national or international experts in their disciplines or fields;
- Published material in professional or major trade publications or major media about the beneficiary, relating to the beneficiary's work in the field for which classification is sought, which must include the title, date, and author of such published material, and any necessary translation;
- Evidence of the beneficiary's participation on a panel, or individually, as a judge of the work of others in the same or in an allied field of specialization for which classification is sought;
- Evidence of the beneficiary's original scientific, scholarly, or business-related contributions of major significance in the field;
- Evidence of the beneficiary's authorship of scholarly articles in the field, in professional journals, or other major media;
- Evidence that the beneficiary has been employed in a critical or essential capacity for organizations and establishments that have a distinguished reputation; or
- Evidence that the beneficiary has either commanded a high salary or will command a high salary or other remuneration for services, as evidenced by contracts or other reliable evidence.^[20]

Appendix: Satisfying the O-1A Evidentiary Requirements [2 USCIS-PM M.4, Appendices Tab] describes examples of evidence that may, in some circumstances, satisfy the O-1A evidentiary requirements, as well as considerations that are relevant to evaluating such evidence. While many of the listed examples and considerations are especially relevant to beneficiaries in fields related to science, technology, engineering, or mathematics (STEM),^[21] the guidance in the appendix may be relevant to any O-1A petition, as the evidentiary requirements are the same for all persons in the sciences, education, business, and athletics.

3. Comparable Evidence

If the listed criteria are not readily applicable to the beneficiary's occupation, the petitioner may submit comparable evidence to establish the beneficiary's eligibility.^[22]

When a Petitioner May Use Comparable Evidence

Petitioners should submit evidence outlined in the evidentiary criteria if the criteria readily apply to the beneficiary's occupation.^[23] However, if the petitioner establishes that a particular criterion is not readily applicable to the beneficiary's occupation, the petitioner may then submit evidence that is not specifically described in that criterion but is comparable to that criterion.^[24]

A petitioner is not required to show that all or a majority of the criteria do not readily apply to the beneficiary's occupation before USCIS will accept comparable evidence. Instead, for comparable evidence to be considered, the petitioner must explain why a particular evidentiary criterion listed in the regulations is not readily applicable to the beneficiary's occupation, as well as why the submitted evidence is "comparable" to that criterion. A general unsupported assertion that the listed criterion does not readily apply to the beneficiary's occupation is not probative. However, a statement alone can be sufficient if it is detailed, specific, and credible.

Although officers do not consider comparable evidence if the petitioner submits evidence in lieu of a particular criterion that is readily applicable to the beneficiary's occupation simply because the beneficiary cannot satisfy that criterion, a criterion need not be entirely inapplicable to the beneficiary's occupation. Rather, comparable evidence is allowed if the petitioner shows that a criterion is not easily applicable to the beneficiary's job or profession.^[25]

As with all O-1A petitions, officers may consider comparable evidence in support of petitions for beneficiaries working in STEM fields. Specifically, if a petitioner demonstrates that a particular criterion does not readily apply to the beneficiary's occupation, the petitioner may submit evidence that is of comparable significance to that criterion to establish sustained acclaim and recognition.

For instance, if the publication of scholarly articles is not readily applicable to a beneficiary whose occupation is in an industry rather than academia, a petitioner might demonstrate that the beneficiary's presentation of work at a major trade show is of comparable significance to that criterion. As another example, if the petitioner demonstrates that receipt of a high salary is not readily applicable to the beneficiary's position as an entrepreneur, the petitioner might present evidence that the beneficiary's highly valued equity holdings in the startup are of comparable significance to the high salary criterion.

Establishing Eligibility with Comparable Evidence

A petitioner relying on evidence that is comparable to one or more of the criteria listed at 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(iii)(B) must still meet at least three separate evidentiary criteria to satisfy the evidence requirements, even if one or more of those criteria are met through evidence that is not specifically described in the regulation but is comparable.^[26] While a petitioner relying on comparable evidence is not limited to the kinds of evidence listed in the criteria, the use of comparable evidence does not change the standard for the classification. It remains the petitioner's burden to establish that the beneficiary has extraordinary ability in the beneficiary's field of endeavor.

4. Evaluating the Totality of the Evidence

When the evidentiary requirements specified above are satisfied, an officer proceeds to evaluate the totality of all the evidence in the record to determine whether the beneficiary has extraordinary ability with sustained national or international acclaim, as described in the O statute and regulations.^[27]

At this step, officers may consider any potentially relevant evidence, even if such evidence does not fit one of the above regulatory criteria or was not presented as comparable evidence.

The following are examples of situations where evidence might not directly correspond to the above regulatory criteria or might not be presented as comparable evidence, but would nonetheless be potentially relevant towards demonstrating, in the totality of the evidence, that an O-1A beneficiary is among the small percentage at the top of the field and that the beneficiary has sustained national or international acclaim:^[28]

- The record demonstrates that the beneficiary has published articles in particularly highly-ranked journals relative to other journals in the field, as demonstrated by, for example, evidence the petitioner provides regarding the journal's impact factor.^[29] Depending on the level of recognition of the journals in question, as demonstrated by evidence in the record, there may be particular prestige or acclaim associated with publication in such journals, especially if the beneficiary is the most significant contributor to the publication, a senior author, or the sole author of the article(s).
- The petitioner provides evidence demonstrating that the total rate of citations to the beneficiary's body of published work is high relative to others in the field, or the beneficiary has a high h-index^[30] for the field. Depending on the field and the comparative data the petitioner provides, such evidence may indicate a beneficiary's high overall standing for the purpose of demonstrating that the beneficiary is among the small percentage at the top of the field.^[31]

- The petitioner documents the beneficiary's employment or research experience is with leading institutions in the field (such as U.S. universities that have been recognized as having high or very high research activity by the Carnegie Classification of Institutions of Higher Education,^[32] foreign universities with comparably high research activity, or a university that is highly regarded according to a widely recognized metric such as the QS World University Rankings^[33]). Such employment or experience can be a positive factor toward demonstrating that the beneficiary is among the small percentage at the top of the field.
- The record establishes that the beneficiary has received unsolicited invitations to speak or present research at nationally or internationally recognized conferences in the field. Although such a role for the conference may not rise to the level of a critical or essential capacity, this type of invitation is generally indicative of a person's high standing and recognition for achievements in the field.
- The record establishes that the beneficiary is named as an investigator, scientist, or researcher on a peer-reviewed and competitively funded U.S. government grant or stipend for STEM research. This type of evidence can be a positive factor indicating a beneficiary is among the small percentage at the top of the beneficiary's field.

In all cases, the petitioner has the burden of providing sufficient context regarding the above evidence and considerations to demonstrate that the evidence meets the relevant criteria and to establish the beneficiary's extraordinary ability in the totality of the circumstances.

D. O-1B Beneficiaries in the Arts

1. Establishing Eligibility

In support of an O-1B (Arts) Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129), the petitioner must establish that the beneficiary:

- Has extraordinary ability in the arts which has been demonstrated by sustained national or international acclaim;
- Has achievements that have been recognized in the field through extensive documentation; and
- Is coming to work in the area of extraordinary ability (but not necessarily that the particular duties to be performed require someone of such extraordinary ability).^[34]

2. Supporting Documentation

The supporting documentation for an O-1B (Arts) petition must include evidence that the beneficiary has received, or been nominated for, a significant national or international award or prize in the particular field (such as an Academy Award, Emmy, Grammy, or Director's Guild Award) or at least three of the following forms of evidence:

- Evidence that the beneficiary has performed, and will perform, services as a lead or starring participant in productions or events that have a distinguished reputation, as evidenced by critical reviews, advertisements, publicity releases, publications, contracts, or endorsements;
- Evidence that the beneficiary has achieved national or international recognition for achievements, as evidenced by critical reviews or other published materials by or about the beneficiary in major newspapers, trade journals, magazines, or other publications;
- Evidence that the beneficiary has performed, and will perform, in a lead, starring, or critical role for organizations and establishments that have a distinguished reputation, as evidenced by articles in newspapers, trade journals, publications, or testimonials;
- Evidence that the beneficiary has a record of major commercial or critically acclaimed successes, as evidenced by such indicators as title, rating, standing in the field, box office receipts, motion pictures or television ratings, and other occupational achievements reported in trade journals, major newspapers, or other publications;
- Evidence that the beneficiary has received significant recognition for achievements from organizations, critics, government agencies, or other recognized experts in the field in which the beneficiary is engaged. Such testimonials must be in a form which clearly indicates the author's authority, expertise, and knowledge of the beneficiary's achievements; or
- Evidence that the beneficiary has either commanded a high salary or will command a high salary or other substantial remuneration for services in relation to others in the field, as evidenced by contracts or other reliable evidence.^[35]

The Appendix: Satisfying the O-1B Evidentiary Requirements [2 USCIS-PM M.4, Appendices Tab] describes examples of evidence that may, in some circumstances, satisfy the O-1B evidentiary requirements, as well as considerations that are relevant to evaluating such evidence.

3. Comparable Evidence

If the criteria are not readily applicable to the beneficiary's occupation, the petitioner may submit comparable evidence to establish the beneficiary's eligibility.^[36]

When a Petitioner May Use Comparable Evidence

Petitioners should submit evidence outlined in the evidentiary criteria if the criteria readily apply to the beneficiary's occupation.^[37] However, if the petitioner establishes that a particular criterion is not readily applicable to the beneficiary's occupation, the petitioner may then use the comparable evidence provision to submit additional evidence that is not specifically described in that criterion but is comparable to that criterion.

A petitioner is not required to show that all or a majority of the criteria do not readily apply to the beneficiary's occupation before USCIS will accept comparable evidence. Instead, for comparable evidence to be considered, the petitioner must explain why a particular evidentiary criterion listed in the regulations is not readily applicable to the beneficiary's occupation as well as why the submitted evidence is "comparable" to that criterion. A general unsupported assertion that the listed criterion does not readily apply to the beneficiary's occupation is not probative. However, a statement alone can be sufficient if it is detailed, specific, and credible.

Although officers do not consider comparable evidence if the petitioner submits evidence in lieu of a particular criterion that is readily applicable to the beneficiary's occupation simply because the beneficiary cannot satisfy that criterion, a criterion need not be entirely inapplicable to the beneficiary's occupation. Rather, comparable evidence is allowed if the petitioner shows that a criterion is not easily applicable to the beneficiary's job or profession.^[38]

Establishing Eligibility with Comparable Evidence

A petitioner relying on evidence that is comparable to one or more of the criteria listed at 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(iv)(B) must still meet at least three separate evidentiary criteria to satisfy the evidence requirements, even if one or more of those criteria are met through evidence that is not specifically described in the regulation but is comparable.^[39] While a petitioner relying on comparable evidence is not limited to the kinds of evidence listed in the criteria, the use of comparable evidence does not change the standard for the classification. It remains the petitioner's burden to establish that the beneficiary has extraordinary ability in the beneficiary's field of endeavor.

4. Evaluating the Totality of the Evidence

When the evidentiary requirements specified above are satisfied, an officer proceeds to evaluate the totality of all the evidence in the record to determine whether the beneficiary has extraordinary ability with sustained national or international acclaim, as described in the O statute and regulations.^[40]

At this step, officers may consider any potentially relevant evidence, even if such evidence does not fit one of the above regulatory criteria or was not presented as comparable evidence.

E. O-1B Beneficiaries in Motion Picture or Television

1. Establishing Eligibility

In support of an O-1B (MPTV) Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129), the petitioner must establish that the beneficiary has demonstrated a record of extraordinary achievement in motion picture or television productions and is coming to continue to work in such productions.^[41] However, the productions need not require someone with a record of extraordinary achievement.

2. Supporting Documentation

The supporting documentation for an O-1B (MPTV) petition must include evidence that the beneficiary has received, or been nominated for, a significant national or international award or prize in the particular field (such as an Academy Award, Emmy, Grammy, or Director's Guild Award) or at least three of the following forms of evidence:

- Evidence that the beneficiary has performed, and will perform, services as a lead or starring participant in productions or events that have a distinguished reputation, as evidenced by critical reviews, advertisements, publicity releases, publications, contracts, or endorsements;
- Evidence that the beneficiary has achieved national or international recognition for achievements, as evidenced by critical reviews or other published materials by or about the beneficiary in major newspapers, trade journals, magazines, or other publications;
- Evidence that the beneficiary has performed, and will perform, in a lead, starring, or critical role for organizations and establishments that have a distinguished reputation, as evidenced by articles in newspapers, trade journals, publications, or testimonials;
- Evidence that the beneficiary has a record of major commercial or critically acclaimed successes, as evidenced by such indicators as title, rating, standing in the field, box office receipts, motion pictures or television ratings, and other occupational achievements reported in trade journals, major newspapers, or other publications;
- Evidence that the beneficiary has received significant recognition for achievements from organizations, critics, government agencies, or other recognized experts in the beneficiary's field. Such testimonials must be in a form that clearly indicates the author's authority, expertise, and knowledge of the beneficiary's achievements; or
- Evidence that the beneficiary has either commanded a high salary or will command a high salary or other substantial remuneration for services in relation to others in the field, as evidenced by contracts or other reliable evidence.^[42]

Appendix: Satisfying the O-1B Evidentiary Requirements [2 USCIS-PM M.4, Appendices Tab] describes examples of evidence that may, in some circumstances, satisfy the O-1B evidentiary requirements, as well as considerations that are relevant to evaluating such evidence.

Petitioners for beneficiaries working in motion picture or television productions must submit evidence that applies to the criteria listed above; they may not rely on comparable evidence.^[43]

3. Evaluating the Totality of the Evidence

When the evidentiary requirements mentioned above are satisfied, an officer proceeds to evaluate the totality of all the evidence in the record in order to determine whether the beneficiary has extraordinary achievement in the motion picture and television industry as described in the O statute and regulations.^[44]

At this step, officers may consider any potentially relevant evidence, even if such evidence does not fit one of the above regulatory criteria.

F. Continuing to Work in the Area of Extraordinary Ability or Achievement

1. O-1A Beneficiaries in Sciences, Education, Business, or Athletics and O-1B Beneficiaries in the Arts

In addition to demonstrating the beneficiary's extraordinary ability and recognition in the field, a petitioner must demonstrate that an O-1A or O-1B (Arts) beneficiary is coming to the United States to continue work in the "area of extraordinary ability."^[45]

When considering a petition for a beneficiary who is transitioning to a new occupation (for instance, an acclaimed athlete coming to be a coach, a renowned STEM professor or academic researcher coming to work for a private company, or an acclaimed dancer coming to be a dance teacher or choreographer), it can be unclear whether the proposed work in the United States is within the "area of extraordinary ability," as required.

There is no statutory or regulatory definition of the term "field" or the phrase "area of extraordinary ability." For purposes of evaluating an O-1A or O-1B (Arts) beneficiary's extraordinary ability in the field, USCIS interprets the term "field" to allow consideration of acclaim and recognition for achievements in multiple related occupations (that is, those involving shared skillsets, knowledge, or expertise). Similarly, in the O-1A or O-1B (Arts) context, USCIS interprets the phrase "area of extraordinary ability" broadly to include not only the specific occupation(s) in which the beneficiary has garnered acclaim, but also other occupations that involve shared skillsets, knowledge, or expertise.^[46]

Accordingly, when determining whether the beneficiary is coming to work in the beneficiary's "area of extraordinary ability," officers focus on whether the prospective work or services involve skillsets, knowledge, or expertise shared with the occupation(s) in which the beneficiary has garnered acclaim. In evaluating whether occupations involve shared skillsets, knowledge, or expertise to an extent that they may be considered within the same area of extraordinary ability, officers evaluate the totality of information and evidence presented. Relevant factors include, but are not limited to:

- Whether the past and prospective occupations are in the same industry or are otherwise related based on shared duties or expertise;

- Whether the prospective occupation is a supervisory, management, or other leadership position that oversees the beneficiary's previous position or otherwise requires shared knowledge, skills, or expertise; and
- Whether it is common for persons in one occupation to transition to the other occupation(s) based upon their experience and knowledge.

2. O-1B Beneficiaries in Motion Picture or Television

In addition to demonstrating the beneficiary's extraordinary achievement in MPTV productions and recognition in the field, a petitioner must demonstrate that an O-1B (MPTV) beneficiary is coming to the United States to continue work in the "area of extraordinary achievement."^[47]

For a beneficiary with a record of extraordinary achievement in motion picture or television (MPTV) productions, USCIS interprets the beneficiary's "area of extraordinary achievement" to include any proposed work within the MPTV industry.^[48] In addition to being consistent with longstanding agency practice, USCIS believes this industry-focused interpretation for the O-1B (MPTV) classification is consistent with statute and regulations, which discuss MPTV petitions separately from other types of O petitions and specifically focus on achievement in MPTV "productions" and the "industry."^[49]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(i). "Sustained" national or international acclaim means that a beneficiary's acclaim must be maintained. (According to Black's Law Dictionary (11th ed. 2019), the definition of sustain is "(1) to support or maintain, especially over a long period of time; ... (6) To persist in making (an effort) over a long period.") However, the word "sustained" does not imply an age limit on the beneficiary. A beneficiary may be very young in his or her career and still be able to show sustained acclaim. There is also no definitive time frame on what constitutes "sustained." If a person was recognized for a particular achievement, the officer should determine whether the person continues to maintain a comparable level of acclaim in the field of expertise since the person was originally afforded that recognition. A person may have achieved national or international acclaim in the past but then failed to maintain a comparable level of acclaim thereafter.

[^ 2] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(i).

[^ 3] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(i).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(ii).

[^ 5] See INA 101(a)(46). See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(ii).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(ii).

[^ 7] Other non-exhaustive examples include actors, writers, composers, or set designers seeking to come to the United States to do some work within the MPTV industry while also seeking to work in live theater or perform other work as an artist outside the MPTV industry.

[^ 8] This is consistent with the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences' consideration of series, commercials, and other programs that air by "broadband" to be among the productions eligible for Primetime Emmy Awards. See 73rd Primetime Emmy Awards 2020-2021 Rules and Procedures (PDF) (accessed on January 5, 2022). In addition, the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers discusses beneficiaries working on a "web series/program" and a "web commercial" among those for whom it provides opinions, but lists "static web content" as an example of a project that is "not part of motion picture and television production." See AMPTP Guidelines for O-1 Visa Advisory Opinion Letter Requests (PDF) (accessed on January 5, 2022).

[^ 9] USCIS provided this interpretation in its policy guidance on January 13, 2022, to provide increased clarity for officers, to promote consistent adjudications, and to increase transparency for prospective petitioners.

[^ 10] Other non-exhaustive examples of artists whose MPTV work is incidental to their artistic work include musicians or other artists performing live on television or filmed for television "specials," persons appearing as themselves in documentaries, and composers or musicians who license their music to films or television. In contrast, composers who are engaged to score MPTV productions are directly working in the MPTV industry.

[^ 11] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(i). See INA 214(c)(3).

[^ 12] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(i). See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(ii).

[^ 13] See 59 FR 41818 (PDF), 41820 (Aug. 15, 1994).

[^ 14] See Matter of Chawathe (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 369, 376 (AAO 2010) ("[T]ruth is to be determined not by the quantity of evidence alone but by its quality. Therefore, in adjudicating the application pursuant to the preponderance of the evidence standard, the director must examine each piece of evidence for relevance, probative value, and credibility, both individually and within the context of the totality of the evidence, to determine whether the fact to be proven is probably true").

[^ 15] For example, authorship of scholarly articles in the field in professional journals or other major media, alone, regardless of caliber, would satisfy the criterion at 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(iii)(B)(6). Analysis of whether those publications are consistent with a finding that the beneficiary has sustained acclaim and is among the small percentage at the top of the field would be addressed and articulated in the totality determination.

[^ 16] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(i). See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(ii).

[^ 17] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(i). See INA 101(a)(46). See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(ii) (“Distinction means a high level of achievement in the field of arts evidenced by a degree of skill and recognition substantially above that ordinarily encountered to the extent that a person described as prominent is renowned, leading, or well-known in the field of arts”).

[^ 18] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(i). See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(ii).

[^ 19] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(i). See Section F, Continuing to Work in the Area of Extraordinary Ability or Achievement [2 USCIS-PM M.4(F)] for more information.

[^ 20] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(iii).

[^ 21] “STEM” is not defined in the regulations for the O classification, but officers may refer to the regulatory definition found in the context of STEM optional practical training for students for guidance. See 8 CFR 214.2(f)(10)(ii)(C)(2)(i). Due to the highly technical nature of STEM fields and the complexity of the evidence that is often submitted, USCIS has chosen to highlight examples and considerations that are likely to come up in this context in this guidance.

[^ 22] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(iii)(C).

[^ 23] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(iii).

[^ 24] The comparable evidence provision was intended as a “catch-all” to allow for additional evidence to be considered when the other enumerated criteria do not readily apply, in whole or in part, when evaluating whether the beneficiary has extraordinary ability. See 59 FR 41818 (PDF), 41820 (August 15, 1994). While alternative interpretations of the regulation are possible, USCIS believes that the best interpretation as a matter of policy is to allow for consideration of comparable evidence on a criterion-by-criterion basis. This interpretation is supported by the fact that the O regulations do not explicitly mandate a showing that a certain number of criteria do not apply before a petitioner may submit comparable evidence. These provisions do not include a qualifier such as “all” or “the majority of” before “criteria.” It is unclear if the use of the term “criteria” was intended to require a showing that all or a majority of the criteria do not readily apply, or if the use of the word “criteria” was merely a reference to the multiple evidentiary options listed in the regulations. This interpretive policy resolves that ambiguity.

[^ 25] Consistent with a plain language reading, “readily” means “easily” or “without much difficulty.” See Merriam-Webster Dictionary’s definition of “readily.” The term “occupation” is defined as “the principal business of one’s life.”

[^ 26] For example, a petitioner who establishes that 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(iii)(B)(2) is not readily applicable to the beneficiary’s occupation may submit evidence showing that two other criteria under 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(iii)(B) have been met, along with an additional form of evidence of comparable significance to that in 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(iii)(B)(2), to establish sustained acclaim and recognition.

[^ 27] See Section B, Determining Eligibility for O-1 Classification [2 USCIS-PM M.4(B)]. The same totality analysis described in Section B applies regardless of whether comparable evidence was relied upon to satisfy the evidentiary requirements.

[^ 28] Not all cases will have such evidence, nor does a case need such evidence for the petitioner to demonstrate eligibility. Additionally, the list below is a non-exhaustive list of examples, and while the listed factors may be especially relevant to beneficiaries in STEM fields, the guidance applies to all O-1A petitions.

[^ 29] Impact factor is commonly used as a measure of a journal's influence; it represents the average number of citations received per article published in that journal during the 2 preceding years. See Garfield, E, The History and Meaning of the Journal Impact Factor, Journal of the American Medical Association, Vol. 295, Iss. 1, p. 90 (2006).

[^ 30] The h-index is a tool for measuring a researcher's output and impact. It is based on the highest number of the researcher's publications that have been cited at least that same number of times. For example, if a researcher has an h-index of 10, it means the researcher has 10 publications that have 10 or more citations each (but not 11 publications with at least 11 citations each). See Hirsch, J, An Index to Quantify an Individual's Scientific Research Output (PDF), Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences of the United States of America, Vol. 102, Iss. 46, p. 16569 (2005).

[^ 31] This factor is less relevant for beneficiaries early in their career, as such persons have had less time to accumulate citations but may nevertheless have garnered acclaim and risen to the small percentage at the top of the field as demonstrated by other evidence in the record. As stated above, none of the listed factors are required to demonstrate eligibility.

[^ 32] The Carnegie Classification of Institutions of Higher Education uses the R1 and R2 doctoral university designations to recognize institutions as having "very high" or "high" research activity, respectively, based on publicly available federal government data regarding the number of doctoral degrees awarded and the amount of total research expenditures. See the Carnegie Classification of Institutions of Higher Education's Basic Classification Description webpage.

[^ 33] The QS World University Rankings annually evaluate universities according to a methodology based on six consistent and empirical metrics: academic reputation (40%), employer reputation (10%), faculty to student ratio (20%), citations per faculty (20%), international faculty ratio (5%), and international student ratio (5%). These metrics are used to rank universities, as well as capture and assess university performance. See the QS World University Rankings Methodology webpage.

[^ 34] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(i). For more information, see Section F, Continuing to Work in the Area of Extraordinary Ability or Achievement [2 USCIS-PM M.4(F)]. For information about determining whether an O-1B beneficiary falls under the arts or MPTV classification, see Section A, Standard for Classification [2 USCIS-PM M.4(A)].

[^ 35] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(iv).

[^ 36] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(iv)(C). See the discussion of comparable evidence in Section C, O-1A Beneficiaries in Sciences, Education, Business, or Athletics [2 USCIS-PM M.4(C)] for more information.

[^ 37] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(iv).

[^ 38] Consistent with a plain language reading, “readily” means “easily” or “without much difficulty.” See Merriam-Webster Dictionary’s definition of “readily.” The term “occupation” is defined as “the principal business of one’s life.”

[^ 39] For example, a petitioner who establishes that 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(iv)(B)(2) is not readily applicable to the beneficiary’s occupation may submit evidence showing that two other criteria under 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(iv)(B) have been met, along with an additional form of evidence of comparable significance to that in 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(iv)(B)(2), to establish sustained acclaim and recognition.

[^ 40] See Section B, Determining Eligibility for O-1 Classification [2 USCIS-PM M.4(B)]. The same totality analysis described in Section B applies regardless of whether comparable evidence was relied upon to satisfy the enumerated evidentiary requirements.

[^ 41] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(i). See Section F, Continuing to Work in the Area of Extraordinary Ability or Achievement [2 USCIS-PM M.4(F)] for more information. For information about determining whether an O-1B beneficiary falls under the arts or MPTV classification, see Section A, Standard for Classification [2 USCIS-PM M.4(A)].

[^ 42] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(v).

[^ 43] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(v).

[^ 44] See Section B, Determining Eligibility for O-1 Classification [2 USCIS-PM M.4(B)].

[^ 45] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(i). See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(1)(ii)(A)(1).

[^ 46] USCIS updated its policy guidance to provide this interpretation on January 21, 2022, to promote clarity, consistency, and transparency in O-1 adjudications. USCIS notes that this policy guidance relates only to the adjudication of O-1 nonimmigrant petitions. For policy guidance on eligibility determinations in E11 (immigrant of extraordinary ability) petitions, which, while similar to O-1, require that the beneficiary’s entry will “substantially benefit prospectively the United States,” see Volume 6, Immigrants, Part F, Employment-Based Classifications, Chapter 2, Extraordinary Ability [6 USCIS-PM F.2].

[^ 47] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(1)(ii)(A)(2).

[^ 48] USCIS updated its policy guidance to provide this interpretation on January 21, 2022, to promote clarity, consistency, and transparency in O-1 adjudications. USCIS notes that this policy guidance relates only to the adjudication of O-1B (MPTV) petitions.

[^ 49] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(i). See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(1). See 8 CFR 214.2(2)(iii)(B). See 8 CFR 214.2(3).

Chapter 5 - O-2 Beneficiaries

A. General

USCIS may classify beneficiaries who are essential to an O-1 beneficiary's artistic or athletic performance and are coming solely to assist in that performance as O-2 accompanying beneficiaries.

[1] The O-2 beneficiary must be an integral part of the actual performance or event and possess critical skills and experience with the O-1 that are not of a general nature and that U.S. workers do not possess.^[2]

If the O-2 beneficiary is accompanying an O-1 beneficiary in the television or motion picture industry, he or she must have skills and experience with the O-1 beneficiary that are not of a general nature and skills that are critical, due to a pre-existing or long-standing working relationship with the O-1 beneficiary. If he or she is accompanying the O-1 beneficiary for a specific production only, the person may be eligible for an O-2 classification because significant production (including pre- and post-production work) will take place both inside and outside the United States and the continuing participation of the O-2 beneficiary is essential to the successful completion of the production.

USCIS may not grant O-2 classification for beneficiaries to support O-1 beneficiaries with extraordinary ability in fields of business, education, or science.^[3]

The O-2 beneficiaries may not work separate or apart from the O-1 beneficiaries they support and may change employers only in conjunction with a change of employer by the O-1 beneficiary. Although multiple beneficiaries may be included on a single O-2 Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129), they cannot be included on the O-1 beneficiary's petition.

B. Documentation and Evidence

A petition for an O-2 beneficiary who will accompany an O-1A (athlete) or O-1B (artist) of extraordinary ability must be supported by evidence that the O-2 beneficiary is coming to the United States to assist in the performance of the O-1 beneficiary. The O-2 beneficiary must be an integral part of the actual performance and have critical skills and experience with the O-1 beneficiary that are not of a general nature and not possessed by a U.S. worker.^[4]

A petition for an O-2 beneficiary who will accompany an O-1B (MPTV) beneficiary of extraordinary achievement must be supported by:

- Evidence of the current essentiality, critical skills, and experience of the O-2 beneficiary with the O-1 beneficiary and evidence that the O-2 beneficiary has substantial experience performing the critical skills and essential support services for the O-1 beneficiary; or
- In the case of a specific motion picture or television production, evidence that significant production has taken place outside the United States and will take place inside the United States, and that the continuing participation of the O-2 beneficiary is essential to the successful completion of the production.^[5]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 101(a)(15)(O)(1)(ii).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(4)(ii).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(4).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(4)(ii)(A).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(4)(ii)(C).

Chapter 6 - Family Members

The spouse and unmarried children under 21 years old of a principal O-1 or O-2 nonimmigrant may qualify for dependent O-3 nonimmigrant status if they are accompanying or following to join the O-1 or O-2 in the United States.^[1] The O-3 spouse and unmarried children under 21 receive nonimmigrant status for the same period of time and subject to the same conditions as the O-1 or O-2 principal.^[2] An O-3 dependent may not accept employment in the United States pursuant to such status.^[3]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(6)(iv).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(6)(iv).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(6)(iv).

Chapter 7 - Documentation and Evidence

A. General

USCIS requires a petitioning employer or agent to file the Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) and required fee for all beneficiaries seeking classification as an O-1 or O-2 nonimmigrant.^[1] The petition must be filed in accordance with DHS regulations and the form instructions, and with the required fees.^[2] The petitioner may not file the petition more than 1 year before the actual need for the beneficiary's services.^[3]

An O-1 or O-2 beneficiary may work for more than one employer at the same time.^[4] When the beneficiary works for more than one employer, each employer must properly file a separate petition along with the required documentation and fees unless an established agent files the petition.^[5]

More than one O-2 accompanying beneficiary may be included on a petition if they are assisting the same O-1 beneficiary for the same events or performances, during the same period of time, and in the same location.^[6] An employer or agent may not include multiple O-1 beneficiaries on the same petition.^[7]

B. Documentation and Evidence

1. Required Evidence

A petitioner must include the following with the petition:

- Evidence specific to the particular classification sought;^[8]
- Copies of any written contracts between the petitioner and the beneficiary or, if there is no written contract, a summary of the terms of the oral agreement under which the beneficiary will be employed;
- An explanation of the nature of the events or activities, the beginning and ending dates for the events or activities, and a copy of any itinerary for the events or activities;^[9] and
- A written advisory opinion(s) from the appropriate consulting entity or entities.^[10]

2. Form of Evidence

The evidence submitted with the petition must conform to the following:

- Affidavits, contracts, awards, and similar documentation must reflect the nature of the beneficiary's achievement and be executed by an officer or responsible person employed by the institution, firm, establishment, or organization where the work was performed.

- Affidavits written by present or former employers or recognized experts certifying to the recognition and extraordinary ability or extraordinary achievement of the beneficiary must specifically describe the beneficiary's recognition and ability or achievement in factual terms and set forth the expertise of the affiant and the manner in which the affiant acquired such information.
- The petitioner may submit a legible photocopy of a document in support of the petition in lieu of the original. However, the original document must be submitted if requested by USCIS.^[11]

3. Contracts

The regulation requires the submission of any written contracts between the petitioner and the beneficiary but allows for the submission of a summary of the terms of an oral agreement where there is no written contract.^[12] Evidence of an oral agreement may include, but is not limited to, emails between the contractual parties, a written summation of the terms of the agreement, or any other evidence that demonstrates that an oral agreement was created.

The summary of the oral agreement must contain:

- The terms offered by the petitioner (employer); and
- The terms accepted by the beneficiary (employee).

The summary does not have to be signed by both parties to establish the oral agreement.^[13]

4. Consultations

A statutorily mandated consultation process exists for all O nonimmigrant petitions.^[14] The source and contents of the consultation vary, depending upon the type of O petition.

Consultation Process for O Nonimmigrants

Petition Type	Source and Contents of Consultations
O-1A and O-1B (Arts)	The petitioner must provide a consultation in the form of an advisory opinion from a U.S. "peer group" in the area of the beneficiary's ability (which may include a labor organization) or a person or persons with expertise in the area of the beneficiary's ability. The contents should, if favorable, describe the beneficiary's ability and achievements in the field of endeavor, describe the nature of the duties to be performed, and state whether the position requires the services of a person of extraordinary ability, or may state "no objection." If

Petition Type	Source and Contents of Consultations
	the advisory opinion is not favorable to the petitioner, the advisory opinion must set forth a specific statement of facts which supports the conclusion reached in the opinion. If an advisory opinion is submitted from a group other than a labor organization, USCIS must submit a copy of the petition and supporting documents to the national office of the appropriate union (if any exists). If the labor organization does not respond, USCIS renders a decision on the evidence of record.^[15] If the petitioner establishes that no appropriate peer group exists, including a labor organization, USCIS renders a decision on the evidence of record.^[16]
O-1B (MPTV)	The petitioner must provide consultations in the form of advisory opinions from both the union representing the beneficiary's occupational peers and a management organization in the area of the beneficiary's ability. The contents may include statements describing the beneficiary's achievements in motion picture or television productions and whether the proposed position requires the services of a person of extraordinary achievement, or may state "no objection." If an advisory opinion is not favorable to the petitioner, the advisory opinion must set forth a specific statement of facts which supports the conclusion reached in the opinion. If the petitioner establishes that no appropriate group exists, including a labor organization, USCIS renders a decision on the evidence of record.^[17]
O-2	The petitioner must provide a consultation in the form of an advisory opinion from the labor organization having expertise in the skill area. If the O-2 is sought for employment in the motion picture or television industry, opinions must be provided from both a labor union and a management organization.^[18] The opinion may include information regarding the beneficiary's particular skills, his or her experience working with the O-1 beneficiary, and whether the project involves a situation that includes work both inside and outside the United States (if applicable), or may state "no objection." If an advisory opinion is not favorable to the petitioner, the advisory opinion must set forth a specific statement of facts which supports the conclusion reached in the opinion. Generally, if the petitioner establishes that an appropriate labor organization does not exist, USCIS renders a decision on the evidence of record.^[19]

USCIS maintains a list of organizations that provide advisory opinions on O-1 and O-2 beneficiaries.

The O regulations specify mandatory response times for advisory opinions requested by USCIS in routine and expedited cases and prescribe action to be taken when a requested opinion is not received.^[20] The consultations are advisory in nature only and are not binding on USCIS. A negative advisory opinion does not automatically result in the denial of the petition, as decisions must be based on the totality of the evidence. Accordingly, USCIS may favorably consider evidence submitted by the petitioner to overcome a negative advisory opinion.

Use of Prior Consultation

USCIS may waive the consultation requirement for persons of extraordinary ability in the field of arts if the beneficiary seeks readmission to the United States to perform similar services within 2 years of the date of a previous advisory opinion. After USCIS grants the waiver, USCIS forwards a copy of the petition and documentation to the national office of an appropriate labor organization within 5 days.^[21] Petitioners desiring to avail themselves of the waiver should submit a copy of the prior consultation with the petition.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(1). See Chapter 3, Petitioners [2 USCIS-PM M.3].

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(1). For information on filing, see the USCIS website.

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(i).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(iv)(B).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(iv)(B). For information on fees, see Fee Schedule (Form G-1055).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(iv)(F). Although multiple beneficiaries may be included on a single O-2 petition, they cannot be included on the O-1 beneficiary's petition.

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(i).

[^ 8] See Chapter 4, O-1 Beneficiaries, Section C, O-1A Beneficiaries in Sciences, Education, Business, or Athletics [2 USCIS-PM M.4(C)]; Section D, O-1B Beneficiaries in the Arts [2 USCIS-PM M.4(D)]; and Section E, O-1B Beneficiaries in Motion Picture or Television [2 USCIS-PM M.4(E)]; and Chapter 5, O-2 Beneficiaries [2 USCIS-PM M.5].

[^ 9] A petition which requires the beneficiary to work in more than one location must include an itinerary with the dates and locations of work. See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(iv)(A). There are no exceptions to the itinerary requirement when the petition is filed by an agent performing the function of an employer. However, USCIS does give some flexibility to how detailed the itinerary must be and does take into account industry standards when determining whether the itinerary requirement has been met. As such, the itinerary should at a minimum indicate what type of work the beneficiary will be engaged, where, and when this work will take place.

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(ii).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(iii).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(ii)(B).

[^ 13] For specific requirements relating to petitioning agents, see Chapter 3, Petitioners, Section C, Agents [2 USCIS-PM M.3(C)].

[^ 14] See INA 214(c)(3).

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(5).

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(5).

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(5).

[^ 18] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(5)(iv).

[^ 19] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(5).

[^ 20] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(5)(i)(E)-(F).

[^ 21] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(5)(ii)(B).

Chapter 8 - Adjudication

Officers must carefully review each Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) to determine whether the petitioner has established eligibility based on the applicable requirements for the type of O classification being sought. Officers must apply a “preponderance of the evidence” standard when evaluating eligibility for the O nonimmigrant classification.^[1] The burden of proving eligibility for the benefit sought rests entirely with the petitioner.^[2]

A. Decision

Approvals

If the petitioner properly filed the petition and the officer is satisfied that the petitioner has met the required eligibility standards, the officer approves the petition. The approval period must not exceed the maximum period of stay allowed.^[3] Furthermore, USCIS should not deny a petition on the basis of the approval of a permanent labor certification or the filing of a preference petition for the O-1 beneficiary.^[4]

The table below provides a list of the classifications for nonimmigrant of extraordinary ability or achievement, those accompanying and assisting the principal O-1 beneficiary's artistic or athletic performance, and dependents.

Classes of Beneficiaries and Corresponding Codes of Admission

Beneficiary	Code of Admission
Nonimmigrant of extraordinary ability in the sciences, education, business, or athletics (principal)	O-1A
Nonimmigrant of extraordinary ability in the arts (principal)	O-1B
Nonimmigrant of extraordinary achievement in the motion picture or television industry (principal)	O-1B
Accompanying person who is coming to the United States to assist in the performance of certain O-1s	O-2
Spouse or child of an O-1 or O-2	O-3

Once USCIS approves the petition, USCIS notifies the petitioner of the approval using a Notice of Action (Form I-797).^[5]

Denials

If the petitioner does not meet the eligibility requirements, the officer denies the petition.^[6] If the officer denies the petition, he or she must notify the petitioner of the denial in writing. The written decision must explain why USCIS denied the petition and must include information about appeal rights and the opportunity to file a motion to reopen or reconsider.^[7] The office that issued the decision has jurisdiction over any motion and the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) has jurisdiction over any appeal.^[8]

B. Revocation

USCIS may revoke an approved petition at any time, even after the validity of the petition has expired. USCIS automatically revokes the petition if the petitioner ceases to exist or files a written withdrawal of the petition.^[9]

USCIS may also revoke an O petition approval on notice. USCIS sends the petitioner a Notice of Intent to Revoke (NOIR) if it is determined that:

- The beneficiary is no longer employed by the petitioner in the capacity specified in the petition;
- The statement of facts contained in the petition was not true and correct;
- The petitioner violated the terms and conditions of the approved petition;
- The petitioner violated the statute or regulations; or
- The approval of the petition violated the regulations or involved gross error.^[10]

The NOIR must contain a detailed statement of the grounds for the revocation and the period allowed for the petitioner's rebuttal. USCIS considers all relevant evidence presented in deciding whether to revoke the petition.

The petitioner may appeal the decision to revoke a petition to the AAO if USCIS revoked the petition on notice. Petitioners may not appeal an automatic revocation.^[11]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INS v. Cardoza-Fonseca (PDF), 480 U.S. 421 (1987) (defining "more likely than not" as a greater than 50 percent probability of something occurring). See Matter of Chawathe (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 369, 376 (AAO 2010) (citing Matter of E-M- (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 77, 79-80 (Comm. 1989)).

[^ 2] See Matter of Brantigan (PDF), 11 I&N Dec. 493 (BIA 1966).

[^ 3] See Chapter 9, Admissions, Extensions of Stay, and Changes of Status [2 USCIS-PM M.9].

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(13).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(19).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(8).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(19). See 8 CFR 103.3. See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(7).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 103.3(a)(2).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(8)(ii). See Chapter 9, Admission, Extension of Stay, Change of Status, and Change of Employer [2 USCIS-PM M.9].

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(8)(iii).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(9)(ii).

Chapter 9 - Admission, Extension of Stay, Change of Status, and Change of Employer

A. Admission

If approved for classification as an O nonimmigrant and found otherwise admissible, a beneficiary may be admitted for a period determined to be necessary to accomplish the event or activity, not to exceed 3 years.^[1]

Validity Period

If approved after the date the petitioner indicated services would begin, the validity period generally commences with the date of approval. The validity period must not exceed the period determined by USCIS to be necessary to complete the event or activity and must not exceed 3 years.

A beneficiary may be admitted to the United States for the validity period of the petition, plus a period of up to 10 days before the validity period begins and 10 days after the validity period ends. The beneficiary may engage in employment only during the validity period of the petition.^[2]

Nonimmigrants described in the O classification are "seek[ing] to enter the United States to continue to work in the area of extraordinary ability," and may be authorized for a period of stay necessary "to provide for the event (or events) for which the nonimmigrant is admitted."^[3] The O classification is for a beneficiary coming to the United States "to perform services relating to an event or events."^[4]

The O regulations define an event as an activity such as, but not limited to: a scientific project, conference, convention, lecture, series, tour, exhibit, business project, academic year, or engagement.

^[5] In addition, a job that may not have a specific engagement or project may also fall under this definition if the job is the "activity" within the beneficiary's area of extraordinary ability. Such activities may include short vacations, promotional appearances, and stopovers that are incidental or related to the event. Therefore, the regulations clearly indicate that USCIS may approve a petition to cover not only the actual event or events but also services and activities in connection with the event or events.

There is no statutory or regulatory authority for the proposition that a gap of a certain number of days automatically indicates a “new event,” nor is there a requirement for a “single event.” Rather, the focus is on whether the beneficiary will work in the area of extraordinary ability.^[6]

The regulations define the evidentiary standard for identifying the services or activities relating to the event(s) by requiring “an explanation of the nature of the events or activities and a copy of any itinerary for the events or activities.”^[7] Unlike other nonimmigrant categories that have a specified time limit, a temporal period is not specified for O nonimmigrants. The regulations state that the validity period must be that which is “necessary to accomplish the event or activity, not to exceed 3 years.”^[8]

If the activities on the itinerary are related in such a way that they could be considered an event, the petition should be approved for the requested validity period. For example, a series of events that involve the same performers and the same or similar performance, such as a tour by a performing artist in venues around the United States, would constitute an event. In another example, if there is a break in between events in the United States and the petitioner indicates the beneficiary will be returning abroad to engage in activities that are incidental or related to the work performed in the United States, it does not necessarily interrupt the original event.

The burden is on the petitioner to demonstrate that the activities listed on the itinerary relate to the event despite gaps in which the beneficiary may travel abroad and return to the United States. Those gaps may include time in which the beneficiary attends seminars, vacations, or travels between engagements.^[9] Those gaps would not be considered to interrupt the original event, and the full period of time requested may be granted as the gaps are incidental to the original event. If a review of the itinerary does not establish an event or activity or a series of connected events and activities that would allow the validity period requested, or if the petitioner is requesting a validity period beyond the last established event or activity, the officer may, in his or her discretion, issue a Request for Evidence (RFE). The RFE provides the petitioner an opportunity to provide additional documentation to establish the requested validity period.

Officers evaluate the totality of the evidence submitted under the pertinent statute and regulations to determine if the events and activities on the itinerary are connected in such a way that they would be considered an event for purposes of the validity period. If the evidence establishes that the activities or events are related in such a way that they could be considered an event, the officer approves the petition for the length of the established validity period.

Even though USCIS may consider a group of related activities to be an event, speculative employment or freelancing are not allowed.^[10] A petitioner must establish that there are events or activities in the beneficiary's field of extraordinary ability for the validity period requested. Evidence of such events or activities could include an itinerary for a tour, contract or summary of the terms of the oral agreement under which the beneficiary will be employed, or contracts between the beneficiary and employers if an agent is being used.

Maintaining Status

USCIS does not consider a beneficiary in O-1 status to have failed to maintain nonimmigrant status solely because of the cessation of the employment on which the visa classification was based for a period of up to 60 days or until the end of the authorized validity period, whichever is shorter. USCIS may shorten or eliminate this 60-day grace period as a matter of discretion. Unless otherwise authorized under 8 CFR 274a.12, the O-1 beneficiary may not work during such a period.^[11]

Although the O-2 accompanying beneficiary must obtain his or her own classification, this classification does not entitle him or her to work separate and apart from the O-1 beneficiary to whom he or she provides support.^[12]

B. Extension of Stay

A petitioner may request an extension of stay for an O-1 or O-2 nonimmigrant beneficiary by filing a new Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129).^[13] O-3 dependents may request an extension of stay or change of status by filing an Application to Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-539), and, when applicable, Supplemental Information for Application to Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-539A).

USCIS may authorize an extension of stay in increments of up to 1 year for an O-1 or O-2 beneficiary to continue or complete the same event or activity for which he or she was admitted, plus an additional 10 days to allow the beneficiary to get his or her personal affairs in order.^[14] There is no limit to the number of extensions of stay a petitioner can file for the same beneficiary.

USCIS should not deny requests for extensions of stay filed by the initial petitioner solely on the basis that the event that supported the initial petition has changed. USCIS also should not deny such requests filed by subsequent petitioners solely on the basis that the event or employer has changed. Furthermore, USCIS should not deny such requests on the basis of the approval of a permanent labor certification or the filing of a preference petition for the O-1 beneficiary.^[15]

C. Change of Status

Generally, a beneficiary in a current valid nonimmigrant status who has not violated his or her status is eligible to change status to that of an O nonimmigrant without having to depart the United States.^[16]

To change to O nonimmigrant status, the petitioning employer or agent should file a Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) before the beneficiary's current status expires and indicate the request is for a change of status.^[17] The beneficiary cannot work in the new nonimmigrant classification until USCIS approves the petition and the change of status request. If USCIS determines that the beneficiary is eligible for the O classification, but not a change of status, the beneficiary must depart the United States, apply for a nonimmigrant visa at a U.S. consular post abroad (unless visa exempt), and then be readmitted to the United States in O-1 or O-2 status.^[18]

USCIS should not deny an application for change of status on the basis of the approval of a permanent labor certification or the filing of a preference petition for the O-1 beneficiary.^[19]

D. Change of Employer

If an O nonimmigrant in the United States seeks to change employers, the new employer or agent must file a Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) to authorize the new employment and, if applicable, request to extend the beneficiary's stay. An O-2 beneficiary may change employers only in conjunction with a change of employers by the principal O-1 beneficiary. If an agent filed the petition, the agent must file an amended petition with evidence relating to the new employer.^[20]

In the case of a professional O-1 athlete traded from one organization to another, employment authorization for the player automatically continues for a period of 30 days after acquisition by the new organization, within which time the new organization is expected to file a new Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129). If a new petition is not filed within 30 days, employment authorization ceases. If a new petition is filed within 30 days, the professional athlete is deemed to be in valid O-1 status, and employment continues to be authorized, until the petition is adjudicated. If USCIS denies the new petition, employment authorization ceases.^[21]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(6)(iii).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(10)

[^ 3] See INA 101(a)(15)(O). See INA 214(a)(2)(A).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(1)(i).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(3)(ii).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(1)(ii)(A)(1).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(ii)(C).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(6)(iii).

[^ 9] Activities engaged in during the beneficiary's trips outside the United States should not by themselves be used to limit a validity period. An officer should primarily focus on the relatedness of the activities inside the United States to determine whether the beneficiary is engaged in an event for purposes of the validity period.

[^ 10] Pursuant to 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(iv)(D), in the case of a petition filed for an artist or entertainer, a petitioner may add additional performances or engagements during the validity period of the petition without filing an amended petition, provided the additional performances or engagements require a person of O-1 caliber.

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.1(l)(2).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(4).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 214.1(c)(1). Where a petitioner demonstrates eligibility for a requested extension, it may be granted at the discretion of USCIS. There is no appeal from the denial of a request for extension of stay. See 8 CFR 214.1(c)(5).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(12)(ii).

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(13).

[^ 16] See INA 248. See 8 CFR 248.1(a). An example of a violation of status is if, generally, the nonimmigrant's current status expires before filing a Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) with USCIS or by working without authorization.

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 248.3(a).

[^ 18] There is no appeal from a change of status denial. See 8 CFR 248.3(g).

[^ 19] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(13).

[^ 20] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(iv)(C).

[^ 21] See 8 CFR 214.2(o)(2)(iv)(G).

Part N - Athletes and Entertainers (P)

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

The Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) and implementing regulations provide that qualifying nonimmigrant athletes and entertainers may be approved for P nonimmigrant classification.

B. Background

The Immigration Act of 1990 added the O and P nonimmigrant classes to INA 101(a)(15).^[1] These new classes provided for the admission of artists, athletes, entertainers, and other persons of extraordinary ability. However, as a result of the passage of the Armed Forces Immigration Adjustment Act of 1991, the use of the O and P classifications was delayed until April 1, 1992.^[2] Before the enactment of these laws, artists, athletes, and other performers were admitted under the H-1 (distinguished merit and ability), H-2 (temporary agricultural or non-agricultural), or B-1 (temporary business visitor) categories. The 1990 amendments also revised the H classifications, effectively barring their continued use by most performing artists and athletes.

C. Legal Authorities

- INA 101(a)(15)(P) - Definition of P nonimmigrant classification
- INA 204(i) - Professional athletes
- INA 214(a)(2)(B) - Admission of or period of stay for P nonimmigrants
- INA 214(c)(1) - Importing employer
- INA 214(c)(4) - Petition of importing employer for P nonimmigrants^[3]
- INA 214(c)(5)(B) - Return transportation
- INA 214(c)(6) - Consultation requirement
- 8 CFR 214.2(p) - Requirements for P nonimmigrant classification

Footnotes

[^ 1] See the Immigration Act of 1990, Pub. L. 101-649 (PDF) (November 29, 1990).

[^ 2] See Pub. L. 102-110 (PDF) (October 1, 1991).

[^ 3] The Creating Opportunities for Minor League Professionals, Entertainers, and Teams through Legal Entry (COMPETE) Act of 2006 amended INA 214(c)(4)(A). See the COMPETE Act of 2006, Pub. L. 109-463 (PDF) (December 22, 2006).

A. P-1 Nonimmigrant Classification

1. Internationally Recognized Athlete (P-1A Nonimmigrant)

The P-1A nonimmigrant classification includes individual athletes with an internationally recognized reputation and members of an athletic team that is internationally recognized.^[1] The athlete or team must be coming to the United States to participate in an athletic competition which has a distinguished reputation and which requires participation of an athlete or athletic team with an international reputation.^[2]

The regulatory requirements that the prospective competitions have a “distinguished reputation” and “require” the participation or services of an internationally recognized athlete or team derive from the statutory language stating that a qualifying athlete is one who performs “at an internationally recognized level of performance.”^[3] Accordingly, USCIS interprets this regulatory language consistent with the statutory reference to athletes performing at an “internationally recognized level of performance.” More specifically, the relevant statutory and regulatory provisions do not require that an athlete or team be coming to participate in a competition that is limited to internationally recognized participants. Rather, it is sufficient for the petitioner to show that the competition is at an internationally recognized level of performance such that it requires that caliber of athlete or team to be among its participants or that some level of participation by internationally recognized athletes is required to maintain its current distinguished reputation in the sport.

Relevant considerations for determining whether competitions are at an internationally recognized level of performance such that they require the participation of an internationally recognized athlete or team include, but are not limited to:

- The level of viewership, attendance, revenue, and major media coverage of the events;
- The extent of past participation by internationally recognized athletes or teams;
- The international ranking of athletes competing; or
- Documented merits requirements for participants.

If the record shows the participation of internationally recognized caliber competitors is currently unusual or uncommon, this may indicate that the event may not currently be at an internationally recognized level of performance. In addition, while not necessarily determinative, the fact that a competition is open to competitors at all skill levels may be a relevant negative factor in analyzing whether it is at an internationally recognized level of performance. If the event includes differentiated categories of competition based on skill level, the focus should be on the reputation and level of recognition of the specific category of competition in which the athlete or team seeks to participate.^[4]

Individual athletes who are internationally recognized may also be coming to the United States to join a U.S.-based team.^[5] When a petition is for a foreign athletic team, each member of an internationally recognized athletic team may be granted P-1A classification based on that relationship, but may not perform services separate and apart from the athletic team.^[6]

2. COMPETE Act [Reserved]

3. Member of Internationally Recognized Entertainment Group (P-1B Nonimmigrant)

The P-1B nonimmigrant classification for entertainers applies to:

- Members of an internationally recognized entertainment group coming to the United States; and
- A person coming to the United States to join, as a member, an internationally recognized group, which can be based in the United States or abroad.^[7]

A member of an internationally-recognized entertainment group may be granted P-1B classification based on that relationship, but may not perform services separate and apart from the entertainment group. The P-1B nonimmigrant who is a member of an internationally recognized entertainment group must be coming to the United States to perform with the group as a unit. In addition, the entertainment group must be internationally recognized as outstanding for a sustained and substantial period of time, and 75 percent of the group must have had a sustained and substantial relationship with the group for at least 1 year.^[8] The P-1B nonimmigrant classification is not appropriate for a person performing as a solo entertainer.

Provisions for Certain Entertainment Groups

The regulations allow for three special provisions for certain entertainment groups:

- A waiver of the international recognition and 1-year group membership requirement for circus personnel (both those who perform and those who constitute an integral and essential part of the performance), provided that they are coming to join a circus or circus group that has been recognized nationally as outstanding for a sustained and substantial period of time;
- A waiver of the international recognition requirement, in consideration of special circumstances, for some entertainment groups recognized nationally as being outstanding in its discipline for a sustained and substantial period of time; and
- A waiver of the 1-year sustained and substantial relationship requirement for 75 percent of the group due to exigent circumstances.^[9]

Group – Defined

The term "group" is defined as two or more persons established as one entity or unit to perform or to provide a service.^[10] "Member of a group" means a person who is actually performing the entertainment services.^[11] It does not include persons who assist in the presentation who are not on the stage (such as lighting or sound technicians). These support personnel would need to be petitioned for as essential support (P-1S) and a separate petition must be filed for them.^[12]

If a solo artist or entertainer traditionally performs on stage with the same group of people, such as back-up singers or musicians, the act may be classified as a group. This group would then need to meet the "75 percent rule." The "75 percent rule" means that 75 percent of the members of the group must have been performing entertainment services for the group for a minimum of 1 year or more.^[13] If the group does not meet the 75 percent rule, the artist or entertainer would need to qualify for another classification, such as an O-1 nonimmigrant (rather than P-1B) and the back-up band as O-2 nonimmigrants.

B. Performers Under Reciprocal Exchange or Culturally Unique Programs

1. Individual Performer or Part of a Group Performing Under a Reciprocal Exchange Program (P-2 Nonimmigrant)

A P-2 nonimmigrant is a person coming to the United States to perform as an artist or entertainer, individually or as part of a group and who seeks to perform under a reciprocal exchange program which is between organization(s) in the United States and organization(s) in one or more foreign states.^[14]

2. Artist or Entertainer as Part of Culturally Unique Program (P-3 Nonimmigrant)

A P-3 nonimmigrant is a person coming to the United States solely to perform, teach, or coach under a commercial or noncommercial program that is culturally unique.^[15]

C. Essential Support Personnel

Essential support personnel are eligible for a P-1S, P-2S, or P-3S nonimmigrant classification if the petitioner can establish that they are an integral part of the performance of the P-1, P-2, or P-3 athlete, team, entertainer, or entertainment group because he or she performs support services that cannot be readily performed by a U.S. worker and which are essential to the successful performance of services by the P-1, P-2, or P-3 nonimmigrant.^[16]

D. Treatment of Family Members

The spouse and unmarried children may qualify for P-4 derivative classification. They are entitled to the same period of admission and limitations as the beneficiary of the P petition. They are not allowed to accept employment unless they have been independently granted employment authorization. If the spouse or unmarried child is in the United States in another nonimmigrant classification, he or she must separately file an Application to Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-539) and, if applicable, Supplemental Information for Application to Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-539A) to request a change of status to P-4. The spouse or unmarried child must also separately file Form I-539 if seeking an extension of stay based on the principal nonimmigrant's stay being extended.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(1)(ii)(A)(1). See INA 214(c)(4)(A)(i)(I). For information regarding additional categories of persons eligible for P-1A classification under the Creating Opportunities for Minor League Professionals, Entertainers, and Teams through Legal Entry (COMPETE) Act of 2006, see Pub. L. 109-463 (PDF), 120 Stat. 3477 (December 22, 2006). See INA 214(c)(4)(A).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(i) and 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(ii)(A).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(i) and 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(ii)(A). See INA 214(c)(4)(A)(i)(I) and INA 214(c)(4)(A)(ii)(I).

[^ 4] For instance, some of the top marathons allow members of the public to participate in the general event, but also include a category of elite runners who compete against each other for prize money. In such a case, if an athlete is seeking to enter the United States to participate in the elite category, it is appropriate for an officer to consider whether the elite competition is at an internationally recognized level of performance such that it requires the participation of an internationally recognized athlete.

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(ii)(B).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(i)(B).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(1)(ii)(A)(2). The P-1B classification should not be limited to individual entertainers coming to the United States to join only foreign-based entertainment groups. Rather, as the regulation at 8 CFR 214.2(p)(3) focuses on whether the group is "internationally recognized," which is defined as "having a high level of achievement in a field evidenced by a degree of skill and recognition substantially above that ordinarily encountered, to the extent that such achievement is renowned, leading, or well-known in more than one country," the P-1B classification should include individual entertainers coming to the United States to join U.S.-based internationally recognized entertainment groups.

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(i)(B).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(iii)(C).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(3).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(3).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(iv).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(i)(B).

[^ 14] See INA 101(a)(15)(P)(ii). See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(1)(ii)(B).

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(1)(ii)(C).

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(iv). See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(5)(iii). See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(6)(iii).

Chapter 3 - Petitioners

A petitioner seeking to classify a person as a P nonimmigrant must submit a Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) on his or her behalf. The petition must be properly filed with the required fee in accordance with the Form I-129 filing instructions.^[1] If the beneficiary will work for more than one employer within the same time period, each employer must file a separate petition unless an agent files the petition and certain requirements are met.^[2]

A request for an extension of stay for a P nonimmigrant or change of status for a person who is present in the United States in another nonimmigrant classification must be filed on Form I-129.^[3] If the person is already in the United States in a P nonimmigrant status and a new employer wishes to petition for him or her, that new employer must use Form I-129 to file for a change of employer or to add an employer, and to request an extension of stay for the person.^[4]

If there are any material changes in the terms or conditions of the P nonimmigrant's employment, the petitioner must file an amended petition. However, a petitioner may add additional, similar performances, engagements, or competitions during the validity period without filing an amended petition.^[5]

A. Eligible Petitioners

The following petitioners may submit Form I-129 seeking to classify a person as a P nonimmigrant:

- Petitions for P-1 nonimmigrants may be filed by a U.S. employer, a U.S. sponsoring organization, a U.S. agent, or a foreign employer through a U.S. agent;
- Petitions for P-2 nonimmigrants may be filed by the U.S. labor organization which negotiated the reciprocal exchange agreement, the sponsoring organization, or a U.S. employer; and

- Petitions for P-3 nonimmigrants may be filed by the sponsoring organization or a U.S. employer.
[6]

Agents as Petitioners

A U.S. agent may file a P-1 petition in the case where the beneficiary is in an occupation where workers are generally self-employed or use agents to arrange short-term employment with multiple employers, or where a foreign employer authorizes a U.S. agent to act on its behalf.[7]

B. Multiple Beneficiaries

In some circumstances, outlined below, a petitioner may file for multiple beneficiaries on the same petition.

P-1 Petition

A petitioner may file for multiple P-1A beneficiaries.[8] In addition, a petitioner may file for multiple beneficiaries that are members of a group seeking classification based on the reputation of the group.[9] However, a separate petition must be submitted for the essential support (non-performing) personnel.[10] More than one P-1 essential support personnel may be included on a petition.

P-2 Petition

P-2 group members can be included on a single petition. A separate petition must be submitted for the essential support personnel.[11]

P-3 Petition

P-3 group members can be included on a single petition. A separate petition must be submitted for the essential support personnel.[12]

Footnotes

[^ 1] Information on filing locations can be found on the Direct Filing Addresses for Form I-129, Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker webpage.

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(2)(iv)(B). See Requirements for Agents and Sponsors Filing as Petitioners for the O and P Visa Classifications (PDF) (PDF, 790.07 KB), HQ 70/6.2.18, HQ 70/6.2.19, issued November 20, 2009.

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.1(c)(1).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(2)(iv)(C)(1).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(2)(iv)(D).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(2)(i).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(2)(iv)(E). See Requirements for Agents and Sponsors Filing as Petitioners for the O and P Visa Classifications (PDF) (PDF, 790.07 KB), HQ 70/6.2.18, HQ 70/6.2.19, issued November 20, 2009.

[^ 8] See INA 214(c)(4)(G).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(2)(iv)(F).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(2)(i).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(2)(i).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(2)(i).

Chapter 4 - Documentation and Evidence

A. Evidence for P-1 Classification

A P-1 petition for classification as an internationally recognized athlete, team, or entertainment group must be supported by evidence that the person, group, or team is internationally recognized as outstanding in the discipline and is entering to perform services which require such a level of performance.^[1] If the petition is for a group of entertainers, the petition must contain evidence that at least 75 percent of the group have been performing with the group for at least 1 year.^[2] The petitioner must submit a consultation from a labor organization, if one exists.^[3]

Internationally Recognized Individual Athlete or Athletic Team

For a team, the petitioner must submit evidence that the team as a unit is internationally recognized. For an individual athlete, the petitioner must submit evidence that the athlete has achieved international recognition in the sport based on his or her reputation.^[4]

A petition for an athletic team or individual athlete must include a tendered contract with a “major United States sports league or team” or tendered contract in an individual sport commensurate with international recognition in that sport, if such contracts are normally executed in the sport.^[5] USCIS interprets “major United States sports league” as a league that has a distinguished reputation that is commensurate with an internationally recognized level of performance, and “major United States sports team” as a team that participates in such a league, consistent with the statutory standard for internationally recognized athletes.^[6]

Therefore, under this interpretation, the league (or the team within the league) may be one where the level of competition in the league is such that the league (or a team within the league) would not be able to remain competitive or maintain its current distinguished reputation in the sport without the services of at least some internationally recognized caliber athletes.

Factors that may be considered include, but are not limited to: information about the structure of the league or the differentiated categories of competition; documentation showing a pattern of participation by internationally recognized athletes; level of viewership, attendance, revenue, and major media coverage about the league or its teams or competitions; international ranking of athletes competing; or documented merits requirements for league participants.^[7]

The petitioner must also submit documentation of at least two forms of the following:^[8]

- Evidence of significant participation in a prior season with a major U.S. sports league;^[9]
- Evidence of participation in international competition with a national team;
- Evidence of significant participation in a prior season for a U.S. college or university in intercollegiate competition;
- A written statement from an official of the governing body of the sport detailing the person's or team's international recognition;
- A written statement from a recognized expert or member of the sports media detailing the person's or team's international recognition;
- Evidence that the person or team is ranked if the sport has international rankings; or
- Evidence the person or team has received a significant honor or award in the sport.

Entertainment Group

In general, the petitioner must submit evidence of the group's nomination or receipt of significant international awards or prizes for outstanding achievement in its field or three forms of the following types of documentation:^[10]

- Critical reviews, advertisements, publicity releases, publications, contracts, or endorsements showing that the group has performed and will perform as a starring or leading entertainment group in productions or events with a distinguished reputation;
- Reviews in major newspapers, trade journals, magazines, or other published material showing the group's international recognition and acclaim for outstanding achievement in its field;

- Articles in newspapers, trade journals, publications, or testimonials showing that the group has performed and will perform services as a leading or starring group for organizations and establishments that have a distinguished reputation;
- Ratings, standing in the field, box office receipts, recording or video sales, and other achievements in the field, as reported in articles in major newspapers, trade journals, or other publications showing major commercial or critically acclaimed success;
- Testimonials showing that the group has achieved significant recognition for achievements from organizations, critics, government agencies, or other recognized experts in the field; or
- Contracts or other reliable evidence that the group has either commanded or will command a high salary or other substantial remuneration for services comparable to others similarly situated in the field.

Circus Group

The petitioner must submit evidence the beneficiary is coming to join (perform in) a circus that has been recognized nationally as outstanding for a sustained and substantial period or as part of such a circus.^[11]

Essential Support Personnel

The petitioner must submit a statement describing the support personnel's prior essentiality and skills and experience with the principal beneficiary, group, or team.^[12]

B. Evidence for P-2 Nonimmigrant Classification

A petition filed on behalf of a person seeking P-2 nonimmigrant classification should be submitted with the following supporting evidence: the consultation,^[13] a copy of the reciprocal agreement, and evidence that the beneficiaries are subject to the reciprocal exchange.^[14] A list of negotiated P-2 reciprocal agreements is maintained on the P-2 Individual Performer or Part of a Group Entering to Perform Under a Reciprocal Exchange Program webpage. If a reciprocal agreement is submitted other than those listed, the officer must review the agreement to determine if the agreement adheres to the regulatory standard.^[15]

C. Evidence for P-3 Nonimmigrant Classification

A petition filed on behalf of a person seeking P-3 nonimmigrant classification should be submitted with the following supporting evidence:^[16]

- Affidavits, testimonials, or letters from recognized experts attesting to the authenticity of the person's or the group's skills in performing, presenting, coaching, or teaching the unique or

- traditional art form and giving the credentials of the expert, including the basis of his or her knowledge of the person's or group's skill; or
- Documentation that the performance of the person or group is culturally unique, as evidenced by reviews in newspapers, journals, or other published materials.

In addition, the petition must be submitted with evidence that all of the performances or presentations will be culturally unique events.

D. Consultation Requirement

1. Statutorily Mandated Consultation Process

Along with the supporting documentation, a statutorily mandated consultation process exists for all P petitions.^[17] This consultation must be from an appropriate labor organization and address the nature of the work to be done and the person's qualifications or, for certain classifications, the organization may indicate it has no objection to approval of the petition.^[18] The petitioner has the burden of furnishing a consultation.

The source and contents of the consultation varies, depending upon the type of petition as shown in the table below.

Consultation Requirement
Petition	Source and Contents of Consultation
P-1	Consultation with an appropriate labor organization is required if one exists. The consultation must evaluate the person's (group's) qualifications and state whether the services or performances are appropriate for an internationally recognized athlete or entertainment group. ^[19] The labor organization may also issue a letter of no objection.
P-2	Consultation with an appropriate labor organization to verify that a bona fide reciprocal agreement exists. ^[20]
P-3	Consultation with an appropriate labor organization to evaluate the cultural uniqueness of the entertainer(s) and whether the performances are in a cultural program appropriate for the P-3 classification. ^[21] The labor organization may also issue a letter of no objection.

Petition	Source and Contents of Consultation
Essential Support Personnel	Consultation with an appropriate labor organization. Consultation must evaluate the essential character of the work, the relationship between the principal and support workers, and the availability of U.S. workers to do the job. ^[22] The labor organization may also issue a letter of no objection.

The regulations specify mandatory response times for consultations for expedited cases and prescribe action to be taken when a requested opinion is not received.^[23] The consultations are advisory in nature only and are not binding on USCIS.^[24] A negative consultation does not automatically result in the denial of the petition, as decisions must be based on the totality of the evidence. Accordingly, if the petitioner submits evidence that overcomes a negative advisory opinion and which establishes the merits of the person, USCIS may approve the petition.

2. Petitions Meriting Expedited Processing

If USCIS has determined that a petition merits expeditious handling, USCIS contacts the appropriate labor organization and requests an advisory opinion if one is not submitted by the petitioner. The organization then has 24 hours to respond to the request. If no response to the request is received, then USCIS renders a decision on the petition without an advisory opinion.^[25]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(i). INA 214(c)(4)(A) provides more information regarding petitions filed under the Creating Opportunities for Minor League Professionals, Entertainers, and Teams through Legal Entry (COMPETE) Act of 2006. See Pub. L. 109-463 (PDF) (December 22, 2006).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(iii). Exceptions to some requirements apply to certain entertainment groups under 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(iii)(C). For more information, see Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements, Section A, P-1 Nonimmigrant Classification [2 USCIS-PM N.2(A)].

[^ 3] See Section D, Consultation Requirement [2 USCIS-PM N.4(D)]. See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(2)(ii)(D). See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(7).

[^ 4] 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(ii)(B).

[^ 5] 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(ii)(B)(1).

[^ 6] See INA 214(c)(4)(A)(i)(I) and INA 101(a)(15)(P)(i). USCIS provided this interpretation in its policy guidance on March 26, 2021 in order to provide increased clarity for USCIS officers, to promote consistent adjudications, and to increase transparency for prospective petitioners. While alternative interpretations of the undefined regulatory phrase “major United States sports league or team” are possible, USCIS believes that this interpretation most closely aligns with the statute being interpreted, which requires that internationally recognized athletes perform “at an internationally recognized level of performance.” In addition, the interpretation is consistent with USCIS’ longstanding adjudicative focus on that statutory requirement.

[^ 7] For more information, see the discussion of internationally recognized athletes in Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements, Section A, P-1 Nonimmigrant Classification [2 USCIS-PM N.2(A)].

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(ii)(B)(2).

[^ 9] See previous discussion regarding the interpretation of “major United States sports league or team.”

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(iii)(B). Exceptions to some requirements apply to certain entertainment groups under 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(iii)(C). For further discussion, see Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements, Section A, P-1 Nonimmigrant Classification [2 USCIS-PM N.2(A)].

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(iii)(C).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(iv).

[^ 13] See Section D, Consultation Requirement [2 USCIS-PM N.4(D)].

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(5)(ii).

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(5)(ii).

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(6)(ii). See Matter of Skirball Cultural Center (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 799 (AAO 2012).

[^ 17] See INA 214(c)(4)(D). See INA 214(c)(4)(E).

[^ 18] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(7).

[^ 19] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(7)(ii). See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(7)(iii).

[^ 20] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(7)(iv).

[^ 21] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(7)(v).

[^ 22] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(7)(vi).

[^ 23] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(7)(i)(E).

[^ 24] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(7)(i)(D).

[^ 25] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(7)(i)(E).

Chapter 5 - Adjudication

A. Approvals

If the necessary required evidence has been submitted and all requirements have been met, the officer approves the petition and issues a Notice of Action (Form I-797) showing the period of validity and the beneficiary's name and classification.

1. Validity Period of Petition for Athletes and Entertainers

The approval period for a P nonimmigrant petition must conform to the limits outlined in the table below.

Approval Period for a P Nonimmigrant Petition

Nonimmigrant Classification	Validity Period
P-1 (individual athlete)	Up to 5 years ^[1]
P-1 (team or entertainment group)	Period of time determined by USCIS to be necessary to complete the event or activity, but not to exceed 1 year ^[2]
P-2	Period of time determined by USCIS to be necessary to complete the event or activity, but not to exceed 1 year ^[3]
P-3	Period of time determined by USCIS to be necessary to complete the event or activity, but not to exceed 1 year ^[4]

If the petition is approved after the date the petitioner indicated services would begin, the approved petition shows a validity period commencing with the date of approval and up to the date requested by the petitioner, not to exceed the maximum period described above.^[5]

If the petitioner filed Form I-129 to extend the validity of the original petition in order to continue or complete the same activities or events specified in the original petition, an extension of stay may be authorized in increments of up to 1 year. P-1 individual athletes may be extended for up to 5 years, not to exceed 10 years in total.^[6]

A beneficiary may be admitted to the United States for the validity period of the petition, plus a period of up to 10 days before the validity period begins and 10 days after the validity period ends. The beneficiary may not work except during the validity period of the petition.^[7]

2. Validity Period of Petition for Essential Support Personnel

Current DHS regulations provide that an approved P-1 petition for an individual athlete (also known as a P-1A) are valid for a period of up to 5 years.^[8] The general rule for the approval period of a P-1 petition for essential support personnel (also known as P-1S) states that the approved petition must only be valid for a period of time determined by USCIS to be necessary to complete the event for which the P-1 is admitted, not to exceed 1 year.^[9]

The exception to that general rule is the period for an extension of stay to continue or complete the same event or activity for essential support personnel of a P-1A individual athlete, which may be approved for a period of up to 5 years, for a total period of stay not to exceed 10 years.^[10] USCIS interprets this exception at 8 CFR 214.2(p)(14) consistent with its plain language, such that the 5-year extension of stay for a P-1S for an individual athlete is only available when the petitioner requests an extension of stay (and not consulate notification) to continue or complete the same event or activity for a beneficiary who is in the United States in P-1S status at the time the petition extension is properly filed, and the extension of stay request is approved.^[11]

Therefore, while the initial validity period of a P-1 petition for essential support personnel is limited to 1 year or less, the validity period of an extension of stay of essential support personnel of a P-1A individual athlete may exceed 1 year thereafter, provided that:

- The purpose is to continue or complete the same event or activity for which they were admitted; and
- The extension of stay validity period does not exceed the period of time necessary to complete the event (not to exceed 5 years, or a total period of stay of 10 years).

B. Denials

If the requirements have not been met, the officer should deny the petition. The petitioner must be notified of the decision, the reasons for denial, and the right to appeal the denial.^[12] The denial of a petition to classify a beneficiary as a P nonimmigrant may be appealed to the Administrative Appeals Office. The appeal must be filed on a Notice of Appeal or Motion (Form I-290B) within 30 days of the decision.^[13] There is no appeal from a decision to deny an extension of stay to the beneficiary.^[14]

If the officer decides to incorporate into the denial decision a negative advisory opinion which USCIS has obtained (separate from one submitted by the petitioner), he or she must disclose the nature of the advisory opinion to the petitioner in a Notice of Intent to Deny (NOID) and give the petitioner an opportunity for rebuttal.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(8)(iii)(A).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(8)(iii)(A). See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(8)(iii)(B).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(8)(iii)(B).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(8)(iii)(C).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(8)(ii)(A).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(14). For guidance on applying the period of authorized stay for individual athletes, see Procedures for Applying the Period of Stay for P-1 Nonimmigrant Individual Athletes (PDF, 476.13 KB), HQ 70/6.2.19, issued March 6, 2009.

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(12).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(8)(iii)(A).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(8)(iii)(E).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(14). See Procedures for Applying the Period of Authorized Stay for P-1S Nonimmigrant Individual Athletes Essential Support Personnel (PDF) (PDF, 327.89 KB), HQ 70/6.2.19, issued July 14, 2009.

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(14)(i), which requires a petitioner seeking an extension to file both an extension of the petition and an extension of stay, and also states that the nonimmigrant applies for a visa at a consular office abroad if the nonimmigrant leaves the United States while the extension requests are pending.

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 103.3.

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 103.3(a)(2).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 214.1(c)(5). While requests to extend petition validity and the person's stay for P nonimmigrants are combined on the petition, USCIS makes a separate determination on each request. See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(14)(i).

Chapter 6 - Post-Adjudication Actions

A. Substitution of Beneficiaries

A petitioner may request a substitution for one or more members of a group on an approved petition by sending a letter requesting substitution and a copy of the petitioner's approval notice to a consular officer where the person will apply for a visa or immigration officer at a port of entry where the person will apply for admission.^[1] A petitioner may not request substitutions for support personnel; rather, the petitioner must submit a new petition.^[2]

If a group is already in the United States performing with approved P-1 classification and the group now needs to add or substitute members, the additions or substitutes should be petitioned for as P-1s. In such instances, the petitioner must provide evidence of the original approval and the required consultation. In situations involving illness or exigent circumstances, USCIS may waive the 1 year relationship requirements.^[3]

B. Revocations

The petitioner should immediately notify USCIS of any changes in the terms and conditions of employment of the beneficiary that may affect eligibility. USCIS may revoke a petition at any time, even after the validity of the petition has expired.

1. Automatic Revocation

The approval of an unexpired petition is automatically revoked if the petitioner, or the employer in a petition filed by an agent, goes out of business, files a written withdrawal of the petition, or notifies USCIS that the beneficiary is no longer employed by the petitioner.^[4]

2. Revocation on Notice

When there is no provision that would result in automatic revocation, USCIS may issue a Notice of Intent to Revoke (NOIR) the approval of the petition, such as in cases where:

- The beneficiary is no longer employed by the petitioner in the capacity specified in the petition;
- The statement of facts contained in the petition was not true and correct;

- The petitioner violated the terms or conditions of the approved petition;
- The petitioner violated the statutory or regulatory provisions for P nonimmigrant classification; or
- The approval of the petition violated the regulations or involved gross error.^[5]

The NOIR should contain a detailed description of the grounds for the revocation and the time period allowed for the petitioner's rebuttal.^[6] USCIS considers all relevant evidence presented in determining whether to revoke the petition. A petition that has been revoked on notice may be appealed to the Administrative Appeals Office.^[7] A petition that is automatically revoked may not be appealed.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(2)(iv)(H).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(2)(iv)(H).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(4)(iii)(c)(3).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(10)(ii).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(10)(iii)(A).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.2(p)(10)(iii)(B).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 103.3.

Part O - Religious Workers (R)

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

The Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) provides separate immigration classifications for religious workers depending on whether they seek to work in the United States on a permanent or a temporary basis.^[1] Noncitizens working in the United States temporarily as a minister or in a religious vocation or occupation are eligible for the nonimmigrant religious worker (R-1) classification.^[2]

B. Background

In 1990, Congress created new immigration classifications for religious workers, including the R-1 nonimmigrant classification and a special immigrant religious worker classification.^[3]

In 2005, the USCIS Office of Fraud Detection and National Security (FDNS) conducted a Benefit Fraud Assessment of the special immigrant religious worker program by randomly selecting and reviewing pending and approved cases. As a result, USCIS issued a report finding significant fraud in the use of this classification.^[4] This led USCIS to reconsider how it administered the special immigrant religious worker program.

In 2008, USCIS promulgated regulations that added requirements to establish eligibility for the special immigrant and nonimmigrant religious worker programs.^[5] In part, the regulations introduced a requirement that a beneficiary's prospective employer submit a petition for all R-1 nonimmigrants, including those outside of the United States.^[6] The regulations also provided USCIS with discretionary authority to verify the submitted evidence through any means it determines appropriate, up to and including an on-site inspection of the petitioning organization.^[7]

C. Legal Authorities

- INA 101(a)(15)(R) - Definition of R nonimmigrant classification
- 8 CFR 214.2(r) - Religious workers

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 101(a)(27)(C) and INA 101(a)(15)(R). See 8 CFR 204.5(m). The INA affords permanent religious workers a special immigrant status. Ministers and non-ministers in religious vocations and occupations may immigrate to or adjust status in the United States for the purpose of performing religious work in a full-time, compensated position under the employment-based 4th-preference visa classification. See INA 101(a)(27)(C). For more information about adjusting to lawful permanent residence as a special immigrant religious worker, see Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part F, Special Immigrant-Based (EB-4) Adjustment, Chapter 2, Religious Workers [7 USCIS-PM F.2].

[^ 2] See INA 101(a)(15)(R).

[^ 3] See Section 209 of the Immigration Act of 1990 (IMMACT 90), Pub. L. 101-649 (PDF), 104 Stat. 4978, 5027 (November 29, 1990), creating new INA 101(a)(15)(R). See Section 151 of IMMACT 90, Pub. L. 101-649 (PDF), 104 Stat. 4978, 5004 (November 29, 1990), creating new INA 101(a)(27)(C).

[^ 4] See Religious Worker Benefit Fraud Assessment Summary (PDF, 121.85 KB) (July 2006).

[^ 5] See 73 FR 72276 (PDF) (Nov. 26, 2008).

[^ 6] Previously, a prospective nonimmigrant outside the United States could apply at a consular office overseas or, if visa-exempt, seek initial admission into the United States. See 72 FR 20442, 20444 (Apr. 25, 2007).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(16).

Chapter 2 - General Requirements

A. Overview

The temporary nonimmigrant religious worker (R-1) classification allows religious workers to enter the United States, or change status from another nonimmigrant category, in order to temporarily perform services as a minister of religion or in a religious occupation or vocation.^[1]

A noncitizen cannot self-petition for R-1 classification.^[2] A U.S. employer must file a Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129), seeking to classify a beneficiary as an R-1 nonimmigrant. In general, the petitioning R-1 employer must submit evidence demonstrating that:

- The petitioner is either a bona fide non-profit religious organization, or a bona fide organization that is affiliated with the religious denomination;^[3]
- The beneficiary has been a member of the same type of religious denomination as that of the petitioner for the 2 years immediately preceding the time of application for admission;^[4] and
- The beneficiary is entering the United States for the purpose of undertaking a compensated (either salaried or non-salaried) position or, in certain circumstances, an uncompensated position that is part of an established program for temporary, uncompensated missionary work.
^[5]

B. Filing Process

USCIS requires a petitioning employer to file the Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129), with the R-1 Classification Supplement and required fee, for all persons seeking an R-1 nonimmigrant classification.^[6] This petition requirement also applies to visa-exempt religious workers, such as Canadian citizens.^[7]

To qualify for R-1 nonimmigrant classification, the petitioning U.S. employer must submit the R-1 Employer Attestation that is included in the R-1 Classification Supplement and evidence documenting that the petitioner and beneficiary meet the requirements set forth below.^[8]

The petitioner should list all locations where the R-1 nonimmigrant will be working on the Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129).^[9] If it is anticipated that the R-1 nonimmigrant will be moved between different locations within a larger organization, that larger organization should petition for the worker. For example, a minister may move from ministry to ministry within a denomination, including at a different or additional unit of the religious denomination with a different federal tax number if the petitioning organization oversees all of these locations.

An R-1 nonimmigrant may work for more than one bona fide religious organization at the same time.^[10] However, except as described in the previous paragraph (involving a larger employer overseeing multiple locations), when the beneficiary works for more than one employer, each employing organization must submit a separate Form I-129 and R-1 Classification Supplement, including the R-1 Employer Attestation, along with the appropriate documentation and fees.^[11]

If a petitioner believes that one of the requirements for this classification substantially burdens the organization's exercise of religion, it may seek an exemption under the Religious Freedom Restoration Act of 1993 (RFRA).^[12] A written request for the exemption from a provision's requirement should accompany the initial filing, and it must explain how the provision:

- Requires participation in an activity prohibited by a sincerely held religious belief; or
- Prevents participation in conduct motivated by a sincerely held religious belief.

The petitioner must support the request with relevant documentation.^[13] The petitioner bears the burden of showing that it qualifies for an RFRA exemption. USCIS decides exemption requests on a case-by-case basis.

Footnotes

[^ 1] In some circumstances, another nonimmigrant classification, such as the business visitor (B-1) classification, may be more appropriate for certain members of religious and charitable activities. Discussion of the B-1 visa is beyond the scope of this Part, but the B-1 classification may include religious ministers who are on an evangelical tour or who are exchanging pulpits with U.S. counterparts, certain missionary workers, or participants in certain voluntary service programs. See 9 FAM 402.16-12, B Visas for Certain Religious Activity. See 9 FAM 402.2-5(C)(1), Ministers of Religion and Missionaries.

[^ 2] While special immigrant religious workers may self-petition, R-1 nonimmigrants may not do so. See 73 FR 72276 (PDF) (Nov. 26, 2008).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(3).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(3) and 8 CFR 214.2(r)(8)(ii).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(1) and 8 CFR 214.2(r)(11).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(1).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(4)(i).

[^ 8] The R-1 Classification Supplement is part of the Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(8)(x).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(2).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(1)(v) and 8 CFR 214.2(r)(2). For information on fees, see the Fee Schedule (Form G-1055 (PDF, 291.8 KB)).

[^ 12] See Pub. L. 103-141 (PDF), 107 Stat. 1488 (November 16, 1993).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 103.2(b).

Chapter 3 - Petitioner Requirements

A. Qualifying Organization

The petitioner must attest it is either a bona fide non-profit religious organization or a bona fide organization that is affiliated with a religious denomination and is exempt from taxation. The authorizing official must sign the attestation, certifying that the attestation is true and correct.^[1]

Bona Fide Non-profit Religious Organization^[2]

A religious organization seeking to qualify as a “bona fide non-profit” religious organization in the United States is required to submit evidence that:

- The organization is exempt from federal tax requirements as described in Section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code (IRC) of 1986,^[3] and
- The organization has a currently valid determination letter from the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) confirming such exemption.^[4]

In some cases, the petitioning entity may fall within the umbrella of a parent organization that has received a group tax exemption from the IRS. In these group tax-exempt cases, the petitioner may use the parent organization’s IRS determination letter, provided it submits that letter and presents evidence that it is covered under the group exemption granted to the parent organization and it is authorized by the parent organization to use its group tax exemption.

Examples on what may be submitted to show that a petitioner may use a group tax exemption letter from a parent organization include, but are not limited to:

- A letter from the organization holding a group exemption as evidence that the petitioner is covered by such exemption; the letter from the organization named in the exemption must specifically acknowledge that the petitioner falls under the group exemption;
- Copies of pages from a directory for the parent organization showing the petitioner as a member of the group;^[5]
- The parent organization's website that lists the petitioner as a member of the group covered by the exemption; and
- An IRS letter confirming the petitioner's coverage under the parent organization exemption.

While the IRS does not require religious organizations to obtain a determination letter, USCIS regulations require petitioners to submit a determination letter with the R-1 petition. USCIS reviews the information contained within the letter to determine if the IRS classified the organization as a religious organization, or as other than a religious organization. Determination letters from the IRS do not expire, but the IRS can revoke them. The IRS offers a web-based Tax Exempt Organization Search tool to verify an organization's tax-exempt status. An organization may use this tool for its own purposes to obtain a printout showing its currently valid tax-exemption. However, such a printout does not satisfy the requirement for submission of an IRS determination letter.

Bona Fide Organization Affiliated with Religious Denomination^[6]

A petitioner qualifies as a bona fide organization that is affiliated with a religious denomination if:

- The organization is closely associated with the religious denomination;
- The organization is exempt from federal tax requirements as described in IRC 501(c)(3); and
- The organization has a currently valid determination letter from the IRS confirming such exemption.^[7]

B. Petitioner Attestations^[8]

The petitioner must provide information and specifically attest to the following (in addition to attesting that it is a qualifying R-1 employer):

- The number of members of the petitioning employer's organization;

- The number of employees who work at the same location where the religious worker will be employed, and a summary of those employees' responsibilities;
- The number of religious workers holding special immigrant religious worker status or R-1 nonimmigrant status currently employed or employed within the past 5 years by the petitioning employer's organization;
- The number of special immigrant religious worker and R-1 nonimmigrant petitions and applications filed by or on behalf of any religious workers for employment by the petitioning employer in the past 5 years;
- The title of the position offered to the beneficiary;
- Detailed description of the beneficiary's proposed daily duties;^[9]
- The particulars of the salaried or non-salaried compensation or self-support for the position;^[10]
- A statement that beneficiary will be employed at least 20 hours per week;
- The specific location(s) of employment;
- The beneficiary will not be engaged in secular employment;
- The beneficiary is qualified to perform the duties of the offered position; and
- The beneficiary has been a member of the denomination for at least 2 years.

C. Verification and Inspections

USCIS may conduct on-site inspections either before or after USCIS makes a final decision on the petition.^[11] The purpose of the inspection is to verify the evidence submitted in support of the R-1 petition, such as the petitioner's attestations and qualifications as a religious organization, the location(s) where the beneficiary will work, the organization's facilities (including places of worship, where applicable), and the nature of the beneficiary's proposed position.

USCIS randomly selects religious worker petitions for compliance review on-site inspections, which normally occur after the approval of the petition.^[12] These site visits include inspections of the beneficiary's work locations to verify the beneficiary's work hours, compensation, and duties.^[13] USCIS may also conduct "for cause" inspections at any time in cases where there is suspected non-compliance with the terms of the visa classification or fraud.^[14] If applicable, USCIS may issue a request for evidence or notice of intent to deny based on the findings of a pre-adjudication inspection, or a notice of intent to revoke based on the findings of a post-adjudication inspection, and the petitioner will have an opportunity to respond.^[15]

The petitioner cannot use a foreign address, as the employer must be in the United States in order to petition for religious workers.^[16]

D. Documentation and Evidence

General Evidence Required

An R-1 petitioner is required to provide the following documentation and evidence to show the petitioner is a qualifying religious organization:^[17]

- A properly completed current version of the Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) and R-1 Classification Supplement;
- A currently valid determination letter from the IRS establishing that the organization is a tax-exempt organization,^[18] and
- Verifiable evidence of how the petitioner intends to compensate the beneficiary, including whether or not the beneficiary will be self-supporting.

Additional Evidence Required – Group Tax-Exempt Religious Organizations

In addition to the general evidence requirements, a group tax-exempt religious organization is required to provide evidence that it is included under the group exemption granted to a parent organization.^[19] USCIS also requires evidence that the parent organization has authorized the petitioning entity to use its tax-exempt status.

Furthermore, an organization whose IRS determination letter does not identify its tax exemption as a religious organization must establish its religious nature and purpose. Such evidence may include the entity's articles of incorporation or bylaws, flyers, articles, brochures, or other literature that describes the religious purpose and nature of the organization.

Additional Evidence Required – Organization Affiliated with Religious Denomination

In addition to the general evidence requirements, a bona fide organization that is affiliated with the religious denomination is also required to submit a Religious Denomination Certification signed by an authorized official of the religious denomination, certifying that the petitioning organization is affiliated with the religious denomination.^[20]

If the affiliated organization was granted tax-exempt status under IRC 501(c)(3) under a category other than religious organization, in addition to the general requirements, the petitioner must also provide:

- Documentation that establishes the religious nature and purpose of the organization, such as a copy of the organizing instrument of the organization that specifies the purposes of the organization; and

- Organizational literature, such as books, articles, brochures, calendars, flyers, and other literature describing the religious purpose and nature of the activities of the organization.^[21]

Table Summarizing Evidentiary Requirements

The table below serves as a quick reference guide for the evidence required depending on the type of R-1 nonimmigrant petitioner.

Summary of Evidence Requirements Relating to the R-1 Nonimmigrant Petition

Type of Petitioner	Required Evidence
Tax-Exempt 501(c)(3) Religious Organization	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• A currently valid determination letter from the IRS establishing that the organization is tax-exempt.
Group Tax-Exempt Religious Organization	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• A currently valid determination letter from the IRS establishing that the group is tax-exempt.• Documentation that the organization is covered under the group tax exemption, including, for example, a letter from the parent organization authorizing the petitioner to use its group tax exemption, a directory for that organization listing the petitioner as a member of the group, a membership listing on the parent organization's website that confirms coverage under its exemption, or a letter from the IRS confirming the coverage.• If the submitted IRS determination letter does not identify the organization's tax exemption as a religious organization, then evidence establishing its religious nature and purpose. Such evidence may include, but is not limited to, the entity's articles of incorporation or bylaws, flyers, articles, brochures, or other literature that describes the religious purpose and nature of the organization.
Bona Fide Organization Affiliated with	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• A currently valid determination letter from the IRS establishing that the organization is tax-exempt.• If the organization was granted tax-exempt status under IRC 501(c)(3) as something other than a religious organization, then:

Type of Petitioner	Required Evidence
Religious Denomination	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ◦ documentation that establishes the religious nature and purpose of the organization, including, but not limited to, a copy of the organizing instrument that specifies the purposes of the organization, organizational literature, such as books, articles, brochures, calendars, flyers, and other literature describing the religious purpose and nature of the activities of the organization. • A Religious Denomination Certification signed by the religious denominational entity (not the petitioner) that the petitioner is affiliated with, which is part of the Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129), R-1 Classification Supplement, certifying that the petitioning organization is affiliated with the religious denomination.

E. Employer Obligations^[22]

The beneficiary's employer must notify DHS within 14 calendar days if:

- The beneficiary is working less than the required number of hours;
- The beneficiary has been released from the employment; or
- The beneficiary has otherwise terminated employment before the expiration of a period of authorized R-1 nonimmigrant stay.

F. Compensation Requirement^[23]

An R-1 nonimmigrant must receive either salaried or non-salaried compensation, or provide his or her own support as a missionary under an established missionary program. The petitioner is required to state either how it intends to compensate the R-1 nonimmigrant or how the R-1 nonimmigrant will be self-supporting as part of an established missionary program, and to submit the corresponding, verifiable evidence described below.^[24] To the extent that the R-1 nonimmigrant will receive funds or other benefits (such as housing) from a third party, this arrangement does not constitute compensation from the petitioner.^[25]

1. Salaried or Non-salaried Compensation

Compensation may be salaried or non-salaried. Salaried means receiving traditional pay such as a paycheck. Non-salaried means any of the following (separately or in combination): receiving support such as room, board, medical care, and transportation instead of or in addition to a paycheck.

The petitioner must submit IRS documentation of compensation, such as IRS Forms W-2 or tax returns, if available. If IRS documentation is unavailable, then the petitioning employer must explain why it is unavailable and submit comparable verifiable documentation.^[26]

When the beneficiary will receive salaried or non-salaried compensation, the petitioning employer may also submit verifiable evidence such as:^[27]

- Documentation of past compensation for similar positions;
- Budgets showing monies set aside for salaries, leases, etc.;
- Documentary evidence demonstrating that room and board will be provided; or
- Other evidence acceptable to USCIS.^[28]

While the regulation does not require audited financial reports, unaudited budgets or financial statements should be accompanied by supporting evidence that is verifiable. For example, budgets should be generally consistent with past revenue and supported by bank statements showing listed cash balances. When relying on bank statements, they should show an availability of sufficient funds to cover the beneficiary's salaried compensation over a sufficient period of time.

Further, USCIS does not consider salaried or non-salaried support deriving from a third party as a portion of the beneficiary's required compensation. The regulation requires that compensation derive from the petitioner.^[29] Room and board at a church member's home, or provided by any other church, is a form of third-party compensation. Unless the church reimburses the other party for this room and board, such arrangements are not a qualifying form of non-salaried compensation. A petitioner may also submit evidence such as proof that it owns the property or a lease showing it pays for the residential space to establish that it is the entity providing non-salaried compensation.

In situations where the petitioning entity is not the entity that will directly compensate the religious worker, USCIS reviews the relationship between the two entities in the totality of the circumstances to confirm that the petitioner who is attesting in the petition is the employer of the beneficiary,^[30] and that the petitioner has the ability and intent to compensate the beneficiary.

In making this determination, USCIS considers whether there is a documented relationship between the petitioner and the entity providing salaried or non-salaried compensation to show that the petitioner, through this other entity, is still compensating the beneficiary. Factors that may demonstrate this relationship include, but are not limited to, the following:

- The petitioning entity has the authority to dictate financial policy, remove clergy for cause, and veto acquisition of debt at the compensating entity;

- The petitioning entity owns the compensating entity's assets or includes the compensating entity on its audited financial statements;
- According to established rules or practice in the relevant organization or denomination, the petitioning entity makes personnel decisions for the compensating entity;
- Any other documentation showing the petitioning entity has direct oversight or involvement in the financial and personnel matters of the compensating entity.

As an example, a diocese that has the authority to move clergy from one church to another and jointly owns assets with its subordinate churches that are part of the same group's tax-exempt status may properly file a petition for clergy at a subordinate church even if the subordinate church directly pays the salary. In this example, documentation showing how the subordinate church will compensate the religious worker may be used to satisfy the petitioner's obligation.^[31]

Consistent with the required attestations, the prospective employer must state whether the beneficiary will receive salaried or non-salaried compensation and the details of such compensation.^[32]

2. Self-Support

Self-support means that the position the beneficiary will hold is part of an established program for temporary, uncompensated missionary work, and part of a broader international program of missionary work the denomination sponsors.^[33]

An established program for temporary, uncompensated missionary work, is defined to be a missionary program in which:

- Foreign workers, whether compensated or uncompensated, have previously participated in R-1 status;
- Missionary workers are traditionally uncompensated;
- The organization provides formal training for missionaries; and
- Participation in such missionary work is an established element of religious development in that denomination.^[34]

If the beneficiary will be self-supporting, the petitioner must provide:

- Evidence demonstrating that the petitioner has an established program for temporary, uncompensated missionary work;
- Evidence demonstrating that the denomination maintains missionary programs both in the United States and abroad;

- Evidence of the beneficiary's acceptance into the missionary program;
- Evidence demonstrating the religious duties and responsibilities associated with the traditionally uncompensated missionary work; and
- Copies of the beneficiary's bank records, budgets documenting the sources of self-support (including personal or family savings, room and board with host families in the United States, donations from the denomination's churches) or other verifiable evidence acceptable to USCIS.
[35]

3. Multiple Beneficiaries

A petitioner is required to attest to the number of special immigrant religious worker and R-1 nonimmigrants it currently employs, the number it has employed within the last 5 years, as well as the number of petitions and applications filed by or on behalf of any special immigrant religious worker and R-1 nonimmigrant for employment by the prospective employer within the last 5 years.^[36]

Where the petitioner has filed for multiple beneficiaries, the petitioner may be required to demonstrate that it has the ability to compensate all of its religious workers, including special immigrant religious workers and R-1 nonimmigrants other than the beneficiary of the petition currently being submitted.^[37]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(8)(i) and the R-1 Classification Supplement in Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(3).

[^ 3] See IRC's Exemption Requirements - 501(c)(3) Organizations.

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(9). For a religious organization that is recognized as tax-exempt under a group tax exemption, a petition should include a currently valid determination letter from the IRS establishing that the group is tax exempt. See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(9)(iii).

[^ 5] For instance, if a Roman Catholic Church petitions for a priest, the church may submit the group tax-exempt letter issued to the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops along with a copy of the Catholic Directory to satisfy the tax exemption requirement.

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(3).

[^ 7] See Section D, Documentation and Evidence [2 USCIS-PM O.3(D)] for evidentiary requirements.

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(8).

[^ 9] This attestation is derived from 8 CFR 214.2(r)(8)(vii) and relates to all R-1 petitions, including beneficiaries coming to perform a religious vocation. See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(8)(vii). Post-adjudication site visits focusing on R-1 beneficiaries cannot verify the beneficiary's work hours, compensation, and duties consistent with supporting the integrity of the R-1 classification if the petition provides only a vague description of the beneficiary's proposed duties.

[^ 10] See Chapter 4, Beneficiary Requirements [2 USCIS-PM O.4].

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(7). See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(16).

[^ 12] As a matter of policy, USCIS no longer conducts mandatory pre-approval on-site inspections of all petitioners for religious workers. However, USCIS may still conduct site visits at any point, including pre-approval, if USCIS determines it appropriate to verify information. USCIS provided this clarification in its policy guidance on March 2, 2023.

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(16).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(16).

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(8), 8 CFR 103.2(b)(16)(i), and 8 CFR 214.2(r)(18)(iii).

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(16).

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 103.2(a) and 8 CFR 103.2(b)(1).

[^ 18] Although an IRS-issued tax-exempt determination letter does not expire, a letter that the IRS has revoked cannot be used to meet the regulatory requirement.

[^ 19] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(9)(ii).

[^ 20] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(9)(iii)(D).

[^ 21] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(9)(iii).

[^ 22] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(14).

[^ 23] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(11).

[^ 24] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(11).

[^ 25] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(11).

[^ 26] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(11)(i).

[^ 27] This is not a conclusive list and petitioners may submit other verifiable evidence acceptable to USCIS. See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(11)(i).

[^ 28] For instance, petitioners may submit evidence demonstrating that stipends, medical care, or other non-salaried forms of support will be provided. See 73 FR 72276 (PDF), 72281-82 (Nov. 26, 2008).

[^ 29] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(11).

[^ 30] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(7) and 8 CFR 214.2(r)(8).

[^ 31] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(11).

[^ 32] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(8)(viii).

[^ 33] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(11)(ii)(A).

[^ 34] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(11)(ii)(B)(1)-(4).

[^ 35] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(11)(ii)(C)(1)-(5).

[^ 36] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(8)(v), 8 CFR 214.2(r)(8)(vi), 8 CFR 204.5(m)(7)(iv), and 8 CFR 204.5(m)(7)(v).

[^ 37] The regulations require that a petitioning organization demonstrate through verifiable evidence its intent to compensate both immigrant and nonimmigrant religious workers, or how a nonimmigrant religious worker will be self-supporting). See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(8)(viii), 8 CFR 214.2(r)(11), 8 CFR 204.5(m)(7)(xi), 8 CFR 204.5(m)(7)(xii), and 8 CFR 204.5(m)(10).

Chapter 4 - Beneficiary Requirements

To qualify for a temporary nonimmigrant religious worker (R-1) classification, the beneficiary must:

- Be a member of a religious denomination having a bona fide non-profit religious organization in the United States for at least the 2 years immediately preceding the filing of the petition;
- Be coming to the United States to work at least in a part-time position (at least 20 hours per week);
- Be coming solely as a minister or to perform a religious vocation or occupation;
- Be coming to or remaining in the United States at the request of the petitioner to work for the petitioner; and
- Not work in the United States in any capacity not approved in a DHS-approved petition.^[1]

The beneficiary must also intend to depart the United States upon the expiration or termination of his or her nonimmigrant status. However, a nonimmigrant petition, application for initial admission, change of status, or extension of stay in R classification may not be denied solely on the basis of a filed or an approved request for permanent labor certification or a filed or approved immigrant visa preference petition.^[2]

A. Qualifying Employment

The beneficiary must be coming to engage in a religious vocation or in a religious occupation, or as a minister of religion.

Religious Worker^[3]

For the purpose of the R-1 nonimmigrant classification, a religious worker is someone who:

- Is a member of the religious denomination that has a bona fide non-profit religious organization in the United States, and was a member in the same type of religious denomination for at least 2 years immediately preceding the time of application for admission;
- Is coming to the United States to work at least part-time (at least 20 hours per week);
- Is coming to the United States solely to perform a religious vocation or occupation in either a professional or nonprofessional capacity, or as a minister;
- Is coming to or remaining in the United States at the request of the petitioner to work for the petitioner;
- Will not work in the United States in any capacity other than that of a religious worker; and
- Is engaged in and, according to the denomination's standards, qualified for a religious occupation or vocation, whether or not in a professional capacity, or as a minister.

Religious Vocation

A religious vocation is a formal lifetime commitment through vows, investitures, ceremonies, or similar indications to a religious way of life. People within a religious vocation dedicate their lives to religious practices and functions, as distinguished from secular members of a denomination.^[4] The regulations state that the religious denomination must have a class of persons whose lives are dedicated to religious practices and functions, as distinguished from the secular members of the religion.

Religious Occupation^[5]

In order for USCIS to consider the employment a religious occupation, the title of the position is not determinative; rather, USCIS looks at whether the occupation meets all of the following requirements:

- The duties must primarily relate to a traditional religious function and be recognized as a religious occupation within the denomination;
- The duties must be primarily related to, and must clearly involve, inculcating (teaching and instilling in others) or carrying out the religious creed and beliefs of the denomination;
- The duties do not include positions which are primarily administrative or supportive in nature, although limited administrative duties that are only incidental to religious functions are permissible;^[6] and
- Religious study or training for religious work does not constitute a religious occupation, but a religious worker may pursue study or training, incident to status, while in the United States as an R-1 nonimmigrant.

Minister^[7]

For the purpose of R-1 nonimmigrant classification, a minister is someone who:

- Is fully authorized by and trained in the religious denomination to conduct religious worship, and perform other duties usually performed by authorized members of the clergy of the denomination;
- Performs activities rationally related to being a minister;
- Works solely as a minister in the United States which may include administrative duties incidental to the duties of a minister; and
- Is not a lay preacher or a person not authorized to perform clergy's duties.

B. Religious Denomination

A religious denomination is a religious group or community of believers that have a common type of ecclesiastical government that governs or administers and includes one or more of the following:

- A recognized common creed or statement of faith shared among the denomination's members;
- A common form of worship;
- A common formal code of doctrine and discipline;
- Common religious services and ceremonies;
- Common established places of religious worship or religious congregations; or
- Comparable indications of a bona fide religious denomination.^[8]

The R-1 nonimmigrant beneficiary must have at least 2 years, immediately preceding the filing of the petition, of membership in a religious denomination.^[9] Such membership must be in the same type of religious denomination in which the beneficiary will work in the United States.^[10]

C. Nonimmigrant Intent

To be eligible for R-1 nonimmigrant classification, the beneficiary must maintain an intention to depart the United States upon the expiration or termination of such R-1 nonimmigrant status, if granted.^[11] However, a nonimmigrant petition, application for initial admission, change of status, or extension of stay in R-1 nonimmigrant classification may not be denied solely based on the beneficiary's pursuit of permanent residence in the United States (for example, evidence of a filed or approved request for permanent labor certification or immigrant petition on the beneficiary's behalf).^[12]

D. Documentation and Evidence

The petitioner must submit evidence to establish that the beneficiary meets the requirements for R-1 nonimmigrant classification.^[13]

Ministers

For a beneficiary who is a minister, the petitioner must submit the following:

- A copy of the beneficiary's certificate of ordination or similar documents;
- Documents reflecting acceptance of the beneficiary's qualifications as a minister in the religious denomination; and
- Evidence that the beneficiary has completed any course of prescribed theological education at an accredited theological institution normally required or recognized by that religious denomination, including transcripts, curriculum, and documentation that establishes that the theological education is accredited by the denomination.^[14]

For denominations that do not require a theological education, rather than document such education, the petitioner must instead submit evidence of:

- The denomination's requirements for ordination to minister;
- Duties allowed to be performed by virtue of ordination;
- The denomination's levels of ordination, if any; and
- The beneficiary's completion of the denomination's requirements for ordination.^[15]

Religious Vocations and Occupations

For a beneficiary who will work in a religious vocation or occupation, the petitioner must submit evidence of the following:

- The beneficiary is entering the United States to perform a religious vocation or occupation, defined above (in either a professional or nonprofessional capacity);^[16]
- The beneficiary is qualified for the religious occupation or vocation according to the denomination's standards.^[17]

E. Family Members

1. Initial Petition

The spouse and unmarried children under 21 years old of a principal R-1 nonimmigrant may qualify for dependent R-2 status if their primary purpose in coming to the United States is to join or accompany the principal R-1 nonimmigrant.^[18]

In general, the spouse and children are granted R-2 nonimmigrant status for the same period of time and subject to the same conditions as the principal R-1 nonimmigrant, regardless of the amount of time the spouse and children may already have spent in the United States in R-2 status.^[19]

2. Request to Extend or Change Nonimmigrant Status

R-2 dependents may request an extension of stay or change of status by filing an Application to Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-539).

3. Employment Authorization Prohibited

An R-2 dependent may not accept employment in the United States.^[20]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(1).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(15).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(1).

[^ 4] Examples of persons practicing religious vocations include nuns, monks, and religious brothers and sisters. See definition of religious vocation in 8 CFR 214.2(r)(3).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(3).

[^ 6] Examples of support positions are janitors, maintenance workers, clerical employees, fund raisers, persons solely involved in the solicitation of donations, or similar positions. See (C) in the definition of religious occupation in 8 CFR 214.2(r)(3).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(3).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(3).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(1)(i).

[^ 10] See definition of denominational membership in 8 CFR 214.2(r)(3).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(15).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(15).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(1). See list of the general eligibility requirements for R-1 status at the beginning of this chapter.

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(10)(i)-(ii).

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(10)(iii)(A)-(D).

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 214(r)(1)(iii).

[^ 17] See definition of religious worker in 8 CFR 214.2(r)(3).

[^ 18] See INA 101(a)(15)(R). See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(4)(ii)(C).

[^ 19] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(4)(ii)(A).

[^ 20] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(4)(ii)(B).

Chapter 5 - Adjudication

Officers must carefully review each petition for a nonimmigrant religious worker (R-1) to ensure compliance with the intent of the R-1 nonimmigrant category to allow religious workers to temporarily work in the United States. Officers should apply a “preponderance of the evidence” standard when evaluating eligibility for the benefit sought.^[1] The burden of proving eligibility for the benefit sought rests entirely with the petitioner.^[2]

A. Decision

1. Approvals

If the petitioner properly filed the Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) and the officer is satisfied that the petitioner has met the required eligibility standards, the officer should approve the petition. The approval period should not exceed the maximum period of stay allowed.^[3]

The table below provides a list of the classifications for R nonimmigrants.

Classes of Beneficiaries and Corresponding Codes of Admission

Beneficiary	Code of Admission
Religious Worker (Principal)	R-1
Spouse of a Principal Religious Worker	R-2
Child of a Principal Religious Worker	R-2

Once USCIS approves the petition, the officer must notify the petitioner of the action taken using a Notice of Action (Form I-797).^[4]

2. Denials

If the petitioner does not meet the eligibility requirements, the officer must deny the petition.^[5] If the officer denies the petition, he or she must prepare a final notice of action, which includes information explaining why the petition is denied.^[6] Additionally, officers should include information about appeal rights and the opportunity to file a motion to reopen or reconsider in the denial notice. The office that issued the decision has jurisdiction over any motion and the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) has jurisdiction over any appeal.^[7]

B. Revocations^[8]

USCIS may revoke the approval of a petition at any time. USCIS automatically revokes the approval of the petition if the petitioner ceases to exist or files a written withdrawal of the petition.^[9] A notice of intent to revoke (NOIR) is necessary where there is no regulatory provision that would allow for an automatic revocation, such as where:

- The beneficiary is no longer employed by the petitioner in the capacity specified in the petition;
- The statement of facts contained in the petition was not true and correct;

- The petitioner violated the terms and conditions of the approved petition;
- The petitioner violated the statutory or regulatory requirements; or
- The approval of the petition violated the regulations or involved gross error.^[10]

The NOIR should contain a detailed statement of the grounds for the revocation and the time period allowed for the petitioner's rebuttal. USCIS must consider all relevant evidence presented in deciding whether to revoke the approval of the petition.^[11]

The petitioner may appeal the decision to revoke the approval of a petition to the AAO if the petition's approval was revoked on notice. Automatic revocations may not be appealed.^[12]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INS v. Cardoza-Fonseca, 480 U.S. 421 (1987) (defining "more likely than not" as a greater than 50 percent probability of something occurring). See Matter of Chawathe (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 369, 376 (AAO 2010) (citing Matter of E-M- (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 77, 79-80 (Comm. 1989)).

[^ 2] See Matter of Brantigan (PDF), 11 I&N Dec. 493 (BIA 1966).

[^ 3] See Chapter 7, Period of Stay [2 USCIS-PM O.7].

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(19).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(8).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(19). See 8 CFR 103.3. See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(17).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 103.3(a)(2).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(18)-(19).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(18)(ii). See Chapter 7, Period of Stay [2 USCIS-PM O.7].

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(18)(iii).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(18)(iii)(B).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(19).

Chapter 6 - Admissions, Extensions of Stay, and Changes of Status

A. Admission

If approved for nonimmigrant religious worker (R-1) classification and found otherwise admissible, a beneficiary may be admitted as an R-1 nonimmigrant for an initial period of up to 30 months from the date of initial admission.^[1]

Maintaining Status

A religious worker may only work per the terms of the approved petition. While holding R-1 status, nonimmigrants may not work in the United States in any other capacity but as a religious worker, and cannot change capacities between a minister or other types of religious worker unless specifically approved.^[2] An R-1 nonimmigrant may be considered to have violated his or her nonimmigrant status, and therefore not be in lawful immigration status, if he or she works for an employer who has not obtained prior approval of such employment through the filing of a petition and appropriate supplement, supporting documents, and appropriate fees.^[3]

B. Extension of Stay

An employer may request an extension of stay for an R-1 nonimmigrant on the Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129).^[4] The extension may be for the validity period of the extension request, up to 30 months, for a maximum period of stay for up to 5 years.^[5]

The petitioner must include the following with the Form I-129:

- R-1 Classification Supplement, including the R-1 Employer Attestation;
- Supporting documents to establish eligibility under the R-1 nonimmigrant classification, including documentation of salaried or non-salaried compensation; and
- Initial evidence of the previous R-1 employment, such as financial or other records to establish that the person worked as an R-1 nonimmigrant.^[6]

1. Compensation Documentation^[7]

Salaried Compensation

Any request for an extension of stay as an R-1 nonimmigrant must include initial evidence of the previous employment as a religious worker. If the beneficiary received salaried compensation, then the petitioner must submit Internal Revenue Service (IRS) documentation of salaried compensation, such as an IRS Form W-2 or certified copies of filed income tax returns, reflecting such work and compensation for the preceding 2 years.^[8]

If the beneficiary was admitted for less than 2 years in the R-1 nonimmigrant status, the petitioner may provide evidence of work and compensation in that status for the duration of the beneficiary's authorized admission.^[9]

Non-Salaried Compensation

If the beneficiary is requesting an extension of stay as an R-1 nonimmigrant and previously received non-salaried compensation, the petitioner must submit IRS documentation of the non-salaried compensation if available.^[10] If no IRS documentation is available, the petitioner must explain the lack of IRS documentation and submit verifiable evidence of all financial support, including information on:
^[11]

- Stipends;
- Room and board;
- Other support for the beneficiary along with a description of the location where the beneficiary lived (for example, a lease for the beneficiary); or
- Other evidence acceptable to USCIS.

Self-Support^[12]

If the beneficiary is applying for an extension of stay as an R-1 nonimmigrant and was previously supporting him or herself financially and not receiving any compensation from the religious organization, the petitioner must provide verifiable documents to show how the beneficiary is self-supporting. Documentation may include:

- Audited financial statements;
- Financial institution records;
- Brokerage account statements;
- Trust documents signed by an attorney; or
- Other evidence acceptable to USCIS.

The table below summarizes the evidence required depending on the type of compensation.

Extension of Stay Requests: Evidence of Beneficiary's Compensation

Beneficiary's Previous Compensation	Required Evidence
Salary	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• The petitioner must submit IRS documentation showing that the beneficiary received a salary, such as an IRS Form W-2 or certified

Beneficiary's Previous Compensation	Required Evidence
	copies of filed income tax returns reflecting such work and compensation for the preceding 2 years or the period of stay if less than 2 years.
Non-Salary	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • If IRS documentation is available, the petitioner must submit IRS documentation of the non-salaried compensation. • If IRS documentation is not available, the petitioner must explain the lack of IRS documentation and submit verifiable evidence of all financial support, such as stipends, room and board, or other support for the beneficiary along with a description of the location where the beneficiary lived, or a lease for the beneficiary. The petitioner may also submit other evidence acceptable to USCIS.
No Salary, But Provided Own Support	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Provide verifiable documents to show how support was maintained, such as audited financial statements, financial institution records, brokerage account statements, trust documents signed by an attorney, or other evidence acceptable to USCIS.

2. Requests for Evidence

With regard to a beneficiary's eligibility for an extension of stay, an officer may issue a request for evidence (RFE) to the petitioner if it appears that the beneficiary has not maintained his or her status due to the following reasons:

- Termination – USCIS has been notified that the beneficiary was terminated from the employment before the expiration of a period of authorized R-1 stay;
- Released from Employment – USCIS has been notified that the beneficiary has been released from employment before the expiration of a period of authorized R-1 stay; or
- Worked Less Than Required Hours – USCIS has been notified that the beneficiary is working less than the required number of hours for the employment.^[13]

C. Change of Status

Generally, a beneficiary in a current valid nonimmigrant status who has not violated his or her status is eligible to change status to an R-1 nonimmigrant in the United States without having to return to his or her home country for a visa interview.^[14] Such a beneficiary may be granted R-1 status for an initial period of up to 30 months.^[15]

To change nonimmigrant statuses, the petitioning employer should file a Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) before the beneficiary's current status expires and indicate the request is for a change of status. The beneficiary cannot work in the new R-1 nonimmigrant classification until USCIS approves the petition and the change of status request. If USCIS determines that the beneficiary is eligible for R-1 nonimmigrant, but not a change of status, the beneficiary must apply for an R-1 nonimmigrant visa at a U.S. consular post abroad and then be readmitted to the United States as an R-1 nonimmigrant.^[16]

D. Change of Employer

USCIS considers any unauthorized change to a new employer a failure to maintain status. If the R-1 nonimmigrant is to be employed by a different or additional unit of the religious denomination (if it has a different federal tax number), the employer must file a new Form I-129. Such a circumstance would be considered new employment.

However, an example of a permissible employment location change that would not require a new petition would be a petition filed on behalf of a minister who moves from ministry to ministry within a denomination so long as the organization that oversees all of these locations is the petitioner for that minister.^[17]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(4).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(1)(v) and 8 CFR 214.2(r)(2). See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(18)(iii)(A)(1).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(13).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.1(c)(1). Where a petitioner demonstrates eligibility for a requested extension, it may be granted at USCIS' discretion. Petitioners may not appeal denials of an application for extension of stay. See 8 CFR 214.1(c)(5).

[^ 5] For more information on maximum allowable time in R-1 nonimmigrant status, see Chapter 7, Period of Stay [2 USCIS-PM O.7].

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(5). See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(12).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(11) and 8 CFR 214.2(r)(12)(i).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(12)(i).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(12).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(12)(ii).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(12)(ii).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(12)(iii).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(14).

[^ 14] An example of a violation of status is if, generally, the nonimmigrant's current status expires before seeking extension of status by filing a Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) with USCIS or by working without valid employment authorization.

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(4).

[^ 16] There is no appeal from a change of status denial. See 8 CFR 248.3(g).

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(7). See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(13).

Chapter 7 - Period of Stay

A. Maximum Period of Stay

An eligible noncitizen may be admitted as a nonimmigrant religious worker (R-1) or may change status to R-1 nonimmigrant classification for a period of up to 30 months from the date of initial admission.^[1] USCIS may grant one extension for up to 30 months, but with the total period of stay not to exceed the statutory maximum of 5 years (60 months) if the R-1 nonimmigrant is otherwise eligible.^[2]

An R-1 nonimmigrant may be subject to removal if he or she violates the terms of his or her status, such as remaining in the United States longer than the period of his or her authorized stay.

B. Exceptions to Limitation on Total Stay^[3]

A beneficiary who has spent 5 years in the United States in R-1 nonimmigrant status may not be readmitted to or receive an extension of stay in the United States under the R-1 nonimmigrant classification, unless such a beneficiary subsequently has resided abroad and been physically present outside the United States for the immediate prior year. However, this 5-year limitation does not apply to beneficiaries who:

- Did not reside continually in the United States and whose employment in the United States was seasonal or intermittent or was for an aggregate of 6 months or less per year; or
- Reside abroad and regularly commute to the United States to engage in part-time employment.

Petitioners and beneficiaries must meet all qualifications for the exception to the limitation on total stay, and must provide clear and convincing evidence that they qualify for the exception. Such proof may include arrival and departure records, transcripts of processed income tax returns, and records of employment abroad.

C. Recapture Time

USCIS only counts time physically spent in the United States in the R-1 nonimmigrant status towards the maximum 5 years of authorized stay. Officers should count only time spent physically in the United States in valid R-1 status toward the 5-year maximum period of stay.

When requesting an extension, the petitioner, on behalf of the R-1 nonimmigrant, may request that full calendar days spent outside the United States during the period of petition validity be recaptured and added back to his or her remainder of the total maximum period of stay, regardless of whether the R-1 nonimmigrant is currently in the United States or abroad and regardless of whether he or she currently holds R-1 nonimmigrant status.

It is the burden of the petitioner, on behalf of the beneficiary, to demonstrate continuing eligibility for the classification and that the beneficiary is entitled to recapture time with appropriate evidence. The reason for the absence is not relevant to whether the time may be recaptured. Any trip of at least one 24-hour calendar day outside the United States for any purpose, personal or professional, can be recaptured.

1. Evidence

The burden of proof remains with the R-1 petitioner, on behalf of the beneficiary, to submit evidence documenting periods of physical presence outside the United States when seeking an extension of petition validity and extension of stay as an R-1 nonimmigrant. The R-1 nonimmigrant is in the best position to organize and submit evidence of his or her departures from and readmissions to the United States. While a summary, charts of travel, or both are often submitted to facilitate review of the accompanying documentation, independent documentary evidence, such as photocopies of passport stamps, Arrival/Departure Records (Form I-94), and plane tickets establishing that the R-1 beneficiary was outside the United States during all of the days, weeks, or months that he or she seeks to recapture is always required.

The fact that the burden may not be met for some claimed periods generally has no bearing on other claimed periods for which the burden has been met. Any periods for which the burden has been met may be added to the eligible period of admission upon approval of the application for extension of status. An R-1 beneficiary may not be granted an extension of stay for periods that are not supported by independent documentary evidence. It is not necessary to issue a request for evidence (RFE) for any claimed periods unsupported by independent documentary evidence.

2. Applicability to R-2 Dependents

The status of an R-2 dependent of a principal R-1 nonimmigrant is subject to the same period of admission and limitations as the principal beneficiary, regardless of the time such spouse and children may have spent in the United States in R-2 status.^[4] For example, if an R-1 nonimmigrant is able to recapture a 2-week missionary trip abroad, then his or her R-2 dependents, if seeking an extension of stay, should be given an extension of stay up to the new expiration of the R-1 nonimmigrant's period of stay.

3. Seasonal or Intermittent Employment Exception

An R-1 nonimmigrant is eligible for the exception to the limitation of stay requirements by demonstrating that he or she:

- Did not reside continually in the United States and that his or her employment in the United States was seasonal or intermittent or was for an aggregate of 6 months or less per year; or
- Resides abroad and regularly commutes to the United States to engage in part-time employment.

To qualify for this exception, the petitioner and the beneficiary must provide clear and convincing proof that the beneficiary qualifies for such an exception. Such proof generally consists of evidence such as: Arrival/Departure Records (Form I-94), transcripts of processed income tax returns, and records of employment abroad.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(4).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(5).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(6).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.2(r)(4)(ii)(A).

Part P - NAFTA Professionals (TN)

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 30 - Nonimmigrants in General \(External\) \(PDF, 426.43 KB\)

Part Q - Nonimmigrants Intending to Adjust Status (K, V)

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 37 - Nonimmigrants Intending to Adjust Status \(K and V Classifications\) \(External\) \(PDF, 150.26 KB\)

Volume 3 - Humanitarian Protection and Parole

Part A - Protection and Parole Policies and Procedures

Part B - Victims of Trafficking

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

Human trafficking (also known as trafficking in persons) involves the exploitation of persons in order to compel labor, services, or commercial sex acts.^[1] The Trafficking Victims Protection Act (TVPA), part of the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act of 2000 was enacted to strengthen the ability of law enforcement agencies to investigate and prosecute trafficking in persons, while offering protections to victims of such trafficking, including temporary protections from removal, access to certain federal and state public benefits and services, and the ability to apply for T nonimmigrant status (commonly referred to as the T visa).

T nonimmigrant status allows eligible victims of a severe form of trafficking in persons^[2] to remain in the United States on a temporary basis, receive employment authorization, and qualify for benefits and services to the same extent as a refugee.^[3] It also allows victims to apply for T nonimmigrant status for certain family members.

B. Background

USCIS has sole jurisdiction over the adjudication of the Application for T nonimmigrant Status (Form I-914). T nonimmigrant status provides:

- Nonimmigrant status and employment authorization for an initial period of up to 4 years;
- Access to public benefits and services;
- Nonimmigrant status for certain qualifying family members; and
- The opportunity to apply for lawful permanent resident status if eligible.^[4]

Applications are adjudicated by officers who receive trauma-informed training. There are protections in place to safeguard the confidentiality of any information relating to the applicant.^[5] In addition, in recognition of the unique challenges trafficking victims may face in providing evidentiary proof of their victimization, USCIS must consider “any credible evidence” in determining whether the applicant has established eligibility for T nonimmigrant status.^[6]

C. Legislative History

Since the initial creation of the T nonimmigrant classification in 2000, Congress has amended the program requirements several times. In addition to creating a nonimmigrant classification for victims of human trafficking, the TVPA and subsequent reauthorizing legislation provide various means to combat trafficking in persons, including tools to effectively prosecute and punish perpetrators of trafficking in persons and prevent incidents of human trafficking.

T Nonimmigrant Status: Acts and Amendments

Acts and Amendments	Key Changes
Trafficking and Violence Protection Act (TVPA) of 2000 ^[7]	<ul style="list-style-type: none">Established T nonimmigrant classification as a temporary immigration benefit available to eligible victims of a severe form of trafficking in persons.Created a pathway to lawful permanent residence (a green card) for eligible T nonimmigrants.
Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act (TVPRA) of 2003 ^[8]	<ul style="list-style-type: none">Extended derivative T nonimmigrant status to certain family members of the principal trafficking victim.
Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act (VAWA) of 2005 ^[9]	<ul style="list-style-type: none">Authorized the duration of T nonimmigrant status for up to 4 years, with the option to extend status in yearly increments when the T nonimmigrant's presence is necessary to assist in the criminal investigation or prosecution of human trafficking.Defined law enforcement requests where the trafficking victims were unable to cooperate due to physical or psychological trauma suffered as unreasonable.Eliminated the requirement that relatives of the principal trafficking victim demonstrate extreme hardship to obtain derivative T nonimmigrant status.Created an additional avenue for trafficking victims to adjust status before accruing 3 years of continuous physical presence in cases where the Attorney General certifies that the investigation or prosecution is complete.Permitted some trafficking victims earlier access to permanent residency by allowing period(s) of continuous physical presence during the investigation or prosecution into acts of

Acts and Amendments	Key Changes
	trafficking to count towards the physical presence requirement for adjustment of status under INA 245(l). <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Extended 8 U.S.C. 1367 confidentiality protections to applicants for T nonimmigrant status. Created a waiver for the unlawful presence ground of inadmissibility where the trafficking was at least one central reason for the applicant's unlawful presence in the United States. Permitted noncitizens who entered the United States in certain nonimmigrant statuses to later change status to T nonimmigrant status.
William Wilberforce Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act (TVPRA 2008) ^[10]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Provided that an applicant can establish the physical presence requirement if the applicant was allowed entry into the United States to participate in investigative or judicial processes associated with an act or a perpetrator of trafficking. Provided an exception to the requirement to comply with reasonable requests for assistance from law enforcement due to physical or psychological trauma. Extended eligibility for derivative status to parents or unmarried siblings under the age of 18 who face a present danger of retaliation as a result of the principal's escape from trafficking or cooperation with law enforcement. Expanded ability to extend T nonimmigrant status by allowing DHS to consider exceptional circumstances. Extended the validity period of T nonimmigrant status to include the period the application for adjustment of status is pending. Authorized DHS to waive good moral character disqualifications at the adjustment of status stage if the disqualification was caused by or incident to the trafficking.

Acts and Amendments	Key Changes
Violence Against Women Reauthorization Act of 2013 (VAWA 2013) ^[11]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Created a new classification of derivative relatives for the adult or minor child of the principal's derivative relative, if the adult or minor child faces a present danger of retaliation as a result of the principal's escape from trafficking or cooperation with law enforcement. Clarified that presence in the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands constitutes presence in the United States. Exempted from the public charge ground of inadmissibility T nonimmigrants and applicants setting forth a prima facie ("at first look") case for eligibility for T nonimmigrant status.^[12]
Justice for Victims of Trafficking Act of 2015 (JVTA) ^[13]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Added "patronizing" and "soliciting" to the definition of sex trafficking at 18 U.S.C. 7102(10). Added "patronized or solicited" to the crime of sex trafficking at 18 U.S.C. 1591. Mandated human trafficking awareness training for relevant DHS personnel with law enforcement and public facing roles.

D. Legal Authorities

- INA 101(a)(15)(T) – Definition of T nonimmigrant classification
- 8 CFR 214.11 – Victims of severe forms of trafficking in persons
- INA 101(i) – Referral to nongovernmental organizations and employment authorization
- INA 212(d)(3)(A)(ii) and (d)(13); 8 CFR 212.16 – Waivers of inadmissibility
- INA 214(o) – Nonimmigrants guilty of trafficking in persons, numerical limitations, and length and extension of status
- 8 CFR 274a.12(a)(16) and (c)(25) – Employment authorization
- INA 237(d) – Administrative stay of removal

- 8 U.S.C. 1367 – Penalties for disclosure of information
- 28 CFR 1100.35 – Authority to permit continued presence in the United States for victims of severe forms of trafficking in persons
- 22 U.S.C. 7105(b)(1) – Assistance for victims of trafficking in the United States
- 22 CFR 41.84 – Victims of trafficking in persons

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Trafficking and Violence Protection Act (TVPA) of 2000, Pub. L. 106-386 (PDF), 114 Stat. 1464, 1470 (October 28, 2000), codified at 22 U.S.C. 7101.

[^ 2] The term “severe form of trafficking in persons” is a legal term defined in the TVPA. The term is often referred to as “trafficking”, “human trafficking” or “acts of trafficking.”

[^ 3] See TVPA, Pub. L. 106–386 (PDF), 114 Stat. 1464, 1475 (October 28, 2000) (stating that such persons “shall be eligible for benefits and services...to the same extent as an alien who is admitted to the United States as a refugee under section 207 of the [INA]”). See INA 101(i)(2) (mandating employment authorization for principal T nonimmigrants).

[^ 4] Congress provided a specific basis for T nonimmigrants to adjust under INA 245(l), with eligibility criteria distinct from the criteria that apply to family-based, employment-based, and diversity visa adjustment under INA 245(a). For more information, see Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part J, Trafficking Victim-Based Adjustment [7 USCIS-PM J].

[^ 5] See 8 U.S.C. 1367. See 8 CFR 214.11(p). See Volume 1, Privacy and Confidentiality, Part E, VAWA, T and U Cases [1 USCIS-PM E].

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(5). USCIS also determines the evidentiary value of submitted evidence in its sole discretion.

[^ 7] See Pub. L. 106–386 (PDF) (October 28, 2000). See 22 U.S.C. 7101–7110. See 22 U.S.C. 2151n. See 22 U.S.C. 2152d.

[^ 8] See Pub. L. 108-193 (PDF) (December 19, 2003).

[^ 9] See Pub. L. 109-162 (PDF) (January 5, 2006). See Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005 Technical Amendments, Pub. L. 109-271 (PDF) (August 12, 2006).

[^ 10] See Pub. L. 110-457 (PDF) (December 23, 2008).

[^ 11] See Pub. L. 113-4 (PDF) (March 7, 2013).

[^ 12] See 8 U.S.C 1641(c)(4).

[^ 13] See Pub. L. 114-22 (PDF) (May 29, 2015).

Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

A. Overview of Eligibility Requirements

To establish eligibility for T nonimmigrant status,^[1] applicants must demonstrate that they:

- Have been a victim of a severe form of trafficking in persons;
- Are physically present in the United States,^[2] American Samoa, or at a U.S. port of entry on account of such trafficking;
- Have complied with any reasonable request for assistance in a federal, state, or local investigation or prosecution into acts of trafficking or the investigation of a crime where acts of trafficking are at least one central reason for the commission of that crime,^[3] except when the applicant was under 18 years of age at the time of victimization or is unable to cooperate with a request due to physical or psychological trauma;^[4]
- Would suffer extreme hardship involving unusual and severe harm upon removal from the United States;^[5] and
- Are admissible to the United States or qualify for a waiver of any applicable grounds of inadmissibility.^[6]

B. Victim of Severe Form of Trafficking in Persons

1. General Definition

The term “severe form of trafficking in persons” is defined by the Trafficking and Victims Protection Act (TVPA)^[7] and USCIS regulations.^[8] The definition includes both sex trafficking and labor trafficking. Applicants must demonstrate that the trafficker engaged in a prohibited action by means of force, fraud, or coercion (unless subject to an exemption for age or an exception for trauma suffered) for a particular end. The table below breaks down the definition of a severe form of trafficking in persons into its three elements: action, purpose and means.

Severe Form of Trafficking in Persons Definition

Type of Trafficking	Action	End	Means
Sex Trafficking	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Recruiting • Harboring • Transporting • Provision • Soliciting • Patronizing • Obtaining (Of a person) 	For the purpose of a commercial sex act	Induced by force, fraud, or coercion (not required when the victim is under 18 years of age)
Labor Trafficking	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Recruiting • Harboring • Transporting • Provision • Obtaining (Of a person) 	For the purpose of subjecting the victim to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Involuntary servitude • Peonage • Debt bondage • Slavery 	Through use of force, fraud, or coercion

2. Definition of Harboring

While the term harboring is most commonly understood to mean actively hiding or concealing a fugitive, harboring within the trafficking context refers to the series of actions a trafficker takes to exert and maintain control over a victim by substantially limiting or restricting a victim's movement or agency.

The term agency refers to the ability to act according to one's own free will, control over one's emotional and physical states of being, and ability to exert (or attempt to exert) influence over oneself.

[9] A victim's ability to eventually escape the trafficking does not necessarily invalidate the lack of agency the victim experienced throughout the victimization. Some factors officers may evaluate to determine whether harboring occurred include, but are not limited to:

- Isolation of the victim;
- Limitations on the victim's ability to interact with others;
- Restrictions on the victim's movement; and
- Consequences of acting outside of the trafficker's orders or without the trafficker's explicit permission.

Harboring does not require a preexisting relationship between the victim and the trafficker. However, harboring may occur within a variety of consensual relationships, including employer-employee, parent-child, smuggler-smugglee, landlord-tenant, and marriages and other intimate partner relationships.

Harboring may occur for any period of time, but generally must endure long enough to substantially limit or restrict the victim's movement or agency.

3. Definition of Coercion

The regulations define coercion as:

- Threats of serious harm to or physical restraint against any person;
- Any scheme, plan, or pattern intended to cause a person to believe that failure to perform an act would result in serious harm to or physical restraint against any person; or
- Abuse or threatened abuse of the legal process.^[10]

Threats of Serious Harm

Serious harm includes any harm (for example, physical, psychological, or financial) that is sufficiently serious under all the surrounding circumstances to compel a reasonable person of the same background and in the same circumstances to perform or to continue performing labor or services^[11] in order to avoid experiencing that harm.^[12] Serious harm can include a variety of types of harm, including, but not limited to:

- Harm to third parties close to the victim, such as family members or children in the care of the victim;
- Banishment, starvation, or bankruptcy of the victim or family members;
- Subjecting victims to isolation, denial of sleep, and other punishments;
- Refusing to send money home to the victim's family;

- Withholding pay or other compensation resulting in an inability to pay off large debt or obtain necessary medical care or nutrition;
- Deportation or removal from the United States; and
- Reputational harm, such as threats to falsely accuse the victim of being a thief if the victim attempts to leave employment.

Depending on the facts of the case, one type of harm alone may constitute serious harm. In cases involving multiple types of harm, each type of harm might meet the definition of serious harm, or the harms when considered together may constitute serious harm.

In determining whether the trafficker made a threat of serious harm that could reasonably be believed by the victim, USCIS considers any vulnerabilities of the victim, including but not limited to the victim's particular socioeconomic situation, physical and mental condition, age, education, training, experience, or intelligence.^[13]

Officers should determine whether a reasonable person in the same circumstances as the victim would believe that the victim would suffer serious harm if the victim did not provide labor or services. Appendix: Case Law References for T Visa Adjudications [3 USCIS-PM B, Appendices Tab] lists decisions that may provide additional clarification on the concepts of threats of harm and serious harm.

Use or Threats of Use of Physical Restraint

The use or threat of use of physical restraint or physical injury, including the use of violence or threats of violence, can constitute coercion.^[14] Examples of physical coercion include:

- An actual or threatened physical act that could result in harm;
- The use or threatened use of any object or weapon to intimidate or injure; and
- The use of threats through words or actions to instill in the victim a fear that others would kill, injure, or use force against the victim or any other person.

There is no requirement that the victim be physically restrained and prevented from escaping in order for USCIS to find that physical coercion occurred. In addition, sexual abuse could constitute physical coercion.

Analyzing Whether Actions Constitute Threats

In the coercion analysis, officers may need to determine whether a trafficker's actions constitute a threat.

A threat is a serious expression of an intention to inflict harm, immediately or in the future, as distinguished from idle or careless talk, exaggeration, or something said in a joking manner. For an expression to be a threat, the expression must have been made under such circumstances that a reasonable person (in the victim's circumstances) who heard, read, saw, or otherwise experienced the action would perceive it to be a serious expression of an intent to cause harm. In addition, the trafficker must have made the expression intending it to be a threat, or with the knowledge that the statement would be viewed as a threat.^[15]

USCIS views threats from the viewpoint of the victim, considering the victim's individual circumstances and the totality of the circumstances surrounding the trafficker's threats.

Scheme, Pattern, or Plan

Instead of direct threats or use of overt violence, traffickers may employ a scheme, plan, or pattern, "intended to cause the person to believe that, if that person did not perform such labor or services, that person or another person would suffer serious harm or physical restraint."^[16]

In determining whether there is a scheme, pattern, or plan, officers should consider the totality of the trafficker's actions and any evidence of the trafficker's intent in carrying them out. Officers may consider actions taken before the victim's arrival in the United States or before the start of the performance of labor or services that are relevant to establishing a scheme, pattern, or plan.

Indicators of a scheme, pattern, or plan could include a range of actions by traffickers, some of which may overlap with the types of serious harm discussed above. The following non-exhaustive list includes factors that may contribute to a finding of coercion by way of a scheme, pattern, or plan:

- Limiting access to public benefits and services;
- Confiscation of identification documents;
- Creating a climate of social or linguistic isolation;
- Subjecting the victim to verbal abuse, physical abuse, or harsh living or working conditions;
- Creating a belief that the perpetrator could be physically violent through physical demonstrations of violence against workers or others;
- Inducing workers to take on high debt;
- Fraudulent promises about work or housing conditions;
- Subjecting the victim to economic detriment through tactics including, but not limited to:
 - Underpaying or not paying what was promised to the employee;

- Not supplying promised work hours; or
 - Deducting expenses from pay that are unreasonable or not as contracted;
- Creating a belief that the employer has the power to deport, arrest, or blacklist^[17] a victim through actions such as, but not limited to:
 - Discussing the employer’s relationship with law enforcement;
 - Threatening to call the authorities (for example, the sheriff, police, immigration, or Federal Bureau of Investigation) if the employee complains about conditions or leaves the job;
 - Threatening to ensure the employee is never able to work in the United States again;
 - Filing a criminal complaint if the employee complains about working conditions or requests unpaid wages;
 - Threatening to report the employee as an absconder; or
 - Creating a belief that the employer has powerful connections to those who can impose harm on the victim or victim’s family members, such as connections to political leaders, local law enforcement, or organized crime, in the United States or the victim’s home country.

Abuse or Threatened Abuse of the Legal Process

Coercion could also include the use or threatened use of the law or legal process, whether administrative, civil, or criminal, in any manner or for any purpose for which the law was not designed, in order to exert pressure on another person to cause that person to take some action or refrain from taking some action.^[18]

Appendix: Case Law References for T Visa Adjudications [3 USCIS-PM B, Appendices Tab] lists decisions that may provide additional clarification on the concept of threatened or actual abuse of the legal system. The following is a non-exhaustive list of the types of threats that could establish abuse or threatened abuse of the legal process:

- Threats of imprisonment, prosecution, or imposition of criminal sanctions for failure to perform labor or services;
- Threats to institutionalize someone in a mental health facility;
- Threats to have immigration authorities arrest or deport workers, particularly for failing to comply with the trafficker’s directives or as a tactic to keep the workers until the end of their contracts by exploiting their fears; or

- Threats to call immigration authorities, to report a worker for absconding, or to let a person's visa expire.

Legal coercion may occur even when the threatened outcome is not an actual legal possibility. In determining the purpose behind the threats, USCIS examines any threat of legal consequences in light of all of the surrounding circumstances and considers whether the threat is being used for an end different from that envisioned by the law or for a coercive purpose designed to intimidate a worker.

4. Labor Trafficking Concepts

Involuntary Servitude

Involuntary servitude is defined as a condition of servitude induced by:

- Means of any scheme, plan, or pattern intended to cause a person to believe that, if the person did not enter into or continue in such condition, that person or another person would suffer serious harm or physical restraint; or
- Abuse or threatened abuse of legal process.^[19]

Involuntary servitude also occurs when the victim is forced to work for the perpetrator by the use or threat of physical restraint or physical injury, or by the use or threat of coercion through the law or the legal process. This definition includes those cases in which the perpetrator holds the victim in servitude by placing the victim in fear of such physical restraint or injury or legal coercion.^[20] Coercion may also be established if the perpetrator uses psychological abuse.

Involuntary servitude may occur in circumstances where the victim has a preexisting relationship or arrangement with the trafficker. For example, involuntary servitude may occur in the context of a domestic relationship (including parent-child, intimate partner, or roommate relationships). Involuntary servitude can include, but is not limited to, domestic servitude and sexual exploitation. Whether the conditions occurred in a domestic context or outside of the home is not in and of itself determinative of whether involuntary servitude has occurred.

Conditions of Servitude Induced by Domestic Violence

Trafficking can occur alongside intimate partner abuse, and involuntary servitude and domestic violence may coexist in some situations. In determining whether threats of abuse (including physical violence, mental abuse, emotional abuse, sexual violence, intimidation, and controlling behavior in the home) create a condition of involuntary servitude that constitutes a severe form of trafficking in persons, officers should evaluate whether the situation involves compelled or coerced labor or services or forced sexual activity and is induced by force, fraud, or coercion.

While domestic violence and trafficking often intersect, not all work that occurs as the result of domestic abuse constitutes a condition of servitude. For example, in certain contexts, the unequal assignment of household tasks among household members may signal an abusive relationship, but it does not automatically constitute the creation of a condition of servitude.

Forced labor^[21] compelled by domestic violence occurs where the aim of the domestic violence is to force the victim to engage in labor that creates a condition of servitude. To distinguish between domestic violence and labor trafficking resulting from domestic violence, applicants must demonstrate that the motivation of the perpetrator is or was to subject the applicant to a condition of servitude.

Officers may evaluate the actions the trafficker has taken to maintain the applicant in a condition of servitude, including recruitment, harboring, transportation, provision, obtaining, patronization, or solicitation, to further understand the goal of the perpetrator. Where trafficking is accompanied and enforced by abuse, victims may act upon the trafficker's demands for labor and services due to fear or coercion and may feel that they do not have their own liberty or self-determination.

The following non-exhaustive list outlines circumstances where the trafficker may control the victim's liberty to create a condition of servitude:

- An expectation that the victim's life fulfills the orders of the trafficker (such as a demand from the trafficker to perform domestic labor at an unreasonable level, including unreasonable working hours, and constant availability to labor regardless of health or energy);
- Lack of control over the victim's own wages despite laboring under the trafficker's demands; or
- The imposition of unequal living arrangements as part of the campaign of force, fraud, and coercion (for example, unequal sleeping arrangements, living arrangements, or access to nourishment).

Conditions of Servitude Induced During a Voluntary Smuggling Arrangement

Noncitizens may experience violence over the course of their smuggling. While not all crimes or exploitation that occur during a smuggling arrangement rise to the level of trafficking, smuggling may develop into trafficking. The existence of a voluntary smuggling arrangement does not invalidate the possibility of involuntary servitude arising within the smuggling.

Peonage

Peonage is a status or condition of involuntary servitude based upon real or alleged indebtedness.^[22] In other words, the perpetrator compels the victim into involuntary servitude in order to satisfy a real or imagined debt.

When a debtor voluntarily enters into a contract to pay off a debt, that debtor, like any other contractor, can choose at any time to break the contract. It does not matter that a debtor entered into a contract agreeing to perform services or labor for the creditor. There is a clear distinction between peonage and voluntarily agreeing to perform labor or provide services in payment of a debt.

In determining whether an applicant has been a victim of peonage, officers should follow the guidance above related to involuntary servitude, with the added element that the victim was held in involuntary servitude in order to satisfy a real or artificially-created debt. If the facts support a finding that the applicant was a victim of peonage, USCIS officers should also consider the applicant a victim of involuntary servitude.

Debt Bondage

“Debt bondage” is the status or condition of a debtor arising from a pledge by the debtor of the personal services of the debtor or those of a person under the debtor’s control as a security for debt, if the value of those services as reasonably assessed is not applied toward the liquidation of the debt or the length and nature of those services are not limited and defined.^[23] Appendix: Case Law References for T Visa Adjudications [3 USCIS-PM B, Appendices Tab] lists decisions that may provide additional clarification on the concept of debt bondage.

Slavery

The term slavery is not defined in the TVPA or regulations, but is generally understood to mean the state of being held under the complete and total ownership or control of another person or entity and being deprived of liberty, autonomy, and independence for the purpose of subjecting the victim to forced labor or services.

5. Definition of Sex Trafficking

Sex trafficking is the recruitment, harboring, transportation, provision, obtaining, patronizing, or soliciting of a person for the purpose of a commercial sex act.^[24] A commercial sex act is any sex act on account of which anything of value is given to or received by any person.^[25] For sex trafficking to constitute a severe form of trafficking in persons, the commercial sex act must generally have been induced by force, fraud, or coercion.^[26] However, a minor under the age of 18 who engages in a commercial sex act meets the definition of a victim of a severe form of trafficking in persons without having to show force, fraud, or coercion. This is because minors under the age of 18 cannot consent to sexual acts.

6. Key Principles of Trafficking in Persons

Actual Labor or Services Need Not Have Been Performed

In determining whether an applicant has been a victim of a severe form of trafficking, it is not necessary for the victim to actually perform the labor or commercial sex act(s) to be eligible for T nonimmigrant status. For example, a victim may be recruited through force, fraud, or coercion for the purpose of performing labor or services but be rescued or have escaped before performing any labor or services.

Appendix: Case Law References for T Visa Adjudications [3 USCIS-PM B, Appendices Tab] lists decisions that may provide additional clarification on the concepts of labor and services. The statutory definitions of trafficking include acts committed “for the purpose of” subjecting someone to a form of trafficking. Therefore, the statute does not require the victim to actually perform the labor or services.

Compensation is Not Determinative

A worker who is paid some or all the promised wages may still be a victim of trafficking. The fact that an applicant was paid a salary or wage for work is not determinative of whether the applicant was subjected to one of the federal trafficking crimes.

Appendix: Case Law References for T Visa Adjudications [3 USCIS-PM B, Appendices Tab] lists decisions that may provide additional clarification on the concept of compensation.

Labor or Services Might Include Non-Traditional Types of Work

When analyzing whether a person has been subjected to involuntary servitude or peonage, USCIS considers that the labor or services might include non-traditional types of work. Appendix: Case Law References for T Visa Adjudications [3 USCIS-PM B, Appendices Tab] lists decisions that may provide additional clarification on the concepts of non-traditional work. Additionally, compelled labor or services provided in the context of a familial or intimate partner relationship may satisfy the definition.

For example, in certain contexts, domestic labor may constitute forced labor and satisfy the involuntary servitude assessment, when the actions are induced by force, fraud, or coercion and where the perpetrator had a goal of securing the forced labor or services for the purpose of subjecting the victim to a condition of servitude.

No Timeframe Required

To establish that they are or have been a victim of trafficking and have been compelled to perform the labor or services, applicants do not need to show that they were victimized for a defined length of time. For example, in the context of involuntary servitude, the duration of time can be of varying length and may be short in duration.^[27]

However, the totality of the circumstances must establish that the nature of the work was intended to create a condition of servitude. Appendix: Case Law References for T Visa Adjudications [3 USCIS-PM B, Appendices Tab] lists decisions that may provide additional clarification on the concept of timeframes.

The labor or services at issue also do not have to be coerced in every instance. There could be time periods in which the labor or services were voluntary and time periods in which they were involuntary. However, the labor or services must have been involuntary for at least some portion of the time that the applicant was performing the work to constitute labor trafficking.

While there is no requirement regarding the length of time the labor or services are performed or the means used to induce the acts, the applicant must establish that the trafficker acted for the purpose of subjecting the victim to involuntary servitude, peonage, debt bondage, slavery, or a commercial sex act.

7. Difference Between Trafficking and Smuggling

Federal law distinguishes between the crimes of human smuggling and human trafficking.^[28] Trafficking is a crime committed against a person regardless of the person's immigration status or the crossing of a transnational border, while smuggling is a crime committed against a country's immigration laws and involves the willful movement of a person across a country's border.

A person may voluntarily consent to be smuggled. In contrast, an act of trafficking must involve both a particular means, such as the use of force, fraud, or coercion, and a particular end, such as involuntary servitude or a commercial sex act. Federal law prohibits forced labor regardless of the victim's initial consent to work.^[29]

While human trafficking and smuggling are distinct, they are not mutually exclusive. In some smuggling arrangements, conditions may evolve into trafficking. For example, a person who initially agreed to be smuggled in exchange for money, services, or labor could become a victim of trafficking if, over the course of the smuggling, the smuggler subjects or intends to subject the person to acts beyond those agreed upon that meet the definition of a severe form of trafficking through the use of force, fraud, or coercion.

A consensual smuggling agreement does not excuse any acts of trafficking that may arise during the course of smuggling. In cases involving smuggling, officers should look to whether the smuggler's intent may have shifted over time into that of a trafficker and whether the initial consent has been invalidated by the coercive, deceptive, or abusive exploitation of the smuggler-turned-trafficker.

The perpetrator's motivations can be multifaceted. For example, a smuggler who intends to extort a person for financial payments during a smuggling arrangement may also have a dual intent or shifting intent to compel forced labor or services that place the person into a condition of servitude, even where the forced labor or services end upon completion of the smuggling arrangement.

Short periods of victimization may qualify as a condition of servitude depending on the victim's credible statements. Conversely, a person may be forced to perform certain labor within a smuggling arrangement outside of a condition of servitude that does not rise to trafficking, such as facilitating the smuggling operation or avoiding detection at the border. USCIS makes an individualized determination of whether trafficking has been established based on the evidence in each particular case.

C. Physical Presence on Account of Trafficking

Principal applicants for T nonimmigrant status must demonstrate at the time of application that they are physically present in the United States, American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands,^[30] or at a U.S. port of entry, on account of trafficking.^[31]

Some traffickers arrange for entry of their victims into these jurisdictions as part of the trafficking scheme, while other traffickers prey upon noncitizens who are already in the United States. These noncitizens may have entered lawfully or they may have entered without being admitted or paroled and are unlawfully present. USCIS takes into account the circumstances relating to the applicant's arrival and current presence in these jurisdictions.^[32]

1. Establishing Physical Presence Requirement

Applicants are able to establish physical presence on account of trafficking if they:

- Are present because they are currently being subjected to a severe form of trafficking in persons;
- Were liberated from a severe form of trafficking in persons by a law enforcement agency (LEA);
- Escaped a severe form of trafficking in persons before an LEA was involved;
- Were subjected to a severe form of trafficking in persons at some point in the past and their continuing presence in the United States is directly related to the original trafficking in persons; or
- Are present on account of having been allowed entry into the United States for participation in investigative or judicial processes associated with an act or perpetrator of trafficking.^[33]

Establishing Liberation by Law Enforcement^[34]

To establish physical presence under this provision, applicants must demonstrate that law enforcement assisted in liberating them from the trafficking situation. The applicant can satisfy physical presence under this provision regardless of the timeline between the liberation from original trafficking and the filing of the T visa application.

While applicants must demonstrate physical presence at the time of the application, the phrase "at the time of application" does not impose a limitation on the specific amount of time between the original trafficking and the filing of the application. The victim may file the application at any time. There is no requirement that the victim be in an ongoing trafficking situation, be in continuous contact with the trafficker, interact with the trafficker, or be under the control of the trafficker to qualify under this standard.

Establishing Law Enforcement Agency Involvement^[35]

To establish physical presence under this provision, the applicant must demonstrate that the LEA became actively involved in detecting, investigating, or prosecuting the acts of trafficking.^[36] LEA involvement requires law enforcement action beyond receiving the applicant's tip, and can be satisfied by demonstrating that the LEA interviewed the applicant or otherwise became involved in detecting, investigating, or prosecuting the trafficking after the applicant escaped.

The applicant can satisfy physical presence under this provision regardless of the time that has passed between the LEA's involvement and the filing of the T visa application.

Establishing the Direct Relationship between the Applicant's Ongoing Presence and the Original Trafficking in Persons^[37]

The physical presence provision requires USCIS to consider the applicant's presence in the United States at the time of application.^[38] The phrase "at the time of application" does not require that the victim file the application within a certain amount of time after the original trafficking. The victim may file the application at any time. There is no requirement that the victim be in an ongoing trafficking situation, be in continuous contact with the trafficker, interact with the trafficker, or be under the control of the trafficker to qualify under this standard.

To establish eligibility under this provision, applicants must establish that their current presence in the United States is directly connected to the original trafficking in persons, whenever that trafficking may have occurred. Observations that the applicant has repeatedly traveled outside the United States since the trafficking, and that the departures from the United States are not the result of continued victimization, or that the applicant lacks continued ties to the United States or has established an intent to abandon life in the United States, support a finding that their current presence is not directly connected to the original trafficking.

Developments in an applicant's life following the trafficking, including professional and personal milestones (such as finding new employment, having children, getting married, managing mental health diagnoses) do not prevent an applicant from establishing ongoing presence on account of trafficking. Despite reaching certain milestones, an applicant can still demonstrate that their continuing presence in the United States is directly related to the initial victimization. The applicant may accomplish this by explaining the impact of the trauma the applicant continues to experience as a result of the trafficking.

When evaluating whether an applicant's continuing presence in the United States is directly related to the original trafficking in persons, USCIS considers all evidence using a victim-centered approach.^[39] Officers should look for a description of the specific impacts of trafficking on the applicant's life at the time of application. The applicant may not establish eligibility if the evidence of the ongoing impact of trauma on the applicant's life does not sufficiently establish the connection between the trafficking and the applicant's presence in the United States at the time of filing.

Factors officers may consider include, but are not limited to:

- Ongoing psychological or physical trauma (or both) the applicant suffers as a result of victimization;
- Health diagnoses stemming from the victimization;
- Ability to access legal and therapeutic services as a tool for rehabilitation in the United States or in the home country, and whether the applicant is currently or has recently accessed trafficking-related services and benefits;
- Current efforts the applicant is undertaking to rehabilitate, stabilize, and acclimate to society; including self-identification as a victim or survivor;
- The level of control or fear the trafficker still exerts over the victim (including continued fear of law enforcement and immigration authorities and fear of retaliation from the trafficker in the victim's home country);
- Current cooperation with law enforcement; and
- Any other activities the applicant has undertaken to deal with the consequences of having been trafficked.

Establishing Presence for Participation in an Investigative or Judicial Process^[40]

The applicant meets the physical presence requirement^[41] when the trafficking occurred abroad and meets the federal definition of "a severe form of trafficking in persons" and the victim is allowed entry into the United States to participate in an investigative or judicial process associated with an act or a perpetrator of trafficking.

Trafficking that Began Abroad and Continues to the Port of Entry or Into the United States

If the acts of trafficking began abroad, caused the victim's entry into the United States or presence at the port of entry, and were discovered at the port of entry or continued after the applicant entered, and the acts of trafficking are ongoing, the applicant may establish physical presence as someone who is "present because he or she is currently being subjected to a severe form of trafficking in persons."^[42]

Establishing Physical Presence When the Trafficking Ended Outside the United States

Applicants may be able to establish that they are physically present in the United States on account of trafficking^[43] even when the trafficking occurred abroad. Applicants must demonstrate that they are now in the United States or at a port of entry on account of trafficking or were allowed valid entry into the United States to participate in a trafficking-related investigation or a prosecution or other judicial process.

2. Departures From the United States

An applicant who has voluntarily left (or has been removed from) the United States at any time after the act of a severe form of trafficking in persons is not considered to be physically present in the United States on account of trafficking except under the following circumstances:

- The applicant's reentry was the result of the continued victimization;
- The applicant is a victim of a new incident of a severe form of trafficking in persons; or
- The applicant has been allowed reentry to the United States for participation in investigative or judicial processes associated with an act, or perpetrator, of trafficking.^[44]

The key factors USCIS considers are the reason(s) for the applicant's departure and the circumstances surrounding the applicant's return to the United States.

USCIS cannot approve the application for T nonimmigrant status until the applicant returns to the United States.

Reentry Due to Continuing Victimization

To overcome the presumption that the applicant is no longer physically present on account of trafficking following a departure and sufficiently establish that the applicant's reentry is due to continued victimization, the applicant must demonstrate that the reentry stemmed from a continuation of a prior trafficking scheme or show a clear connection between the applicant's continued victimization from the trafficker and the reentry.

Factors that officers may consider when evaluating whether the applicant's reentry resulted from continuing victimization include, but are not limited to:

- The extent of the applicant's continued fear of and connection to the trafficker;
- The threats and risk of harm the trafficker poses to the applicant and the applicant's family; and
- The nature and severity of the victimization arising out of the impacts of trafficking on the applicant's life at the time of reentry.

Reentry for Participation in Investigative or Judicial Processes

Applicants who departed the United States after their trafficking and subsequently reentered may still satisfy the physical presence requirement if they demonstrate that they were allowed reentry^[45] for participation in investigative or judicial processes^[46] associated with an act or perpetrator of trafficking.^[47]

Where the applicant was allowed an initial entry or reentry into the United States for participation in investigative or judicial processes^[48] associated with an act or perpetrator of trafficking, the applicant must have entered by lawful means, and it does not matter where the trafficking occurred.^[49] In this scenario, the applicant is considered to be physically present on account of trafficking, regardless of where such trafficking occurred.^[50] To satisfy this ground, the applicant's entry must be lawful and directly connected to the applicant's participation in an investigation or judicial process related to the trafficking.^[51]

D. Requests for Law Enforcement Assistance

1. General Rule

An applicant for T nonimmigrant status is required to comply with any reasonable request for assistance in a federal, state, or local investigation or prosecution of acts of trafficking in persons or the investigation of a crime where an act of trafficking in persons is at least one central reason for the commission of that crime.^[52]

An LEA includes any federal, state, or local LEA, prosecutor, judge, labor agency, children's protective services agency, or other authority that has the responsibility and authority for the detection, investigation, or prosecution of severe forms of trafficking in persons. Federal LEAs include, but are not limited to the following:^[53]

- U.S. Attorneys' Offices, Civil Rights and Criminal Divisions;
- U.S. Marshals Service;
- Federal Bureau of Investigation;
- U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement;
- U.S. Customs and Border Protection;
- Diplomatic Security Service; and
- Department of Labor.

2. Totality of the Circumstances Test

When determining whether an LEA request for assistance is reasonable, USCIS considers the following non-exhaustive set of factors:

- General law enforcement and prosecutorial practices;
- Nature of the victimization;

- Specific circumstances of the victim;
- Severity of trauma suffered (both mental and physical) and whether the request would cause further trauma;
- Access to support services;
- The safety of the victim or the victim's family;
- Compliance with other requests and the extent of such compliance;
- Whether the request would yield essential information;
- Whether the information could be obtained without the victim's compliance;
- Whether an interpreter or attorney was present to help the victim understand the request;
- Cultural, religious, or moral objections to the request;
- Time the victim had to comply with the request; and
- Age and maturity of the victim.^[54]

3. Comparably-Situated Crime Victim Standard

In examining the totality of the circumstances, USCIS uses a comparably-situated crime victim standard,^[55] which focuses on the protection of victims and provides more flexibility than other standards in order to strike the proper balance between the law enforcement need to investigate and prosecute and the need to ensure that victims are not overburdened.

The focus is whether it was generally reasonable for an LEA to ask a victim of a severe form of trafficking in persons similar things an LEA would ask other comparably-situated crime victims, not whether a victim's refusal was unreasonable.^[56]

4. Contact with Law Enforcement

Applicants must, at a minimum, have had contact with an LEA regarding their victimization.^[57] It is sufficient for applicants to provide credible evidence to document that they have reported the victimization, including any crime where the acts of trafficking constitute at least one central reason for the commission of that crime, to law enforcement.

Applicants can generally satisfy the compliance with reasonable requests for assistance requirement by reporting their victimization to law enforcement by email, letter, or other reporting mechanisms and complying with reasonable requests for assistance or demonstrating that they qualify for an exemption due to age or exception due to trauma. Applicants may also establish that they have cooperated with reasonable requests for assistance by submitting a Declaration of Law Enforcement Officer for Victim of Trafficking in Persons (Form I-914, Supplement B (PDF, 327.01 KB)).

Form I-914, Supplement B provides valuable evidence of the victim's cooperation with reasonable requests for assistance but is not a required form of evidence to establish eligibility for T nonimmigrant status. Completing Form I-914, Supplement B is a discretionary LEA decision. Depending on the individual circumstances, victims may submit evidence of reporting to an LEA outside of the jurisdiction where the trafficking occurred, which would generally satisfy the reporting requirement, including but not limited to the Supplement B.

An applicant who has never had contact with an LEA regarding the victimization associated with the acts of a severe form of trafficking in persons is not eligible for T nonimmigrant status unless the applicant qualifies for the age-based exemption or trauma-based exception.^[58]

5. Age-Based Exemption and Trauma-Based Exception

An applicant is exempt from the requirement to comply with reasonable law enforcement requests if the applicant was under 18 years of age at the time at least one of the acts of trafficking occurred.

An applicant may qualify for an exception if the applicant can establish that applicant's lack of contact with an LEA or compliance with a reasonable request for assistance is due to physical or psychological trauma.^[59]

If an officer determines that a request was reasonable and no exceptions or exemptions apply, the officer then examines whether an applicant actually complied with the request.

6. The Relationship Between Assistance with Law Enforcement and Victimization

To establish eligibility for T nonimmigrant status, applicants must demonstrate that the acts of trafficking that they reported to law enforcement are also the acts of trafficking that they experienced directly. Witnessing trafficking alone is not sufficient to satisfy this requirement.

There are many complex factors that inform law enforcement's decision to pursue a case, including the high evidentiary standards for pursuing criminal matters, the difficulty locating the perpetrator, and the expiration of the statute of limitations. The decision to pursue an investigation or prosecution falls solely within the discretion of law enforcement. There is no requirement that law enforcement initiate or complete an investigation or prosecution to satisfy the law enforcement cooperation requirement.

Applicants can satisfy the reasonable request for assistance requirement if they participate in an investigation or prosecution against their trafficker even if the applicant is not directly named in the case. The applicant does not need to demonstrate that the acts of trafficking they suffered are directly referenced in any investigation or prosecution that law enforcement pursues. Therefore, where a case evolves into a formal judicial proceeding as a result of the applicant's cooperation, the applicant does not need to demonstrate direct reference to their victimization.

E. Extreme Hardship

1. General Rule

An applicant must demonstrate that removal from the United States would subject the applicant to extreme hardship involving unusual and severe harm.^[60] A finding of extreme hardship involving unusual and severe harm may not be based solely upon current or future economic detriment, or the lack of, or disruption to, social or economic opportunities.^[61]

2. Factors

Factors that officers consider in evaluating whether removal would result in extreme hardship involving unusual and severe harm include both traditional extreme hardship factors and factors associated with having been a victim of a severe form of trafficking in persons.^[62]

Traditional extreme hardship factors include, but are not limited to, the following:

- The age of the applicant, both at the time of entry and at the time of the application;
- Family ties in the United States and in the country to which the applicant would be returned, if any;
- Length of residence in the United States;
- The health of the applicant and the availability and quality of any required medical treatment in the country of relocation, including length and cost of treatment;
- The political and economic conditions in the country to which the applicant would be returned;
- The possibility of other means of adjusting status in the United States;
- The applicant's community ties in the United States; and
- The applicant's immigration history.^[63]

Extreme hardship factors associated with having been a victim of a severe form of trafficking in persons include, but are not limited to:^[64]

- The age, maturity, and personal circumstances of the applicant;^[65]
- Any physical or psychological illness the applicant has that necessitates medical or psychological care not reasonably available in the foreign country;^[66]

- The nature and extent of the physical and psychological consequences of having been a victim of a severe form of trafficking in persons;^[67]
- The impact of the loss of access to the U.S. courts and criminal justice system for purposes relating to the incident of a severe form of trafficking in persons or other crimes perpetrated against the applicant, including criminal and civil redress for acts of trafficking in persons, criminal prosecution, restitution, and protection;^[68]
- The reasonable expectation that the existence of laws, social practices, or customs in the foreign country to which the applicant would be returned would penalize the applicant severely for having been the victim of a severe form of trafficking in persons;^[69]
- The likelihood of re-victimization and the need, ability, and willingness of foreign authorities to protect the applicant;^[70]
- The likelihood that the trafficker in persons or others acting on behalf of the trafficker in the foreign country would severely harm the applicant;^[71] and
- The likelihood that the existence of civil unrest or armed conflict would threaten the applicant's individual safety.^[72]

In most instances, USCIS does not consider hardship to persons other than the applicant in determining whether an applicant would suffer extreme hardship involving unusual and severe harm. However, USCIS considers the totality of the circumstances, and extreme hardship to an applicant's family member or someone close to the applicant could be a relevant factor, but only to the extent that such hardship affects the applicant. The outcome of the analysis depends on the facts and circumstances of each case.

F. Bar to T Nonimmigrant Status Eligibility

An applicant is barred from receiving T nonimmigrant status if there is substantial reason to believe that the applicant has committed an act of a severe form of trafficking in persons.^[73]

G. Effect of Immigration Status on Application

Lawful permanent residents, conditional permanent residents, and U.S. citizens are not eligible for classification as a T nonimmigrant.^[74] A person in another valid nonimmigrant status may apply for T nonimmigrant status. However, a noncitizen may not hold more than one nonimmigrant status at a time.^[75]

Footnotes

[^ 1] To apply for the T nonimmigrant status classification, the applicant must file an Application for T Nonimmigrant Status, (Form I-914).

[^ 2] The United States includes the 50 states of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Guam, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands. See INA 101(a)(38). See 8 CFR 214.11(a).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.11(b)(3).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.11(b)(3)(ii). See 8 CFR 214.11(b)(3)(i).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.11(b)(4).

[^ 6] See Volume 9, Waivers and Other Forms of Relief, Part O, Victims of Trafficking [9 USCIS-PM O].

[^ 7] See Pub. L. 106-386 (PDF), 114 Stat. 1464, 1470 (October 28, 2000), codified at 22 U.S.C. 7102(11).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.11(a).

[^ 9] See American Psychological Association Dictionary of Psychology's definition of "agency." See Merriam-Webster Dictionary's definition of "agency."

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.11(a).

[^ 11] The term "labor or services" encompasses both labor trafficking and sex trafficking.

[^ 12] See 18 U.S.C. 1589. See H.R. Rep. 106-939 (PDF), p. 101 (Oct. 5, 2000).

[^ 13] See John S. Siffert, Modern Federal Jury Instructions-Criminal (Newark: Mathew Bender Elite Products, 2003), P 47A.02 at 5.

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 214.11(a).

[^ 15] See John S. Siffert, Modern Federal Jury Instructions-Criminal (Newark: Mathew Bender Elite Products, 2003), P 47A.02.

[^ 16] See 18 U.S.C. 1589.

[^ 17] See Merriam-Webster Dictionary's definition of "blacklist."

[^ 18] See 18 U.S.C. 1589(c)(1).

[^ 19] See 8 CFR 214.11(a).

[^ 20] See 8 CFR 214.11(a).

[^ 21] The term forced labor is commonly used to refer to labor trafficking.

[^ 22] See 8 CFR 214.11(a).

[^ 23] See 8 CFR 214.11(a).

[^ 24] See 8 CFR 214.11(a).

[^ 25] See 8 CFR 214.11(a).

[^ 26] See 8 CFR 214.11(a) (defining “severe form of trafficking in persons”).

[^ 27] 18 U.S.C. 1584 requires that involuntary servitude be for “any term,” which suggests that the duration of time can be short.

[^ 28] See 8 U.S.C. 1324. See 22 U.S.C. 7102.

[^ 29] See 67 FR 4784, 4787 (PDF) (Jan. 31, 2002).

[^ 30] Before the federalization of Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands (CNMI) immigration law on November 28, 2009, persons in the CNMI had to travel to Guam or elsewhere in the United States to be admitted as a T nonimmigrant. The 2009 legislation effectively replaced the CNMI’s immigration laws with U.S. immigration laws. Applicants in CNMI can now apply for T nonimmigrant status without traveling to the United States or Guam. See Consolidated Natural Resources Act of 2008, Pub. L. 110–229 (PDF) (May 8, 2008).

[^ 31] See INA 101(a)(15)(T)(i)(II). See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(1).

[^ 32] See 67 FR 4784, 4787 (PDF) (Jan. 31, 2002).

[^ 33] See INA 101(a)(15)(T)(i)(II). See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(1). See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(3).

[^ 34] See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(1)(ii).

[^ 35] See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(1)(iii).

[^ 36] This means of establishing physical presence is distinct from the eligibility requirement to cooperate with any reasonable requests for assistance from law enforcement under INA 101(a)(15)(T)(III) and 8 CFR 214.11(h). Applicants can generally satisfy the compliance with reasonable requests for assistance requirement by reporting their victimization to law enforcement by email, letter, or other reporting mechanisms and complying with reasonable requests for assistance or demonstrating that they qualify for an exemption due to age or exception due to trauma.

[^ 37] See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(1)(iv).

[^ 38] See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(1).

[^ 39] For additional explanation of the concept of a “victim-centered approach,” see Chapter 7, Adjudication, Section A, Victim-Centered Approach [3 USCIS-PM B.7(B)].

[^ 40] See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(1)(v).

[^ 41] See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(1)(v).

[^ 42] See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(1)(i).

[^ 43] See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(ii) – (g)(v).

[^ 44] See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(2).

[^ 45] Applicants may enter the United States through law enforcement agency “sponsorship,” such as through a grant of parole to assist law enforcement. See 8 CFR 212.5. If DHS paroles an applicant to pursue civil remedies associated with an act or perpetrator of trafficking, the applicant meets the physical presence requirement because DHS facilitated the victim’s entry into the United States for participation in an investigation or prosecution.

[^ 46] The term “judicial processes” refers to criminal investigations, prosecutions, and civil proceedings.

[^ 47] See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(2)(iii).

[^ 48] The term “judicial processes” refers to criminal investigations, prosecutions, and civil proceedings. Applicants may enter the United States through a grant of parole to assist law enforcement. If DHS paroles an applicant to pursue civil remedies associated with an act or perpetrator of trafficking, the applicant meets the physical presence requirement because DHS facilitated the victim’s entry into the United States for participation in an investigation or prosecution.

[^ 49] See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(3).

[^ 50] See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(3).

[^ 51] See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(3). See 81 FR 92266, 92272-73 (PDF) (Dec. 19, 2016).

[^ 52] See INA 101(a)(15)(T)(i)(III)(aa).

[^ 53] See 8 CFR 214.11(a).

[^ 54] See 8 CFR 214.11(a). See 8 CFR 214.11(h)(2).

[^ 55] See 81 FR 92266, 92275 (PDF) (Dec. 19, 2016).

[^ 56] See 81 FR 92266, 92275 (PDF) (Dec. 19, 2016). See 8 CFR 214.11(h)(4).

[^ 57] See 8 CFR 214.11(h)(1).

[^ 58] See 8 CFR 214.11(h)(1).

[^ 59] See INA 101(a)(15)(T)(i)(III)(bb). See INA 101(a)(15)(T)(i)(III)(cc). See 8 CFR 214.11(b)(3)(i)-(ii).

[^ 60] See INA 101(a)(15)(T)(i)(IV).

[^ 61] See 8 CFR 214.11(i)(1).

[^ 62] See 8 CFR 214.11(i)(2)(i)-(viii).

[^ 63] See Volume 9, Waivers and Other Forms of Relief, Part B, Extreme Hardship, Chapter 5, Extreme Hardship Considerations and Factors, Section D, Examples of Factors that May Support a Finding of Extreme Hardship [9 USCIS-PM B.5(D)] and Section E, Particularly Significant Factors [9 USCIS-PM B.5(E)]. See Matter of Anderson (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 596, 597 (BIA 1978). See Matter of Kao and Lin (PDF), 23 I&N Dec. 45 (BIA 2001). See Matter of Pilch (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 627 (BIA 1996). See Matter of Cervantes (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 560 (BIA 1999).

[^ 64] See 8 CFR 214.11(i)(2).

[^ 65] See 8 CFR 214.11(i)(2)(i).

[^ 66] See 8 CFR 214.11(i)(2)(ii).

[^ 67] See 8 CFR 214.11(i)(2)(iii).

[^ 68] See 8 CFR 214.11(i)(2)(iv).

[^ 69] See 8 CFR 214.11(i)(2)(v).

[^ 70] See 8 CFR 214.11(i)(2)(vi).

[^ 71] See 8 CFR 214.11(i)(2)(vii).

[^ 72] See 8 CFR 214.11(i)(2)(viii).

[^ 73] See INA 214(o)(1). See 8 CFR 214.11(b)(5).

[^ 74] See INA 101(a)(3). See INA 101(a)(15). See INA 101(a)(20). See Matter of C-G-, 1 I&N Dec. 70 (BIA 1941) (noting that a noncitizen may not be an immigrant and a nonimmigrant at the same time).

[^ 75] See 67 FR 4784, 4792 (PDF) (Jan. 31, 2002).

To apply for the T nonimmigrant status, the applicant must file an Application for T Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-914).^[1]

A. Burden of Proof

The applicant bears the burden of establishing eligibility for T nonimmigrant status.^[2] The applicant must meet all the eligibility requirements from the time of filing the application through adjudication.^[3]

B. Standard of Proof

The standard of proof is the amount of evidence needed to establish eligibility for the benefit sought. USCIS evaluates applications for T nonimmigrant status under the preponderance of the evidence standard. The applicant has the burden of demonstrating eligibility by a preponderance of the evidence.^[4]

C. Evidence

USCIS reviews all evidence and may investigate any aspect of the application. Officers may use evidence previously submitted by the applicant for any immigration benefit or relief in evaluating the eligibility of an applicant for T nonimmigrant status. USCIS is not bound by previous factual determinations made in connection with a prior application or petition for any immigration benefit or relief. USCIS determines, in its sole discretion, the evidentiary value of previously or concurrently submitted evidence.^[5]

1. Any Credible Evidence Provision

Inability to Obtain Documentation and Evidence

USCIS must consider “any credible evidence” in determining whether the applicant has established eligibility for T nonimmigrant status.^[6] Applicants may experience difficulties obtaining traditional evidence, including documents, relevant to establishing their eligibility. USCIS applies the “any credible evidence” provision to victim-based filings in recognition of the difficulties victims may experience in obtaining such evidence.

Due to the nature of the victimization (including possible loss of control of personal possessions as a tactic to further force, fraud, or coercion), trafficking victims may not have the ability to obtain certain personal information that would otherwise be available to support a finding of eligibility. The trafficker may control access to, confiscate, or destroy relevant documentation, including identification, travel and employment documents, or immigration documents.

Factual Inconsistencies

In determining the credibility of an applicant's personal statement and other evidence and evaluating the sufficiency of evidence submitted, officers must consider the impact of trauma and victimization. Officers should also be mindful of the complex ways in which trauma may present for survivors of trafficking, including cognitive, emotional, sensory, and physical impacts.

Because trauma impacts every person differently, what is traumatizing to one person may not be traumatizing to another. In some cases, trauma may result in the applicant being unable to recollect or express all details of the victimization in a linear fashion. Officers must review inconsistencies in the applicant's story over the course of the applicant's immigration journey in light of this fact, particularly if the applicant has established that the applicant is a victim of a severe form of trafficking in persons.

A person's recollection of traumatic experiences may shift over time. As such, inconsistencies in the applicant's account of victimization may not necessarily be indicators of fraud or lack of credibility but may instead be the result of a fragmented recollection due to trauma.

Weighing and Determining the Credibility of Evidence

Under the "any credible evidence" provision, officers should not require the applicant to submit particular types of evidence and may not deny applications for T nonimmigrant status due to the applicant's failure to submit a particular type of evidence. Officers must examine each piece of evidence individually and within the context of the totality of the evidence for relevance, probative value, and credibility.^[7]

The determination of what evidence is credible and the weight given to each type of evidence is within the sole discretion of USCIS and determined on a case-by-case basis.^[8] Evidence that is credible generally contains information that is both internally consistent and externally consistent with other relevant evidence in the record.

However, USCIS makes determinations of credibility based on the particular facts and circumstances of the case, taking into account the limitations on the particular applicant's ability to obtain evidence and the general considerations that pertain to victim-based cases, including the impact of trauma and victimization discussed above.

An officer may only deny an application on evidentiary grounds if the evidence the applicant submitted is not credible or otherwise does not meet the preponderance of the evidence standard to establish eligibility. Officers may not request or require that the applicant demonstrate the unavailability of a specific document, including traditionally understood "primary evidence." An explanation from the applicant, however, regarding the unavailability of such documents may assist officers in adjudicating the case.

2. Initial Filing and Accompanying Evidence

When filing the Application for T Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-914), the applicant should submit:

- Any credible evidence demonstrating that the applicant meets the eligibility requirements;
- The applicant's signed personal statement describing the facts of the victimization, compliance with reasonable requests for assistance from law enforcement (or a basis for why the applicant has not complied), and any other eligibility requirements; and
- If the applicant is seeking a waiver of inadmissibility, an Application for Advance Permission to Enter as a Nonimmigrant (Form I-192), with the appropriate fee^[9] or request for a fee waiver and supporting evidence.^[10]

The applicant must also submit biometrics at a local Application Support Center.^[11]

3. Evidence from Law Enforcement Agency

An applicant may wish to submit evidence from a law enforcement agency (LEA) to help establish certain eligibility requirements for T nonimmigrant status. Evidence from an LEA is optional and USCIS does not give it any special evidentiary weight.^[12]

Law Enforcement Agency Endorsement

An applicant may provide an LEA endorsement by submitting Declaration of Law Enforcement Officer for Victim of Trafficking in Persons (Form I-914, Supplement B (PDF, 327.01 KB)). The Supplement B must be signed by a supervising official responsible for the investigation or prosecution of severe forms of trafficking in persons.

The LEA completing the Supplement B should attach the results of any name or database inquiries performed on the victim and describe the victimization (including dates where known) and the cooperation of the victim. USCIS, not the LEA, determines if the applicant was or is a victim of a severe form of trafficking in persons and otherwise meets the eligibility requirements for T nonimmigrant status. Under federal law, the decision of whether to complete a Supplement B is within the discretion of the LEA. A formal investigation or prosecution is not required to complete a Supplement B.^[13]

An LEA may revoke or disavow the contents of a previously submitted Supplement B in writing.^[14] After revocation or disavowal, USCIS no longer considers the original Supplement B as supporting evidence.^[15]

Continued Presence Documentation

An applicant granted Continued Presence (CP) by the DHS Center for Countering Human Trafficking should submit documentation of the grant of CP.^[16] DHS may revoke CP if the recipient commits a crime, absconds, departs without obtaining advance parole, receives an immigration benefit, or is determined not to be a trafficking victim. Once CP is revoked, USCIS no longer considers CP as evidence of the applicant's compliance with requests for assistance in the LEA's investigation or prosecution.

4. Evidence of Immigration History

An applicant may also submit any evidence regarding entry, admission into, or permission to remain in the United States, or note that such evidence is contained within an applicant's immigration file.^[17]

5. Evidence of Severe Form of Trafficking in Persons

The applicant must submit evidence that demonstrates that the applicant is or has been a victim of a severe form of trafficking in persons. Except in instances of sex trafficking involving victims under 18 years of age, the applicant's evidence should establish that the trafficker:

- Used a particular action (recruitment, transportation, harboring, provision, obtaining, or in the case of sex trafficking, also patronizing or soliciting);
- Employed a particular means (force, fraud, or coercion); and
- Acted with the purpose of achieving an actual or intended end (commercial sex act, involuntary servitude, peonage, debt bondage, or slavery).

If a victim has not performed labor or services or a commercial sex act, the victim must establish that the victim was recruited, transported, harbored, provided, or obtained (or in the case of sex trafficking, patronized or solicited) for the purpose of a commercial sex act or subjection to involuntary servitude, peonage, debt bondage, or slavery.^[18]

The applicant may satisfy this requirement by submitting the following types of evidence:^[19]

- Form I-914, Supplement B (PDF, 327.01 KB);
- For applicants who are children under 18 years old, a letter from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services certifying that the child is a victim of trafficking;
- Documentation of a grant of CP; or
- Any other credible evidence, including but not limited to:
 - Trial transcripts;
 - Court documents;
 - Police reports;
 - News articles;

- Copies of reimbursement forms for travel to and from court; and
- Affidavits.

Applicants should describe the steps they have taken to report the crime to an LEA and indicate whether any criminal records relating to the trafficking crime are available.^[20] If there has been civil litigation related to the trafficking, applicants may include this evidence as well.

6. Evidence of Physical Presence on Account of Trafficking

Evidence of Physical Presence in the United States

The applicant must submit evidence demonstrating that the applicant is physically present in the United States or at a port-of-entry on account of trafficking in persons. Because the regulatory language about the physical presence requirement is phrased in the present tense, USCIS considers the victim's current situation, and whether the victim can establish current presence in the United States on account of trafficking. A victim who is liberated from trafficking is not exempt from the statutory requirement to show that the victim's presence is on account of trafficking.^[21]

USCIS considers all evidence presented to determine physical presence, including the applicant's responses on the application for T nonimmigrant status regarding when they escaped from the trafficker, what activities they have undertaken since that time, including any steps taken to deal with the consequences of having been trafficked, and the applicants' ability to leave the United States.^[22]

Applicants may establish physical presence by submitting the following types of evidence:

- Form I-914, Supplement B (PDF, 327.01 KB);
- Documentation of a grant of CP;^[23]
- Documentation of entry into the United States or permission to remain in the United States, such as parole,^[24] or a notation that such evidence is within the applicant's immigration records; or
- Any other credible evidence, including a personal statement from the applicant, stating the date and place (if known) and the manner and purpose (if known) for which the applicant entered the United States and demonstrating that the applicant is now present on account of the trafficking.
^[25]

Evidence to Establish the Direct Relationship between the Applicant's Ongoing Presence and the Original Trafficking in Persons

An applicant may support the claim that the applicant's continuing presence in the United States is directly related to the original trafficking in persons by providing any credible evidence. Officers should consider all evidence describing the ongoing impacts of trafficking on the applicant's life at the time of application using a victim-centered approach.

The applicant cannot satisfy the physical presence requirement^[26] unless the evidence sufficiently establishes the connection between the specific impact of trauma on the applicant's life at the time of filing and the applicant's ongoing presence in the United States.

Evidence that USCIS may consider includes, but is not limited to:

- A narrative within the personal statement explaining the physical health effects or psychological trauma the applicant has suffered as a result of the trafficking and a description of how this trauma impacts the applicant's life at the time of filing;
- Affidavits, evaluations, diagnoses, or other records from the applicant's service providers (including therapists, psychologists, psychiatrists, and social workers) documenting the therapeutic, psychological or medical services the applicant has sought or is currently accessing as a result of victimization and that describe how the applicant's life is being impacted by the trauma at the time of filing;
- Documentation of any additional stabilizing services and benefits, including financial, language, housing, or legal resources, the applicant is accessing or has accessed as a result of being trafficked. For those services and benefits not currently being accessed, the record should demonstrate how those past services and benefits related to trauma the applicant is experiencing at the time of filing;
- Evidence demonstrating the applicant's ability to access services in the United States or in the applicant's home country;
- Form I-914, Supplement B (PDF, 327.01 KB) or other statements from LEAs documenting the cooperation between the applicant and the law enforcement agency; and
- Copies of news reports, law enforcement records, or court records.

Evidence of Entry or Reentry for Participation in Investigative or Judicial Processes

There is a general presumption that victims who have traveled outside of the United States at any time after the act of trafficking and then returned are not present on account of trafficking. To overcome this presumption, applicants must show that their reentry into the United States was the result of continued victimization or that they are a victim of a new incident of a severe form of trafficking in persons.^[27] This presumption also may be overcome when the applicant is allowed reentry in order to participate in investigative or judicial processes associated with an act or a perpetrator of trafficking.^[28]

To establish that they were allowed entry or reentry into the United States to participate in an investigative or judicial process associated with an act or a perpetrator of trafficking, applicants must show documentation of entry through a legal means such as parole and must submit evidence that the entry is for participation in investigative or judicial processes associated with an act or perpetrator of trafficking.^[29]

Such evidence may include:

- Form I-914, Supplement B (PDF, 327.01 KB);
- Other evidence from an LEA to describe the victim's participation;
- A personal statement from the victim, or
- Any other credible supporting documentation showing that the applicant's entry was for participation in the investigative or judicial processes relating to the applicant's trafficking.

If the applicant meets the physical presence requirement, the applicant must still satisfy all the other requirements for T nonimmigrant status, including compliance with reasonable requests for assistance from the LEA.

7. Evidence of Compliance with Law Enforcement Requests

Evidence to Establish Compliance

In determining whether an applicant complied with reasonable LEA requests for assistance, USCIS examines the totality of the circumstances, including several specific factors,^[30] and considers any credible evidence submitted.

To establish compliance with LEA requests for assistance, the applicant may submit a variety of evidence, including but not limited to:

- Form I-914, Supplement B (PDF, 327.01 KB);
- Documentation of a grant of CP;^[31]
- Email and letter correspondence showing reporting or communication between the applicant or the applicant's attorney and an LEA;
- Copies of phone and fax logs or email and letter correspondence showing contact with an LEA to report the victimization, or offer assistance, and evidence of any response received from the LEA;
- A personal statement explaining the applicant's efforts to report to an LEA and the response or lack of response from the LEA; and

- Any credible evidence demonstrating the victim's willingness to assist in the detection, investigation or prosecution of a severe form of trafficking in persons, such as:
 - Trial transcripts;
 - Court documents;
 - Police reports;
 - News articles;
 - Copies of reimbursement forms for travel to and from court;
 - Affidavits from the victim and other witnesses; and
 - Any other credible evidence.
- If submitting a personal statement,^[32] the applicant should describe what the applicant has done to report the crime to an LEA and indicate whether criminal records relating to the trafficking crime are available.^[33] The applicant's statement should also show that an LEA with the responsibility and authority for the detection, investigation, or prosecution of severe forms of trafficking in persons has information about such trafficking in persons, and that the applicant has complied with any reasonable request for assistance in the investigation or prosecution of such acts of trafficking.
- If the applicant did not report the crime, the applicant must provide an explanation to demonstrate that they qualify for an exemption due to age or an exception for trauma.^[34]
- The absence of a Supplement B does not adversely affect an applicant who can meet the evidentiary burden with the submission of other evidence of sufficient reliability and relevance. Even though it is not required, USCIS considers an LEA endorsement to be a useful and convenient form of evidence, among other types of credible evidence.^[35] Even in the absence of an LEA endorsement, USCIS may contact the LEA that is involved in the case at its discretion.^[36]
- Evidence to Establish Physical or Psychological Trauma Exception*
- To establish the trauma-based exception to the requirement to comply with reasonable LEA requests, an applicant may provide the following evidence:
- An affirmative statement describing the trauma; or
 - A signed statement attesting to the victim's mental state from a professional qualified to make such determinations, such as a medical professional, social worker, or victim advocate; and
 - Medical or psychological records that are relevant to the trauma; or

- Any other credible evidence.^[37]

To establish that the person providing the signed attestation is qualified to make such a determination, the applicant should provide a description of the person's qualifications or education or a description of the person's contact and experience with the applicant.^[38]

A victim's affidavit alone may satisfy the evidentiary burden. However, USCIS encourages applicants to submit additional relevant evidence.^[39]

Evidence of Age-Based Exemption

If an applicant was under the age of 18 at the time of victimization and is therefore exempt from the requirement to comply with reasonable law enforcement requests, the applicant should submit credible evidence of the applicant's age, including an official copy of the applicant's birth certificate, a passport, or a certified medical opinion, if available.^[40] The applicant may also submit other evidence of the applicant's age.

8. Evidence of Extreme Hardship

Applicants must submit evidence that demonstrates they would suffer extreme hardship involving unusual and severe harm if removed from the United States. When evaluating whether removal would result in extreme hardship involving unusual and severe harm, USCIS considers several factors.^[41]

The applicant may document extreme hardship through a personal statement or other evidence, including evidence from relevant country condition reports and any other public or private sources of information. The applicant may include evidence of hardship arising from circumstances surrounding the victimization and any other circumstances.^[42] USCIS does not consider evidence of hardship to persons other than the applicant unless the evidence demonstrates hardship to the applicant.

Applicants under the age of 18 are not exempt from the extreme hardship requirement. However, USCIS considers an applicant's age, maturity, and personal circumstances (among other factors) when evaluating the extreme hardship requirement.^[43]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See the Form I-914 webpage for more information on filing. There is no filing fee associated with this application.

[^ 2] See INA 291.

[^ 3] See INA 291. See 8 CFR. 103.2(b)(1). See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(5). See Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications, Chapter 4, Burden and Standards of Proof [1 USCIS-PM E.4].

[^ 4] See Matter of Chawathe (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 369, 376 (AAO 2010). See Matter of Martinez (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 1035, 1036 (BIA 1997). See Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, E, Adjudications, Chapter 4, Burden and Standards of Proof, Section B, Standards of Proof [1 USCIS-PM E.4(B)].

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(5).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(5).

[^ 7] See Matter of Chawathe (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 369, 376 (AAO 2010).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(5).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 106.2(a)(11).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(2).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 103.16.

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(3).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(3)(i).

[^ 14] If a certifying official discovers information regarding a victim, crime, or declaration that the agency believes USCIS should be aware of, or if the official wishes to withdraw the certification, the official should contact USCIS using the directions outlined in the Form I-914 Supplement B instructions.

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(3)(ii).

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(3)(iii). See 28 CFR 110.35 (U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement's authority to grant Continued Presence).

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(3)(iv).

[^ 18] See 8 CFR 214.11(f).

[^ 19] See 8 CFR 214.11(f)(1).

[^ 20] See 8 CFR 214.11(f)(1).

[^ 21] See 81 FR 92266, 92273 (PDF) (Dec. 19, 2016).

[^ 22] See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(4).

[^ 23] See 28 CFR 1100.35.

[^ 24] See 8 CFR 212(d)(5).

[^ 25] See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(4).

[^ 26] Under 8 CFR 214.11(g)(1)(iv).

[^ 27] See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(2).

[^ 28] See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(2)(iii).

[^ 29] See 8 CFR 214.11(g)(3).

[^ 30] See Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements, Section D, Requests for Law Enforcement Assistance, Subsection 2, Totality of the Circumstances Test [3 USCIS-PM B.2(D)(2)].

[^ 31] See 28 CFR 1100.35.

[^ 32] See Chapter 3, Documentation and Evidence for Principal Applicants, Section C, Evidence, Subsection 2, Initial Filing and Accompanying Evidence [3 USCIS-PM B.3(C)(2)].

[^ 33] See 8 CFR 214.11(f)(1). See 8 CFR 214.11(h)(1) (requiring that the applicant has had contact with an LEA regarding the acts of a severe form of trafficking in persons).

[^ 34] See 8 CFR 214.11(h)(3)(iii). See 8 CFR 214.11(h)(4).

[^ 35] See 81 FR 92266, 92276 (PDF) (Dec. 19, 2016).

[^ 36] See 81 FR 92266, 92276 (PDF) (Dec. 19, 2016).

[^ 37] See 8 CFR 214.11(h)(4)(i).

[^ 38] See 81 FR 92266, 92277 (PDF) (Dec. 19, 2016).

[^ 39] See 81 FR 92266, 92277 (PDF) (Dec. 19, 2016).

[^ 40] See 8 CFR 214.11(h). A certified medical opinion may include medical evaluations, dental assessments, and x-ray records.

[^ 41] See Chapter 2, Eligibility, Section E, Extreme Hardship, Subsection 2, Factors [3 USCIS-PM B.2(E)(2)].

[^ 42] See 8 CFR 214.11(i)(3). See Volume 9, Waivers and Other Forms of Relief, Part O, Victims of Trafficking, Chapter 3, INA 212(d)(13) Waivers, Section A, Waiver Eligibility [9 USCIS-PM O.3(A)].

[^ 43] See 81 FR 92266, 92277 (PDF) (Dec. 19, 2016).

Chapter 4 - Family Members

A. Overview

A victim who has applied for or been granted T nonimmigrant status (the “principal applicant”) may request derivative status for certain eligible family members. The principal applicant may file Supplement A, Application for Family Member of T-1 Recipient (Form I-914, Supplement A) concurrently with the principal applicant’s Application for T Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-914) or at any time while the principal’s application is pending or while the principal holds T-1 nonimmigrant status.

Eligible family members must be admissible to the United States or apply for a discretionary waiver of inadmissibility.^[1]

There are two general categories of family members eligible for derivative T nonimmigrant status if accompanying, or following to join, the principal:

- Those whose eligibility is based on the age of, and their relationship to, the principal; and
- Those whose eligibility is based on a showing of a present danger of retaliation.^[2]

B. Derivative Status Based on Relationship to Principal

Where the principal T nonimmigrant (T-1) is under 21 years of age, the following table outlines which family members may be eligible for derivative T nonimmigrant status.^[3]

Derivative Status Based on Principal T Nonimmigrant Who is Under 21

Family Member	Code of Admission
Spouse	T-2
Child (unmarried and under 21 years of age) ^[4]	T-3
Parent	T-4
Unmarried siblings under 18 years of age	T-5

Where the principal is 21 years of age or older, the following table outlines which family members may be eligible for derivative T nonimmigrant status.^[5]

Derivative Status Based on Principal T Nonimmigrant Who is 21 or Older

Family Member	Code of Admission
Spouse	T-2

Family Member	Code of Admission
Child (unmarried and under 21 years of age) ^[6]	T-3

C. Derivative Status Based on Fear of Retaliation

1. General Categories of Eligible Family Members

Regardless of the age of the principal, a principal T nonimmigrant's family members may be eligible for derivative T nonimmigrant status if they are in present danger of retaliation as a result of the principal applicant's escape from trafficking or cooperation with law enforcement.^[7] The following table outlines which family members may be eligible on this basis.

Derivative Status Based on Fear of Retaliation

Family Member	Code of Admission
Parent	T-4
Unmarried siblings under 18 years of age ^[8]	T-5
Adult or minor child of a derivative family member ^[9]	T-6

2. Adult or Minor Child of Derivative Family Member (T-6)

The T-6 category is unique in that it expands eligibility beyond relatives who are typically eligible for derivative status. To qualify for T-6 status, the applicant must establish:

- The familial relationship between the T-6 family member and the parent of the T-6;
- That USCIS granted the T-6 family member's parent T-2, T-3, T-4, or T-5 status as the principal's derivative beneficiary; and
- That the T-6 family member faces a present danger of retaliation as a result of the principal's escape from trafficking or cooperation with law enforcement.

T-6 derivatives could include the principal's grandchild, the principal's spouse's child (if not otherwise already eligible as the principal's child), the principal's sibling (if not otherwise already eligible, such as those over the age of 18 or married), and the principal's niece or nephew.

The table below illustrates which family members of a principal T-1 nonimmigrant could derive T-6 status if they demonstrate they meet the present danger of retaliation requirement.

Family Members Eligible to Derive T-6 Status

Age of the T-1 Principal	Derivative Family Member of the T-1 Principal^[10]	Eligible T-6 Derivative Based on Present Danger of Retaliation
---------------------------------	---	---

Age of the T-1 Principal	Derivative Family Member of the T-1 Principal^[10]	Eligible T-6 Derivative Based on Present Danger of Retaliation
Under the age of 21	Spouse (T-2)	The T-2 spouse's child ^[11] (the principal's stepchild)
	Unmarried child under age 21 (T-3)	The T-3 child's child (the principal's grandchild)
	Parent (T-4)	The T-4's child (the principal's sibling)
	Sibling (under the age of 18 and unmarried) (T-5)	The T-5 sibling's child (the principal's niece or nephew)
21 years of age or older	Spouse (T-2)	The T-2 spouse's child (the principal's grandchild)
	Unmarried child under age 21 (T-3)	The T-3 child's child (the principal's grandchild)
Any age	Parent (T-4) based on present danger of retaliation	The T-4 parent's child (the principal's grandchild)
	Sibling (under the age of 18 and unmarried) (T-5) based on present danger of retaliation	The T-5 sibling's child (the principal's niece or nephew)

Note: Where ages are listed in this table, they refer to age at the time of the principal applicant's filing for T-1 nonimmigrant status. T-6 family members are eligible regardless of their marital status or age. There is no T derivative status for children (or other family members) of the adult or minor child who is granted T-6 status.

USCIS recognizes that this derivative family category is based on "a present danger of retaliation" and different family members may face a danger of retaliation at different times. The T-6's family member does not have to hold derivative status at the time of the T-6 application.

For example, if the principal's spouse held T-2 status but then died before the principal files for T-6 status for the spouse's adult child, the adult child may still be eligible for T-6 status. Additionally, if a parent who had obtained T-4 status allowed that status to lapse without extending it, the T-4 parent's adult or minor child could still be eligible for T-6 status if the child faced a present danger of retaliation.

D. Family Relationship at Time of Filing

1. General Rule

Generally, subject to age-out protections and except as specified below,^[12] the family relationship must exist at each of the following times:

- When the applicant files the application for T-1 nonimmigrant status;^[13]
- When USCIS adjudicates the application for T-1 nonimmigrant status;
- When the applicant files the application for derivative T nonimmigrant status;
- When USCIS adjudicates the application for derivative T nonimmigrant status; and
- When the eligible family member is admitted to the United States at a port of entry, if residing abroad.

2. Spousal Relationship Must Exist When Principal's Application is Adjudicated

USCIS evaluates whether the marriage creating the qualifying spousal relationship or stepchild and stepparent relationship exists at the time of adjudication of the principal's application and thereafter.

Principal applicants who marry while their application is pending may file Form I-914, Supplement A on behalf of their spouse, even if the relationship did not exist at the time they filed their principal application.^[14] Similarly, the principal applicant may file for a stepparent or stepchild if the qualifying relationship was created after they filed their principal application but before it was approved.^[15]

3. Requirement to Remain Unmarried

An eligible child seeking T-3 nonimmigrant status or eligible sibling seeking T-5 nonimmigrant status must remain unmarried:

- When the principal files the application for T-1 nonimmigrant status;
- When USCIS adjudicates the application for T-1 nonimmigrant status;
- When the eligible family member files the application for derivative T-3 or T-5 nonimmigrant status;
- When USCIS adjudicates the application for derivative T-3 or T-5 nonimmigrant status; and
- When the family member is admitted to the United States at a port of entry, if residing abroad.

4. Exceptions to General Rule: Relationship and Age-Out Protections

There are certain protections available to family members whose age or relationship changes after the principal files an application for T nonimmigrant status.

Protection for New Child of a Principal Applicant

If the T-1 principal applicant had a child after filing the application for T-1 nonimmigrant status, the child is eligible to accompany or follow to join the T-1 principal applicant.^[16] This includes becoming the parent of a child by means of a biological, step,[17] or adoptive relationship.

Age-Out Protection for Eligible Family Members of a Principal Applicant Under 21 Years of Age

For principal applicants who were under 21 years of age when they filed for T-1 nonimmigrant status, USCIS continues to consider a T-4 parent or T-5 unmarried sibling as eligible for derivative status even if the principal applicant turns 21 before USCIS adjudicates the T-1 application.

Unmarried siblings under 18 years of age at the time the principal filed the T-1 application remain eligible for T-5 status even if they turn 18 years of age before USCIS adjudicates the T-1 application, so long as the sibling remains unmarried.[18] The derivative sibling does not “age out” even upon reaching age 18.

Age-Out Protection for Child of a Principal Applicant 21 Years of Age or Older

If the principal was 21 years of age or older when the principal filed for T-1 nonimmigrant status, USCIS continues to consider a T-3 child as an eligible family member so long as the child was under 21 years of age at the time the principal filed for T-1 nonimmigrant status. The child remains eligible even if the child is over 21 years of age at the time of adjudication of the T-1 application.[19] The derivative T-3 does not “age out” even upon reaching age 21.

E. Death of Qualifying Relative

USCIS may not approve derivative status for a surviving relative whose qualifying relative (the principal applicant) died before USCIS approved the derivative T application.[20] However, the unique structure of the T-6 classification may provide for continuing eligibility for the T-6 derivative even if the T-2, T-3, T-4, or T-5 derivative beneficiary passes away before the principal files for T-6 status for the surviving relative.

For example, adult children who are married or over 21 years of age could potentially qualify for T-6 nonimmigrant status if they are the children of the T-1’s deceased spouse and meet the present danger of retaliation requirement.

However, in order for the spouse’s children (adult or minor) to be eligible for the T-6 category under this scenario, the principal’s spouse must have held T-2 nonimmigrant status through the principal T-1 nonimmigrant before the T-2 spouse died. If the principal’s spouse held T-2 status but then died before the principal filed for T-6 status for the spouse’s adult or minor child, the adult or minor child may still be eligible for T-6 status. However, if the T-1 principal’s spouse is deceased and never held T-2 status, then the spouse’s child would not be eligible for T-6 status.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.11(k)(1)(iv).

[^ 2] See INA 101(a)(15)(T)(ii). See 8 CFR 214.11(k).

[^ 3] See INA 101(a)(15)(T)(ii)(I).

[^ 4] See INA 101(b)(1), which specifically defines the term “child.” The definition includes stepchildren and adopted children under certain circumstances.

[^ 5] See INA 101(a)(15)(T)(ii)(II).

[^ 6] See INA 101(b)(1), which specifically defines the term “child.” The definition includes stepchildren and adopted children under certain circumstances.

[^ 7] See INA 101(a)(15)(T)(ii)(III).

[^ 8] See INA 101(a)(15)(T)(ii)(III).

[^ 9] The adult or minor child can be of any age or marital status. In enacting this new category of derivative beneficiaries in the Violence Against Women Reauthorization Act of 2013, Pub. L. 113-4 (PDF) (March 7, 2013), Congress used the term “adult or minor children,” which is not a term of art in the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA). Under the INA, the term “son or daughter” means a child who is married or over the age of 21, while “child” means a child who is unmarried and under the age of 21. USCIS construes the meaning of the language “adult or minor children” to encompass both the INA definitions of “son or daughter” and “child.” Therefore, persons of any age and any marital status are “adult or minor children” and may be eligible for T-6 derivative status.

[^ 10] The derivative family members of the T-1 principal listed in this column can either currently hold T-2, T-3, T-4, or T-5 nonimmigrant status, have a pending application for such status that USCIS will approve before or with the application for the T-6 nonimmigrant, or have held such status in the past (with some exceptions).

[^ 11] This assumes the principal’s T-2 spouse’s child was not already eligible as a child T-3 derivative beneficiary. Stepchildren are included in the INA definition of a child so long as the parents married when the stepchild (spouse’s biological child) was under the age of 18. However, a biological child of the T-2 spouse whose marriage to the T-1 principal nonimmigrant occurred after the child turned 18 years of age is not eligible as a T-3 nonimmigrant, but the same child may be eligible for T-6 status.

[^ 12] See Subsection 2, Spousal Relationship Must Exist When Principal’s Application is Adjudicated [3 USCIS-PM B.4(D)(2)].

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 214.11(k)(4) as limited by Medina Tovar v. Zuchowski, 982 F.3d 631 (9th Cir. 2020) (holding invalid the regulatory requirement that a spousal relationship exist at the time a Petition for U Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-918) is filed in order for the spouse to be eligible for classification as a U-2 nonimmigrant). As a matter of policy, USCIS applies the Medina Tovar decision nationwide to spousal and stepparent relationships arising in T visa and U visa adjudications. Therefore, where the family relationship is created by marriage, it does not have to exist at the time the applicant submits the application for T-1 nonimmigrant status. In that circumstance, the family relationship must exist at the four subsequent points set forth at 8 CFR 214.11(k)(4).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 214.11(k)(5)(iv) as limited by Medina Tovar v. Zuchowski, 982 F.3d 631 (9th Cir. 2020).

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 214.11(k)(5)(iv) as limited by Medina Tovar v. Zuchowski, 982 F.3d 631 (9th Cir. 2020).

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 214.11(k)(5)(i).

[^ 17] An applicant can establish a T-3 stepparent and stepchild relationship if the applicant shows that the qualifying relationship was created before the stepchild turned 18, regardless of the adjudication outcome for an application for derivative T-2 nonimmigrant status (for example, the spousal relationship that created the stepparent and stepchild relationship), so long as the application for derivative T-2 nonimmigrant status was not denied due to failure to establish the claimed spousal relationship.

[^ 18] See 8 CFR 214.11(k)(5)(ii).

[^ 19] See 8 CFR 214.11(k)(5)(iii).

[^ 20] See INA 204(l).

Chapter 5 - Documentation and Evidence for Family Members

A principal T nonimmigrant (T-1) may submit an application to USCIS to obtain derivative T nonimmigrant status for eligible family members who are inside or outside the United States.^[1] The T-1 principal must complete a separate Application for Family Member of T-1 Recipient (Form I-914, Supplement A) for each eligible family member.

A. Evidence

The applicant must submit the following with the Form I-914, Supplement A:

- Evidence demonstrating the family relationship that makes the derivative eligible for T nonimmigrant status;^[2]
- Evidence demonstrating the danger of retaliation if relevant to the basis for seeking derivative status; and

- If the applicant is seeking a waiver of inadmissibility for the family member, an Application for Advance Permission to Enter as a Nonimmigrant (Form I-192), with the appropriate fee^[3] or request for a fee waiver, and supporting evidence.

The family member must also submit biometrics.^[4] If the family member is inside the United States, USCIS schedules a biometrics appointment at a local Application Support Center. Family members outside the United States must submit fingerprints through a completed fingerprint card (FD-258) for scanning or by electronic means as instructed by the U.S. embassy or consulate. USCIS mails fingerprint cards to the applicant, along with instructions, after the applicant files the application for the eligible family member.^[5]

1. Establishing Family Relationship

USCIS must consider any credible evidence submitted to establish proof of the claimed family relationship. The instructions for the Application for T Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-914) include a list of documents the applicant may submit to establish the claimed relationship.

2. Establishing Danger of Retaliation

A family member seeking derivative T nonimmigrant status based on a present danger of retaliation must demonstrate the basis of this danger.

An applicant may satisfy this requirement by submitting the following types of evidence:

- Documentation of a previous grant of parole to an eligible family member;
- A signed statement from a law enforcement official describing the danger of retaliation;
- An affirmative statement from the applicant describing the danger the family member faces and how the danger is linked to the principal applicant's escape or cooperation with law enforcement (ordinarily an applicant's statement alone is not sufficient to prove present danger); or
- Any other credible evidence, including trial transcripts, court documents, police reports, news articles, copies of reimbursement forms for travel to and from court, and affidavits from other witnesses.^[6]

USCIS may contact a law enforcement agency involved in the detection, investigation, or prosecution of the trafficking, if appropriate.^[7]

B. Timeframe for Filing the Application for Derivative Status

The T-1 principal may file the Application for Family Member of T-1 Recipient (Form I-914, Supplement A) at the following times:

- Concurrently with the principal's Application for T Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-914);
- While the principal's application is pending; or
- At any time after the principal's application is approved, so long as the principal continues to hold T-1 nonimmigrant status.^[8]

If the principal no longer holds T-1 nonimmigrant status because the validity period has expired and has not been extended, USCIS denies the application for the eligible family member.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 214(o).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.11(k)(1)(iv).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 106.2(a)(11). See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(2).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 103.16.

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 103.16.

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.11(k)(6).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.11(k)(6).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.11(k)(1).

Chapter 6 - Bona Fide Determinations [Reserved]

Chapter 7 - Adjudication

A. Victim-Centered Approach

USCIS strives to apply a victim-centered approach to all victim-based filings. A victim-centered approach places equal value on stabilizing victims by providing immigration relief and investigating and prosecuting traffickers.^[1] In the context of adjudicating applications for T nonimmigrant status, a victim-centered approach means applying a trauma-informed, survivor-informed, and culturally competent approach to all policies regarding victims.^[2]

When corresponding with the applicant, officers should be mindful of the potential for retraumatization.^[3]

B. Interview

USCIS has discretion to interview applicants for T nonimmigrant status for purposes of adjudicating the application.^[4] USCIS conducts a full review of the application and supporting evidence to determine whether an interview may be warranted.

USCIS recognizes the vulnerable position of applicants for T nonimmigrant status. USCIS generally does not require an interview if the record contains sufficient information and evidence to approve the application without an in-person assessment. However, USCIS reserves the right to interview the T applicant as needed.

C. Requests to Expedite

USCIS has discretion to expedite the adjudication of immigration benefit requests, including the Application for T nonimmigrant Status (Form I-914) and Application for Family Member of T-1 Recipient (Form I-914, Supplement A).^[5]

D. Requests for Evidence and Notices of Intent to Deny

If the applicant has not presented sufficient evidence to establish each eligibility requirement for T-1 nonimmigrant status, USCIS may issue a Request for Evidence (RFE) or Notice of Intent to Deny (NOID) to request evidence of eligibility.^[6]

E. Approvals

Principal Applicants

If USCIS determines the applicant is eligible for T-1 nonimmigrant status, USCIS approves the application and grants T-1 nonimmigrant status, subject to the annual limitation.^[7] USCIS provides the applicant with a written notice stating the applicant is approved and has received T-1 nonimmigrant status.^[8]

USCIS may also notify other parties and entities of the approval as it determines appropriate, including any law enforcement agency (LEA) providing an endorsement and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' Office of Refugee Resettlement, consistent with the exceptions to the prohibitions on disclosure.^[9]

Derivative Applicants

USCIS cannot approve applications for derivative T nonimmigrant status until the principal's application has been approved.

So long as the principal T nonimmigrant's application has been approved, if USCIS determines a family member of the principal nonimmigrant is eligible for derivative T nonimmigrant status, USCIS approves the family member's application.

Derivative Applicants Inside the United States

For derivative family members inside the United States, USCIS notifies the T-1 principal of the approval and provides evidence of derivative T nonimmigrant status to the derivative.^[10]

Derivative Applicants Outside the United States

For derivative family members outside the United States, USCIS notifies the T-1 principal of the approval and provides the necessary documentation to the U.S. Department of State for consideration of visa issuance.^[11]

To enter the United States, the derivative beneficiary must present a valid, unexpired passport as well as a valid, unexpired visa.^[12] In the event of an unforeseen emergency that prevents a derivative beneficiary from presenting such documents, the derivative may apply to have USCIS waive these documentary requirements.^[13] USCIS decides such applications on a discretionary, case-by-case basis. USCIS can revoke any waiver it grants to waive a documentary requirement at any time.

F. Denials

If USCIS determines that the applicant has not established eligibility for T nonimmigrant status, USCIS notifies the applicant of its decision to deny the application.^[14] Consistent with disclosure rules,^[15] USCIS may also provide notice of the denial to any LEA providing an LEA endorsement and the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' Office of Refugee Resettlement.^[16]

A principal applicant may request USCIS to reconsider the denial by filing a Notice of Appeal or Motion (Form I-290B). Additionally, both principal applicants and derivatives may appeal a denial of an application for T nonimmigrant status to the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) using the Form I-290B.^[17] The denial does not become final until the AAO issues a decision dismissing the appeal.^[18]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See DHS Blue Campaign Discussion of a Victim-Centered Approach.

[^ 2] For further explanation of these terms, see the DHS Strategy to Combat Human Trafficking, the Importation of Goods Produced with Forced Labor, and Child Sexual Exploitation (PDF) (January 2020).

[^ 3] See U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' definition of "retraumatization." (PDF)

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(6).

[^ 5] See Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part A, Public Services, Chapter 5, Requests to Expedite Applications or Petitions [1 USCIS-PM A.5].

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(8). See 8 CFR 214.11(e)(2)(i). See Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications, Chapter 6, Evidence, Section F, Requests for Evidence and Notices of Intent to Deny [1 USCIS-PM E.6(F)].

[^ 7] See Chapter 8, Annual Cap and Waiting List [3 USCIS-PM B.8].

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(19).

[^ 9] See Chapter 14, Confidentiality Protections and Prohibitions Against Disclosure [3 USCIS-PM B.14].

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(19). See 8 CFR 214.11(k)(9)(i).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.11(k)(9)(ii).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 212.1.

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 212.1(g). See 8 CFR 212.1(o).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 103.3.

[^ 15] See Chapter 14, Confidentiality Protections and Prohibitions Against Disclosure [3 USCIS-PM B.14].

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(10).

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 103.3.

[^ 18] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(10).

Chapter 8 - Annual Cap and Waiting List

By Congressional mandate, USCIS may only grant T-1 nonimmigrant status to 5,000 persons in any fiscal year.^[1] Derivatives are not subject to this annual cap. However, USCIS does not approve applications for derivative T nonimmigrant status until USCIS has approved T-1 nonimmigrant status for the related principal applicant.

As of 2021, USCIS has never received more than 5,000 principal applications for T-1 nonimmigrant status in a given fiscal year^[2] but has created a waiting list procedure by regulation in the event that the statutory cap is ever met in the future.^[3]

A. Waiting List Procedures

If the annual cap is met in a given fiscal year, USCIS places all eligible applicants who are not granted T-1 nonimmigrant status due solely to the cap on a waiting list and provides applicants written notice of such placement.^[4] USCIS determines priority on the waiting list by the date the application was properly filed, with the oldest applications receiving the highest priority.

In the subsequent fiscal year, USCIS issues a number to each applicant on the waiting list in the order of the highest priority, provided that the applicant remains admissible and eligible for T nonimmigrant status. After USCIS issues T-1 nonimmigrant status to qualifying applicants on the waiting list, USCIS issues any remaining T-1 nonimmigrant numbers for that fiscal year to new qualifying applicants in the order that the applications were properly filed.^[5]

B. Protection from Removal

If a waiting list is established, USCIS may, but is not required to, grant, renew, or extend deferred action, parole, administrative stays of removal, or other relief,^[6] which may ensure an applicant is not removed while awaiting T-1 nonimmigrant status. If USCIS extends such relief, the applicant may apply for work authorization by filing an Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765).

C. Unlawful Presence

An applicant for T nonimmigrant status on the waiting list to whom USCIS granted deferred action or parole does not accrue unlawful presence^[7] while maintaining deferred action or parole.^[8]

D. Removal from the Waiting List

Applicants on the waiting list must remain admissible to the United States and otherwise eligible for T nonimmigrant status. If at any time before final adjudication, USCIS receives information that an applicant is no longer eligible for T nonimmigrant status, USCIS may remove an applicant from the waiting list and terminate any grant of deferred action or parole at its discretion. USCIS provides notice to the applicant of that decision.^[9]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 214(o)(2).

[^ 2] See Number of Form I-914, Application for T Nonimmigrant Status by Fiscal Year, Quarter, and Case Status, Fiscal Years 2008-2021 (PDF, 240.84 KB).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.11(j).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.11(j)(1).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.11(j)(1).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 241.6 (administrative stay of removal). See 8 CFR 274a.12(c)(14) (employment authorization for deferred action grantees demonstrating economic necessity). See 8 CFR 212.5 (parole of noncitizens into the United States).

[^ 7] See INA 212(a)(9)(B). See Volume 8, Admissibility, Part O, Noncitizens Unlawfully Present [8 USCIS-PM O].

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.11(j)(2).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 214.11(j)(3).

Chapter 9 - Applicants in Removal Proceedings

An applicant in removal proceedings who wishes to apply for T nonimmigrant status must file the Application for T Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-914) or Application for Family Member of T-1 Recipient (Form I-914, Supplement A) directly with USCIS.

A. Administrative Closure

In its discretion, DHS may agree to the request of a person who is in proceedings, whether a principal or derivative applicant, to file with the immigration judge or the Board of Immigration Appeals (BIA) a joint motion to administratively close or terminate proceedings without prejudice, whichever is appropriate, while USCIS adjudicates an application for T nonimmigrant status.^[1]

B. Final Orders of Removal

A person subject to a final order of removal, deportation, or exclusion may file an application for T-1 nonimmigrant status directly with USCIS.^[2] If a family member eligible for derivative status is the subject of a final order of removal, deportation, or exclusion, the principal may file an application for derivative T nonimmigrant status directly with USCIS.

The filing of an application for T nonimmigrant status, whether for a principal or derivative applicant, does not automatically stay a final order of removal and has no effect on DHS's authority or discretion to execute a final order of removal, although the person who is in proceedings may request an administrative stay of removal.^[3]

If the person, whether the principal or derivative applicant, is in detention pending execution of the final order, the period of detention reasonably necessary to bring about the applicant's removal^[4] is extended during the period that any stay is in effect.

Neither an immigration judge nor the BIA has jurisdiction to adjudicate an application for a stay of removal, deportation, or exclusion based on the filing of an application for T nonimmigrant status.^[5] This jurisdiction rests with U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE).^[6]

By operation of law, a USCIS approval of an application for T nonimmigrant status cancels any order of removal, deportation, or exclusion issued by DHS as of the date of the approval.^[7] Upon approval of an application for T nonimmigrant status, an applicant who is the subject of an order of removal, deportation, or exclusion issued by an immigration judge or the BIA may seek cancellation of such order by filing a motion to reopen and terminate removal proceedings with the immigration judge or the BIA, whichever is appropriate.^[8] Upon a final denial of the application for T nonimmigrant status, any stay of removal, deportation, or exclusion is lifted.^[9]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(1)(i) (principal). See 8 CFR 214.11(k)(2)(i) (derivative).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(1)(ii).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 241.6(a) (procedures to request administrative stay).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 241.4 (discussing duration of detention).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.11(e)(3).

[^ 6] See ICE Directive 11005.3: Using a Victim-Centered Approach with Noncitizen Crime Victims (August 10, 2021) (PDF).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(9)(i).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(9)(ii).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(10)(iii).

Chapter 10 - Duration and Extensions of Status

A. Overview

T nonimmigrant status is limited to 4 years for a principal T nonimmigrant, unless the principal qualifies for an extension.^[1] USCIS may grant eligible family members derivative T nonimmigrant status for a period that does not exceed the expiration date of the period approved for the T-1 principal.^[2]

T nonimmigrant status is extended by operation of law during the time that a principal or eligible family member's Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (Form I-485) under INA 245(l) is pending.^[3] Additionally, as a matter of discretion, USCIS may grant an extension of T nonimmigrant status for up to 4 additional years in the following two circumstances:

- A law enforcement agency (LEA), prosecutor, judge, or other authority investigating or prosecuting activity relating to human trafficking certifies that the presence of the nonimmigrant in the United States is necessary to assist in the investigation or prosecution of such activity;^[4] or
- USCIS determines that an extension is warranted due to exceptional circumstances.^[5]

B. Applications for Extensions of Status

1. Extensions Based on Adjustment of Status Application

To receive an extension of T nonimmigrant status based on filing an Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (Form I-485) under INA 245(l), the T nonimmigrant must file the application in accordance with the form instructions.^[6] If the T nonimmigrant files the adjustment application while still in valid T nonimmigrant status, the applicant does not need to file an Application to Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-539).

However, if USCIS receives the adjustment application after the period of T nonimmigrant status has expired, the filing does not operate to extend T nonimmigrant status. The Notice of Action (Form I-797) receipt notice for the adjustment application indicates that for applicants who properly and timely file their adjustment application, USCIS extends their T nonimmigrant status for as long as the adjustment application is pending.

Because both timely and untimely applicants receive the receipt notice, the receipt notice by itself does not demonstrate an automatic extension of T nonimmigrant status. Applicants may provide both the receipt notice and the Arrival/Departure Record (Form I-94) showing their most up-to-date period of T nonimmigrant status to demonstrate that their adjustment application was timely filed and their T nonimmigrant status has been automatically extended.

The extension of T nonimmigrant status is valid until USCIS makes a decision on the adjustment application and, during that time, the applicant continues to be in valid T nonimmigrant status with all the associated rights, privileges, and responsibilities. T nonimmigrants seeking to adjust status are authorized to work in the United States while their adjustment application is pending.

Proof of Employment Authorization

Principal T-1 nonimmigrants seeking to adjust status may present a Form I-94 reflecting their most recent validity period of T-1 nonimmigrant status with the receipt notice as evidence of employment authorization for 24 months from the expiration date on the Form I-94, unless the adjustment application is denied or withdrawn, whichever is earlier.

Principal T-1 nonimmigrants seeking to adjust status may file an Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765) concurrently with the adjustment application to obtain an Employment Authorization Document (EAD). While the adjustment application is pending, USCIS issues any EAD, as well as renewals of such EAD, using the (c)(9) eligibility code.^[7]

USCIS also issues derivative T nonimmigrants who properly file an adjustment application a receipt notice. USCIS does not extend the status of a derivative T nonimmigrant based solely on the principal T nonimmigrant's pending adjustment application. Derivatives must independently file an adjustment application. To obtain employment authorization during the extended period of T nonimmigrant status, derivative T nonimmigrants must file an Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765).

2. Extensions Based on Law Enforcement Need or Exceptional Circumstances

To request an extension of T nonimmigrant status based on law enforcement need or exceptional circumstances, the T nonimmigrant must file an Application to Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-539), along with supporting evidence, in accordance with the form instructions. The T nonimmigrant bears the burden of establishing eligibility for this discretionary extension of status.

Derivative family members who have not previously entered or resided in the United States as a T nonimmigrant cannot receive an extension of status. Instead, USCIS may issue an amended approval notice with updated validity dates.

If USCIS approves the Form I-539, USCIS issues a notice of extension of the T nonimmigrant status on a Notice of Action (Form I-797).

The extension of T nonimmigrant status based on law enforcement need or exceptional circumstances is valid for 1 year from the date the initial T nonimmigrant status ends. In the case of a Form I-539 untimely filed after T nonimmigrant status has expired, the extension is valid from the date the previous status expired and for 1 year from approval of the extension.^[8] During that period, the applicant continues to be in valid T nonimmigrant status with all the associated rights, privileges, and responsibilities.

USCIS issues any EAD (including renewals) using the (a)(16) eligibility code for principals and (c)(25) eligibility code for derivatives.^[9] Applicants must file an application for employment authorization in order to receive an EAD, which they may file concurrently with Form I-539.

C. Timing of Application

The applicant should file the Application to Extend/Change Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-539) before the applicant's T nonimmigrant status expires. USCIS, however, has discretion to grant an extension after the expiration of the status.^[10] When filing a Form I-539 untimely, the applicant should explain the reason(s) for the late filing.^[11]

D. Evidence

1. Law Enforcement Need

In cases in which the T nonimmigrant is filing for an extension of status based on law enforcement need, supporting evidence may include:

- A newly executed Declaration of Law Enforcement Officer for Victim of Trafficking in Persons (Form I-914, Supplement B); or
- Other evidence from a law enforcement official, prosecutor, judge, or other authority who can investigate or prosecute human trafficking activity and was involved in the applicable case. The applicant must include evidence that comes directly from an LEA.

USCIS does not require Form I-914, Supplement B to demonstrate law enforcement need. The applicant may submit a letter on the agency's letterhead, emails, or faxes from an LEA or any other credible evidence.

2. Exceptional Circumstances

Where T nonimmigrants are filing for an extension of status based on exceptional circumstances, applicants may submit their own statement and any other credible evidence to establish exceptional circumstances. Such evidence could include, but is not limited to:

- Medical records;
- Police or court records;
- News articles;
- Correspondence with a U.S. embassy or consulate; and
- Affidavits of witnesses.^[12]

To establish eligibility for an extension of status due to exceptional circumstances, applicants should provide evidence showing how the exceptional circumstances necessitate the continuance of T nonimmigrant status.

While an applicant can file more than one extension of status, if the extension of status is based on the same evidence as a prior request, the mere fact that USCIS previously found the circumstance to be exceptional does not mean that USCIS will come to the same conclusion a second time. USCIS considers every request on a case-by-case basis and based on the evidence presented with the request.

The need to accrue continuous physical presence to be eligible to adjust status is not generally considered an exceptional circumstance warranting an extension of status. However, USCIS can consider delays in consular processing for derivatives to be an exceptional circumstance that justifies extending the principal's T nonimmigrant status, even if it appears the principal will not be able to adjust status under INA 245(l).

E. Considerations for Family Members

To be eligible to apply for adjustment of status, a family member who is a derivative T nonimmigrant must continue to hold T nonimmigrant status at the time of filing the application for adjustment of status.^[13] To facilitate efficient processing, USCIS encourages derivative T nonimmigrants to file for adjustment of status concurrently with the principal T nonimmigrant. A derivative T nonimmigrant's status is automatically extended when the derivative properly files for adjustment of status.

Once a principal T nonimmigrant is no longer a T nonimmigrant, whether due to adjustment to lawful permanent residence, change to another nonimmigrant status, or expiration of T nonimmigrant status, derivative T nonimmigrants may no longer be eligible for initial admission into the United States on a T visa.^[14]

Where the approved derivative is awaiting initial issuance of a T visa by a consulate and the principal's nonimmigrant status is soon to expire, USCIS strongly encourages the principal to seek an extension of status based on exceptional circumstances, following the instructions to the Form I-539, and then wait for the derivatives to be admitted to the United States as T derivatives before filing an adjustment application.

This will prevent the derivative from being ineligible for initial admission to the United States on a derivative T visa due to the expiration of the principal's T nonimmigrant status or adjustment of status to lawful permanent residence.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 214(o)(7)(A). See 8 CFR 214.11(c)(1). See 8 CFR 214.11(l).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.11(c)(2).

[^ 3] See INA 214(o)(7)(C). See Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part A, Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures, Chapter 9, Death of Petitioner or Principal Beneficiary [7 USCIS-PM A.9].

[^ 4] See INA 214(o)(7)(B)(i).

[^ 5] See INA 214(o)(7)(B)(iii).

[^ 6] USCIS adjudicates adjustment of status applications according to the T adjustment regulations at 8 CFR 245.23.

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 274a.12(c)(9).

[^ 8] The applicant should present the Form I-797 demonstrating proof of extension of T nonimmigrant status when filing an Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (Form I-485) to adjust status to lawful permanent resident before the extension expires. See Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part J, 245(l) Trafficking Victim-Based Adjustment [7 USCIS-PM J].

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 274a.12(a)(16). See 8 CFR 274a.12(c)(25).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.11(l)(3).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 214.11(l)(3).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 214.11(l)(6).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 245.23(b)(2).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 214.11(c)(2).

Chapter 11 - Federal Benefits and Work Authorization

A. Federal Benefits

Children under the age of 18 are eligible for certain federal benefits and services as soon as they are identified as possible victims of trafficking.^[1] Adults are eligible for these benefits and services upon approval of T nonimmigrant status.^[2]

When USCIS receives an application from a principal applicant under the age of 18, USCIS notifies the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) to facilitate the provision of interim assistance.

^[3] In the case of adults, USCIS notifies HHS upon approval of an application for T nonimmigrant status.^[4]

B. Employment Authorization

A principal T nonimmigrant is authorized to work incident to status and does not need to file a separate Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765). Upon approval of T-1 nonimmigrant status, USCIS issues an Employment Authorization Document (EAD), which is valid for the duration of the T-1 nonimmigrant status. If the EAD is lost, stolen, or destroyed, the T-1 nonimmigrant must file an application for a replacement document.^[5]

A derivative T nonimmigrant is eligible to receive employment authorization but must apply by filing an application for employment authorization with USCIS with the required fee or a Request for Fee Waiver (Form I-912).^[6] Derivatives in the United States may file the application concurrently with the Supplement A, Application for Family Member of T-1 Recipient (Form I-914, Supplement A) or any time thereafter.

Derivatives outside the United States are not eligible for employment authorization until after lawful admission to the United States in T nonimmigrant status. Therefore, derivative family members should not file the application for employment authorization until after they are lawfully admitted as a T nonimmigrant. If USCIS approves the application, USCIS grants the derivative employment authorization^[7] for the period remaining in derivative T nonimmigrant status.^[8] [^ 1] See 22 U.S.C. 7105(b)(1)(G).

Footnotes

[^ 2] See 22 U.S.C. 7105(b)(1)(E).

[^ 3] See William Wilberforce Trafficking Victims Protection and Reauthorization Act, Pub. L. 110-457 (PDF), 122 Stat. 5044, 5077 (December 23, 2008). See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(1)(iii).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(1)(iii).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.11(d)(11). See Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 103.7(b).

[^ 7] USCIS grants such authorization under 8 CFR 274a.12(c)(25).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 214.11(k)(10).

Chapter 12 - Travel

A. Travel While Application for T Nonimmigrant Status is Pending

The filing of an application for T nonimmigrant status does not grant the applicant permission to travel outside the United States. Departures from the United States while an application for T nonimmigrant status is pending could impact the applicant's ability to establish eligibility for T nonimmigrant status.^[1] Additionally, an applicant's departure from the United States while the application for T nonimmigrant status is pending could impact the applicant's ability to return to the United States unless the applicant has another status that allows for travel.

B. Travel for T Nonimmigrants

A T nonimmigrant may travel outside the United States before applying for lawful permanent residence. The T nonimmigrant must file an Application for Travel Document (Form I-131), to obtain advance parole before departing the United States in order to return to the United States in T nonimmigrant status.

A T nonimmigrant who departs the United States and returns through means other than an advance parole document issued before departure or admission at a designated port of entry with a T nonimmigrant visa does not resume T nonimmigrant status and may have to reapply for such status if certain requirements are not met. In order for a T-2, T-3, T-4, T-5, or T-6 nonimmigrant to depart the United States and return to the United States in T nonimmigrant status, the T nonimmigrant must either:

- File an Application for Travel Document (Form I-131), and obtain advance parole before departure; or
- Apply for and receive a T nonimmigrant visa from the Department of State and seek admission as a T nonimmigrant at a designated port of entry.

C. Travel Considerations

Even if a person is granted an advance parole travel document before departing the United States, the document does not entitle the person to be paroled into the United States. U.S. Customs and Border Protection makes a separate, discretionary decision on a request for parole when the person arrives at a U.S. port of entry.

DHS may revoke or terminate an advance parole document at any time, including while the person is outside the United States.^[2] In that event, the person may be unable to return to the United States unless the person has a valid visa or other document that permits the person to travel to the United States and seek admission.

If the person is in the United States and DHS has granted deferred action in the case, the deferred action terminates automatically if the person leaves the United States without advance parole. Generally, if the person is in the United States and has applied for adjustment of status to that of a lawful permanent resident, USCIS deems the adjustment application abandoned if the person leaves the United States without advance parole.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements, Section C, Physical Presence on Account of Trafficking [3 USCIS-PM B.2(C)].

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 212.5(e).

Chapter 13 - Revocation of Status

A. Grounds for Revocation

USCIS can revoke its approval of T nonimmigrant status at any time based on the specific grounds discussed below.^[1] For most grounds, USCIS first issues a notice of intent to revoke. However, USCIS automatically revokes an approved application for derivative T nonimmigrant status if the beneficiary of the approved derivative application notifies USCIS that the beneficiary will not apply for admission to the United States.^[2]

USCIS may revoke an approved application for T nonimmigrant status for the following reasons:

- The approval of the application violated the statutory and regulatory requirements for T nonimmigrant visas^[3] or involved USCIS error in the preparation, procedure, or adjudication that affects the outcome;
- In the case of a T-2 spouse, a final divorce from the T-1 principal;
- In the case of a T-1 principal, a law enforcement agency (LEA) with jurisdiction to detect or investigate the acts of severe forms of trafficking in persons notifies USCIS that the T-1 nonimmigrant has refused to comply with reasonable requests to assist with the investigation or prosecution of the trafficking in persons and provides USCIS with a detailed explanation in writing; or
- The LEA that signed the LEA endorsement withdraws it or disavows its contents and notifies USCIS and provides a detailed explanation of its reasoning in writing.^[4]

B. Procedure for Revocation

If USCIS revokes approval of the previously approved T nonimmigrant status application, USCIS may notify the LEA that signed the LEA endorsement, any consular officer having jurisdiction over the applicant, or the Office of Refugee Resettlement of the Department of Health and Human Services of the revocation.^[5]

The applicant may appeal the decision to revoke the approval within 30 days after the date of the revocation notice to the Administrative Appeals Office using the Notice of Appeal or Motion (Form I-290B).^[6]

C. Effect of Revocation

1. Revocation of a Principal's Application

Revocation of an approved application for T-1 nonimmigrant status results in termination of T status for the principal and any derivatives. If a derivative application is pending at the time of such revocation, USCIS denies it. Revocation of an approved application for T-1 nonimmigrant status or an application for derivative T nonimmigrant status also revokes any waiver of inadmissibility granted in conjunction with such application. The revocation of a person's T-1 status has no effect on the annual cap.^[7]

2. Revocation of T-2, T-3, T-4 or T-5 Derivative Status

If USCIS revokes T-2, T-3, T-4, or T-5 derivative status under 8 CFR 214.11(m), eligibility for T-6 derivative status may be affected. In cases in which the revocation ground relates to the derivative beneficiary's eligibility for derivative T nonimmigrant status, the adult or minor child of the derivative beneficiary may not be eligible for T-6 status. Without a derivative beneficiary parent who has obtained valid derivative T nonimmigrant status, a potential T-6 family member is not able to derive T-6 status.

However, when the revocation ground is not related to the derivative beneficiary's eligibility for derivative status, the adult or minor child may still be eligible for T-6 status. For example, one of the revocation grounds is for divorce. If the T-1's spouse held T-2 status but then the couple divorced and USCIS revoked the T-2 status under 8 CFR 214.11(m)(2)(ii), the adult or minor child of the T-2 may still be eligible for T-6 status. The divorce of the T-2 does not impact eligibility when the T-6 derivative's application is approved and is therefore different from other revocation grounds.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.11(m).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.11(m)(1).

[^ 3] See INA 101(a)(15)(T). See 8 CFR 214.11.

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.11(m)(2).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.11(m)(3) for procedures for revocation and appeal specific to applications for T nonimmigrant status. See 8 CFR 103.3 for additional information on appeal procedures.

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 103.3(a)(2).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.11(m)(4).

Chapter 14 - Confidentiality Protections and Prohibitions Against Disclosure

A. Confidentiality Protections

DHS may not generally disclose any information relating to applicants for T nonimmigrant status, as that information could be used against them by traffickers or others who would seek to harm them.^[1] They are also protected against traffickers attempting to provide adverse evidence against them in relation to their applications with USCIS. These protections include the following:

- DHS is prohibited from making an adverse determination of admissibility or deportability against an applicant for T nonimmigrant status based on information furnished solely by the perpetrator of the acts of trafficking in persons,^[2] and
- DHS is prohibited from disclosing any information relating to the beneficiary of a pending or approved application for T nonimmigrant status except in certain limited circumstances.^[3]

B. Disclosure of Information

Officers must comply with the confidentiality provisions when an applicant for T nonimmigrant status requests information about the applicant's case.^[4]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 U.S.C 1367.

[^ 2] See 8 U.S.C. 1367(a)(1)(F).

[^ 3] See 8 U.S.C. 1367(a)(2). See Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part A, Public Services, Chapter 7, Privacy and Confidentiality, Section E, VAWA, T and U Cases [1 USCIS-PM A.7(E)]. See DHS Instruction No. 002-02-001, Implementation of Section 1367 Information Provisions (PDF) (Nov. 7, 2013).

[^ 4] See Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part A, Public Services, Chapter 7, Privacy and Confidentiality [1 USCIS-PM A.7].

Part C - Victims of Crimes

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 39 - Victims of Trafficking in Persons and other Crimes \(External\) \(PDF, 666.19 KB\)

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

In 2000, Congress created the U nonimmigrant classification (also known as the "U visa") through the passage of the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act (including the Battered Immigrant Women's Protection Act (BIWPA)).^[1] The U visa serves two purposes:

- Strengthen the ability of law enforcement agencies to investigate and prosecute cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, trafficking, and other crimes; and
- Protect victims of crime who have suffered substantial mental or physical abuse due to the qualifying crime and are willing to help law enforcement authorities in the investigation or prosecution of the qualifying criminal activity or the qualifying crime (QCA).^[2]

B. Background

U nonimmigrant status is available to any noncitizen who is a victim of a QCA and is otherwise eligible for the status, regardless of gender or sex.^[3] Such victims may self-petition for U nonimmigrant status by filing a Petition for U Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-918).

Noncitizens petitioning for U nonimmigrant status must provide a certification from a federal, state, tribal, or local law enforcement official, prosecutor, judge, or other authority investigating or prosecuting the QCA. The certification must state that the petitioner “has been helpful, is being helpful, or is likely to be helpful” in the “investigation or prosecution”^[4] of the QCA.^[5]

Noncitizens can file petitions for or pursue U nonimmigrant status while living inside or outside of the United States.

Principal petitioners can submit U nonimmigrant petitions on behalf of certain qualifying family members. Qualifying family members may include the petitioner’s spouse, unmarried children under the age of 21, and unmarried siblings under the age of 18. Qualifying family member eligibility depends on the age of the principal petitioner at the time the principal petitioner files the petition for U nonimmigrant status.^[6] USCIS must grant the principal petitioner U-1 nonimmigrant status before granting U nonimmigrant status to qualifying family members.

USCIS may grant U nonimmigrant status for an initial period of up to 4 years.^[7] Principal petitioners in the United States receive employment authorization incident to status.^[8] Qualifying family members in the United States are also authorized to work incident to status.^[9]

After at least 3 years of continuous physical presence in the United States in U nonimmigrant status, principal U nonimmigrants and their qualifying family members may apply for adjustment of status to that of a lawful permanent resident.^[10]

1. Acts and Amendments

Congress first established the U nonimmigrant status in 2000. Since then, Congress has enacted several amendments. The table below provides an overview of major legislation related to U nonimmigrant status.

U Nonimmigrant Status: Acts and Amendments

Acts and Amendments	Key Changes
Violence Against Women Act of 2000 ^[11]	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Established U nonimmigrant status for noncitizen victims of certain serious crimes when:<ul style="list-style-type: none">◦ The victim has suffered substantial physical or mental abuse as a result of the crime;◦ The victim has information about the crime; and◦ A law enforcement official or a judge certifies that the victim "has been helpful, is being helpful, or is likely to be helpful" in the "investigation or prosecution" of the QCA.^[5] be helpful" in the "investigation or prosecution" of that crime. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> ◦ Established a list of QCA categories.

Acts and Amendments	Key Changes
Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005 ^[12]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Clarified that the duration of status for an initial grant of U nonimmigrant status is 4 years. • Clarified that noncitizens in the United States on K visas (fiancé(e) or spouse) and S visas (informant), or persons admitted under the visa waiver program, are not prohibited from qualifying for U nonimmigrant status. • Clarified that noncitizens who came to the United States on J visas to receive graduate medical training, and noncitizens who are subject to the 2-year foreign residence requirement, may also qualify for U nonimmigrant status. • Established discretion for DHS to grant stays of removal to petitioners for U nonimmigrant status who have received prima facie determinations. • Established a prohibition on adverse determinations of admissibility or deportability based on information provided to DHS by abusers or perpetrators of QCA.
William Wilberforce Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008 ^[13]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Clarified that the duration of status for an initial grant of U nonimmigrant status is up to 4 years. • Provided for extensions of status based on law enforcement need or exceptional circumstances, or while an application for adjustment of status is pending. • Provided discretion to grant employment authorization to a noncitizen who has a pending, bona fide petition for U nonimmigrant status.

Acts and Amendments	Key Changes
Violence Against Women Reauthorization Act of 2013 ^[14]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Provided age-out protection by preserving the age of certain family members at the time the principal petitioner files his or her petition for U nonimmigrant status. • Provided that the exception for disclosure to law enforcement officials for a legitimate law enforcement purpose must be in a manner that protects confidentiality of the information. • Provided an additional exception for disclosure of protected information to national security officials for national security purposes.

2. Program History

Congress created the U visa program in 2000 through the passage of the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act (including the Battered Immigrant Women's Protection Act (BIWPA)). On September 17, 2007, DHS published an interim rule implementing the U nonimmigrant status provisions of BIWPA at 8 CFR 214.14 and 8 CFR 212.17.^[15]

Between the time BIWPA was enacted and when the implementing regulations were published, legacy Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) and DHS gave noncitizen crime victims who may have been eligible based on the statutory criteria the opportunity to seek interim relief until regulations were promulgated. The 2007 interim rule formally created Form I-918, as well as the current administrative and adjudications processes for U nonimmigrant status.^[16]

The 2007 interim rule addresses eligibility criteria, the petition process, filing requirements, evidentiary standards, and benefits associated with the U nonimmigrant classification.^[17] The rule also provided that DHS would automatically issue an Employment Authorization Document (EAD) to principal petitioners upon the approval of the petition for U nonimmigrant status.^[18]

The statute provides for 10,000 U visas available every fiscal year.^[19] This statutory cap only applies to principal petitioners, not their qualifying family members. The statutory cap has been met each fiscal year, beginning in Fiscal Year (FY) 2010. Starting in FY 2011, DHS began to receive more petitions than visas available under the statutory cap.^[20]

DHS created the waiting list process through the 2007 interim rule as a mechanism to address the remaining eligible petitioners after the statutory cap had been reached in a given fiscal year. U nonimmigrant petitioners placed on the waiting list, whose petitions have been deemed approvable but for the statutory cap, are eligible for employment authorization and receive a grant of deferred action^[21] or, in limited circumstances, parole.

The William Wilberforce Trafficking Victims Reauthorization Act of 2008 (TVPRA 2008), signed into law on December 23, 2008, amended the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) to provide DHS with discretion to grant employment authorization to a noncitizen who has a pending, bona fide petition for U nonimmigrant status.^[22]

In June 2021, USCIS implemented the Bona Fide Determination (BFD) process for principal petitioners and qualifying family members with pending, bona fide petitions who USCIS determines merit a favorable exercise of discretion. Under this process, USCIS exercises its discretion on a case-by-case basis to grant BFD Employment Authorization Documents (BFD EADs) and deferred action. The BFD process is distinct from the waiting list process. Before June 2021, a principal petitioner and his or her qualifying family members received employment authorization and deferred action only when USCIS placed the principal petitioner on the waiting list.

C. Legal Authorities

- INA 101(a)(15)(U) - Definition of U nonimmigrant classification
- INA 103(a) - Powers and duties of the Secretary of Homeland Security
- INA 214(p) - Requirements applicable to U nonimmigrant status visas
- 8 CFR 214.14 - Alien victims of certain qualifying criminal activity
- INA 212(a) - Classes of "aliens" ineligible for visas or admission
- INA 212(d)(3) - Temporary admission of nonimmigrants
- INA 212(d)(14) - Discretion to waive ground of inadmissibility for U nonimmigrant status
- INA 212(a)(4)(E)(ii) – Exemption from public charge ground of inadmissibility
- INA 237(d) – Administrative stay of final order of removal
- INA 248(b) – Change of nonimmigrant classification
- 8 U.S.C. 1367 – Penalties for disclosure of information
- 8 CFR 212.17 – Applications for the exercise of discretion relating to U nonimmigrant status
- 8 CFR 274a.12 – Classes of "aliens" authorized to accept employment

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Section 1513 of the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act of 2000 (VTVPA 2000), Pub. L. 106-386 (PDF), 114 Stat. 1464, 1533 (October 28, 2000), as amended by Section 801 of the Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005 (VAWA 2005), Pub. L. 109-162 (PDF), 119 Stat. 2960, 3053 (January 5, 2006); Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005—Technical Corrections, Pub. L. 109-271 (PDF), 120 Stat. 750 (August 12, 2006); William Wilberforce Trafficking Victims Protection Reauthorization Act of 2008 (TVPRA 2008), Pub. L. 110-457 (PDF), 122 Stat. 5044 (December 23, 2008); and Title VIII of the Violence Against Women Reauthorization Act of 2013 (VAWA 2013), Pub. L. 113-4 (PDF), 127 Stat. 54, 110 (March 7, 2013).

[^ 2] See Section 1502 and 1513(a)(2) of the Violence Against Women Act of 2000, Pub. L. 106-386 (PDF), 114 Stat. 1518, 1533-1534 (October 28, 2000) (“[P]roviding battered immigrant women and children who were experiencing domestic violence at home with protection against deportation allows them to obtain protection orders against their abusers and frees them to cooperate with law enforcement and prosecutors in criminal cases brought against their abusers and the abusers of their children . . .”).

[^ 3] For specific requirements, see Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements for U Nonimmigrant Status [3 USCIS-PM C.2].

[^ 4] In this context, the terms “investigation or prosecution” encompass detection, investigation, prosecution, conviction, and sentencing. See 8 CFR 214.14(a)(5).

[^ 5] See INA 214(p)(1).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 214.14(f)(1).

[^ 7] See INA 214(p)(6) (subject to extension based on law enforcement need, while an application for adjustment of status under INA 245(m) is pending, or if warranted due to exceptional circumstances). See 8 CFR 214.14(g)(2).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 274a.12(a)(19).

[^ 9] See INA 101(a)(15)(U)(ii). See INA 214(p)(3)(B). See 8 CFR 274a.12(a)(20). Under 8 CFR 214.14(f)(7), qualifying family members must file a separate Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765) to obtain an employment authorization document.

[^ 10] See INA 245(m).

[^ 11] See Section 1513 of VTVPA 2000, Pub. L. 106-386 (PDF), 114 Stat. 1464, 1533 (October 28, 2000).

[^ 12] See Title VIII of VAWA 2005, Pub. L. 109-162 (PDF), 119 Stat. 2960, 3053 (January 5, 2006).

[^ 13] See TVPRA 2008, Pub. L. 110-457 (PDF) (December 23, 2008).

[^ 14] See VAWA 2013, Pub. L. 113-4 (PDF) (March 7, 2013).

[^ 15] See 72 FR 53014 (PDF) (Sept. 17, 2007) (interim rule).

[^ 16] See 72 FR 53014 (PDF) (Sept. 17, 2007) (interim rule).

[^ 17] See 72 FR 53014 (PDF) (Sept. 17, 2007) (interim rule).

[^ 18] See 8 CFR 214.14(c)(7).

[^ 19] See INA 214(p)(2).

[^ 20] See Number of Form I-918, Petition for U Nonimmigrant Status by Fiscal Year, Quarter, and Case Status (Fiscal Years 2009-2020) (PDF, 112.43 KB).

[^ 21] Deferred action is an exercise of prosecutorial discretion that makes the noncitizen a lower priority for removal. See 72 FR 53014 (PDF), 53015 (Sept. 17, 2007), footnote 3. See 8 CFR 274a.12(c)(14).

[^ 22] See Section 201(c) of Pub. L. 110-457 (PDF), 122 Stat. 5044, 5053 (December 23, 2008). See INA 214(p)(6).

Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements for U Nonimmigrant Status

A. Principal Petitioners

To be eligible for U nonimmigrant status, principal petitioners must establish that they meet the following eligibility requirements by a preponderance of the evidence:

- They are or were the victim of a qualifying criminal activity or qualifying crime (QCA) that violated U.S. law or occurred in the United States (including Indian country and military installations) or the territories and possessions of the United States;
- They possess information concerning the QCA;
- They have been, are being, or are likely to be helpful to a federal, state, tribal, or local law enforcement official, prosecutor, judge, or other authority investigating or prosecuting the QCA;
- They have suffered substantial physical or mental abuse as a result of being a victim of a QCA; [1] and
- They are admissible or merit a discretionary waiver of any applicable grounds of inadmissibility. [2]

B. Qualifying Family Members

Certain family members of the principal petitioner may be eligible for derivative U nonimmigrant status, depending on the age of the principal petitioner at the time of filing the principal petition for U nonimmigrant status.^[3] The principal petitioner must be granted U-1 nonimmigrant status in order for any qualifying family member to be granted derivative U nonimmigrant status.

Overview of Qualifying Family Members

Petitioner	Qualifying Family Member
A principal petitioner 21 years of age or older at the time of filing the petition may file for:	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Spouse (U-2)• Unmarried children under the age of 21 (U-3)
A principal petitioner under the age of 21 years old at the time of filing the petition may file for:	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Spouse (U-2)• Unmarried children under the age of 21 (U-3)• Parents (U-4)• Unmarried siblings under the age of 18 (U-5)

Principal petitioners may choose to file for qualifying family members:

- At the time of submitting the principal petition;
- After the principal petition has been filed and remains pending; or
- After the principal petition has been approved for U nonimmigrant status.

When determining whether a family member is eligible for U-2, U-3, U-4, or U-5 nonimmigrant status, officers must confirm that:

- The noncitizen for whom the Petition for Qualifying Family Member of U-1 Recipient (Form I-918, Supplement A) was filed has a qualifying family relationship with the principal petitioner; and
- The qualifying family member is admissible to the United States.

For the noncitizen to establish eligibility as a qualifying family member, the relationship between the principal petitioner and the family member must exist:

- When the principal petitioner's Petition for U Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-918) is favorably adjudicated;
- When the Form I-918 Supplement A is filed;

- When the Form I-918 Supplement A is adjudicated; and
- At the time of the family member's admission as a U nonimmigrant.^[4]

The eligibility requirements that apply to principal petitioners do not apply to qualifying family members. Qualifying family members do not need to demonstrate helpfulness in the investigation or prosecution of the qualifying crime, or that they have suffered substantial physical or mental abuse as a result of a qualifying crime.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 101(a)(15)(U).

[^ 2] See INA 212(d)(14).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 214.14(f)(1).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 214.14(f)(4) as limited by Medina Tovar v. Zuchowski, 982 F.3d 631 (9th Cir. 2020) (en banc) (holding invalid the regulatory requirement that a spousal relationship exist at the time the Form I-918 is filed in order for the spouse to be eligible for classification as a U-2 nonimmigrant). As a matter of policy, USCIS applies the Medina Tovar decision nationwide.

Chapter 3 - Documentation and Evidence [Reserved]

Chapter 4 - Adjudication

The U nonimmigrant status program now involves three distinct adjudicative processes:

- Bona Fide Determination (BFD) process for principal petitioners and qualifying family members with pending, bona fide U nonimmigrant petitions, who USCIS determines merit a favorable exercise of discretion;^[1]
- Waiting list adjudication for petitions USCIS determines are eligible for U nonimmigrant status but cannot be approved due to the annual statutory cap; and
- Final adjudication of eligible petitions for U nonimmigrant status, where the approval of a principal petition results in the issuance of a visa drawn from the statutory cap of 10,000 visas allotted per fiscal year.

Adjudication	USCIS Process	Benefits
BFD (Interim Benefit)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Does not make a final determination of eligibility. • Determines whether a pending petition is bona fide by meeting initial filing requirements and whether background checks are completed. • Determines whether background checks indicate a risk to national security or public safety, and otherwise merits a favorable exercise of discretion. • Initiates waiting list adjudication for principal petitioners who do not receive a Bona Fide Determination Employment Authorization Document (BFD EAD). • Places BFD EAD recipients in line with U waiting list petitioners for U nonimmigrant status adjudication in receipt date order 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Principal petitioners and qualifying family members living in the United States receive a BFD EAD and deferred action valid for 4 years.
Waiting List (Interim Benefit)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Determines eligibility for U nonimmigrant status at the time of adjudication. • Places eligible petitioners not granted U nonimmigrant status “due solely to the (statutory) cap” on the waiting list.^[2] • Denies ineligible petitioners. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Principal petitioners and qualifying family members living in the United States are eligible for employment authorization and deferred action for 4 years. • USCIS may grant principal petitioners and qualifying family members living outside of the United States parole in limited circumstances.

Adjudication	USCIS Process	Benefits
	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Places U waiting list petitioners in line with BFD EAD recipients for U nonimmigrant status adjudication in receipt date order.
Final Adjudication (Full Benefit)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Makes a final determination of eligibility for U nonimmigrant status. Grants U nonimmigrant status to eligible petitioners. Denies ineligible petitioners. 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Principal petitioners and qualifying family members in the United States receive U nonimmigrant status and employment authorization for up to 4 years.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Appendix: Bona Fide Determination Process Flowchart [3 USCIS-PM C.4, Appendices Tab].

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 214.14(d)(2).

Chapter 5 - Bona Fide Determination Process

By statute, USCIS has discretion to provide employment authorization to noncitizens with pending, bona fide U nonimmigrant status petitions.^[1] Consequently, USCIS implemented the Bona Fide Determination (BFD) process.

During the BFD process, USCIS first determines whether a pending petition is bona fide. Second, USCIS, in its discretion, determines whether the petitioner poses a risk to national security or public safety, and otherwise merits a favorable exercise of discretion. If USCIS grants a noncitizen a Bona Fide Determination Employment Authorization Document (BFD EAD) as a result of the BFD process, USCIS then also exercises its discretion to grant that noncitizen deferred action for the period of the BFD EAD. USCIS generally does not conduct waiting list adjudications for noncitizens who USCIS grants BFD EADs and deferred action to; these petitioners' next adjudicative step is final adjudication when space is available under the statutory cap.^[2]

As a matter of policy, USCIS interprets "bona fide" as part of its administrative authority to implement the statute as outlined below. Bona fide generally means "made in good faith; without fraud or deceit.”^[3] Accordingly, when interpreting the statutory term within the context of U nonimmigrant status, USCIS determines whether a petition is bona fide based on the petitioner’s compliance with initial evidence requirements and successful completion of background checks. If USCIS determines a petition is bona fide, USCIS then considers any national security and public safety risks, as well as any other relevant considerations, as part of the discretionary adjudication.^[4]

As a primary goal, USCIS seeks to adequately evaluate and adjudicate petitions as efficiently as possible. The BFD process provides an opportunity for certain petitioners to receive BFD EADs and deferred action while their petitions are pending, consistent with the William Wilberforce Trafficking Victims Reauthorization Act of 2008 (TVPRA 2008).^[5]

Only petitioners living in the United States may receive BFD EADs, since those outside the United States cannot as a practical matter work in the United States.^[6] Likewise, deferred action can only be accorded to petitioners in the United States since those outside the United States have no potential removal to be deferred.

A. Bona Fide Determination

1. Principal Petitioners

USCIS determines a principal petition is bona fide if:

- The principal petitioner has properly filed a complete Petition for U Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-918), including all required initial evidence,^[7] except for the Application for Advance Permission to Enter as a Nonimmigrant (Form I-192).^[8] Required initial evidence includes:
 - A complete and properly filed U Nonimmigrant Status Certification (Form I-918, Supplement B) submitted within 6 months of the certifier’s signature; and
 - A personal statement from the petitioner describing the facts of the victimization; and
- USCIS has received the result of the principal petitioner’s background and security checks based upon biometrics.^[9]

2. Qualifying Family Members

A qualifying family member is not guaranteed a BFD EAD solely because the principal petitioner receives a BFD EAD.^[10] The record must independently demonstrate the Form I-918, Supplement A is bona fide. USCIS determines a qualifying family member’s petition is bona fide when:

- The principal petitioner receives a BFD EAD;

- The petitioner has properly filed a complete Petition for Qualifying Family Member of U-1 Recipient (Form I-918, Supplement A);
- The petition includes credible evidence of the qualifying family relationship;^[11] and
- USCIS has received the results of the qualifying family member's background and security checks based upon biometrics.^[12]

B. Exercise of Discretion, Including Risk to National Security or Public Safety and Other Factors

Once USCIS has determined a petition is bona fide, USCIS determines whether the petitioner poses a risk to national security^[13] or public safety by reviewing the results of background checks, and considers other relevant discretionary factors.^[14] USCIS then determines whether to exercise its discretion to issue a BFD EAD and grant deferred action to a petitioner.

Section 214(p)(6) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) gives the Secretary of Homeland Security, and USCIS as his or her designee, discretionary authority over the issuance of employment authorization to noncitizens with pending, bona fide U nonimmigrant status petitions.^[15] A principal petitioner or qualifying family member who poses a risk to national security or public safety, or has other adverse discretionary factors, may not merit the favorable exercise of discretion necessary to grant deferred action.

Moreover, at the final adjudication, such individuals may require a waiver for any grounds of inadmissibility, and may be ineligible for U nonimmigrant status if they do not merit a favorable exercise of discretion. Therefore, in exercising the discretion granted by the INA, USCIS grants BFD EADs to principal petitioners and qualifying family members with pending bona fide petitions who it determines merit a favorable exercise of discretion, considering any risk to national security or public safety, as well as other relevant discretionary factors.

USCIS may choose not to exercise its discretion to grant a BFD EAD and deferred action where a petitioner appears to pose a risk to national security or public safety. For example, where a principal petitioner or qualifying family member has been convicted of or arrested for any of the following acts, USCIS generally does not issue a BFD EAD and deferred action and instead proceeds to a full adjudication to assess eligibility for waiting list placement. The following categories generally overlap with inadmissibility grounds^[16] and may include:

- National security concerns;^[17] and
- Public safety concerns, which include but are not limited to:
 - Murder, rape, or sexual abuse;

- Offenses involving firearms, explosive materials, or destructive devices;^[18]
- Offenses relating to peonage, slavery, involuntary servitude, and trafficking in persons;^[19]
- Aggravated assault;
- An offense relating to child pornography; and
- Manufacturing, distributing, or selling of drugs or narcotics.^[20]

Violent and dangerous crimes, such as those listed above, embody the very activities law enforcement seeks to deter and prevent through cooperation facilitated by the U nonimmigrant status program.

Additionally, USCIS may determine on a case-by-case basis that other adverse factors weigh against a favorable exercise of discretion. USCIS may also exercise discretion favorably notwithstanding the above concerns if case-specific circumstances warrant it.

Recognizing that many factors may influence whether criminal activity is prosecuted and results in a conviction, an arrest for a serious crime is relevant to whether USCIS should exercise its discretion favorably. A determination about whether to favorably exercise discretion when there are indicators of national security or public safety concerns requires a comprehensive review of the available evidence.

For example, officers may need to request additional evidence or information in certain cases where security checks indicate that a petitioner has an arrest record.^[21] Therefore, USCIS does not conduct this in-depth, discretionary review during the BFD process. Instead, if USCIS determines that a petitioner may pose a risk to national security or public safety, or has other relevant adverse factors that would require further review, and therefore will not receive a BFD EAD, USCIS initiates a waiting list adjudication and conducts a comprehensive discretionary review as part of the evaluation of Form I-192 if one is submitted.

USCIS evaluates all evidence provided by petitioners regarding their arrest records before making determinations for waiting list placement.^[22]

C. Adjudicative Process

USCIS evaluates all petitions for U nonimmigrant status filed by noncitizens living in the United States as described above.^[23] If USCIS determines a principal petitioner and any other qualifying family members have a bona fide petition and warrant a favorable exercise of discretion, USCIS issues them BFD EADs and grants deferred action.

USCIS initiates waiting list adjudication for petitioners who do not receive BFD EADs. When USCIS determines a principal petitioner will not receive a BFD EAD, USCIS proceeds to a full adjudication for waiting list placement for the principal petitioner and his or her qualifying family members.

A determination that a petitioner will not receive a BFD EAD and deferred action is not a denial of Form I-918 or the Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765). A petitioner who does not receive a BFD EAD and deferred action is evaluated for waiting list eligibility and still has the opportunity to obtain employment authorization and a grant of deferred action if deemed eligible for waiting list placement. Consequently, non-issuance of a BFD EAD is not a final agency action.

Correspondingly, USCIS does not accept or process motions to reopen or reconsider, appeals,^[24] or requests to re-apply for a BFD EAD.

For any qualifying family member who will not receive a BFD EAD, USCIS completes a full adjudication for that qualifying family member. The full adjudication includes the issuance of Requests for Evidence (RFEs) to address any deficiencies or concerns identified in the qualifying family member's record but it is not an adjudication for waiting list placement. Because qualifying family members are "accompanying or following to join" the principal petitioner, they will not be placed on the waiting list unless the principal petitioner was placed on the waiting list.^[25]

If the qualifying family member resolves the deficiencies or concerns in the record, USCIS issues a BFD EAD and grants deferred action to the qualifying family member. If additional evidence provided by the qualifying family member does not resolve the deficiencies or concerns identified, then USCIS does not issue a BFD EAD and generally places the qualifying family member's petition with the principal petition back in line to await a final statutory cap adjudication.

When USCIS issues a final decision to the principal petitioner, USCIS also issues a final decision for any qualifying family member who did not receive a BFD EAD. USCIS retains the authority to deny any petition when, after full adjudication, USCIS determines the qualifying family member is ineligible for the underlying benefit.

For example, USCIS may deny the petition where the record establishes that the claimed family member does not have a qualifying family relationship with the petitioner, or where USCIS determines a favorable exercise of discretion is not warranted to waive the qualifying family member's grounds of inadmissibility.

1. Criminal History Check for Bona Fide Determination Employment Authorization Documents

To efficiently determine whether to issue BFD EADs and grant deferred action, USCIS conducts background and security checks to identify petitioners who may pose risks to national security and public safety, or other adverse discretionary factors. USCIS relies on a variety of databases that collect information from law enforcement agencies and other federal, state, local, and tribal agencies, including information regarding arrests and convictions.

USCIS uses this information to determine whether a petitioner is admissible for the purposes of receiving a grant of U nonimmigrant status or merits a favorable exercise of discretion to waive any grounds of inadmissibility. USCIS' consideration of national security and public safety risks at the BFD

EAD stage aligns with inadmissibility grounds evaluated during the adjudication of a petition for U nonimmigrant status and is therefore a consistent exercise of discretion within the authority afforded by INA 214(p)(6) to grant BFD EADs.

A petitioner who is not issued a BFD EAD due to the risk the petitioner appears to pose to national security or public safety receives a full adjudication for waiting list placement. During the adjudication for waiting list placement, petitioners have the opportunity to provide USCIS with potentially mitigating information or other evidence pertaining to arrests or convictions.

USCIS issues petitioners a BFD EAD and grants deferred action in order to promote victim stability and continued cooperation with law enforcement. However, USCIS updates and reviews background and security checks at regular intervals during the validity period of a principal petitioner or a qualifying family member's BFD EAD.

Additionally, USCIS retains discretion to update background and security checks at any time when case-specific circumstances warrant. During those reviews, USCIS evaluates whether the petitioner and qualifying family members who have been granted BFD EADs and deferred action continue to warrant the BFD EAD and merit a favorable exercise of discretion while their petitions for U nonimmigrant status are pending with USCIS.

USCIS reserves the right to revoke the BFD EAD^[26] and terminate the grant of deferred action at any time if it determines the BFD EAD or favorable exercise of discretion are no longer warranted, or the prior BFD EAD and deferred action were granted in error.

For example, USCIS may revoke the BFD EAD and terminate deferred action if USCIS identifies any adverse information, such as new information pertaining to the risks the petitioner poses to national security or public safety, or the withdrawal of a petitioner's Form I-918, Supplement B. At that time, USCIS initiates a waiting list adjudication to gather additional information and evidence to determine if the petitioner is eligible for a waiver of inadmissibility for any relevant inadmissibility grounds and placement on the waiting list.

2. Previously Filed Form I-765 for Bona Fide Determination Process

USCIS uses all Applications for Employment Authorization (Form I-765) already filed by principal petitioners under 8 CFR 274a.12(a)(19) and (c)(14) to issue a BFD EAD. USCIS also uses Form I-765 applications previously filed under 8 CFR 274a.12(a)(20) and (c)(14) for a qualifying family member to issue a BFD EAD to qualifying family members. Using previously filed applications limits the burden on petitioners to file additional paperwork.

Where a petitioner has filed a Form I-918 but has not filed an accompanying application for employment authorization under 8 CFR 274a.12(a)(19), (a)(20) or (c)(14), USCIS issues a notice indicating that the petitioner has received a BFD and may receive a BFD EAD. To obtain an EAD, the petitioner must file a Form I-765 after receiving this notice.

3. Bona Fide Determination Employment Authorization Document Issuance

Once USCIS has determined that a petitioner present in the United States has a bona fide petition and merits a favorable exercise of discretion, and therefore may receive a BFD EAD, USCIS issues a notice to inform the petitioner of the decision.

Such petitioners who have already filed a Form I-765 under either of the EAD classifications noted above then receive an EAD and a grant of deferred action valid for 4 years. Petitioners who must file a new Form I-765 after receiving the BFD notice from USCIS receive employment authorization and deferred action valid for 4 years once USCIS finishes adjudicating the Form I-765.

4. Prima Facie Case for Approval

Where USCIS issues a BFD EAD to a petitioner, the petitioner is also considered to have established a prima facie case for approval within the meaning of INA 237(d)(1). The term “prima facie” refers to a petition appearing sufficient on its face.

The evaluation performed by USCIS to determine whether a petition is bona fide and whether a petitioner receives a BFD EAD is a more complex evaluation than looking at the petition on its face alone. The BFD process satisfies the prima facie standard that U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) previously requested in specific circumstances^[27] since the steps taken to determine whether a petition is bona fide and a petitioner receives a BFD EAD rely on the initial evidence submitted with a petition for U nonimmigrant status, as well as the results of background checks.

5. Waiting List Adjudication for Petitioners Not Issued a Bona Fide Determination Employment Authorization Document

Once an officer has determined that a petitioner will not receive a BFD EAD, the officer reviews the complete filing and identifies any deficiencies or concerns that need to be addressed for waiting list adjudication. The officer then issues an RFE or Notice of Intent to Deny (NOID), which includes:^[28]

- A notice explaining that USCIS will not be issuing a BFD EAD; and
- An RFE to address any deficiencies or concerns associated with waiting list adjudication.

If USCIS determines that a petitioner will not receive a BFD EAD, but can be placed on the waiting list, that decision generally does not affect the timeline in which the petition for U nonimmigrant status is adjudicated for final determination of U nonimmigrant status. If USCIS determines that a petitioner will not receive a BFD EAD and cannot be placed on the waiting list, USCIS will deny the petition.

6. Request to Renew Bona Fide Determination Employment Authorization Document and Deferred Action

Generally, USCIS does not charge a fee for the filing of certain victim-based and humanitarian benefit requests, including Form I-918 and Form I-918, Supplement A.^[29] Consequently, petitioners who receive BFD EADs do not need to submit a filing fee for the initial Form I-765 associated with the BFD EAD. Petitioners who choose to renew their BFD EADs may do so under existing procedures.^[30] Once a BFD EAD is renewed, the accompanying grant of deferred action is also renewed.

TVPRA 2008 requires USCIS to permit petitioners for U nonimmigrant status to apply for fee waivers for “any fees associated with filing an application for relief through final adjudication of the adjustment of status.”^[31] USCIS has interpreted this to mean that, in addition to the main benefit request, applicants and petitioners must have the opportunity to request a fee waiver for any form associated with the main benefit, including applications for waivers of inadmissibility or employment authorization. Principal petitioners and qualifying family members who are seeking to renew a BFD EAD must either submit a filing fee or submit a Request for Fee Waiver (Form I-912).

An initial BFD EAD grant does not guarantee future renewals. Principal petitioners and qualifying family members are evaluated independently for each EAD and deferred action renewal to ensure that the BFD EAD and grant of deferred action are still warranted as a matter of discretion.

>Additionally, USCIS may identify principal petitioners and qualifying family members who pose a risk to national security and public safety during the validity period of the BFD EAD and deferred action, until final adjudication of U nonimmigrant status.

At any point during the validity period, USCIS has the right to revoke employment authorization or terminate deferred action if USCIS determines a national security or public safety concern is present, if USCIS determines the BFD EAD and deferred action is no longer warranted, the Form I-918 Supplement B law enforcement certification is withdrawn, or USCIS determines the prior BFD EAD was issued in error.^[32]

If USCIS determines that adverse information may impact a principal petitioner’s ability to maintain a BFD EAD and deferred action, USCIS will initiate a waiting list review for the principal petition. Similarly, if USCIS determines that adverse information may impact a qualifying family member’s ability to maintain a BFD EAD and deferred action, USCIS will conduct a full adjudication of the qualifying family member’s petition as described above to determine whether the qualifying family member can maintain a BFD EAD and deferred action.

An initial grant or renewal of a BFD EAD and deferred action does not guarantee that USCIS will approve the principal petitioner or his or her qualifying family members for U nonimmigrant status. Generally, USCIS adjudicates petitions for U nonimmigrant status in the order in which they are received, subject to limited exceptions. When the principal petitioner’s filing is next in line for final adjudication, an officer assesses eligibility requirements for U nonimmigrant status. This adjudication does not include consideration of prior grants or renewals of BFD EAD or deferred action.

7. Petitioners Residing Outside of the United States

USCIS only issues BFD EADs and deferred action to petitioners living in the United States as it cannot provide deferred action or employment authorization to petitioners outside the United States. Deferred action, as an exercise of prosecutorial discretion to make a noncitizen a lower priority for removal from the United States, is only applicable to noncitizens in the United States. Additionally, INA 274A gives the Secretary of Homeland Security, and USCIS as his or her designee, authority over noncitizen employment authorization in the United States.

Because the BFD EAD is only for petitioners living in the United States, principal petitioners (and their qualifying family members) who live outside of the United States proceed directly to waiting list adjudication.

Generally, USCIS adjudicates cases in the order in which they were received to determine waiting list placement. If USCIS determines a principal petitioner residing outside the United States is eligible for waiting list placement, the principal petitioner and his or her qualifying family members should submit a Form I-765 upon admission to the United States to receive an EAD.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 214(p)(6) (“The Secretary may grant work authorization to any alien who has a pending, bona fide application for nonimmigrant status under section 101(a)(15)(U).”).

[^ 2] See Appendix: Bona Fide Determination Process Flowchart [3 USCIS-PM C.5, Appendices Tab].

[^ 3] See Black’s Law Dictionary (11th ed. 2019).

[^ 4] Submission of biometrics is a requirement for principal petitioners as well as derivatives. See 8 CFR 214.14(c)(3) and 8 CFR 214.14(f)(5).

[^ 5] See Pub. L. 110-457 (PDF) (December 23, 2008). See INA 214(p)(6) (“The Secretary may grant work authorization to any alien who has a pending, bona fide application for nonimmigrant status under section 101(a)(15)(U).”).

[^ 6] See INA 274A. See 8 CFR 274a.12(a), (b), (c) (referring to employment in the United States).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.14(c)(2).

[^ 8] One of the main purposes for issuing employment authorization to those with pending, bona fide petitions is to provide EADs to good faith petitioners who are vulnerable due to lengthy wait times. Requiring and adjudicating Form I-192 for purposes of the EAD would delay the EAD adjudication and undermine efficiency. Instead of adjudicating the Form I-192 at this stage, USCIS relies on criminal history checks.

[^ 9] See instructions for the Petition for U Nonimmigrant Status (Form I-918).

[^ 10] The principal petitioner enables access to the benefits associated with U nonimmigrant status for the qualifying family member. Therefore, USCIS does not consider a qualifying family member for a BFD unless the principal petitioner receives a BFD EAD.

[^ 11] Under INA 214(p)(4), USCIS considers any credible evidence relevant to the petition.

[^ 12] See instructions for Petition for Qualifying Family Member of U-1 Recipient (Form I-918, Supplement A).

[^ 13] See INA 212(a)(3).

[^ 14] See Section C, Adjudicative Process, Subsection 1, Criminal History Check for BFD EADs [3 USCIS-PM C.5(C)(1)].

[^ 15] See INA 214(p)(6) (“The Secretary may grant work authorization to any alien who has a pending, bona fide application for nonimmigrant status under section 101(a)(15)(U).”) (emphasis added).

[^ 16] See INA 212(a).

[^ 17] As listed in INA 212(a)(3).

[^ 18] Such as those defined in INA 101(a)(43)(C) and (E).

[^ 19] As defined in INA 101(a)(43)(K)(iii).

[^ 20] This includes acts defined in INA 101(a)(43)(B).

[^ 21] See Matter of Arreguin, 21 I&N Dec. 38, 42 (BIA 1995) (considering but hesitating to give “substantial weight” to an uncorroborated arrest report). See Garces v. U.S. Att'y Gen., 611 F.3d 1337, 1350 (11th Cir. 2010) (“Absent corroboration, the arrest reports by themselves do not offer reasonable, substantial, and probative evidence that there is reason to believe Garces engaged in drug trafficking.”).

[^ 22] See Henry v. I.N.S., 74 F.3d 1, 6 (1st Cir. 1996) (noting “while an arrest, without more, is simply an unproven charge, the fact of the arrest, and its attendant circumstances, often have probative value in immigration proceedings.”).

[^ 23] See Section A, Principal Petitioners [3 USCIS-PM C.5(A)] and Section B, Qualifying Family Members [3 USCIS-PM C.5(B)].

[^ 24] Appeals are not available to applicants who have been denied employment authorization under 8 CFR 274a.13(c). Therefore, even if the BFD EAD issuance was considered a final agency action, the lack of an appeals process for BFD EADs aligns with regulatory practice pertaining to employment authorization generally.

[^ 25] See INA 101(a)(15)(U)(ii).

[^ 26] See 8 CFR 274a.14(b).

[^ 27] See ICE's Revision of Stay of Removal Request Reviews for U Visa Petitioners webpage.

[^ 28] See Chapter 6, Waiting List [3 USCIS-PM C.6].

[^ 29] See 8 CFR 103.7(b)(1)(i)(VV).

[^ 30] See 8 CFR 274a.13(d). See Instructions for Form I-765.

[^ 31] See INA 245(l)(7).

[^ 32] See 8 CFR 274a.14(b).

Chapter 6 - Waiting List

When the 10,000 visas under the statutory cap have been allocated in a given fiscal year, USCIS places remaining petitioners eligible for U nonimmigrant status on the waiting list. Principal petitioners placed on the waiting list are eligible for employment authorization and receive a grant of deferred action or, in limited circumstances, parole.^[1] Additionally, USCIS grants these same benefits to the qualifying family members of principal petitioners placed on the waiting list.

Officers initiate a waiting list adjudication for petitioners who do not receive employment authorization and deferred action based on the Bona Fide Determination (BFD) process.^[2] While the BFD process does not include a full analysis of eligibility requirements, USCIS conducts a full adjudication necessary to determine eligibility for U nonimmigrant status as part of the waiting list process. Unlike the BFD process, officers may issue a Request for Evidence (RFE) or a Notice of Intent to Deny (NOID) to gather additional information necessary to adjudicate for waiting list placement.

Consistent with longstanding practice, U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) may request expedited waiting list adjudications for specific petitioners, in relation to enforcement priorities.^[3]

Except in cases where ICE requests expedited waiting list adjudication, or where USCIS revokes the Bona Fide Determination Employment Authorization Document (BFD EAD) and terminates deferred action, USCIS generally does not conduct waiting list adjudications for noncitizens who USCIS grants BFD EADs and deferred action to.

A. Eligibility

To be placed on the waiting list, a petitioner must establish all statutory and regulatory requirements by a preponderance of the evidence.^[4] At the time of placement on the waiting list, a petitioner is considered eligible for U nonimmigrant status, but not granted U nonimmigrant status “due solely to the cap.”^[5] Though petitioners placed on the waiting list are generally approved for U nonimmigrant status, approval is not guaranteed.^[6]

B. Adjudication of Waiting List Eligibility

USCIS determines waiting list placement on a case-by-case basis. Officers:

- Perform a full evaluation of eligibility requirements, which includes but is not limited to:
 - Determining whether the petitioner was the victim of qualifying criminal activity or qualifying crime (QCA);
 - Analyzing evidence submitted to establish substantial mental and physical abuse;
 - Assessing the U Nonimmigrant Status Certification (Form I-918, Supplement B) for all details regarding the QCA;
- Complete a full review of background checks; and
 - Determine whether any applicable inadmissibility grounds are waivable in the exercise of discretion in the final adjudication, which includes a detailed, individualized assessment for principal petitioners and qualifying family members who have one or more applicable grounds of inadmissibility.^[7]

Petitioners or qualifying family members who are inadmissible under INA 212(a) are generally ineligible to receive visas or be admitted to the United States. USCIS may exercise its discretion to deny waiver requests in the following circumstances:

- Noncitizens with criminal histories or serious immigration violations;
- Noncitizens who pose a national security or public safety risk;
- Noncitizens determined to have committed fraud or misrepresentation; or
- For any other reasons that USCIS deems necessary and appropriate.

For example, officers may need to request additional evidence or information in certain cases where security checks indicate that a petitioner has an arrest record.^[8] The courts and administrative appellate bodies have deemed an arrest record, as well as police reports and other corroborating information, as appropriate for consideration for purposes of applications for discretionary relief, provided that the evidentiary weight of the arrest and police reports is properly assessed and considered.^[9]

Although officers fully evaluate a petition for placement on the waiting list, officers must review the filing again and determine that the petitioner remains eligible for U nonimmigrant status before approving the petition when space becomes available under the statutory cap in a subsequent fiscal year.

Decision

Upon determining eligibility for waiting list placement, USCIS issues a notice to petitioners with information regarding eligibility for work authorization and deferred action. Employment authorization based on deferred action is permitted under 8 CFR 274a.12(c)(14) to petitioners living in the United States who have filed an Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765).

Waitlisted petitioners remain on the waiting list until their petitions are adjudicated for U nonimmigrant status in the order they were received. Grants of deferred action or parole to principal petitioners placed on the waiting list, and their qualifying family members, are preserved until a final agency decision is made on the petition, unless the individual grant of deferred action or parole is terminated at USCIS' discretion.^[10]

Waitlisted petitioners do not accrue unlawful presence while on the waiting list.^[11] Petitioners on the waiting list and their qualifying family members, who are outside the United States, may generally seek parole on a case-by-case basis through the processes available to other noncitizens.

Principal petitioners placed on the waiting list, and their qualifying family members, receive employment authorization valid for a period of 4 years, similar to petitioners who receive a BFD EAD. Principal petitioners who file an application for employment authorization under 8 CFR 274a.12(c)(14) must submit a fee or a Request for Fee Waiver (Form I-912). Principal petitioners placed on the waiting list and their qualifying family members may request renewals of employment authorization and deferred action if they remain on the waiting list longer than 4 years.

Principal petitioners are granted employment authorization incident to a grant of U nonimmigrant status. Consequently, USCIS converts applications for employment authorization under 8 CFR 274a.12(a)(19) to 8 CFR 274a.12(c)(14) for principal petitioners placed on the waiting list.

For applications for employment authorization under 8 CFR 274a.12(a)(20) or (c)(14), qualifying family members must submit a fee or a Form I-912.^[12]

USCIS issues an RFE or NOI to principal petitioners who are determined ineligible for waiting list placement based on the file review. Petitioners have the opportunity to submit additional information to address deficiencies or concerns identified in the RFE or the NOI. If, after reviewing the additional evidence, the officer determines that the petitioner has not established eligibility for U nonimmigrant status by a preponderance of the evidence, USCIS issues a notice of denial of the petition for U nonimmigrant status to the petitioner.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 214.14(d)(2).

[^ 2] See Chapter 5, Bona Fide Determination Process [3 USCIS-PM C.5].

[^ 3] See ICE Directive 11005.2: Stay of Removal Requests and Removal Proceedings Involving U Nonimmigrant Status (U Visa) Petitioners, issued August 2, 2019.

[^ 4] See Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements for U Nonimmigrant Status, Section A, Principal Petitioners [3 USCIS-PM C.2].

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 214.14(d)(2).

[^ 6] See Chapter 7, Adjudication for Statutory Cap, Section C, Adjudicative Order [3 USCIS-PM C.7].

[^ 7] Congress granted DHS the discretionary authority to waive most inadmissibility grounds for a person seeking U nonimmigrant status if it is in the public or national interest to do so. See INA 212(d)(3)(A)(ii). See INA 212(d)(14) (authorizing the waiver of any inadmissibility ground except for participation in Nazi persecution, genocide, or the commission of any act of torture or extrajudicial killing). See Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications, Chapter 8, Discretionary Analysis [1 USCIS-PM E.8].

[^ 8] See Matter of Arreguin, 21 I&N Dec. 38, 42 (BIA 1995) (considering but hesitating to give “substantial weight” to an uncorroborated arrest report). See Garces v. U.S. Att'y Gen., 611 F.3d 1337, 1350 (11th Cir. 2010) (“Absent corroboration, the arrest reports by themselves do not offer reasonable, substantial, and probative evidence that there is reason to believe Garces engaged in drug trafficking.”).

[^ 9] See Paredes-Urrestarazu v. U.S. I.N.S., 36 F.3d 801, 810 (9th Cir. 1994) Paredes-Urrestarazu v. I.N.S., 36 F.3d 801, 810 (9th Cir. 1994) (holding that an arrest can be relevant to a discretionary determination). See Matter of Grijalva (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 713, 721-22 (BIA 1988) (hearsay evidence is admissible in deportation proceedings unless its use is fundamentally unfair; the admission into evidence of police reports concerning the circumstances of an arrest and conviction is appropriate in cases involving discretionary relief). See Matter of Teixeira (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 316, 321 (BIA 1996) (police reports that are not part of the “record of conviction” may be appropriately considered for purposes of an application for discretionary relief, where the focus is on conduct rather than conviction). See Avila-Ramirez v. Holder, 764 F.3d 717, 725 (7th Cir. 2014) (consideration of arrest reports in the weighing of discretionary factors is not prohibited but must be given appropriate evidentiary weight). See Arias-Minaya v. Holder, 779 F.3d 49, 54 (1st Cir. 2015) (noting “it is settled beyond hope of contradiction that in reviewing requests for discretionary relief, immigration courts may consider police reports" and that this holds true even where there is no conviction.).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 214.14(d)(3).

[^ 11] See INA 212(a)(9)(B). See 8 CFR 214.14(d)(3).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 274a.12(c)(14).

Chapter 7 - Final Adjudication

A. Determination of U Nonimmigrant Status for A Petitioner Granted A Bona Fide Determination Employment Authorization Document and Deferred Action

A Bona Fide Determination Employment Authorization Document (BFD EAD) and grant of deferred action does not guarantee eligibility for U nonimmigrant status at the time a visa becomes available in a given fiscal year under the statutory cap.

Officers perform a full file review to determine eligibility for U nonimmigrant status for petitioners granted employment authorization and deferred action, as a matter of discretion, through the BFD process.

USCIS determines eligibility for U nonimmigrant status on a case-by-case basis. Officers:

- Perform a full evaluation of eligibility requirements, which includes but is not limited to:
 - Determining whether the petitioner was the victim of qualifying criminal activity or qualifying crime (QCA);
 - Analyzing evidence submitted to establish substantial mental and physical abuse;
 - Assessing the U Nonimmigrant Status Certification (Form I-918, Supplement B) law enforcement certification for all details regarding the QCA;
- Complete a full review of background checks; and
- Determine whether any applicable inadmissibility grounds are waivable in the exercise of discretion, which includes a detailed, individualized assessment for principal petitioners and qualifying family members who have one or more applicable grounds of inadmissibility.^[1]

Petitioners and qualifying family members seeking U nonimmigrant status who USCIS determines are inadmissible,^[2] and do not warrant the favorable exercise of discretion to waive such inadmissibility, are generally ineligible to receive visas or be admitted to the United States. USCIS may exercise its discretion to deny waiver requests in the following circumstances: [3]

- Noncitizens with criminal histories and serious immigration violations;
- Noncitizens who pose a national security or public safety risk;
- Noncitizens determined to have committed fraud or misrepresentation; or
- For any other reasons that USCIS deems necessary and appropriate.

B. Determination of U Nonimmigrant Status for Petitioners Placed on the Waiting List

Although officers fully evaluate a petition for placement on the waiting list, officers conduct an additional review of the petition and update background checks to establish continuing eligibility before approving the petition when a visa becomes available in a subsequent fiscal year.

If the principal petitioner or qualifying family member has failed to establish one of the eligibility requirements, USCIS issues a Request for Evidence (RFE) to the petitioner. Petitioners have the opportunity to submit additional information to address deficiencies or concerns identified in the RFE.

Placement on the waiting list does not guarantee a grant of U nonimmigrant status. USCIS may deny a petition for U nonimmigrant status if USCIS determines the petitioner is ineligible. For example, officers may deny a petition for U nonimmigrant status where acts of criminality or immigration violations occurring after a petitioner was placed on the waiting list trigger inadmissibility grounds and USCIS does not favorably exercise its discretion to waive those grounds. Officers may also deny a petition where a certifier has withdrawn the Form I-918, Supplement B after USCIS placed the petitioner on the waiting list.

C. Order of Adjudication

Neither Congress nor USCIS anticipated filings to significantly exceed the statutory cap every year. The waiting list was first created as an intermediate mechanism for a small number of petitioners who could not be granted U nonimmigrant status in a fiscal year due to the limited number of visa numbers allotted under the statutory cap.^[4] The BFD process was created as an additional mechanism to provide petitioners with bona fide petitions with employment authorization and deferred action, which are benefits equal to those accorded to petitioners placed on the waiting list.

Although current regulatory language notes the prioritization of petitioners placed on the waiting list for grants of U nonimmigrant status under the statutory cap as visas become available,^[5] the regulation also clearly envisions “the oldest petitions receiving the highest priority” for such visa numbers.

To best reconcile these regulatory provisions with the BFD policy, and to maintain fairness between petitioners placed on the waiting list and petitioners issued BFD EADs, USCIS prioritizes all petitions for adjudication of U nonimmigrant status under the statutory cap in the order they were received, ensuring older petitions maintain their priority over newer petitions.

Consequently, when U nonimmigrant visas become available each fiscal year, USCIS draws from both BFD recipients and waitlisted petitioners, in order of filing date with the oldest filings receiving highest priority, to meet the statutory cap.

D. Decision

1. Approval

Petitioners Living Inside the United States

Upon approval, principal petitioners and their qualifying family members living in the United States receive a grant of U nonimmigrant status, valid for a period of no more than 4 years.

Principal Petitioners

After USCIS approves U nonimmigrant status for a principal petitioner living in the United States, USCIS notifies the petitioner of such approval by issuing a Notice of Action (Form I-797). USCIS also includes an Arrival-Departure Record (Form I-94), indicating U-1 nonimmigrant status.

Principal petitioners living in the United States receive employment authorization incident to a grant of U nonimmigrant status.^[6] However, petitioners living outside the United States do not receive an initial employment authorization document until they have obtained a U nonimmigrant visa at a U.S. consulate or embassy and have been admitted to the United States as a U nonimmigrant.

Qualifying Family Members

USCIS may not approve U nonimmigrant status for a qualifying family member unless USCIS has granted the principal petitioner U nonimmigrant status.

When USCIS approves a Petition for Qualifying Family Member of a U-1 Recipient (Form I-918, Supplement A) for a qualifying family member living in the United States, it concurrently grants that petitioner U-2, U-3, U-4, or U-5 nonimmigrant status.

USCIS issues the Form I-797 regarding the approval of U-2, U-3, U-4, or U-5 nonimmigrant status to the principal petitioner. USCIS also issues a Form I-94 indicating U-2, U-3, U-4, or U-5 nonimmigrant status.

Applicant	Code of Admission
Principal Petitioner	U-1
Spouse of Principal Petitioner	U-2
Unmarried Child under the age of 21 of Principal Petitioner	U-3
Parent of Principal Petitioner (who is under the age of 21)	U-4
Unmarried Sibling under the age of 18 of Principal Petitioner (who is under the age of 21)	U-5

Qualifying family members must submit a fee or a Request for Fee Waiver (Form I-912) for an Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765) associated with a grant of U nonimmigrant status.^[7]

Petitioners Living Outside the United States

After USCIS approves U nonimmigrant status for a principal petitioner or qualifying family member living outside the United States, USCIS notifies the principal petitioner of such approval on Form I-797. USCIS also forwards the notice to the U.S. Department of State (DOS).

DOS communicates the approval to the U.S. embassy or consulate with jurisdiction over the area in which the principal petitioner or qualifying family member is located. DOS communicates the approval to the appropriate port of entry for principal petitioners or qualifying family members who are from countries that are exempt from visa requirements.^[8] The approved petitioners and qualifying family members may then seek admission to the United States as U nonimmigrants at a designated port of entry.

2. Denial

USCIS provides written notification to the principal petitioner, listing the reasons for the denial of a Petition for U nonimmigrant status (Form I-918), and a Form I-918 Supplement A, where applicable.^[9] A principal petitioner may request USCIS to reconsider the denial by filing a Notice of Appeal or Motion (Form I-290B).

Alternatively, the principal petitioner may appeal the denial to the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO).

[¹⁰] If a principal petitioner pursues an appeal, the denial of U nonimmigrant status is not deemed administratively final until the AAO issues a decision affirming the denial.

The denial of a petition for U nonimmigrant status automatically lifts any stay of removal based on the U nonimmigrant status petition as of the date the denial becomes administratively final for a principal petitioner or qualifying family member subject to an order of removal, deportation, or exclusion.

Footnotes

[¹] Congress granted DHS the discretionary authority to waive most inadmissibility grounds for a noncitizen seeking U nonimmigrant status if it is in the public or national interest to do so. See INA 212(d)(3)(A)(ii). See INA 212(d)(14) (authorizing the waiver of any inadmissibility ground except for participation in Nazi persecution, genocide, or the commission of any act of torture or extrajudicial killing). See Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications, Chapter 8, Discretionary Analysis [1 USCIS-PM E.8].

[²] See INA 212(a).

[³] See 8 CFR 212.17.

[⁴] See 72 FR 53013 (PDF), 53033 (Sept. 17, 2007) (estimating USCIS would receive 12,000 principal petitions per year). See Number of Form I-918, Petition for U Nonimmigrant Status By Fiscal Year, Quarter, and Case Status (Fiscal Years 2009-2020) (PDF, 112.43 KB).

[⁵] See 8 CFR 214.14(d)(2) (“After U-1 nonimmigrant status has been issued to qualifying petitioners on the waiting list, any remaining U-1 nonimmigrant numbers for that fiscal year will be issued to new qualifying petitioners in the order that the petitions were properly filed.”).

[⁶] See 8 CFR 274a.12(c).

[⁷] See 8 CFR 274a.12(a)(20).

[⁸] See DOS’s Visa Waiver Program webpage.

[⁹] See 8 CFR 103.3(a)(1).

[¹⁰] See 8 CFR 103.3.

Chapter 8 - Post-Adjudicative Matters [Reserved]

Part D - Violence Against Women Act

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

The Violence Against Women Act of 1994 (VAWA) amended the nation's immigration laws and included a broad range of criminal, civil, and health-related provisions.^[1] VAWA addressed the unique issues faced by victims of domestic violence and abuse and provided certain noncitizen family members of abusive U.S. citizens and lawful permanent residents (LPRs) the ability to self-petition for immigrant classification without the abuser's knowledge, consent, or participation in the immigration process. This allowed victims to seek both safety and independence from their abuser.

Spouses, children, and parents of U.S. citizens and spouses and children of LPRs may file a self-petition for immigrant classification with USCIS. A noncitizen filing the self-petition is generally known as a VAWA self-petitioner.^[2] If USCIS approves the self-petition, VAWA self-petitioners may then seek an immigrant visa from outside the United States or apply for adjustment of status inside the United States.^[3]

B. Background

Under the family-based immigration process, U.S. citizens and LPRs may petition for certain categories of relatives to immigrate to the United States. This process generally requires U.S. citizens and LPRs to first file a family-based petition with USCIS on behalf of their noncitizen family member. If USCIS approves the petition, the family member is then eligible to apply for LPR status.

Because the family-based immigration process requires U.S. citizens and LPRs to petition for their noncitizen family member, they have control over the petitioning process. Some U.S. citizens and LPRs use their control over this process as a tool to further abuse the noncitizen, threatening to withhold or withdraw the petition in order to control, coerce, and intimidate their family members. This allows abusive U.S. citizens and LPRs to perpetuate their abuse, and their family members may be afraid to report them to law enforcement or leave the abusive situation, as they may be dependent on the U.S. citizen or LPR to obtain or maintain their immigration status.

With the passage of VAWA, Congress created a path for victims of domestic violence and abuse to independently petition for themselves, or self-petition, for immigrant classification. The purpose of the immigration amendments in VAWA was to give noncitizens who have been abused by their U.S. citizen or LPR relative the opportunity to independently seek immigrant classification without the abuser's participation or knowledge. Allowing victims to self-petition means that they are no longer dependent on their abusive family member to obtain immigration status, thereby removing at least one barrier to ending the abuse.

VAWA was enacted into law as Section IV of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994.^[4] Since its passage in 1994, there have been three reauthorizations of the statute (in 2000, 2005, and 2013), all of which expanded and added new protections for VAWA self-petitioners.^[5]

The table below provides a summary of key provisions related to self-petitions in VAWA and its subsequent reauthorizations.

Key Provisions of VAWA and Subsequent Reauthorizations

Laws	Key Provisions for VAWA Self-Petitions
Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 ^[6] (The VAWA provisions of this law are known as the “Violence Against Women Act of 1994” or VAWA 1994)	<ul style="list-style-type: none">Created self-petitioning provisions for abused spouses and children of U.S. citizens and LPRsEstablished the “any credible evidence” standard
Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act of 2000 (VAWA 2000) ^[7]	<ul style="list-style-type: none">Removed the extreme hardship eligibility requirementRemoved the requirement that self-petitioners be married to the abuser at the time of filingAllowed continued eligibility in certain circumstances despite the death of the U.S. citizen, termination of the marriage, or loss of the abuser’s U.S. citizenship or LPR statusCreated a definition for “intended spouse” and added provisions for self-petitioners whose marriage was not legitimate solely due to the abuser’s bigamyAllowed the filing of self-petitions from outside the United StatesSpecified the authority to consider deferred action and employment authorization for certain self-petitionersAllowed certain children to remain eligible for benefits despite turning 21 years old

Laws	Key Provisions for VAWA Self-Petitions
	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Allowed self-petitioners to adjust status within the United States • Added provisions allowing exemptions and waivers for certain grounds of inadmissibility
Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005^[8] Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005 Technical Amendments (These two laws are collectively referred to as VAWA 2005)^[9]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Created a uniform definition for “VAWA self-petitioner” • Created self-petitioning provisions for abused parents of U.S. citizen sons and daughters 21 years of age or older • Provided work authorization to noncitizens with approved self-petitions • Allowed abused children to file a self-petition until age 25 in certain circumstances • Extended protections for children to remain eligible for benefits despite turning 21 years old • Removed the 2-year legal custody and joint residency requirement for abused adopted children • Strengthened confidentiality protections for self-petitioners
Violence Against Women Reauthorization Act of 2013 (VAWA 2013)^[10]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Allowed continued eligibility for derivative children where the self-petitioner died • Exempted self-petitioners from the public charge ground of inadmissibility

C. Legal Authorities

- INA 101(a)(51) – Definition of VAWA self-petitioner
- INA 204 – Procedure for granting immigrant status

- 8 CFR 204.2 – Petitions for relatives, widows and widowers, and abused spouses and children^[11]
- 8 U.S.C. 1367 – Penalties for disclosure of information

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Title IV of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994, Pub. L. 103-322 (PDF), 108 Stat. 1796, 1902 (September 13, 1994).

[^ 2] See INA 101(a)(51). Although INA 101(a)(51) includes several benefits under the term “VAWA self-petitioner,” this part focuses on self-petitions filed under INA 204(a).

[^ 3] See INA 201(b)(2)(A)(i). See INA 203(a)(2)(A). See INA 245(a).

[^ 4] See Title IV of Pub. L. 103-322 (PDF), 108 Stat. 1796, 1902 (September 13, 1994).

[^ 5] See Title V of the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act of 2000, Pub. L. 106-386 (PDF), 114 Stat. 1464, 1518 (October 28, 2000). See Title VIII of the Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005, Pub. L. 109-162 (PDF), 119 Stat. 2960, 3053 (January 5, 2006). See Section 6 of the Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005 Technical Amendments, Pub. L. 109-271 (PDF), 120 Stat. 750, 762 (August 12, 2006). See Title VIII of the Violence Against Women Reauthorization Act of 2013, Pub. L. 113-4 (PDF), 127 Stat. 54, 110 (March 7, 2013).

[^ 6] See Pub. L. 103-322 (PDF), 108 Stat. 1796, 1902 (September 13, 1994).

[^ 7] See Pub. L. 106-386 (PDF), 114 Stat. 1464, 1518 (October 28, 2000).

[^ 8] See Pub. L. 109-162 (PDF), 119 Stat. 2960, 3053 (January 5, 2006).

[^ 9] See Pub. L. 109-271 (PDF), 120 Stat. 750, 762 (August 12, 2006).

[^ 10] See Pub. L. 113-4 (PDF), 127 Stat. 54, 110 (March 7, 2013).

[^ 11] The VAWA regulations at 8 CFR 204.2 were promulgated in March 1996 and have not been updated to include superseding statutory provisions. Note that some of the regulatory provisions may no longer apply.

Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements and Evidence

The Violence Against Women Act of 1994 (VAWA) and its subsequent reauthorizations amended the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) to allow abused spouses and children of U.S. citizens and lawful permanent residents (LPRs) and abused parents of U.S. citizen sons and daughters 21 years of age or older to file their own self-petition for immigrant classification.^[1] Noncitizens filing self-petitions are referred to as VAWA self-petitioners or self-petitioners in this part.^[2]

The VAWA self-petition is filed on the Petition for Amerasian, Widow(er), or Special Immigrant (Form I-360).^[3] An approved Form I-360 provides self-petitioners with immigrant classification as either immediate relatives or under a family-based preference category and allows them to apply for LPR status.^[4]

A. General Overview of Eligibility Requirements

Self-petitioners must file a Form I-360 and submit evidence to establish, by a preponderance of the evidence, that they meet the general eligibility requirements outlined in the table below.^[5]

General Eligibility Requirements for VAWA Self-Petitioners

The self-petitioner must have a qualifying relationship to an abusive U.S. citizen or LPR relative as the:

- Spouse, intended spouse, or former spouse of a U.S. citizen or LPR;
- Child of a U.S. citizen or LPR; or
- Parent of a U.S. citizen son or daughter that is 21 years of age or older.

The self-petitioner must have been married in good faith (for self-petitioning spouses only).

The self-petitioner is eligible for immigrant classification as an immediate relative or under a family-based preference category.^[6]

The self-petitioner was subjected to battery or extreme cruelty perpetrated by the U.S. citizen or LPR during the qualifying relationship (self-petitioning spouses may also be eligible based on the battery or extreme cruelty subjected on their child).

The self-petitioner resides or resided with the abusive U.S. citizen or LPR.

The self-petitioner is a person of good moral character.^[7]

General Eligibility Requirements for VAWA Self-Petitioners

General Evidentiary Requirements^[8]

While self-petitioners are encouraged to submit primary evidence, when possible, USCIS must consider any credible evidence relevant to the petition.^[9] The self-petitioner may, but is not required to, demonstrate that primary or secondary evidence is not available.^[10] A petition may not be denied for failure to submit particular evidence. The petition may only be denied on evidentiary grounds if the evidence submitted is not credible or otherwise does not establish eligibility.

The determination of what evidence is credible and the weight to be given that evidence is within the sole discretion of USCIS.^[11] As with all petitions and applications for an immigration benefit, a self-petitioner must remain eligible to receive a benefit under VAWA at the time of filing through final adjudication.^[12]

B. Qualifying Relationship

Self-petitioners must demonstrate a qualifying relationship to an abusive U.S. citizen or LPR to be eligible for VAWA benefits.^[13] Self-petitioners who have a qualifying relationship include:

- An abused spouse of a U.S. citizen or LPR or a spouse of a U.S. citizen or LPR whose child was abused by the U.S. citizen or LPR (self-petitioning spouse)^[14];
- An abused child of a U.S. citizen or LPR (self-petitioning child); or
- An abused parent of a U.S. citizen son or daughter 21 years of age or older (self-petitioning parent).^[15]

To establish a qualifying relationship, the self-petitioner must submit evidence to prove the requisite familial relationship to the abuser as well as evidence of the abuser's U.S. citizenship or LPR status.^[16]

1. Abuser's U.S. Citizenship or Lawful Permanent Resident Status

The self-petitioner's abusive qualifying family member must generally be a U.S. citizen or LPR when the self-petition is filed.^[17] There are certain exceptions, however, where self-petitioners may preserve their eligibility in cases where abusers have lost or renounced their U.S. citizenship or LPR status for a reason that was related to an incident of abuse.^[18] Changes to the abuser's U.S.

citizenship or LPR status after the self-petitioner files the self-petition do not adversely impact approving a pending self-petition or the validity of an approved self-petition.^[19]

Primary evidence to demonstrate the abuser's U.S. citizenship includes, but is not limited to:

- A birth certificate (or legible photocopy) issued by a civil authority that establishes the abuser's birth in the United States;
- A copy of an unexpired U.S. passport issued initially for a full 10-year period to the abuser over the age of 18 at the time of issuance;
- A copy of an unexpired U.S. passport issued initially for a full 5-year period to the abuser under the age of 18 at the time of issuance;
- A statement executed by a U.S. consular officer certifying the abuser to be a U.S. citizen and the bearer of a currently valid U.S. passport;
- The abuser's Certificate of Naturalization or Certificate of Citizenship or a copy of either document; or
- The abuser's Report of Birth Abroad of a Citizen of the United States (Department of State Form FS-240).^[20]

Other examples of evidence to establish the U.S. citizenship of the abuser may include a receipt or approval notice of a Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130) filed by the abuser for an immediate relative category, the abuser's A-Number with evidence of naturalization, or information on a marriage license or certificate showing the abuser's birth in the United States.

Primary evidence to demonstrate the abuser's LPR status is a copy of the abuser's Permanent Resident Card (Form I-551) or other proof from the DHS reflecting LPR status.^[21] Other examples of evidence to establish the abuser's LPR status include but are not limited to:

- A copy of the pages of the abuser's passport with visas and entry stamps showing name and immigration status; or
- The abuser's A-Number with verification of status.

If self-petitioners are unable to provide documentary evidence of the abuser's U.S. citizenship or LPR status, they should provide some identifying information for the abusive U.S. citizen or LPR, such as a name, place of birth, country of birth, date of birth, or Social Security number. USCIS uses this information to conduct a search of DHS records to attempt to verify the abuser's citizenship or immigration status.^[22] If USCIS is unable to identify a record as relating to the abuser or the record does not establish the abuser's citizenship or LPR status, the officer should adjudicate the self-petition based on the information submitted by the self-petitioner.^[23]

An abused spouse or child of a U.S. national may also be eligible for VAWA benefits, as a U.S. national is accorded the same rights as an LPR.^[24] USCIS treats a self-petitioning spouse or child of a U.S. national as a self-petitioning spouse or child of an LPR when adjudicating the self-petition.

2. Self-Petitioning Spouse

Generally, to establish a qualifying relationship, self-petitioning spouses must have a legally valid marriage to their abusive U.S. citizen or LPR spouse at the time the self-petition is filed.^[25] In certain circumstances, however, self-petitioning spouses may continue to be eligible for VAWA benefits if the marriage was terminated due to divorce or death prior to filing the self-petition.^[26] If self-petitioning spouses divorce their abusive U.S. citizen or LPR spouse after the self-petition is filed, it does not adversely impact approving a pending self-petition or the validity of an approved self-petition.^[27]

USCIS generally considers a marriage as legally valid according to the laws of the place where the marriage was celebrated.^[28] However, if a marriage is valid in the country where celebrated but considered contrary to U.S. public policy, the marriage is not recognized as valid for immigration purposes.^[29] For example, incestuous and plural marriages generally are considered contrary to U.S. public policy. A common law marriage may be considered a legally valid marriage for the purpose of establishing VAWA eligibility.

Examples of evidence of a legal marriage include, but are not limited to:

- A marriage certificate issued by civil authorities;^[30]
- Common law marriage announcements or certificates;
- Affidavits and photos of the wedding ceremony;
- Demonstrating a common law marriage if no certificate or announcement is available in states where common law marriages may be contracted; or
- Any other credible evidence to establish a marital relationship.

If self-petitioners were previously married, they must submit evidence to establish that all of their prior marriages were legally terminated, and that they were legally free to enter a valid marriage with the abuser.^[31] If the U.S. citizen or LPR spouse was previously married, self-petitioners should submit evidence, if available, to establish that all of their spouse's prior marriages were legally terminated.^[32] If the U.S. citizen or LPR spouse's prior marriages were not legally terminated, however, self-petitioners may continue to be eligible as intended spouses.^[33]

A civil authority must have issued the marriage termination document (such as a divorce decree or an annulment) for it to be considered valid. Officers should refer to the U.S. Department of State's Foreign Affairs Manual and U.S. Visa: Reciprocity and Civil Documents by Country webpage for country-specific information regarding the legal termination of any marriage that occurred or was terminated outside the United States.

Note that if a divorce decree requires a waiting or revocable period that has not concluded (for example, a "nisi" period in a domestic decree or an "idda" period in a foreign decree), the decree is not considered final and the marriage has not been legally terminated.^[34]

Examples of evidence of a legally terminated marriage may include, but are not limited to:

- A final decree of divorce;
- A decree of annulment;
- A death certificate; or
- Any other credible evidence to establish a terminated marriage.

Intended Spouse

VAWA protects "intended spouses" who believed that they entered into a valid marriage, but the marriage was invalid solely due to the abusive U.S. citizen or LPR's bigamy or polygamy.^[35] To be eligible as intended spouses, self-petitioners must have believed that they entered into a legally valid marriage with the U.S. citizen or LPR. Therefore, USCIS focuses its inquiry on the intent of the self-petitioner and not on the intent of the abuser.

To demonstrate a qualifying relationship to the abusive U.S. citizen or LPR as an intended spouse, the self-petitioner must submit evidence to establish the following requirements:

- The self-petitioner believed a legal marriage was created with the U.S. citizen or LPR spouse who was not already married and therefore free to enter into a valid marriage;
- A marriage ceremony was actually performed;
- The requirements for the establishment of a bona fide marriage were otherwise met; and
- The apparent marriage between the self-petitioner and the U.S. citizen or LPR is not legitimate solely because of the U.S. citizen's or LPR's other, preexisting marriage.^[36]

USCIS considers a marriage certificate issued by civil authorities in the United States or abroad to be evidence of the self-petitioner's intent. If self-petitioners were previously married, they must submit evidence to demonstrate that all their prior marriages were legally terminated. Evidence of the termination of all the abusive U.S. citizen's or LPR's prior marriages, however, is not required to establish eligibility as an intended spouse.

Intended spouses in common law marriages are eligible as VAWA self-petitioners as long as they can demonstrate the requirements listed above, including that a marriage ceremony was actually performed.

Self-Petitioning Spouse Whose Child was Abused

A spouse of an abusive U.S. citizen or LPR is eligible to self-petition based on abuse committed by the U.S. citizen or LPR against the spouse's child.^[37] The abused child does not need to be the abuser's child. If the self-petition is based on a claim that the self-petitioner's child was battered or subjected to extreme cruelty committed by the U.S. citizen or LPR, the self-petitioner should submit evidence of a relationship to the abused child, such as the child's birth certificate or other evidence demonstrating the relationship (in addition to demonstrating the required marital relationship to the abuser).^[38]

3. Self-Petitioning Child

Self-petitioning children may establish a qualifying relationship to their abusive U.S. citizen or LPR parent if they are the biological child, stepchild, or adopted child of the abuser.^[39] The child must be unmarried and less than 21 years old when the self-petition is filed in order to be considered a child for immigration purposes.^[40] In certain circumstances, children who turn 21 years old prior to filing the self-petition or while the self-petition is pending may remain eligible for VAWA benefits.^[41] The self-petitioner must remain unmarried, however, at the time of filing and when the self-petition is approved.^[42] To be considered unmarried, the self-petitioner must either never have been married or have legally terminated all prior marriages.

Termination of the abuser's parental rights or a change in legal custody does not alter the child's eligibility to self-petition, provided the petitioner meets the definition of the term "child" under immigration law and meets all other eligibility requirements.^[43]

Biological Child

Self-petitioning children may demonstrate a qualifying relationship if they are the biological child of the abusive U.S. citizen or LPR parent. If the U.S. citizen or LPR parent utilized Assisted Reproductive Technology, however, and does not have a genetic relationship to the self-petitioning child, the child may still be able to demonstrate a qualifying parent-child relationship in certain circumstances.^[44] If the child did not acquire U.S. citizenship at birth and the abusive U.S. citizen or LPR parent is the biological mother of the self-petitioning child, the primary evidence to demonstrate a qualifying relationship is the child's birth certificate issued by civil authorities listing the mother's name.^[45] If the mother's name on the birth certificate is different from the name listed on the self-petition, the self-petitioning child may submit evidence of the name change.^[46]

Other examples of evidence of a biological relationship may include, but are not limited to:

- A court decree of paternity;
- A custody or child support order;
- A baptismal certificate (or other religious document) with the seal of the religious authority showing the date and place of birth and the baptism (or similar religious ceremony) and the name(s) of the parent(s);
- Early school records showing the date of admission to the school, the child's date and place of birth, and the name(s) of the parent(s);
- Medical records, such as a hospital birth record that names the parent(s) of the child;
- Census record, such as a state or federal census record showing the name, place of birth, and date of birth or age of each person listed; or
- Any other credible evidence of the relationship.

Self-petitioning children whose abusive U.S. citizen or LPR parent is their biological father must provide evidence demonstrating that they were either:

- Born in wedlock;
- Legitimated, or were born out of wedlock but later placed in the same legal position as a child born in wedlock; or
- Born out of wedlock but have or have had an ongoing bona fide relationship with the abusive father.^[47]

For children born in wedlock, self-petitioners must submit evidence of their biological relationship to their father, the marriage of the child's parents, and evidence of the legal termination of all prior marriages, if applicable.^[48]

Examples of evidence may include:

- The child's birth certificate issued by civil authorities to show a biological relationship;
- A civilly-issued marriage certificate of the parents;

- Common law marriage announcements or certificates conforming to the legal requirements of the location where the marriage took place;
- Proof of the legal termination of the parents' prior marriages, if any, issued by civil authorities; or
- Any other available evidence.^[49]

Children who were legitimated must provide evidence of a biological relationship to the father and evidence of the child's legitimization.^[50] Generally, legitimization is governed by the law of the place of residence of the parent or child.^[51] Self-petitioners may generally establish legitimization by showing that their parents married at any time before they turned 18 years old.^[52]

Children who were born out of wedlock and have not been legitimated must provide evidence that a bona fide parent-child relationship with the abusive biological father has been established.^[53] Evidence should establish more than merely a biological relationship. A bona fide parent-child relationship should include emotional or financial ties (or both).^[54] There should be evidence that the father and child actually lived together, that the father openly held the child out as being his own, that the father provided for some or all of the child's needs, or that the father's behavior in general evidenced a genuine relationship with the child.^[55]

Examples of evidence to establish a bona fide parent-child relationship may include, but are not limited to:

- Money order receipts or cancelled checks showing the father's financial support of the child;
- The father's income tax returns, medical records, or insurance policies listing the child as a dependent;
- School, social services, or other state or federal government agency records for the child listing the father as a guardian or family contact;
- Correspondence between the parties;
- Notarized affidavits of friends, neighbors, school officials, or other associates with knowledge of the relationship; or
- Any other credible evidence of a bona fide parent-child relationship.

The following table provides a summary of the types of evidence required to demonstrate a qualifying relationship for self-petitioning children who have a biological relationship to their abusive U.S. citizen or LPR parent.

Child	Abusive Parent	Required Evidence^[56]
Child	Biological mother	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Evidence of the biological relationship
Child born in wedlock	Biological father	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Evidence of the biological relationship; Evidence of the marriage of the child's parents; and Evidence of the legal termination of all prior marriages, if any
Legitimated child	Biological father	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Evidence of the biological relationship, and Evidence of the child's legitimation
Child born out of wedlock	Biological father	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Evidence of the biological relationship, and Evidence that a bona fide parent-child relationship has been established between the child and the abusive parent

Stepchild

Self-petitioning children may demonstrate a qualifying relationship if they have a step relationship with the abusive U.S. citizen or LPR parent. A step relationship is created when a child's biological or legal parent marries a person who is not the child's other biological or legal parent before the child's 18th birthday.^[57] If the marriage that created the step relationship is terminated due to divorce prior to filing, the stepchild remains eligible to self-petition.^[58] If the marriage is terminated due to the death of the biological or legal parent prior to filing, the stepchild may remain eligible to self-petition if a family relationship has continued to exist as a matter of fact between the stepparent and stepchild at the time of filing.^[59]

To demonstrate a qualifying relationship as a stepchild of an abusive U.S. citizen or LPR stepparent, self-petitioning children must submit evidence of:

- The relationship between themselves and their biological or legal parent;

- The marriage between their biological or legal parent and the abusive stepparent before they turned 18 years old; and
- The termination of all prior marriages for both the biological or legal parent and stepparent, if applicable.^[60]

Examples of evidence that demonstrate a qualifying step relationship between a self-petitioning child and an abusive stepparent may include, but are not limited to:

- The child's birth certificate issued by civil authorities;
- A civilly-issued marriage certificate of the child's biological or legal parent and stepparent showing marriage before the stepchild turned 18 years old;
- Common law marriage announcements or certificates;
- A final decree of divorce or annulment; or
- Any other credible evidence of a qualifying step relationship.^[61]

Intended Spouse Provision and Self-Petitioning Children

The INA does not extend the intended spouse provision for self-petitioning spouses to self-petitioning children.^[62] Therefore, if the marriage that created the step relationship is not legally valid due to bigamy or polygamy on the part of the stepparent, the child is not eligible to self-petition. However, children can be included as derivatives on their biological or legal parent's self-petition if the biological or legal parent can establish a qualifying relationship with the abusive stepparent under the intended spouse provisions.

Adopted Child

Generally, for an adoption to be the basis for granting immigration benefits, an adoption must comply with certain statutory requirements. In the family-based petition process, the statute requires that the adoptee beneficiary has been in the legal custody of and jointly resided with the adoptive parent(s) for at least 2 years.^[63] Abused adopted children, however, are not required to demonstrate that the U.S. citizen or LPR had 2 years of legal custody and 2 years of joint residence with them in order to be eligible for a VAWA self-petition.^[64]

Self-petitioning adopted children may demonstrate a qualifying relationship to a U.S. citizen or LPR parent if they submit evidence of an adoption that is valid for immigration purposes.^[65] Generally, for an adoptive relationship to be considered valid for the family-based petition process, the U.S. citizen or LPR must have legally adopted the child while the child was under age 16.^[66] In certain circumstances, the adoption may take place prior to the child attaining 18 years old if the sibling exception applies.^[67] Evidence of an adoption that may demonstrate a qualifying adoptive relationship may include a copy of the legal adoption decree or order issued by the appropriate civil authority or other relevant evidence that an adoptive relationship is valid.^[68]

4. Self-Petitioning Parent

Self-petitioning parents must demonstrate a qualifying relationship to their abusive U.S. citizen son or daughter who is 21 years of age or older.^[69] The INA defines a “child” as an unmarried person who is under 21 years of age.^[70] Therefore, the abusive son or daughter must have qualified as the child of the abused parent before turning 21 years of age but must be 21 years of age or older at the time of filing.^[71] Parents of abusive LPR sons and daughters are not eligible for VAWA benefits.

To establish a qualifying relationship, a self-petitioning parent must be a biological parent, stepparent, or adoptive parent of an abusive U.S. citizen son or daughter.^[72] The requirements for self-petitioning parents are similar to the requirements for self-petitioning children to demonstrate the required parent-child relationship.

Biological Parent

Self-petitioning parents may demonstrate a qualifying relationship if they are the biological parent of the abusive U.S. citizen son or daughter. If the self-petitioning parent utilized Assisted Reproductive Technology, however, and does not have a genetic relationship to the U.S. citizen or LPR child, the parent may still be able to demonstrate a qualifying parent-child relationship in certain circumstances.^[73] If the self-petitioning parent is the biological mother of the abusive U.S. citizen son or daughter, the primary evidence to demonstrate the qualifying relationship is the child’s birth certificate issued by civil authorities listing the mother’s name.^[74] If the mother’s name on the birth certificate is different from the name as reflected on the self-petition, the self-petitioner may submit evidence of the name change.^[75]

If primary evidence is unavailable, other examples of evidence of a biological relationship may include, but are not limited to:

- A court decree of paternity;
- Custody or child support orders;
- A baptismal certificate (or other religious document) with the seal of the religious authority showing the date and place of birth and baptism (or similar religious ceremony) and the names of the parents;
- Early school records showing the date of admission to the school, the child’s date and place of birth, and the name(s) of the parent(s);

- Medical records, such as the hospital birth record that names the parent(s) of the child;
- Census record, such as a state or federal census record showing the name, place of birth, and date of birth or age of each person listed; or
- Any other credible evidence of the relationship.

If the self-petitioning parent is the biological father of the abusive U.S. citizen son or daughter, then the parent must provide evidence demonstrating that the child was either:

- Born in wedlock;
- Legitimated, or was born out of wedlock but later placed in the same legal position as a child born in wedlock; or
- Born out of wedlock but has or had an ongoing bona fide relationship with the abused parent.^[76]

For fathers whose abusive U.S. citizen sons or daughters were born in wedlock, self-petitioners must submit evidence of their biological relationship to their child, the marriage between the parents of the child, and evidence of the legal termination of all prior marriages, if applicable.^[77]

Examples of such evidence may include:

- A birth certificate for the child issued by civil authorities to show a biological relationship;
- A civilly-issued marriage certificate of the parents;
- Common law marriage announcements or certificates conforming to the legal requirements of the location of the marriage;
- Proof of the legal termination of the parents' prior marriages, if any, issued by civil authorities; or
- Any other available evidence.^[78]

If the child was legitimated, the father must provide evidence of a biological relationship to the child and evidence of the child's legitimization.^[79] Generally, legitimization is governed by the law of the place of residence of the parent or child.^[80] Self-petitioners may generally establish legitimization by showing that they married the child's other parent at any time before the child turned 18 years old.^[81]

Fathers whose children were born out of wedlock and have not been legitimated must provide evidence that a bona fide parent-child relationship has been established with the child.^[82] Evidence should establish more than merely a biological relationship. A bona fide parent-child relationship includes emotional or financial ties (or both) or a genuine concern or interest for the child's support, instruction, and general welfare.^[83] There should be evidence that the father and child actually lived together, that the father openly held the child out as being his own, that the father provided for some or all of the child's needs, or that the father's behavior in general evidenced a genuine concern for the child.^[84]

Examples of evidence to establish a bona fide parent-child relationship may include, but are not limited to:

- Money order receipts or cancelled checks showing the father's financial support of the child;
- The father's income tax returns, medical records, or insurance policies listing the child as a dependent;
- School, social services, or other state or federal government agency records for the child listing the father as a guardian or family contact;
- Correspondence between the parties;
- Notarized affidavits of friends, neighbors, school officials, or other associates with knowledge of the relationship; or
- Any other credible evidence of a bona fide parent-child relationship.

The following table provides a summary of the types of evidence sufficient to demonstrate a qualifying relationship for self-petitioning parents who have a biological relationship to their abusive U.S. citizen son or daughter.

Self-Petitioning Parent: Required Evidence for Biological Parents

Abusive Son or Daughter	Parent	Required Evidence^[85]
Son or daughter	Biological mother	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Evidence of the biological relationship
Son or daughter was born in wedlock	Biological father	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Evidence of the biological relationship;• Evidence of the marriage of the child's parents; and• Evidence of the legal termination of all prior marriages, if any

Abusive Son or Daughter	Parent	Required Evidence^[85]
Legitimated son or daughter	Biological father	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Evidence of the biological relationship, and Evidence of the child's legitimation
Son or daughter was born out of wedlock	Biological father	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Evidence of the biological relationship, and Evidence that a bona fide parent-child relationship has been established between the child and the parent

Stepparent

Self-petitioning parents may demonstrate a qualifying relationship if they have a stepparent relationship with the abusive U.S. citizen son or daughter. A step relationship is created if the abused parent married the son or daughter's other biological or legal parent before the son or daughter's 18th birthday.^[86] If the marriage that created the step relationship is terminated due to divorce prior to filing, the stepparent remains eligible to self-petition.^[87] If the marriage is terminated due to the death of the biological or legal parent prior to filing, the stepparent may remain eligible to self-petition if a family relationship has continued to exist as a matter of fact between the stepparent and stepson or stepdaughter at the time of filing.^[88]

To demonstrate a qualifying stepparent relationship, self-petitioning parents must submit evidence of:

- The relationship between the biological or legal parent and the abusive son or daughter;
- Their marriage with the stepson or stepdaughter's biological or legal parent; and
- The termination all prior marriages for both themselves and their spouse (biological or legal parent), if applicable.^[89]

Examples of evidence that demonstrate a qualifying step relationship between a self-petitioning stepparent and an abusive U.S. son or daughter may include, but are not limited to:

- The son or daughter's birth certificate issued by civil authorities;
- A civilly-issued marriage certificate of the stepparent and the son or daughter's biological or legal parent showing marriage before the stepson or stepdaughter turned 18 years old;

- Common law marriage announcements or certificates;
- A final decree of divorce or annulment; or
- Any other credible evidence of a qualifying step relationship.^[90]

Adoptive Parent

Self-petitioning parents may demonstrate a qualifying relationship if they have an adoptive relationship with their U.S. citizen son or daughter.^[91] Generally, for an adoptive relationship to be the basis for granting immigration benefits, the adoption must be valid for immigration purposes^[92] and comply with certain statutory requirements.^[93]

For the adoptive relationship to be considered valid under INA 101(b)(1)(E), a child generally must be adopted while under age 16.^[94] Unlike abused adopted children, abused adoptive parents must demonstrate 2 years of legal custody and 2 years of joint residence with their adopted U.S. citizen son or daughter in order to establish a qualifying adoptive relationship.^[95] Self-petitioning parents may demonstrate a qualifying adoptive relationship by submitting evidence of:

- An adoption that is valid for immigration purposes;
- 2 years of legal custody of the adopted son or daughter; and
- 2 years of joint residence with the adopted son or daughter.^[96]

Self-petitioning parents may also establish an adoptive parent-child relationship under INA 101(b)(1)(F) or INA 101(b)(1)(G).^[97]

C. Good Faith Marriage (Self-Petitioning Spouses Only)

A self-petitioning spouse's eligibility for the self-petition requires more than showing a legal marital relationship to a U.S. citizen or LPR. The self-petitioner must also establish that the marriage was entered into in good faith and was not entered into for the purpose of evading immigration laws.^[98]

To demonstrate a good faith marriage, self-petitioning spouses must show that at the time of the marriage, they intended to establish a life together with the U.S. citizen or LPR. USCIS does not deny a self-petition, however, solely because the spouses are not living together, or the marriage is no longer viable.^[99] Additionally, separation from the U.S. citizen or LPR spouse, even shortly after the marriage took place, does not prove by itself that a marriage was not entered into in good faith.^[100]

Examples of evidence to demonstrate good faith entry into the marriage may include, but are not limited to:

- Documentation that one spouse has been listed as the other spouse's beneficiary on insurance policies;
- Joint property leases, income tax forms, or accounts (for example, bank accounts, utility statements or accounts, and credit cards accounts);
- Evidence of courtship, a wedding ceremony, a shared residence, or shared experiences;
- Birth certificates of children born to the self-petitioner and abusive spouse;
- Police, medical, or court documents providing information about the relationship;
- Affidavits of persons with personal knowledge of the relationship; or
- Any other credible evidence that demonstrates the self-petitioner's intentions for entering into the marriage.^[101]

D. Eligible for Immigrant Classification

A VAWA self-petitioner must establish eligibility for a family-based immigrant classification as either an immediate relative or under a family-based preference category.^[102] VAWA eligibility generally extends to children, spouses, and parents of abusive U.S. citizens, who are considered immediate relatives, and spouses and children of abusive LPRs, who are included in family-based preference categories.

Because VAWA self-petitions provide for family-based immigrant classification, they must comply with provisions applicable to family-based petitions, including INA 204(c), INA 204(g), and INA 204(a)(2), which address issues involving current and prior marriages.^[103]

Note that INA 204(a)(2) applies to self-petitioners who acquire LPR status and subsequently file a family-based spousal petition. This does not apply to a self-petition filed based on a relationship with an abusive LPR spouse.

E. Subjected to Battery or Extreme Cruelty

Self-petitioners must demonstrate that their U.S. citizen or LPR relative battered or subjected them to extreme cruelty during the qualifying relationship.^[104] Note that for abused adopted children, the battery or extreme cruelty may be committed by an adoptive parent or a family member of an adoptive parent residing in the same household.^[105] For all other self-petitioners, battery or extreme cruelty committed by a third party may constitute abuse where the U.S. citizen or LPR acquiesced to, condoned, or participated in the abusive act(s).^[106]

The battery or extreme cruelty must have been committed against the self-petitioner, or for self-petitioning spouses, against their child(ren), and must have taken place during the qualifying relationship. For self-petitioning children, there is also a requirement that the child was residing with the abuser when the abuse occurred.^[107] However, residence for a child may also include any period of visitation.^[108]

Note that if the self-petitioner is a stepchild or stepparent, the abuse must have occurred during the step-relationship. Evidence, however, of any abuse occurring at any time may be used to establish a pattern of abuse to support the claim.

Period of Battery or Extreme Cruelty

Self-Petitioner	When the battery or extreme cruelty must have taken place
Spouse	During the qualifying marriage
Child	During the claimed relationship while the child was under 21 years old and while the child was residing with or visiting the parent ^[109]
Parent	During the claimed relationship and while the son or daughter was 21 years old or older

1. Battery and Extreme Cruelty

The definitions for battery and extreme cruelty are flexible and broad. Other terms, such as abuse, acts of violence, and domestic violence, are often used to describe battery and extreme cruelty.

Battery generally includes any offensive touching or use of force on a person without the person's consent.^[110] Some examples include, but are not limited to, punching, slapping, spitting, biting, kicking, choking, kidnapping, rape, molestation, forced prostitution, sexual abuse, and sexual exploitation. Other abusive actions may also be physical acts of violence and, under certain circumstances, include acts that in and of themselves may not initially appear violent but that are part of an overall pattern of violence.

Extreme cruelty is a non-physical act of violence or threat of violence demonstrating a pattern or intent on the part of the U.S. citizen or LPR to attain compliance from or control over the self-petitioner.^[111] USCIS determines whether a self-petitioner has demonstrated extreme cruelty occurred on a case-by-case basis, and no single factor is conclusive.

Acts of extreme cruelty may include but are not limited to:

- Isolation;
- Humiliation;
- Degradation, use of guilt, minimizing, or blaming;
- Economic control;
- Coercion;
- Threatening to commit a violent act toward the self-petitioner (or the self-petitioner's children);
- Acts intended to create fear, compliance, or submission by the self-petitioner;
- Controlling what self-petitioners do and who they see and talk to;
- Denying access to food, family, or medical treatment;
- Threats of deportation; and
- Threats to remove a child from the self-petitioner's custody.

Battery or extreme cruelty may also include:

- Any act or threatened act of violence, including forced detention, which results or threatens to result in physical or mental injury;
- Psychological or sexual abuse or exploitation, including rape, molestation, incest, or forced prostitution;
- Acts that may not initially appear violent but are a part of an overall pattern of violence;
- Acts aimed at some other person or thing may be considered abuse if the acts were deliberately used to perpetrate extreme cruelty against the self-petitioner or the self-petitioner's child;
- Acts by a third party when the abusive U.S. citizen or LPR acquiesced to, condoned, or participated in the abuse; and
- Spousal abuse, if witnessed by the child of the victim, may be used as the basis for a self-petition by that child.^[112]

2. Evidence

Examples of evidence to demonstrate battery or extreme cruelty occurred include but are not limited to:

- Reports and affidavits from police, judges, or other court officials;
- Court records;
- Reports and affidavits from medical personnel;
- Medical records;
- Reports and affidavits from school officials;
- Affidavits from a member of a religious authority;
- Reports and affidavits from social workers or other social service agency personnel;
- Documentation showing the self-petitioner sought safe-haven or services from a domestic violence shelter or other service provider;
- Protection orders;
- Photographs of injuries;
- Psychological evaluations; or
- Any other credible evidence of battery or extreme cruelty.^[113]

Self-petitioners who obtained an order of protection against the abuser or have taken other legal steps to end the abuse are strongly encouraged to submit copies of the related legal documents.^[114]

Moreover, evidence that the abuse victim sought safe-haven in a domestic violence shelter or similar refuge may also be relevant, as may a combination of documents such as a photograph of the visibly injured self-petitioner supported by affidavits.^[115] Evidence of non-abusive acts may also be submitted to establish and demonstrate a pattern of abuse and violence.^[116]

The self-petitioner is encouraged to submit a detailed personal statement as evidence supporting the self-petition. The self-petitioner's personal statement should provide as much detailed information as possible addressing specific incidents of battery or extreme cruelty.

F. Residence with the Abusive Relative

The self-petitioner must reside or have resided with the abuser in the past to be eligible for the self-petition. USCIS no longer requires the self-petitioner to have resided with the abuser during the qualifying relationship.^[117] Residence is defined as the person's general place of abode or the principal, actual dwelling place of the self-petitioner without regard to intent.^[118] A self-petitioner cannot meet the residency requirement by merely visiting the abuser's home while maintaining a general place of abode or a principal dwelling place elsewhere.^[119]

Self-petitioners must have resided with the abuser at any point prior to filing the self-petition or reside with the abuser when they file the self-petition. The self-petitioner is not required, however, to have resided with the abuser for any specific length of time, to have resided with the abuser in the United States, or to have resided with the abuser during the qualifying relationship.^[120] There is also no requirement for self-petitioners to be living with the abuser at the time they file the self-petition or, for self-petitioning spouses and parents, when the abuse occurred.^[121]

For self-petitioning children, there is a requirement that they resided with the abuser when the abuse occurred.^[122] However, residence for a child may also include any period of visitation.^[123]

If self-petitioners are in the United States at the time they file the self-petition, the shared residence can have occurred either in or outside the United States.^[124]

Examples of evidence demonstrating shared residence with the abusive U.S. citizen or LPR may include but are not limited to:

- Leases, deeds, mortgages, or rental agreements listing the self-petitioner and the U.S. citizen or LPR as occupants or owners;
- Insurance policies listing a common address for the self-petitioner and U.S. citizen or LPR;
- Utility invoices listing a common address for the self-petitioner and U.S. citizen or LPR;
- Bank statements or financial documents listing a common address for the self-petitioner and U.S. citizen or LPR;
- Photocopies of income tax filings listing the self-petitioner and the U.S. citizen or LPR;
- School records listing the parent and address of record;
- Medical records or a statement from the self-petitioner's physician;
- Affidavits of friends and family who can verify that the self-petitioner and the U.S. citizen or LPR resided together during the marriage; or
- Any other credible evidence of shared residence. ^[125]

G. Good Moral Character

1. General Requirements

Self-petitioners must demonstrate that they are persons of good moral character in order to be eligible for a VAWA self-petition.^[126] USCIS generally looks at the 3-year period immediately preceding the date the self-petition is filed, and the self-petitioner's conduct is evaluated on a case-by-case basis taking into account the provisions regarding good moral character in INA 101(f) and the standards of the average citizen in the community.^[127]

2. Special Considerations for Children Under 14 Years of Age

A self-petitioning child who is under 14 years old is presumed to be a person of good moral character and is not required to submit evidence of good moral character with the self-petition.^[128]

The presumption, however, does not preclude USCIS from requesting evidence of good moral character if there is reason to believe that the self-petitioning child may lack good moral character.^[129] USCIS has discretion to request evidence of good moral character for a self-petitioning child under 14 years of age and could find that a person under the age of 14 lacks good moral character.^[130]

3. Evaluating Good Moral Character

USCIS evaluates a self-petitioner's claim of good moral character on a case-by-case basis, considering the provisions of INA 101(f) and the standards of the average citizen in the community, and may consider any conduct, behavior, acts, or convictions.^[131]

Although the evidentiary requirements for good moral character focus on the 3-year period preceding the filing of the self-petition, the eligibility requirements do not specify a time period during which self-petitioners must demonstrate their good moral character.^[132] USCIS may review and request any evidence of good moral character or a lack of good moral character for any time period before or after the filing of the self-petition if USCIS has reason to believe the self-petitioner lacks good moral character.^[133]

A self-petitioner is required to maintain good moral character through the time of final adjudication of both the self-petition and the adjustment of status application.^[134]

If the results of criminal records checks conducted prior to the approval of the self-petition or adjustment of status application disclose that the self-petitioner is no longer a person of good moral character or that the self-petitioner has not been a person of good moral character in the past, USCIS denies the self-petition if it is pending or revokes the self-petition if it was previously approved.^[135]

Permanent and Conditional Bars Under INA 101(f)

INA 101(f) lists the classes of persons who are statutorily barred from being considered a person of good moral character. Self-petitioners who fall under certain categories under INA 101(f) are permanently barred from establishing good moral character.^[136]

Permanent bars apply to a self-petitioner:

- Who has at any time on or after November 29, 1990 been convicted of an aggravated felony; or
- Who at any time has engaged in conduct described in INA 212(a)(3)(E) (relating to assistance in Nazi persecution, participation in genocide, or commission of acts of torture or extrajudicial killings) or INA 212(a)(2)(G) (relating to severe violations of religious freedom).^[137]

Other bars, however, are not permanent in nature and are considered “conditional bars.” Conditional bars are triggered by specific acts, offenses, activities, circumstances, or convictions under INA 101(f) that occurred in the 3-year period immediately preceding the filing of the self-petition.^[138] When a conditional bar is triggered, USCIS has discretion to make a finding of good moral character despite an act or conviction falling under the conditional bar.

These self-petitioners may still be considered persons of good moral character if:

- The act or conviction is waivable for purposes of determining inadmissibility or deportability; and
- The act or conviction was connected to the self-petitioner’s having been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty.^[139]

Conditional bars apply to a self-petitioner who, during the 3-year period for which good moral character is required to be established:

- Is or was a habitual drunkard;
- Is or was engaged in prostitution during the past 10 years as described in INA 212(a)(2)(D);
- Is or was involved in the smuggling of a person or persons into the United States as described in INA 212(a)(6)(E);
- Is or was a practicing polygamist;
- Has been convicted or admits committing acts that constitute a crime involving moral turpitude other than a purely political offense, except for certain petty offenses or offenses committed while the person was less than 18 years old as described in INA 212(a)(2)(A)(ii);
- Has committed two or more offenses for which the applicant was convicted, and the aggregate sentence actually imposed was 5 years or more, provided that, if an offense was committed outside the United States, it was not purely a political offense;
- Has violated laws relating to a controlled substance, except for simple possession of 30 grams or less of marijuana;

- Earns income principally from illegal gambling activities or has been convicted of two or more gambling offenses;
- Has given false testimony for the purpose of obtaining immigration benefits; or
- Has been confined as a result of a conviction to a penal institution for an aggregate period of 180 days or more.^[140]

USCIS may only look to the judicial records to determine whether the person has been convicted of a crime and may not look behind the conviction to reach an independent determination concerning guilt or innocence.^[141]

Acts or Convictions Under INA 101(f) That Occur Outside the 3-Year Period

If a self-petitioner's prior acts or convictions fall under a conditional bar but occurred outside the 3 years immediately preceding the filing of the self-petition, USCIS considers all evidence in the record to make an individualized determination as to whether the self-petitioner has established good moral character.

Officers must consider the totality of the evidence, including all positive and negative factors, to determine whether under the standards of the average citizen of the community self-petitioners established their good moral character.^[142] Some relevant considerations may include but are not limited to the severity of the act or conviction and whether the self-petitioner has demonstrated rehabilitation of character.

Unlawful Acts

Self-petitioners who willfully failed or refused to support dependents, committed unlawful acts that adversely reflect on their moral character, or were convicted or imprisoned for such acts but the acts do not fall under INA 101(f) will be considered as lacking good moral character unless they establish extenuating circumstances.^[143]

Persons who were subjected to abuse in the form of forced prostitution or who can establish that they were forced to engage in other behavior that could render them inadmissible may still be considered a person of good moral character if they have not been convicted for the commission of the offense.^[144]

All Other Conduct and Acts

If there is evidence that a self-petitioner's conduct or acts do not fall under INA 101(f) but are contrary to the standards of the average citizen in the community, the officer must consider all of the evidence in the record and make a case-by-case determination as to whether the self-petitioner has established good moral character under the standards of the average citizen in the community.^[145] Some relevant considerations may include but are not limited to the severity of the conduct or act and whether the self-petitioner has demonstrated rehabilitation of character.

Evidence

Primary evidence of good moral character is the self-petitioner's affidavit, which should contain detailed statements regarding the self-petitioner's conduct and behavior establishing good moral character.^[146] In addition to the affidavit, the self-petitioner should also submit a local police clearance or a state-issued criminal background check from each locality or state in the United States in which the self-petitioner has resided for 6 or more months during the 3-year period immediately preceding the filing of the self-petition.^[147]

If self-petitioners reside or have resided outside the United States, they should submit a police clearance, criminal background check, or similar report issued by the appropriate authority in the foreign country in which they resided for 6 or more months during the 3-year period immediately preceding the filing of the self-petition.^[148]

Self-petitioners are encouraged to submit clearances or background checks based on their name and date of birth or based on their fingerprints. If the search conducted is based on a name and date of birth, self-petitioners are encouraged to provide clearances under all their aliases, including any maiden names, if applicable.

If police clearances, criminal background checks, or similar reports are not available for some or all locations, self-petitioners are encouraged to submit a detailed statement explaining the reasons they could not obtain the clearances and why the lack of a police clearance does not adversely reflect upon the self-petitioner's good moral character. Officers may not deny self-petitions for a failure to submit criminal background checks or police clearances if self-petitioners have submitted an affidavit attesting that they have never been arrested.

In addition to the self-petitioner's affidavit and police clearances or criminal background checks, USCIS considers any other credible evidence of good moral character, such as affidavits from responsible persons who can knowledgeably attest to the self-petitioner's good moral character.^[149]

Affidavits attesting to good moral character should generally contain the affiant's full name, address, telephone number, date and place of birth, relationship to the parties, if any, and details concerning how the affiant acquired knowledge of the self-petitioner's good moral character.

Self-petitioners who have been arrested, charged, or otherwise have a criminal record should provide the following additional evidence, if available:

- Copies of arrest report(s);
- Certified copies of court documents showing final disposition of any charge(s); and

- Relevant excerpts of law for the jurisdiction where the act took place listing the maximum possible penalty for each charge.

4. Evaluating Acts or Convictions Falling Under the Conditional Bars Listed in INA 101(f)

If a self-petitioner has committed an act or has a conviction that falls under a conditional bar under INA 101(f), then the officer must consider the following:

- Whether a waiver for the act or conviction would be available;
- Whether the act or conviction is connected to battery or extreme cruelty experienced by the self-petitioner; and
- Whether the person warrants a finding of good moral character in the exercise of discretion.^[150]

Step 1: Determine Whether a Waiver Would be Available

If the self-petitioner has committed an act or has a conviction that falls under a conditional bar, the officer should first determine whether a waiver would be available. The self-petitioner must submit evidence addressing whether a waiver would be available for the act or conviction at issue.^[151]

The officer does not need to consider whether a waiver would be granted, only that a waiver would be available at the time the adjustment of status or immigrant visa application is filed.^[152] If officers are uncertain whether a waiver is available, they should seek guidance from the local Office of the Chief Counsel before making a final determination.

Step 2: Determine Whether the Act or Conviction is “Connected” to the Battery or Extreme Cruelty

If a waiver is available for the act or conviction, officers must consider whether the act or conviction is “connected” to the battery or extreme cruelty experienced by the self-petitioner. For an act or conviction to be considered connected to the battery or extreme cruelty, the evidence must establish that the act or conviction has a causal or logical relationship to the battery or extreme cruelty.^[153] The connection does not require compulsion or coercion on the part of the self-petitioner. To meet this evidentiary standard, the evidence submitted must demonstrate the following:

- The circumstances surrounding the act or conviction committed by the self-petitioner; and
- The connection between the act or conviction and the battery or extreme cruelty.

When determining whether a connection exists between the self-petitioner’s disqualifying act or conviction and the battery or extreme cruelty suffered by the self-petitioner, USCIS considers the full history of abuse in the case. The self-petitioner’s qualifying U.S. citizen or LPR relative must have perpetrated the battery or extreme cruelty during the qualifying relationship, but the self-petitioner is not required to establish that the act or conviction occurred during the qualifying relationship.

If the self-petitioner establishes that the battery or extreme cruelty occurred prior to and during the qualifying relationship, the officer may find that the self-petitioner has established the required “connection” between the act or conviction and the battery or extreme cruelty, even if the act or conviction occurred prior to the qualifying relationship.

Step 3: Determine Whether the Self-Petitioner Warrants a Finding of Good Moral Character in the Exercise of Discretion

Whether a self-petitioner is a person of good moral character under the exception at INA 204(a)(1)(C) is a discretionary determination made by USCIS. For example, even if the evidence establishes both that a waiver for the self-petitioner’s disqualifying act or conviction is available and that the requisite connection exists between the disqualifying act or conviction and the battery or extreme cruelty, USCIS may nevertheless conclude that the severity or gravity of the self-petitioner’s act or conviction warrants a finding of a lack of good moral character.

H. Self-Petitioners Filing from Outside the United States

If self-petitioners are outside the United States when they file the self-petition, they must demonstrate one of the following in addition to the eligibility requirements listed in this chapter:

- The abusive U.S. citizen or LPR is employed abroad by the U.S. government;
- The abusive U.S. citizen or LPR is a member of the U.S. uniformed services stationed outside the United States; or
- The claimed battery or extreme cruelty occurred in the United States.^[154]

If USCIS approves the self-petition and a visa is available, the self-petitioner may apply for an immigrant visa to enter the United States as an LPR.^[155]

I. Derivative Beneficiaries

Self-petitioning spouses and children may include their child(ren) as derivative beneficiaries on the self-petition.^[156] Self-petitioning parents, however, are not eligible to confer derivative benefits to their family members. If self-petitioning parents include a derivative on their self-petition, the self-petition will not be denied. Any listed derivatives, however, are not eligible to derive status and do not receive any benefit under the approved self-petition.

Derivative children must be unmarried and less than 21 years old at the time of filing and otherwise qualify as the self-petitioner’s child under immigration law.^[157] The statutory definition of “child” includes certain children born in or out of wedlock and certain legitimated children, adopted children, and stepchildren.^[158]

Self-petitioners may add an eligible child, including a child born after the self-petition was approved, when the self-petitioner applies for an immigrant visa outside the United States or adjustment of status in the United States.^[159] A new petition is not required.

Self-petitioners should submit evidence that the derivative beneficiary is under 21 years old and unmarried at the time of filing as well as evidence of the relationship between the self-petitioner and the child.^[160] Derivative beneficiaries are granted the same immigrant classification and priority date as the self-petitioner.^[161]

If a child turns 21 years old and is unable to benefit from the Child Status Protection Act (CSPA), as long as the self-petition was filed before the child turned 21 years old, the child is automatically considered a principal self-petitioner if the child turns 21 years old before adjusting status.^[162] In such a case, the child receives the priority date of the parent's self-petition.^[163] Derivatives do not need to file a separate self-petition; they are placed in the preference category appropriate to their situation.^[164]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Title IV of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994, Pub. L. 103-322 (PDF), 108 Stat. 1796, 1902 (September 13, 1994). See Title V of the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act of 2000, Pub. L. 106-386 (PDF), 114 Stat. 1464, 1518 (October 28, 2000). See Title VIII of the Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005, Pub. L. 109-162 (PDF), 119 Stat. 2960, 3053 (January 5, 2006). See Section 6 of the Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005 Technical Amendments, Pub. L. 109-271 (PDF), 120 Stat. 750, 762 (August 12, 2006). See Title VIII of the Violence Against Women Reauthorization Act of 2013, Pub. L. 113-4 (PDF), 127 Stat. 54, 110 (March 7, 2013).

[^ 2] See INA 101(a)(51). Although INA 101(a)(51) includes several benefits under the term "VAWA self-petitioner," this part focuses on self-petitions filed under INA 204(a).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 204.1(a)(3).

[^ 4] See INA 204(a). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(i). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(i). See INA 245(a).

[^ 5] See INA 204(a). See 8 CFR 204.1(a)(3). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1). Although 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1) and 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1) require self-petitioners to demonstrate extreme hardship to themselves or their children if deported; that they reside in the United States at the time of filing; and that their shared residence with the abuser takes place in the United States, the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act of 2000, Pub. L. 106-386 (PDF), 114 Stat. 1464 (October 28, 2000) removed these as eligibility requirements and supersedes this part of the regulation.

[^ 6] See INA 201(b)(2)(A)(i). See INA 203(a)(2)(A).

[^ 7] See INA 204(a)(1). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1).

[^ 8] For more information on evidentiary requirements, see Chapter 5, Adjudication, Section B, Review of Evidence, Subsection 2, Any Credible Evidence Provision [3 USCIS-PM D.5(B)(2)].

[^ 9] See INA 204(a)(1)(J). See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(2)(iii). See 8 CFR 204.1(f)(1). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(i). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(i). INA 204(a)(1)(J) was not specifically amended to encompass the consideration of secondary evidence submitted by self-petitioning parents. The discussion of evidence found at 8 CFR 103.2(b)(2)(iii) and 8 CFR 204.1(f)(1) regarding self-petitions filed under INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii) and (iv) and INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) and (iii) is applicable to self-petitions filed by abused parents of U.S. citizen sons or daughters under INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vii). For more information about the any credible evidence provision, see Chapter 5, Adjudication, Section B, Review of Evidence, Subsection 2, Any Credible Evidence Provision [3 USCIS-PM D.5(B)(2)].

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 204.1(f)(1).

[^ 11] See INA 204(a)(1)(J). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(i). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(i).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(1).

[^ 13] See INA 204(a)(1). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(ii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii).

[^ 14] Self-petitioning spouses may also include certain intended spouses and former spouses. For more information, see Subsection 2, Self-Petitioning Spouse [3 USCIS-PM D.2(B)(2)]; Chapter 3, Effect of Certain Life Events, Section A, Divorce Prior to Filing the Self-Petition, Subsection 1, Self-Petitioning Spouse's Divorce [3 USCIS-PM D.3(A)(1)]; and Chapter 3, Effect of Certain Life Events, Section D, Death of the U.S. Citizen, Lawful Permanent Resident, or Self-Petitioner [3 USCIS-PM D.3(D)].

[^ 15] See INA 204(a). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(i)-(iii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(i)-(iii).

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(ii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii).

[^ 17] See INA 204(a)(1). See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(1).

[^ 18] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii)(II)(aa)(CC)(bbb). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iv). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vii). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii)(II)(aa)(CC)(aaa). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(iii). For more information, see Chapter 3, Effect of Certain Life Events, Section E, Loss or Renunciation of U.S. Citizenship or Loss of Lawful Permanent Resident Status [3 USCIS-PM D.3(E)].

[^ 19] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vi). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(v).

[^ 20] See 8 CFR 204.1(g)(1). Note that self-petitioners may submit any credible evidence relevant to the abuser's U.S. citizenship or LPR status.

[^ 21] See 8 CFR 204.1(g)(1). Note that self-petitioners may submit any credible evidence relevant to the abuser's U.S. citizenship or LPR status.

[^ 22] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(17)(ii). See 8 CFR 204.1(g)(3).

[^ 23] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(17)(ii). See 8 CFR 204.1(g)(3).

[^ 24] See Matter of B--, 6 I&N Dec. 555 (BIA 1955). See Matter of Ah San (PDF), 15 I&N Dec. 315 (BIA 1975).

[^ 25] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii)(II)(aa). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii)(II)(aa). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(i)-(iii).

[^ 26] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii)(II)(aa)(CC). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii)(II)(aa)(CC). For more information, see Chapter 3, Effect of Certain Life Events, Section A, Divorce Prior to Filing the Self-Petition [3 USCIS-PM D.3(A)] and Section D, Death of the U.S. Citizen, Lawful Permanent Resident, or Self-Petitioner [3 USCIS-PM D.3(D)]. Although 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(i)(A) requires that the self-petitioner demonstrate an existing marriage to the abuser at the time of filing, the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act of 2000 (VTVPA), Pub. L. 106-386 (PDF), 114 Stat. 1464 (October 28, 2000) amended this requirement to allow abused spouses to remain eligible for VAWA benefits if the marriage was terminated due to divorce or death in certain circumstances. VTVPA supersedes this part of the regulation.

[^ 27] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vi). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(v).

[^ 28] See Matter of Lovo-Lara (PDF), 23 I&N Dec. 746 (BIA 2005) and Matter of Da Silva (PDF), 15 I&N Dec. 778 (BIA 1976). To determine the validity of a marriage, USCIS considers the same evidence submitted for a spousal-based Petition for Alien Relative, (Form I-130). For more information on Form I-130 and what constitutes a legally valid marriage, see Volume 6, Immigrants, Part B, Family-Based Immigrants [6 USCIS-PM B].

[^ 29] See Matter of H-- (PDF), 9 I&N Dec. 640 (BIA 1962). A polygamous marriage, even if valid where contracted, is not recognized for immigration purposes.

[^ 30] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(ii).

[^ 31] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(ii).

[^ 32] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(ii).

[^ 33] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii)(II)(aa)(BB). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii)(II)(aa)(BB).

[^ 34] For more information on marriages terminated outside the United States, see Volume 6, Immigrants, Part B, Family-Based Immigrants [6 USCIS-PM B].

[^ 35] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii)(II)(aa)(BB). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii)(II)(aa)(BB).

[^ 36] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii)(II)(aa)(BB). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii)(II)(aa)(BB).

[^ 37] See INA 204(a)(iii)(I)(bb). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii)(I)(bb). See INA 101(b)(1).

[^ 38] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(ii).

[^ 39] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iv). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(iii). See INA 101(b)(1). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(ii).

[^ 40] See INA 101(b)(1). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(ii).

[^ 41] See INA 204(a)(1)(D)(i). See INA 204(a)(1)(D)(v). See INA 201(f). See INA 203(h). For more information, see Chapter 3, Effect of Certain Life Events, Section G, Child Turning 21 Years Old [3 USCIS-PM D.3(G)].

[^ 42] See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(ii). For more information, see Chapter 3, Effect of Certain Life Events, Section B, Self-Petitioner's Marriage or Remarriage [3 USCIS-PM D.3(B)].

[^ 43] See INA 101(b)(1). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(ii).

[^ 44] For more information, see Volume 6, Immigrants, Part B, Family-Based Immigrants, Chapter 8, Children, Sons, and Daughters [6 USCIS-PM B.8] and Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization, Part H, Children of U.S. Citizens, Chapter 3, U.S. Citizens at Birth (INA 301 and 309), Section B, Child Born in Wedlock [12 USCIS-PM H.3(B)].

[^ 45] See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii)(A). For more information on acquiring U.S. citizenship at birth, see Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization, Part H, Children of U.S. Citizens, Chapter 3, U.S. Citizens at Birth (INA 301 and 309) [12 USCIS-PM H.3].

[^ 46] See 8 CFR 204.2(d)(2)(i). USCIS considers the same evidence submitted to demonstrate a parent-child relationship under 8 CFR 204.2(d)(2) as for a child filing a self-petition. Note that officers should always consider any credible evidence submitted by the self-petitioner in accordance with INA 204(a)(1)(J).

[^ 47] See INA 101(b)(1)(A). See INA 101(b)(1)(C). See INA 101(b)(1)(D). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii)(B)-(D).

[^ 48] See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii)(B).

[^ 49] See 8 CFR 204.2(d)(2)(i).

[^ 50] See INA 101(b)(1)(C). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii)(C).

[^ 51] See INA 101(b)(1)(C). See 8 CFR 204.2(d)(2)(ii).

[^ 52] See INA 101(b)(1)(C). See 8 CFR 204.2(d)(2)(ii). For more information on legitimation, see Volume 6, Immigrants, Part B, Family-Based Immigrants [6 USCIS-PM B].

[^ 53] See INA 101(b)(1)(C). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii)(D).

[^ 54] See 8 CFR 204.2(d)(2)(iii).

[^ 55] See 8 CFR 204.2(d)(2)(iii).

[^ 56] See 8 CFR 204.2(d)(2). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii). See INA 204(a)(1)(J). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(i). For more information on the consideration of evidence, see Chapter 5, Adjudication, Section B, Review of Evidence, Subsection 2, Any Credible Evidence Provision [3 USCIS-PM D.5(B)(2)].

[^ 57] See INA 101(b)(1)(B).

[^ 58] See Argujo v. USCIS, 991 F.3d 736 (7th Cir. 2021), holding that divorce does not terminate a stepchild relationship for the purposes of eligibility for a VAWA self-petition. For more information, see Chapter 3, Effect of Certain Life Events, Section A, Divorce Prior to Filing the Self-Petition, Subsection 2, Termination of a Step-Relationship Due to Divorce or Death [3 USCIS-PM D.3(A)(2)].

[^ 59] See Matter of Pagnerre (PDF), 13 I&N Dec. 688 (BIA 1971). This case involves whether a stepdaughter qualifies as a family-based preference category relative of a U.S. citizen under INA 203(a)(3) when the marriage that created the step relationship terminated due to the death of the beneficiary's biological parent. The court found that there was a continuing step relationship in fact between the petitioner and beneficiary after the death of the beneficiary's father and approved the petition for preference classification. For more information, see Chapter 3, Effect of Certain life Events, Section A, Divorce Prior to Filing the Self-Petition, Subsection 2, Termination of a Step-Relationship Due to Divorce or Death [3 USCIS-PM D.3(A)(2)].

[^ 60] See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii)(E).

[^ 61] See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii)(E).

[^ 62] See INA 204(a)(1). For more information, see Section B, Qualifying Relationship, Subsection 2, Self-Petitioning Spouse [3 USCIS-PM D.2(B)(2)].

[^ 63] See INA 101(b)(1)(E).

[^ 64] See INA 101(b)(1)(E)(i).

[^ 65] See INA 101(b)(1)(E)(i). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iv). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(iii). There are three different ways for a child to immigrate to the United States based on adoption. See INA 101(b)(1)(E). See INA 101(b)(1)(F). See INA 101(b)(1)(G). See 8 CFR 204.2(d)(2)(vii). See 8 CFR 204.301-8 CFR 204.314. The requirements to self-petition as an abused adopted child apply to the family-based process under INA 101(b)(1)(E), INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iv), and INA 204(a)(1)(B)(iii). See Volume 5, Adoptions, Part A, Adoptions Overview, Chapter 4, Adoption Definition and Order Validity [5 USCIS-PM A.4].

[^ 66] See INA 101(b)(1)(E)(i). See INA 101(b)(1)(F). See Volume 5, Adoptions, Part E, Family-Based Adoption Petitions [5 USCIS-PM E].

[^ 67] See INA 101(b)(1)(E)(ii). See Volume 5, Adoptions, Part E, Family-Based Adoption Petitions [5 USCIS-PM E].

[^ 68] See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii)(F). Although 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii)(F) requires that self-petitioners submit evidence that they have been residing with and in the legal custody of the abusive adoptive parent for at least 2 years, the Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005, Pub. L. 109-162 (PDF), 119 Stat. 2960 (January 5, 2006) removed this as an eligibility requirement and supersedes this part of the regulation.

[^ 69] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vii). See INA 101(b)(2). USCIS considers the same evidence submitted to establish eligibility for an abused spouse or child under 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2) and 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2) as for an abused parent.

[^ 70] See INA 101(b)(1).

[^ 71] See Matter of Hassan (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 16 (BIA 1976).

[^ 72] See INA 101(b)(1). See INA 101(b)(2). A child is defined as “an unmarried person under 21 years of age” in INA 101(b)(1). INA 101(b)(1)(B) and INA 101(b)(1)(E), (F), and (G) further define a child to include a stepchild and an adopted child, respectively. Similarly, “parent,” “father,” and “mother” are defined in INA 101(b)(2) to include stepparents and certain adoptive parents. An abused parent, stepparent, or adoptive parent of a U.S. citizen is therefore eligible to apply for VAWA relief under INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vii) provided that the self-petitioner is a “parent” as defined in INA 101(b)(2) and has or had a qualifying relationship to the U.S. citizen son or daughter. USCIS considers the same evidence submitted for a Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130) for a child or parent as for a self-petitioning parent to establish a qualifying relationship to a U.S. citizen son or daughter. For more information on Form I-130s, see Volume 6, Immigrants, Part B, Family-Based Immigrants [6 USCIS-PM B].

[^ 73] For more information, see Volume 6, Immigrants, Part B, Family-Based Immigrants, Chapter 8, Children, Sons, and Daughters [6 USCIS-PM B.8] and Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization, Part

H, Children of U.S. Citizens, Chapter 3, U.S. Citizens at Birth (INA 301 and 309), Section B, Child Born in Wedlock [12 USCIS-PM H.3(B)].

[^ 74] See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii)(A). See 8 CFR 204.2(f)(2). USCIS considers the same evidence submitted to demonstrate a parent-child relationship as described in 8 CFR 204.2(e) and 8 CFR 204.2(f)(2) as for a parental relationship for parents filing a self-petition under INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vii). Note that officers should always consider any credible evidence submitted by the self-petitioner in accordance with INA 204(a)(1)(J).

[^ 75] See 8 CFR 204.2(f)(2)(i).

[^ 76] See INA 101(b)(1)(A). See INA 101(b)(1)(C). See INA 101(b)(1)(D). See INA 101(b)(2). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii). See 8 CFR 204.2(f)(2).

[^ 77] See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii)(B).

[^ 78] See 8 CFR 204.2(f)(2)(i).

[^ 79] See INA 101(b)(1)(C). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii)(C).

[^ 80] See INA 101(b)(1)(C). See 8 CFR 204.2(f)(2)(ii).

[^ 81] See INA 101(b)(1)(C). See 8 CFR 204.2(f)(2)(ii). For more information on legitimation, see Volume 6, Immigrants, Part B, Family-Based Immigrants [6 USCIS-PM B].

[^ 82] See 8 CFR 204.2(f)(2)(iii).

[^ 83] See 8 CFR 204.2(f)(2)(iii).

[^ 84] See 8 CFR 204.2(f)(2)(iii).

[^ 85] See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii). See 8 CFR 204.2(f)(2). See INA 204(a)(1)(J). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(i). For more information on the consideration of evidence, see Chapter 5, Adjudication, Section B, Review of Evidence, Subsection 2, Any Credible Evidence Provision [3 USCIS-PM D.5(B)(2)].

[^ 86] See INA 101(b)(1)(B).

[^ 87] See Argujo v. USCIS, 991 F.3d 736 (7th Cir. 2021), holding that divorce does not terminate a stepchild relationship for the purposes of eligibility for a VAWA self-petition. For more information, see Chapter 3, Effect of Certain Life Events, Section A, Divorce Prior to Filing the Self-Petition, Subsection 2, Termination of a Step-Relationship Due to Divorce or Death [3 USCIS-PM D.3(A)(2)].

[^ 88] See Matter of Pagnerre (PDF), 13 I&N Dec. 688 (BIA 1971). This case involves whether a stepdaughter qualifies as a family-based preference category relative of a U.S. citizen under INA 203(a)(3) when the marriage that created the step relationship terminated due to the death of the beneficiary's biological parent. The court found that there was a continuing step relationship in fact between the petitioner and beneficiary after the death of the beneficiary's father and approved the petition for preference classification. For more information, see Chapter 3, Effect of Certain life Events, Section A, Divorce Prior to Filing the Self-Petition, Subsection 2, Termination of a Step-Relationship Due to Divorce or Death [3 USCIS-PM D.3(A)(2)].

[^ 89] See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii)(E).

[^ 90] See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii)(E).

[^ 91] To meet the definition of a parent under INA 101(b)(2), the parent's child must meet one of the definitions of child under INA 101(b)(1). There are three different ways to meet the definition of child based on adoption. See INA 101(b)(1)(E). See INA 101(b)(1)(F). See INA 101(b)(1)(G). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vii). See Volume 5, Adoptions, Part A, Adoption Overview [5 USCIS-PM A].

[^ 92] See Volume 5, Adoptions, Part A, Adoptions Overview, Chapter 4, Adoption Definition and Order Validity [5 USCIS-PM A.4].

[^ 93] See INA 101(b)(1)(E). See INA 101(b)(1)(F). See INA 101(b)(1)(G).

[^ 94] See INA 101(b)(1)(E)(i). In certain circumstances the adoption may take place prior to the child attaining 18 years old if a sibling exception applies. See Volume 5, Adoptions, Part E, Family-Based Adoption Petitions [5 USCIS-PM E].

[^ 95] See INA 101(b)(1)(E).

[^ 96] See INA 101(b)(1)(E). See 8 CFR 204.2(f)(2)(iv). See Volume 5, Adoptions, Part A, Overview, Chapter 4, Adoption Definition and Order Validity [5 USCIS-PM A.4]. USCIS considers the same evidence submitted to demonstrate a parent-child relationship under 8 CFR 204.2(f)(2) as for a parent filing a self-petition. Note that officers should always consider any credible evidence submitted by the self-petitioner in accordance with INA 204(a)(1)(J).

[^ 97] To establish an adoptive relationship if the child was adopted through the orphan process under INA 101(b)(1)(F), see Volume 5, Part C, Child Eligibility Determinations (Orphan) [5 USCIS-PM C]. To establish an adoptive relationship if the child was adopted through the Hague process under INA 101(b)(1)(G), see Volume 5, Part D, Child Eligibility Determinations (Hague) [5 USCIS-PM D].

[^ 98] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii)(I). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii)(I). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(i)(H). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(ix).

[^ 99] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(ix).

[^ 100] See 61 FR 13061, 13068 (PDF) (Mar. 26, 1996). See Bark v. INS, 511 F.2d 1200 (9th Cir. 1975). The court stated that evidence of separation, standing alone, cannot support a finding that a marriage was not bona fide when it was entered. The duration of a separation is relevant to, but not dispositive of, an intent to enter a marriage.

[^ 101] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(vii).

[^ 102] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii)(II)(cc). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iv). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vii). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii)(II)(cc). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(iii). See INA 201(b)(2)(A)(i). See INA 203(a)(2)(A). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(i)(B). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(i)(B).

[^ 103] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(iv). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(iv). For more information, see Chapter 3, Effect of Certain Life Events, Section C, Marriage-Related Prohibitions on Self-Petition Approval [3 USCIS-PM D.3(C)].

[^ 104] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii)(I)(bb). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iv). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(v)(I)(cc). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vii)(V). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii)(I)(bb). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(iii). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(iv)(I)(cc). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(i)(E). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(i)(E).

[^ 105] See INA 101(b)(1)(E).

[^ 106] See 61 FR 13061, 13065 (PDF) (Mar. 26, 1996).

[^ 107] See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(i)(E).

[^ 108] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iv).

[^ 109] See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(i)(E).

[^ 110] See Merriam-Webster Dictionary's law definition of "battery."

[^ 111] See Hernandez v. Ashcroft, 345 F.3d 824, 840 (9th Cir. 2003). "Non-physical actions rise to the level of domestic violence when 'tactics of control are intertwined with the threat of harm in order to maintain the perpetrator's dominance through fear...' Because every insult or unhealthy interaction in a relationship does not rise to the level of domestic violence... Congress required a showing of extreme cruelty in order to ensure that [the VAWA suspension statute] protected against the extreme concept of domestic violence, rather than mere unkindness" (internal citations omitted).

[^ 112] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(vi). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(vi).

[^ 113] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(iv). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(iv).

[^ 114] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(iv). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(iv).

[^ 115] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(iv). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(iv).

[^ 116] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(iv). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(iv).

[^ 117] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii)(II)(dd). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iv). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vii)(IV). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii)(II)(dd). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(iii). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(i)(D). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(i)(D). USCIS implemented this new interpretation on February 10, 2022 given that several federal courts have recently held that the statutory language does not require shared residence during the qualifying relationship. See Dartora v. U.S., No. 4:20-CV-05161-SMJ (E.D.W.A. June 7, 2021). See Bait It v. McAleenan, 410 F. Supp. 3d 874 (N.D. Ill. 2019). See Hollingsworth v. Zuchowski, 437 F. Supp. 3d 1231 (S.D. Fla. 2020).

[^ 118] See INA 101(a)(33).

[^ 119] See 61 FR 13061, 13065 (PDF) (Mar. 26, 1996).

[^ 120] Although 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(v) states that “[a] self-petition will not be approved if the self-petitioner is not residing in the United States,” this portion of the regulation has been superseded by the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act of 2000, Pub. L. 106-386 (PDF), 114 Stat. 1464 (October 28, 2000), which removed the requirement for the self-petitioner to reside in the United States.

[^ 121] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(v). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(v).

[^ 122] See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(i)(E).

[^ 123] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iv).

[^ 124] For more information on filing a VAWA self-petition from outside the United States, see Section H, Self-Petitioners Filing from Outside the United States [3 USCIS-PM D.2(H)].

[^ 125] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(iii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(iii).

[^ 126] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii)(II)(bb). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iv). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vii)(II). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii)(II)(bb). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(iii). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(i)(F). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(i)(F).

[^ 127] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(vii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(vii). See 8 CFR 316.10(a)(2).

[^ 128] See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(v). Affirmative evidence of good moral character is required for all self-petitioning children age 14 or older.

[^ 129] See 61 FR 13061, 13066 (PDF) (Mar. 26, 1996).

[^ 130] See 61 FR 13061, 13066 (PDF) (Mar. 26, 1996). The regulation provides that a self-petition filed by a person of any age may be denied or revoked if the evidence establishes that the person lacks good moral character.

[^ 131] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(vii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(vii). See 8 CFR 316.10(a)(2).

[^ 132] See 61 FR 13061, 13066 (PDF) (Mar. 26, 1996). The statute requires all self-petitioners to be persons of good moral character but does not specify the period for which good moral character must be established. The regulations require evidence of good moral character for the 3 years immediately preceding the date the self-petition is filed.

[^ 133] See 61 FR 13061, 13066 (PDF) (Mar. 26, 1996). USCIS is not precluded from choosing to examine the self-petitioner's conduct and acts prior to the 3-year period if there is reason to believe that the self-petitioner may not have been a person of good moral character in the past. See Matter of P- (PDF), 8 I&N Dec. 167 (R.C. 1958). See DeLucia v. INS, 370 F.2d 305 (7th Cir. 1966). See Matter of Sanchez-Linn (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 362 (BIA 1991). The more serious the past misconduct, the longer the period of good conduct must be to meet the burden of establishing good moral character.

[^ 134] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(vii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(vii).

[^ 135] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(vii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(vii). The self-petitioner may appeal the decision to revoke the approval within 15 days after service of notice of the revocation. See 8 CFR 205.2(d). For more information, see Chapter 6, Post-Adjudicative Matters, Section A, Revocations [3 USCIS-PM D.6(A)].

[^ 136] See INA 101(f)(8)-(9).

[^ 137] See INA 101(f)(8)-(9).

[^ 138] See INA 101(f)(1)-(7). See 61 FR 13061, 13066 (PDF) (Mar. 26, 1996).

[^ 139] See INA 204(a)(1)(C). Note that USCIS applies INA 204(a)(1)(C) to all self-petitioners, including those filing under INA 204(a)(1)(A)(v), INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vii), and INA 204(a)(1)(B)(iv), despite the fact that these self-petitioners are not specifically referenced in INA 204(a)(1)(C).

[^ 140] See INA 101(f).

[^ 141] See 61 FR 13061, 13066 (PDF) (Mar. 26, 1996) (citing to Pablo v. INS, 72 F.3d 110, 113 (9th Cir. 1995) and Gouveia v. INS, 980 F.2d 814, 817 (1st Cir. 1992)).

[^ 142] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(vii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(vii).

[^ 143] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(vii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(vii).

[^ 144] For example, persons who admitted to having engaged in prostitution under duress but had no prostitution convictions were not excludable as prostitutes under INA 212(a)(2)(D), because they were involuntarily reduced to such a state of mind that they were actually prevented from exercising free will through the use of wrongful, oppressive threats or unlawful means. See Matter of M-, 7 I&N Dec. 251 (BIA 1956). See 61 FR 13061, 13066 (PDF) (Mar. 26, 1996).

[^ 145] See INA 101(f). “The fact that any person is not within the foregoing classes shall not preclude a finding that for other reasons such person is or was not of good moral character.” See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(vii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(vii).

[^ 146] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(v). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(v).

[^ 147] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(v). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(v).

[^ 148] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(v). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(v). For more information, see the Department of State’s Foreign Affairs Manual (FAM) for information on the availability of foreign clearances by country.

[^ 149] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(v). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(v).

[^ 150] See INA 204(a)(1)(C).

[^ 151] Relevant waivers include those under INA 212(h)(1), INA 212(i)(1), INA 237(a)(7), and INA 237(a)(1)(H)(ii).

[^ 152] See Appendix: Statutory Bars to Establishing Good Moral Character – Waivable Conduct [3 USCIS-PM D.2, Appendices Tab], which includes a quick-reference chart indicating which disqualifying acts and convictions under INA 101(f) have a waiver available.

[^ 153] See Da Silva v. Attorney General (PDF), 948 F.3d 629 (3rd Cir. 2020). The court held that “connected to” as it is used in INA 204(a)(1)(C) means “having a causal or logical relationship.”

[^ 154] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(v). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(iv). There is no statutory requirement that a self-petitioning parent be living in the United States at the time the self-petition is filed. The filing requirements at INA 204(a)(1)(A)(v) relating to a self-petitioning spouse, intended spouse, or child living abroad of a U.S. citizen are applicable to self-petitions filed by an abused parent of a U.S. citizen son or daughter.

[^ 155] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(3)(i). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(3)(i).

[^ 156] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii)(I). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iv). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii)(I). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(iii). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(4). 8 CFR 204.2(e)(4) has been superseded by the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act of 2000, Pub. L. 106-386 (PDF), 114 Stat. 1464 (October 28, 2000), which amended the INA to allow children of child self-petitioners to be classified as derivative beneficiaries under INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iv) and INA 204(a)(1)(B)(iii).

[^ 157] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii)(I). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iv). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii)(I). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(iii). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(4).

[^ 158] See INA 101(b)(1).

[^ 159] See 61 FR 13061, 13068 (PDF) (Mar. 26, 1996).

[^ 160] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(4).

[^ 161] See INA 203(d). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(4).

[^ 162] See INA 204(a)(1)(D)(i)(III). For more information, see Chapter 3, Effect of Certain life Events, Section G, Child Turning 21 Years Old, Subsection 2, Self-Petitioning Child or Derivative Turns 21 Years Old After the Self-Petition is Filed [3 USCIS-PM D.3(G)(2)].

[^ 163] See INA 204(a)(1)(D)(i)(III).

[^ 164] See INA 204(a)(1)(D)(i)(III).

Chapter 3 - Effect of Certain Life Events

A. Divorce Prior to Filing the Self-Petition

1. Self-Petitioning Spouse's Divorce

Generally, a self-petitioning spouse of an abusive U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident (LPR) must show the existence of a qualifying relationship at the time of filing.^[1] If the qualifying marriage was legally terminated^[2] prior to filing the self-petition, however, self-petitioning spouses may continue to be eligible if they are otherwise eligible for a self-petition and:

- File a Petition for Amerasian, Widow(er), or Special Immigrant (Form I-360) within the 2-year period immediately following the termination of the marriage; and
- Can demonstrate that the legal termination of the marriage was connected to the battery or extreme cruelty perpetrated by the U.S. citizen or LPR spouse.^[3]

The requirement that a self-petitioner file within 2 years following the termination of the marriage is a condition of eligibility for which there is no waiver or equitable tolling available. The 2-year period cannot be equitably tolled because the statute allows for self-petitioning during the marriage and creates a cut-off date for filing when the marriage has terminated.

Evidence

Self-petitions filed within 2 years of the legal termination of the marriage must include evidence that the marriage was legally terminated, such as a final divorce decree or annulment, and that the termination was connected to the battery or extreme cruelty.^[4] The specific legal ground for a divorce or annulment does not need to be abuse.

Examples of evidence demonstrating the connection between the legal termination of the marriage and the battery or extreme cruelty may include, but are not limited to, the following:

- The self-petitioner's own affidavit;
- Affidavits from third parties;
- Final divorce decrees or annulments; or
- Any other credible evidence.

2. Termination of a Step-Relationship Due to Divorce or Death

Divorce

If the marriage between a parent and a stepparent terminates due to divorce, a self-petitioning stepchild and a self-petitioning stepparent continue to be eligible for the self-petition.^[5] A stepchild of an abusive U.S. citizen or LPR parent and a stepparent of an abusive U.S. citizen son or daughter may continue to be eligible to self-petition despite the divorce provided that:

- The stepchild had not reached 18 years of age at the time the marriage creating the step relationship occurred;^[6] and
- The step relationship existed, by law, at the time of the abuse.

Death

If the marriage between a parent and stepparent terminates due to the death of the biological or legal parent, a self-petitioning stepchild and a self-petitioning stepparent may continue to establish eligibility for the self-petition if they can provide evidence of an ongoing family relationship with the abusive U.S. citizen or LPR stepparent or stepchild, respectively, at the time of filing.^[7]

The relationship need not continue after filing.^[8] The stepchild or stepparent may continue to be eligible to self-petition despite the termination of the marriage due to the death of the biological or legal parent provided that:

- The stepchild had not reached 18 years of age at the time the marriage creating the step relationship occurred;^[9]
- The step relationship existed, by law, at the time of the abuse; and
- The step relationship existed as a matter of fact at the time the self-petition is filed.

Evidence of an ongoing family relationship may include financial and emotional support and any type of communication between the stepchild and stepparent, such as an email, social media post, or any other evidence of contact between them.

B. Self-Petitioner's Marriage or Remarriage

1. Self-Petitioning Child's Marriage

Self-petitioning children must be unmarried when the self-petition is filed and when the self-petition is approved.^[10] A self-petitioning child who marries after filing the self-petition and remains married while the self-petition is pending is no longer eligible for immigrant classification as a child, as there are no VAWA provisions for married sons and daughters.^[11] However, a self-petitioning child who marries after filing the self-petition but whose marriage terminates prior to a final decision on the self-petition may remain eligible under VAWA.^[12]

2. Self-Petitioning Spouse's Remarriage

Self-petitioning spouses may remarry after the self-petition is approved without impacting the approved self-petition or their eligibility for an immigrant visa or adjustment of status. However, if the self-petitioner marries again before approval of the self-petition, the officer must deny the self-petition.^[13]

Remarriage of Self-Petitioning Spouse

When the Remarriage Occurs	Impact on Self-Petition
Before approval of the self-petition	USCIS denies the pending self-petition because of the remarriage. ^[14] If the remarriage is not discovered until after USCIS approves the self-petition, USCIS revokes the approval. ^[15]
After approval of the self-petition	Remarriage does not affect eligibility. ^[16]

C. Marriage-Related Prohibitions on Self-Petition Approval

1. Self-Petitioning Spouses – Marriage While in Removal Proceedings

When USCIS adjudicates a spousal self-petition, there are additional considerations on top of the requirements for a qualifying relationship and a good faith marriage. There is, for example, a prohibition on approving a self-petition if the marriage creating the qualifying relationship occurred while the self-petitioner was in removal proceedings.^[17]

The self-petitioner may overcome the general prohibition by requesting an exemption in writing with Form I-360 and submitting evidence demonstrating the following:^[18]

- The self-petitioner has resided outside the United States for a 2-year period beginning after the date of the marriage;^[19] or
- The self-petitioner provides clear and convincing evidence that the marriage was entered into in good faith and in accordance with the laws of the place where the marriage took place, the marriage was not entered into to circumvent immigration laws, and no fee or other consideration was given for the filing of the self-petition.^[20]

If USCIS denied a prior filing because the marriage took place during removal proceedings, and the self-petitioner then resided outside the United States for a period of 2 years following the marriage, the self-petitioner may file a new petition after the 2-year period. In addition, a denial does not prevent USCIS from considering a new petition or a motion to reopen if removal proceedings are terminated after the denial for any reason except the self-petitioner's departure from the United States.^[21]

Although self-petitioners may submit similar evidence to establish a good faith marriage or to qualify for the good faith marriage exemption while in removal proceedings, they must meet a heightened standard of proof when seeking a good faith marriage exemption.

Generally, self-petitioners must establish that they entered into the marriage in good faith by a preponderance of the evidence.^[22] To be eligible for a good faith marriage exemption while in removal proceedings, however, a self-petitioner must establish good faith entry into the marriage by the more stringent clear and convincing evidence standard.^[23] The heightened standard applies only to the good faith marriage exemption determination; all other eligibility requirements are reviewed under the preponderance of the evidence standard.

The requirement that no fee or other consideration was given for the filing of the petition does not refer to fees paid to attorneys, notarios, or other persons who assisted with filing the self-petition.^[24] Rather, this refers to instances where a fee or other consideration was paid in connection with a fraudulent marriage. If a fee or other consideration was paid in order to enter into a fraudulent marriage or to obtain an immigration benefit through a fraudulent marriage, the self-petitioner is ineligible for the good faith marriage exemption.

If the self-petitioner seeks a good faith marriage exemption by showing that the marriage was entered into in good faith and not for the purpose of circumventing immigration laws, examples of the types of evidence the self-petitioner may submit include, but are not limited to:

- Documentation showing joint ownership of property;
- A lease showing joint tenancy of a common residence;

- Documentation showing commingling of financial resources;
- Birth certificate of any children born to the self-petitioner and abusive spouse;
- Affidavits from third parties who know about the bona fides of the marital relationship;^[25] or
- Any other credible evidence to establish that the marriage was not entered into in order to evade the immigration laws of the United States.

2. Prior Marriage Fraud

Self-petitioning spouses are required to demonstrate a qualifying spousal relationship and that their marriage was entered into in good faith.^[26] Even if the self-petitioner meets these two eligibility requirements, USCIS cannot approve the self-petition where it determines with substantial and probative evidence that the self-petitioner previously:

- Had been granted or has sought to be accorded an immediate relative or family-based preference status as the spouse of a U.S. citizen or LPR based on a marriage that USCIS has determined the self-petitioner entered into for the purpose of evading immigration laws; or
- Attempted or conspired to enter into a marriage for the purpose of evading immigration laws.^[27]

Where USCIS determines there is substantial and probative evidence that the self-petitioner previously engaged in marriage fraud, the burden shifts to the self-petitioner to overcome the finding.^[28] Officers may not rely solely on a prior finding of marriage fraud but must make a separate and independent determination that the self-petitioner previously engaged in marriage fraud.^[29]

USCIS provides self-petitioners with an opportunity to rebut the evidence that they entered into or conspired to enter into a prior marriage for the purpose of evading immigration laws by issuing an Request for Evidence (RFE) or a Notice of Intent to Deny (NOID).

D. Death of the U.S. Citizen, Lawful Permanent Resident, or Self-Petitioner

Self-petitioners must demonstrate a qualifying relationship with the abusive U.S. citizen or LPR relative to be eligible for the self-petition.^[30] Historically, if a petitioner for a family-based immigrant visa petition died while the petition was pending or after it was approved and the beneficiary had not yet become an LPR, USCIS denied the petition if it was pending or revoked the petition if it was approved.^[31]

Over time, however, Congress recognized the inequities this created for some noncitizens in these situations and created provisions to allow surviving beneficiaries to continue the immigration process despite the death of certain petitioning relatives and principal beneficiaries.^[32]

For self-petitioners and their derivatives, the impact of the U.S. citizen, LPR, or self-petitioner's death on the validity of the self-petition depends on who died, who the surviving relative is, and whether the self-petition was filed at the time of the death.

Self-petitioners and derivative beneficiaries must notify USCIS of the death of the qualifying relative or the self-petitioner and submit evidence of the death, such as a death certificate.

1. Abusive U.S. Citizen's Death

Abusive U.S. Citizen Dies Prior to the Filing of the Self-Petition

Self-petitioning spouses or parents whose abusive U.S. citizen relative died before they filed a self-petition continue to remain eligible to file a self-petition for 2 years after the death.^[33] The requirement that a self-petitioner file within 2 years following the death of the U.S. citizen relative is a condition of eligibility for which there is no waiver or equitable tolling available. The 2-year period cannot be equitably tolled because the statute allows for self-petitioning while the qualifying relative is living and creates a cut-off date for filing when the relative has died.

Note that for abused parents to be eligible to self-petition, the U.S. citizen son or daughter must have been at least 21 years old when the son or daughter died. If a self-petitioning child's U.S. citizen parent dies before the child files a self-petition, however, the child is ineligible for VAWA benefits.^[34]

Abusive U.S. Citizen Relative Dies While the Self-Petition is Pending or Approved

If a self-petitioning spouse, child, or parent had a pending or approved self-petition at the time of the U.S. citizen's death, the death does not impact their eligibility for the pending self-petition or require revocation of an approved self-petition.^[35] The self-petitioner remains eligible to apply for an immigrant visa or adjustment of status after the self-petition is approved.^[36]

The table below provides a summary of the impact that the death of the abusive U.S. citizen relative has on a self-petition based on the type of self-petition that is filed and if the self-petition was filed at the time of the U.S. citizen's death.

Impact of the U.S. Citizen Relative's Death on the Self-Petition

Self-Petitioner	Petition Not Filed	Petition Pending	Petition Approved
Spouse	Remains eligible to file self-petition up to 2 years after U.S. citizen spouse's death	Remains eligible for self-petition	Self-petition remains approved and self-petitioner remains eligible for immigrant visa or adjustment of status

Self-Petitioner	Petition Not Filed	Petition Pending	Petition Approved
Child	Not eligible for self-petition	Remains eligible for self-petition	Self-petition remains approved and self-petitioner remains eligible for immigrant visa or adjustment of status
Parent	Remains eligible to file self-petition up to 2 years following U.S. citizen son or daughter's death	Remains eligible for self-petition	Self-petition remains approved and self-petitioner remains eligible for immigrant visa or adjustment of status

2. Abusive Lawful Permanent Resident's Death

If the LPR relative dies before an abused spouse or child files a self-petition, the self-petitioning spouse or child is ineligible for VAWA benefits. If the abusive LPR relative dies while a self-petition is pending or was previously approved, USCIS may approve the self-petition or continue adjudication for an adjustment of status application based on an approved self-petition in certain circumstances under INA 204(l) as a matter of discretion.^[37] In order to remain eligible for the self-petition under INA 204(l), self-petitioners must demonstrate:

- They resided in the United States when the LPR relative died; and
- They continue to reside in the United States on the date the pending self-petition or adjustment of status application is approved.^[38]

When there are derivative children beneficiaries, if the self-petitioner or any one derivative beneficiary meets the residence requirement, then, as a matter of discretion, USCIS may approve the self-petition or application for adjustment of status. The self-petitioner and all beneficiaries may be eligible to immigrate to the same extent that would have been permitted if the LPR relative had not died. It is not necessary for the self-petitioner and each derivative child to meet the residence requirements.

3. Self-Petitioner's Death

If a self-petitioning spouse or self-petitioning child dies while the self-petition is pending or after it is approved, USCIS may approve the self-petition or continue adjudication for an adjustment of status application based on an approved self-petition for any derivative children of the self-petitioner as a matter of discretion under INA 204(l). Derivative beneficiaries do not have to be included on the self-petition to be considered for relief under INA 204(l) as long as they are eligible as derivative beneficiaries.

E. Loss or Renunciation of U.S. Citizenship or Loss of Lawful Permanent Resident Status

A self-petitioner must demonstrate a qualifying relationship to a U.S. citizen or LPR at the time of filing to be eligible for a self-petition.^[39] Therefore, historically, if abusive U.S. citizen or LPR relatives had lost or renounced their U.S. citizenship or LPR status, self-petitioners were no longer eligible for the self-petition.

Congress recognized, however, that an abuser's loss of U.S. citizenship or LPR status may have been related to an incident of domestic violence, and that the loss would impact a self-petitioner's eligibility for VAWA benefits. So when Congress passed the Battered Immigrant Women Protection Act (BIWPA) in 2000, it amended the immigration laws to preserve self-petitioning eligibility in certain cases where abusers lost their U.S. citizenship or LPR status for a reason related to an incident of domestic violence, as long as the self-petition is filed within 2 years of the loss or renunciation.^[40]

BIWPA also provided that if abusive U.S. citizens or LPRs lost their status after the self-petition was filed, then self-petitioners would retain their eligibility despite the loss of status without having to show a connection between the loss of U.S. citizenship or LPR status and an incident of domestic violence.^[41]

Self-petitioners must notify USCIS if their qualifying relative lost or renounced U.S. citizenship or LPR status. Officers may check USCIS electronic systems to confirm the loss or renunciation of citizenship or LPR status.

1. Loss or Renunciation of U.S. Citizenship or Loss of Lawful Permanent Resident Status Prior to Filing

If abusive U.S. citizen or LPR relatives lost or renounced their U.S. citizenship or LPR status before the self-petition was filed, the self-petitioner may remain eligible if the loss or renunciation of status was related or due to an incident of domestic violence. The loss or renunciation must also have occurred within the 2-year period immediately preceding the filing of the self-petition.^[42]

The requirement that a self-petitioner file within 2 years following the qualifying relative's loss or renunciation of U.S. citizenship or LPR status is a condition of eligibility for which there is no waiver or equitable tolling available. The 2-year period cannot be equitably tolled because the statute allows for self-petitioning while the qualifying relative maintains U.S. citizenship or LPR status and creates a cut-off date for filing when the qualifying relative has lost U.S. citizenship or LPR status.

Note that for self-petitioning parents, the abusive son or daughter must have been 21 years of age or older when the son or daughter's citizenship was lost or renounced.

USCIS considers the full history of domestic violence when determining whether the abuser's loss or renunciation of status is related to an incident of domestic violence. When considering whether the loss or renunciation of status was related to an incident of domestic violence, USCIS determines whether the evidence submitted establishes:

- The circumstances surrounding the loss or renunciation of status;
- Whether the loss or renunciation of status is related to the incident of domestic violence; and
- The loss or renunciation of status occurred within the 2-year period immediately preceding the filing of the self-petition.

Examples of evidence demonstrating the above requirements may include but are not limited to:

- Self-affidavits;
- Police, child protective services, and other related reports;
- Court records;
- Immigration records; and
- Any other credible evidence of the above requirements.

2. Loss or Renunciation of U.S. Citizenship or Loss of Lawful Permanent Resident Status After Filing

The loss or renunciation of the qualifying relative's U.S. citizenship or LPR status after the self-petition is filed does not impact a self-petitioning spouse or child's eligibility or adversely affect an approved self-petition. There is no requirement to show a relation between the loss or renunciation of U.S. citizenship or LPR status and an incident of battery or extreme cruelty. The self-petitioner remains eligible for VAWA benefits.^[43] In addition, loss or renunciation of the qualifying relative's U.S. citizenship or LPR status does not adversely affect an approved VAWA self-petitioner's ability to adjust status.^[44]

Self-petitioning parents, however, whose U.S. citizen sons or daughters have denaturalized or lost or renounced their U.S. citizenship after the self-petition is filed are no longer eligible for the self-petition.^[45] If a self-petitioning parent's self-petition was previously approved, it may be revoked in such circumstances.

F. Lawful Permanent Resident's Naturalization

If abusive LPRs naturalize after their spouse or child files a self-petition, the self-petitioning spouse or child is automatically reclassified as the spouse or child of a U.S. citizen.^[46] The self-petitioner does not need to file a new self-petition; the reclassification occurs regardless of whether the self-petition remains pending or is approved at the time of the naturalization.^[47] The self-petitioner is reclassified even if the abusive spouse or parent acquires citizenship after a divorce or termination of parental rights.^[48]

G. Child Turning 21 Years Old

Generally, self-petitioning and derivative children must be under 21 years old and unmarried in order to be eligible as self-petitioners or be included as derivative beneficiaries on the self-petition at the time of filing.^[49] If abused children turn 21 years old before they are able to file a self-petition, however, they may continue to remain eligible to file the self-petition as a child in certain circumstances as long as they remain unmarried.^[50]

1. Self-Petitioning Child Turning 21 Years Old Before Filing the Self-Petition

In the past, otherwise eligible sons and daughters of U.S. citizens and LPRs were precluded from filing a self-petition if they reached age 21 before the self-petition could be filed. The inability to file a self-petition before turning 21 years old may have been due to a number of reasons, including the nature of the abuse or the time period that the abuse took place.

The Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005 (VAWA 2005), however, amended the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) by adding a new provision that permitted the late filing of a self-petition in certain circumstances to expand protections for abused children who were unable to file a self-petition before turning 21 years old.^[51]

Self-petitioning children may remain eligible to file a self-petition as a child even after turning 21 years old but before turning 25 years old if they are unmarried and can demonstrate the following:

- They were eligible to file the self-petition on the day before they turned 21; and
- The abuse was one central reason for the delay in filing.^[52]

Self-petitioners must have been qualified to file the self-petition on the day before they turned 21 years old. This means that they must have met all eligibility requirements on that date. For example, if the abuse took place only after they turned 21, then they were not eligible to file the self-petition on the day before they turned 21 years old.

In addition to meeting all of the eligibility requirements as of the day before the self-petitioner turned 21 years old, the abuse must have been “one central reason” for the self-petitioner’s delay in filing.^[53] The battery or extreme cruelty is not required to be the sole reason for the delay in filing, but the connection between the battery or extreme cruelty and the delay in filing must be more than tangential.

An example where a self-petitioner could potentially meet this requirement may be that the abuse took place so near in time to the self-petitioner turning 21 years old that there was insufficient time to file the self-petition. Another example is that the abuse was so traumatic that the self-petitioner was mentally or physically incapable of filing a self-petition prior to turning 21 years old. These are only hypothetical examples; the abuse must be identifiable as one central reason for the delay.

If self-petitioners are eligible to file after turning 21 years old, USCIS treats them as if the self-petition had been filed on the day before they turned 21 years old. If USCIS approves the self-petition, however, the self-petitioner's continued eligibility and subsequent classification for visa issuance or adjustment of status is governed by the Child Status Protection Act (CSPA) or the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act of 2000 (VTVPA), whichever is appropriate.^[54]

Evidence

Self-petitioners must submit evidence that they were eligible to file the self-petition before they turned 21 years old and that the abuse was one central reason for the delay. USCIS considers the totality of the circumstances leading to the delay in filing and the full history of battery or extreme cruelty in the case.

Examples of evidence that may demonstrate that the self-petitioner's abuse was one central reason for the delay may include but are not limited to:

- Reports or affidavits detailing incidents of abuse that occurred prior to the self-petitioner turning 21 years old from police, judges, court officials, medical personnel, counselors, social workers or other social service agency personnel, or school officials;
- Evidence that the self-petitioner sought refuge at a shelter because of the abuse;
- A personal statement describing the battery or extreme cruelty that occurred prior to the self-petitioner turning 21 years old;
- An explanation for how the abuse was one central reason for the delay in filing the self-petition; or
- Any other credible evidence.

2. Self-Petitioning Child or Derivative Turns 21 Years Old After the Self-Petition is Filed

Under CSPA, if a child turns 21 years old after the self-petition is filed but before it is adjudicated, the INA includes protections for self-petitioning and derivative children to retain eligibility after turning 21 years old as long as they remain unmarried.^[55] Self-petitioning and derivative children may continue to be classified as children for immigration purposes under the CSPA in certain circumstances.^[56]

If children are not eligible under CSPA, they may be eligible under VTVPA, which provides that self-petitioning children who turn 21 years old after the self-petition is filed will automatically be considered self-petitioners for preference status under INA 203 as long as they remain unmarried.^[57]

Derivative children who turn 21 years old after the self-petition is filed will automatically be considered a self-petitioner with the same priority date as the self-petitioner who originally filed the self-petition, as long as the child remains unmarried.^[58]

No new petition is required for either a self-petitioning or derivative child.^[59] Self-petitioning or derivative children may marry after the self-petition is approved and remain eligible for an immigrant visa or adjustment of status in the appropriate preference category to their situation.^[60] They do not need to file a new self-petition and will retain the priority date from the approved self-petition.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(i). See Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements and Evidence, Section B, Qualifying Relationship, Subsection 2, Self-Petitioning Spouse [3 USCIS-PM D.2(B)(2)].

[^ 2] USCIS generally recognizes the legal termination of a marriage in cases where the termination is valid under the laws of the jurisdiction where the marriage is terminated, or the jurisdiction of a subsequent marriage recognizes the validity of the termination.

[^ 3] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii)(ii)(aa)(CC)(ccc). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii)(II)(aa)(CC)(bbb).

[^ 4] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii)(ii)(aa)(CC)(ccc). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii)(II)(aa)(CC)(bbb).

[^ 5] See Argujo v. USCIS, 991 F.3d 736 (7th Cir. 2021), holding that divorce does not terminate a stepchild relationship for the purposes of eligibility for a VAWA self-petition.

[^ 6] See INA 101(b)(1)(B).

[^ 7] See Matter of Pagnerre (PDF), 13 I&N Dec. 688 (BIA 1971). This case involves whether a stepdaughter qualifies as a family-based preference category relative of a U.S. citizen under INA 203(a)(3) when the marriage that created the step relationship terminated due to the death of the beneficiary's biological parent. The court found that there was a continuing step relationship in fact between the petitioner and beneficiary after the death of the beneficiary's father and approved the petition for preference classification.

[^ 8] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vi). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(v).

[^ 9] See INA 101(b)(1)(B).

[^ 10] See INA 101(b)(1). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(ii).

[^ 11] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iv). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(iii) requiring eligibility for immigrant classification under INA 201(b)(2)(A)(i) and INA 203(a)(2)(A).

[^ 12] See INA 201(f). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(ii).

[^ 13] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(II)(aa). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(II)(aa). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(ii). See Delmas v. Gonzalez, 422 F.Supp.2d 1299 (S.D. Fla. 2005) (self-petitioner's remarriage prior to filing self-petition was disqualifying). Note that 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(ii) states: "The self-petitioning spouse must be legally married to the abuser when the petition is properly filed with the Service. A spousal self-petition must be denied if the marriage to the abuser legally ended through annulment, death, or divorce before that time." This portion of the regulation has been superseded by the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act of 2000, Pub. L. 106-386 (PDF) (October 28, 2000), which removed the requirement for the self-petitioner to remain married to the abuser at the time the self-petition is filed. The remainder of 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(ii) remains valid: "After the self-petition has been properly filed, the legal termination of the marriage will have no effect on the decision made on the self-petition. The self-petitioner's remarriage, however, will be a basis for denial of a pending self-petition."

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(ii).

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 205.1(a)(3)(i)(E). See 8 CFR 205.2.

[^ 16] See INA 204(h).

[^ 17] See INA 204(g). See INA 245(e)(3). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(iv).

[^ 18] See 8 CFR 204.2(a)(1)(iii). USCIS considers the same evidence submitted for a spousal-based Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130) under 8 CFR 204.2(a)(1)(iii) for self-petitioning spouses.

[^ 19] See INA 204(g). See 8 CFR 204.2(a)(1)(iii).

[^ 20] See INA 245(e)(3). See 8 CFR 204.2(a)(1)(iii).

[^ 21] See 8 CFR 204.2(a)(1)(iii)(D).

[^ 22] To meet this standard, the noncitizen must prove a claimed fact is more likely than not to be true. See Matter of Chawathe (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 369 (AAO 2010). For more information about the good faith marriage requirement for self-petitioning spouses, see Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements and Evidence, Section C, Good Faith Marriage (Self-Petitioning Spouses Only) [3 USCIS-PM D.2(C)].

[^ 23] See INA 245(e)(3). See Matter of Arthur (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 475, 478 (BIA 1992) and Pritchett v. I.N.S., 993 F.2d 80, 85 (5th Cir. 1993) (acknowledging clear and convincing evidence as an exacting standard).

[^ 24] See INA 245(e)(3).

[^ 25] See 8 CFR 204.2(a)(1)(iii)(B)(5). Third parties submitting affidavits may be required to testify before a USCIS officer as to the information contained in the affidavit. Affidavits should be sworn to or affirmed by persons not parties to the petition who have personal knowledge of the marital relationship. Each affidavit should generally contain the full names, addresses, and dates and places of birth of the persons providing the affidavit and their relationship to the spouses, if any. The affidavit should contain complete information and details explaining how the affiants acquired knowledge of the marriage. Self-petitioners are not required to demonstrate the unavailability of primary or secondary evidence, but affidavits should be supported, if possible, by one or more types of documentary evidence listed in this section. All evidence submitted, including affidavits are reviewed under the any credible evidence provision described in Chapter 5, Adjudication, Section B, Review of Evidence, Subsection 2, Any Credible Evidence Provision [3 USCIS-PM D.5(B)(2)]. See INA 204(a)(1)(J). See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(2)(iii). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(i). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(i).

[^ 26] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1)(i).

[^ 27] See INA 204(c). See 8 CFR 204.2(a)(1)(ii). See Matter of Tawfik (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 166 (BIA 1990) and Matter of R.I. Ortega, 28 I&N Dec. 9 (BIA 2020). USCIS considers the same evidence submitted for a spousal-based Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130) under 8 CFR 204.2(a)(1)(ii) for self-petitioning spouses.

[^ 28] See Matter of Kahy (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 803 (BIA 1988) and Matter of Tawfik (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 166 (BIA 1990). Substantial and probative evidence is evidence that would permit a reasonable fact-finder to conclude that a given factual claim is true. See INS v. Elias-Zacarias, 502 U.S. 478 (1992). Substantial and probative evidence is more than a preponderance of the evidence, but less than clear and convincing evidence. See Matter of Singh, 27 I&N Dec. 598 (BIA 2019). For more information, see Volume 6, Immigrants, Part B, Family-Based Immigrants [6 USCIS-PM B].

[^ 29] See Matter of Tawfik (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 166 (BIA 1990).

[^ 30] See INA 204(a)(1). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(ii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii).

[^ 31] See 8 CFR 205.1(a)(3)(i). See Matter of Sano (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 299 (BIA 1985) and Matter of Varela (PDF), 13 I&N Dec. 453 (BIA 1970).

[^ 32] See INA 201(b)(2)(A)(i). See INA 204(l). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii)(II)(aa)(CC)(aaa). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vii). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vi).

[^ 33] See INA 204(1)(A)(iii)(II)(aa)(CC)(aaa). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vii). Note that spouses of U.S. citizens who have not legally separated or divorced at the time of the U.S. citizen's death may also be eligible as widow(er)s under INA 201(b)(2)(A)(i) if they file a petition within 2 years of the death.

[^ 34] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iv).

[^ 35] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vi).

[^ 36] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vi).

[^ 37] See INA 204(l)(2)(B).

[^ 38] See INA 204(l). For more information, see Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part A, Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures, Chapter 9, Death of Petitioner or Principal Beneficiary [7 USCIS-PM A.9].

[^ 39] See INA 204(a)(1). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(ii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(ii).

[^ 40] See Title V of Pub. L. 106-386 (PDF), 114 Stat. 1464 (October 28, 2000). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii)(II)(aa)(CC)(bbb). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iv). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vii). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii)(II)(aa)(CC)(aaa)(iii).

[^ 41] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vi).

[^ 42] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii)(II)(aa)(CC)(bbb). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iv). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vii). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii)(II)(aa)(CC)(aaa)(iii).

[^ 43] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vi). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(v)(1).

[^ 44] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vi). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(v)(1).

[^ 45] See INA 204(a)(1)(A) (vi) - (vii). There are no statutory provisions that allow for continued eligibility for self-petitioning parents whose U.S. citizen sons or daughters have denaturalized or lost or renounced their U.S. citizenship after the self-petition is filed.

[^ 46] See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(v)(II).

[^ 47] See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(v)(II).

[^ 48] See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(v)(II).

[^ 49] See INA 101(b)(1). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(4). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1)(ii). 8 CFR 204.2(e)(4) has been superseded by the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act of 2000, Pub. L. 106-386 (PDF) (October 28, 2000), which allows children of child self-petitioners to be classified as derivative beneficiaries under INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iv) and INA 204(a)(1)(B)(iii).

[^ 50] See INA 204(a)(1)(D)(v).

[^ 51] See Section 805(c) of VAWA 2005, Pub. L. 109-162 (PDF), 119 Stat. 2960 (January 5, 2006) and Section 6(a) of the Violence Against Women and Department of Justice Reauthorization Act of 2005 Technical Amendments, Pub. L. 109-271 (PDF), 120 Stat. 750 (August 12, 2006). See INA 204(a)(1)(D)(v).

[^ 52] See INA 204(a)(1)(D)(v).

[^ 53] See INA 204(a)(1)(D)(v).

[^ 54] See Pub. L. 107-208 (PDF), 116 Stat. 927 (August 6, 2002) adding INA 201(f) and INA 203(h) and Title V of Pub. L. 106-386 (PDF), 114 Stat. 1464 (October 28, 2000) adding INA 204(a)(1)(D)(i)(I) and INA 203(a)(1)-(3).

[^ 55] See Pub. L. 107-208 (PDF), 116 Stat. 927 (August 6, 2002) adding INA 201(f) and INA 203(h).

[^ 56] See INA 201(f). See INA 203(h). For more information on CSPA, see Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part A, Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures, Chapter 7, Child Status Protection Act [7 USCIS-PM A.7].

[^ 57] See Title V of Pub. L. 106-386 (PDF), 114 Stat. 1464 (October 28, 2000) adding INA 204(a)(1)(D)(i)(I) and INA 203(a)(1)-(3).

[^ 58] See INA 204(a)(1)(D)(i)(III).

[^ 59] See INA 204(a)(1)(D)(i)(I) and (III).

[^ 60] See INA 204(a)(1)(D)(i). See INA 204(h).

Chapter 4 - Filing Requirements

A. Filing Requirements and Initial Review

A noncitizen seeking to self-petition under the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) must properly file a Petition for Amerasian, Widow(er), or Special Immigrant (Form I-360) with supporting evidence in accordance with the Form I-360 instructions.^[1] USCIS considers Form I-360 as properly filed if it is:

- Submitted on the current edition of the form;
- Filed at the correct filing location; and
- Properly signed.^[2]

When initially reviewing the Form I-360, USCIS first determines whether the Form I-360 has been properly filed according to the above criteria. If the self-petition is not properly filed, USCIS rejects the filing and returns it to the self-petitioner.^[3] If the self-petition is properly filed, USCIS sends the self-petitioner a receipt notice with a receipt, or filing date. There is no fee when Form I-360 is filed as a VAWA self-petition.^[4]

Self-petitioning spouses, children, and parents of U.S. citizens may seek to adjust status as immediate relatives by filing an Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (Form I-485) at any time, because visas are always immediately available for immediate relatives.^[5]

If, however, the self-petitioner is a spouse or child of a lawful permanent resident (LPR) and seeking to adjust under a family-based preference category, the self-petitioner may need to wait for a visa to become available before filing a Form I-485.^[6]

If a visa is immediately available, the self-petitioner may file the Form I-485:

- Together (or “concurrently”) with the Form I-360;
- While the Form I-360 is pending; or
- After the Form I-360 is approved (and remains valid).^[7]

1. Priority Dates

The priority date is the date the self-petition is properly filed and is used in conjunction with the Department of State Visa Bulletin to determine whether an immigrant visa is immediately available. For purposes of visa availability, a self-petitioner’s priority date is generally the date the self-petition was filed.

If self-petitioners were beneficiaries of a previously filed Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130) filed by the abusive qualifying relative, they may retain the priority date from the Form I-130.^[8] The earlier priority date may be assigned without regard to the current validity of the visa petition. Officers may verify a claimed filing by searching USCIS electronic systems or other records.^[9]

Note that derivative beneficiaries must be under 21 years old and unmarried at the time Form I-360 is filed to be included as derivative beneficiaries, even if they had a previously filed Form I-130 filed for them.^[10] If derivative beneficiaries are eligible to be included on the Form I-360 at the time of filing, then they may retain the self-petitioner’s priority date from a previously filed Form I-130.^[11]

B. Documentation Requirements

Self-petitioners must file Form I-360 and submit documentation in accordance with the Form I-360 instructions to establish, by a preponderance of the evidence, that they meet the eligibility requirements.^[12]

While self-petitioners are encouraged to submit primary evidence, where available, USCIS must consider any credible evidence relevant to the self-petition.^[13] The determination of what evidence is credible and the weight to be given that evidence is within the sole discretion of USCIS.^[14]

Self-petitioners must submit evidence for each of the eligibility requirements.^[15] Documentation should include:

- Evidence of the abusive relative's U.S. citizenship or LPR status, such as a birth certificate, an unexpired U.S. passport, a Certificate of Naturalization, or a copy of a Permanent Resident Card (Form I-551);^[16]
- Evidence of a qualifying relationship that demonstrates a familial, legal relationship to the abuser, such as birth certificates, marriage certificates, and divorce decrees;^[17]
- Evidence of having entered the marriage in good faith (for self-petitioning spouses only), such as insurance policies showing one spouse has been listed as the other spouse's beneficiary; joint property leases, income tax forms, or accounts; or evidence of courtship, a wedding ceremony, shared residence, and other shared experiences;^[18]
- Evidence of battery or extreme cruelty perpetrated by the U.S. citizen or LPR during the qualifying relationship (self-petitioning spouses may submit evidence of their child being subjected to battery or extreme cruelty), such as reports and affidavits from police, judges, other court officials, medical personnel, school officials, clergy, social workers, and other social service personnel; court or medical records; or protection orders;^[19]
- Evidence of shared residence with the abusive U.S. citizen or LPR, such as leases, deeds, mortgages, or rental agreements listing the abuser and the self-petitioner; utility invoices, bank statements, or financial documents listing a common address; school records listing the parent and address of record; medical records; or income tax filings; and^[20]
- Evidence of good moral character if the self-petitioner is 14 years old or older, such as affidavits and a local police clearance or state-issued criminal background check from each locality or state in or outside the United States where the self-petitioner has resided for 6 months or more during the 3-year period immediately preceding the filing of the self-petition.^[21]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(1). See 8 CFR 106.2(a)(16)(ii). See 8 CFR 204.1(b). See 8 CFR 204.1(a)(3).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(2). See Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part B, Submission of Benefit Requests, Chapter 2, Signatures [1 USCIS-PM B.2].

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(7)(ii).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 106.2(a)(16)(ii).

[^ 5] See INA 201(b). See INA 245(a). See 8 CFR 245.2(a)(2)(i).

[^ 6] For information on visa availability, see Visa Availability and Priority Dates, Adjustment of Status Filing Charts, and the Department of State website to view the Visa Bulletin. See Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part A, Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures, Chapter 3, Filing Instructions, Section B, Definition of Properly Filed, Subsection 4, Visa Availability Requirement [7 USCIS-PM A.3(B)(4)] and Chapter 6, Adjudicative Review, Section C, Verify Visa Availability [7 USCIS-PM A.6(C)].

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 245.2(a)(2)(i).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 204.2(h)(2). See 61 FR 13061, 13069 (PDF) (Mar. 26, 1996). For more information, see Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part A, Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures, Chapter 6, Adjudicative Review, Section C, Verify Visa Availability, Subsection 3, Priority Dates [7 USCIS-PM A.6(C)(3)].

[^ 9] See 61 FR 13061, 13069 (PDF) (Mar. 26, 1996).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(4).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(4).

[^ 12] See INA 204(a). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1). Although 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1) and 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1) require self-petitioners to demonstrate extreme hardship to themselves or their children if deported; that they reside in the United States at the time of filing; and that their shared residence with the abuser take place in the United States, the Victims of Trafficking and Violence Protection Act of 2000, Pub. L. 106-386 (PDF), 114 Stat. 1464 (October 28, 2000) removed these as eligibility requirements and supersedes this part of the regulation.

[^ 13] See INA 204(a)(1)(J). See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(2)(iii). See 8 CFR 204.1(f)(1). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(i). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(i). INA 204(a)(1)(J) was not specifically amended to encompass the consideration of secondary evidence submitted by self-petitioning parents. The discussion of evidence found at 8 CFR 103.2(b)(2)(iii) and 8 CFR 204.1(f)(1) regarding self-petitions filed under INA 204(a)(1)(A)(iii) and (iv) and INA 204(a)(1)(B)(ii) and (iii) are applicable to self-petitions filed by abused parents of U.S. citizen sons or daughters under INA 204(a)(1)(A)(vii). For more information about the any credible evidence provision, see Chapter 5, Adjudication, Section B, Review of Evidence, Subsection 2, Any Credible Evidence Provision [3 USCIS-PM D.5(B)(2)].

[^ 14] See INA 204(a)(1)(J). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(i). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(i).

[^ 15] See INA 204(a)(1). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(1). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(1). For more detailed information on the evidence required for each eligibility requirement, see Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements and Evidence [3 USCIS-PM D.2].

[^ 16] For more detailed information on the evidence required for this eligibility requirement, see Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements and Evidence, Section B, Qualifying Relationship, Section 1, Abuser's U.S. Citizenship or Lawful Permanent Resident Status [3 USCIS-PM D.2(B)(1)].

[^ 17] For more detailed information on the evidence required for this eligibility requirement, see Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements and Evidence, Section B, Qualifying Relationship [3 USCIS-PM D.2(B)].

[^ 18] For more detailed information on the evidence required for this eligibility requirement, see Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements and Evidence, Section C, Good Faith Marriage (Self-Petitioning Spouses Only) [3 USCIS-PM D.2(C)].

[^ 19] For more detailed information on the evidence required for this eligibility requirement, see Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements and Evidence, Section E, Subjected to Battery or Extreme Cruelty [3 USCIS-PM D.2(E)].

[^ 20] For more detailed information on the evidence required for this eligibility requirement, see Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements and Evidence, Section F, Residence with the Abusive Relative [3 USCIS-PM D.2(F)].

[^ 21] For more detailed information on the evidence required for this eligibility requirement, see Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements and Evidence, Section G, Good Moral Character [3 USCIS-PM D.2(G)].

Chapter 5 - Adjudication

A. Prima Facie Review

After receipting a self-petition, USCIS first determines whether the evidence submitted establishes a prima facie ("at first look") case.^[1] Self-petitioning spouses and children and any listed derivative beneficiaries may be considered "qualified aliens" eligible for certain public benefits if they can establish a prima facie case for immigrant classification or have an approved self-petition.^[2]

USCIS does not make a prima facie determination for self-petitions filed from outside the United States. Self-petitioners who are outside the United States are not eligible for U.S. public benefits. Note that although USCIS issues prima facie determinations for self-petitioning parents of U.S. citizens, they are not included in the definition of "qualified aliens" in statute and are, therefore, ineligible for public benefits as "qualified aliens."^[3]

1. Establishing a Prima Facie Case

To establish a prima facie case, the self-petitioner must submit a completed Petition for Amerasian, Widow(er), or Special Immigrant (Form I-360) and evidence to support each of the eligibility requirements for the self-petition.^[4] The self-petitioner must merely address each of the eligibility requirements but need not prove eligibility in order to establish a prima facie case.^[5]

If USCIS determines that a self-petitioner has demonstrated prima facie eligibility, USCIS issues a Notice of Prima Facie Case (NPFC) to the self-petitioner.^[6] The decision to issue an NPFC rests solely with USCIS.^[7]

If USCIS determines that the self-petitioner did not establish a prima facie case upon initial review, officers may, in their discretion, issue a Request For Evidence (RFE) seeking additional evidence. If additional evidence is submitted and the self-petitioner establishes a prima facie case upon second review, USCIS issues an NPFC.

Regardless of whether a self-petitioner establishes a prima facie case and receives an NPFC or not, USCIS may discover additional deficiencies while adjudicating the self-petition. For such cases, USCIS may issue an RFE and will consider RFE responses solely to adjudicate the self-petition.^[8]

Note that the NPFC does not confer immigration status or a benefit, and a self-petitioner may not apply solely for an NPFC. USCIS' decision to issue or not issue an NPFC is not a consideration in the adjudication of the underlying self-petition, and a prima facie determination, whether favorable or adverse, is not a final adjudication of the self-petition.

A favorable NPFC does not mean the self-petitioner has established eligibility for the underlying self-petition, and additional evidence may be required to establish such eligibility after a favorable NPFC has been issued.^[9]

2. Validity Period and Renewals

Self-petitioners may use the NPFC as evidence to establish their eligibility for certain public benefits and are eligible to renew their NPFC, as needed, until USCIS completes adjudication of the self-petition.^[10] NPFCs are initially valid for 1 year. If USCIS has not made a decision on the self-petition by the time the NPFC expires, USCIS automatically sends a renewed NPFC within 60 days of the expiration date.

The NPFC is renewed for 180 days and continues to be renewed for 180-day periods until USCIS adjudicates the self-petition. If the Form I-360 is denied, USCIS does not re-issue or extend the NPFC. Filing an appeal of Form I-360 does not extend the validity of an existing NPFC.

B. Review of Evidence

1. Standard of Proof

The standard of proof refers to the quality and weight of the evidence required to prove a fact. The standard of proof to establish eligibility for a self-petition is preponderance of the evidence.^[11] Establishing eligibility by a preponderance of the evidence means that it is more likely than not that the self-petitioner qualifies for the benefit. This is a lower standard of proof than both the “clear and convincing” and “beyond a reasonable doubt” standards of proof. The burden is on self-petitioners to demonstrate their eligibility for the self-petition by a preponderance of the evidence.^[12]

2. Any Credible Evidence Provision

Generally, petitioners are required to submit primary or secondary evidence with a family-based immigrant visa petition.^[13] Although Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) self-petitioners are encouraged to submit primary or secondary evidence whenever possible, an officer must consider any credible evidence a self-petitioner submits to establish eligibility.^[14] The determination of what evidence is credible and the weight to be given to the evidence is within the sole discretion of USCIS.^[15]

For VAWA self-petitioners, the abusive family member may control access to or destroy necessary documents in furtherance of the abuse, which may prevent the applicant from being able to submit specific documentation. Other self-petitioners may have fled the abusive situation without taking important documents with them.

Congress created the “any credible evidence” standard for VAWA filings in recognition of these evidentiary challenges. Officers should be aware of and consider these issues when evaluating the evidence.

Weighing and Determining the Credibility of Evidence

A self-petition may not be denied for failure to submit a particular piece of evidence.^[16] An officer may only deny a self-petition on evidentiary grounds if the evidence that was submitted is not credible or otherwise fails to establish eligibility. Officers may not require that the self-petitioner demonstrate the unavailability of primary evidence or a specific document. An explanation from the self-petitioner, however, regarding the unavailability of such documents may assist officers in adjudicating the case.

Officers determine what evidence is credible on a case-by-case basis. Often, evidence that is credible in one setting will not be so in another. Officers should consider whether the evidence may be credible or not on either an internal or external basis.

For example, evidence that is inconsistent with the other elements of the self-petition is likely not internally credible; and evidence that does not conform to external facts, such as information contained in USCIS electronic databases, is likely not credible on an external basis. Officers should carefully review evidence in both these regards before making a credibility determination. The determination of what is credible will often also be a function of other elements in the case.

For example, if USCIS finds a self-petitioner's testimony in an affidavit to be inconsistent internally or inconsistent with other evidence, officers could determine in their discretion that the evidentiary value of that affidavit may be diminished. However, officers could determine in their discretion that minor inconsistencies regarding information that is not material to the self-petitioner's eligibility would not likely diminish the evidentiary value of the self-petitioner's affidavit.

Some general principles are applicable in making a credibility determination. Officers generally should give more weight to primary evidence and evidence provided in court documents, medical reports, police reports, and other official documents.^[17] Self-petitioners who submit affidavits are encouraged, but not required, to provide affidavits from more than one person. Any form of documentary evidence may be submitted, and the absence of a particular form or piece of evidence is not grounds for denial of the self-petition.

USCIS may issue a Request for Evidence (RFE) or a Notice of Intent to Deny (NOID) to notify self-petitioners of deficiencies in the self-petition and to allow them an opportunity to respond before issuing a final decision.^[18]

C. Decision

1. Discretion

The decision to approve or deny a self-petition is not discretionary.^[19] If USCIS determines that the noncitizen meets all the eligibility requirements for the self-petition, USCIS approves the self-petition. If derogatory information unrelated to eligibility for the self-petition is discovered, the officer may forward the information to an investigation unit for appropriate action. Unless the derogatory information relates to eligibility for the self-petition, however, such information cannot serve as the basis for a denial.

2. Approvals

If USCIS determines that the facts and information provided with the Form I-360 demonstrate eligibility by a preponderance of the evidence, USCIS approves the self-petition.

Self-petitioning spouses, children, and parents of abusive U.S. citizens are considered immediate relatives and make seek adjustment of status or an immigrant visa immediately after approval of the self-petition, as a visa is immediately available for this category of family-based immigrants.^[20] Immediate relatives in the United States also have the option to file an application for adjustment of status concurrently with the self-petition, as the visa is immediately available after the petition is approved.^[21]

Self-petitioning spouses and children of abusive LPRs receive a visa number from a family-based preference category when the self-petition is approved and may file an application for adjustment of status or seek an immigrant visa when a visa is available.^[22] If a self-petitioner seeks an immigrant visa from outside the United States, USCIS forwards the self-petition to the National Visa Center.^[23]

Note that an approved self-petition does not confer immigration status to self-petitioners and their derivative beneficiaries. An approved self-petition provides immigrant classification so that the self-petitioner and any derivative beneficiaries have a basis upon which they may be eligible to apply for lawful permanent resident status.

Employment Authorization

Approved self-petitioners and their derivative beneficiaries are eligible for employment authorization.^[24] USCIS may issue an employment authorization document (EAD) to principal self-petitioners upon approval if they requested an EAD on Form I-360.^[25]

Derivative beneficiaries may apply for an EAD by submitting an Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765) and supporting documentation of the principal's approved self-petition and of the qualifying derivative relationship. Persons eligible for employment authorization based on an approved self-petition receive an EAD with a (c)(31) employment authorization code.

Approved principal self-petitioners and derivative beneficiaries must file Form I-765 when renewing their VAWA-based employment authorization.^[26] Principal self-petitioners and derivatives who are living outside of the United States are not eligible to receive an EAD.

Deferred Action

Approved self-petitioners and their derivative beneficiaries may be considered for deferred action on a case-by-case basis.^[27] Derivative beneficiaries requesting deferred action must include a copy of the self-petitioner's approval notice and evidence of the qualifying derivative relationship with the request.

3. Denials

If USCIS finds that the facts and information provided with the Form I-360 do not demonstrate eligibility by a preponderance of the evidence, then USCIS denies the self-petition. USCIS notifies the self-petitioner of the denial in writing and provides the reason(s) for the denial and the right to appeal the decision.^[28] A denial of a self-petition does not prevent the self-petitioner from filing another self-petition.

D. Special Considerations for Self-Petitions Filed Subsequent to Family-Based Immigrant Petition and Adjustment Application

Self-petitioners may have previously been the beneficiary of a Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130) and filed an Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (Form I-485) before filing the self-petition. If the Form I-485 is pending, self-petitioners may notify USCIS either verbally in person or in writing by mail to the local USCIS field office that they filed a self-petition, and request that USCIS hold adjudication of the Form I-485 until the Form I-360 is adjudicated and change the underlying basis of the pending Form I-485 to the self-petition.

If a person intends to file a self-petition, they may notify USCIS either verbally in person or in writing by mail to the local USCIS field office of their intention to file the Form I-360 and request that USCIS hold the adjudication of the Form I-485. The written notification should contain the person's name and A-Number, and a safe address where USCIS can contact them. The person has 30 days from the day USCIS receives notification of the request to file the Form I-360. If the self-petitioner does not file a self-petition within 30 days of the request, USCIS continues adjudication of the Form I-485 based on the Form I-130. Officers may check USCIS electronic systems to confirm that a self-petition was filed.

When a person notifies USCIS that they intend to file a self-petition or have already filed a self-petition, DHS considers the confidentiality protections at 8 U.S.C. 1367(a)(1) to apply to the self-petitioner.^[29] However, if the person does not file a self-petition, USCIS concludes they do not want be treated as a VAWA self-petitioner and the protections of 8 U.S.C. 1367 will not apply to the adjudication of any forms.^[30]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(6).

[^ 2] See the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996, Pub. L. 104-193 (PDF), 110 Stat. 2105 (August 22, 1996) and the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996, Pub. L. 104-208 (PDF), 110 Stat. 3009 (September 30, 1996), which restricted eligibility for public assistance to “qualified aliens.”

[^ 3] See Pub. L. 104-193 (PDF), 110 Stat. 2105 (August 22, 1996).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(6)(ii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(6)(ii). For more information, see Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements and Evidence [3 USCIS-PM D.2].

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(6)(ii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(6)(ii).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(6)(iii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(6)(iii).

[^ 7] See 62 FR 60769, 60770 (PDF) (November 13, 1997).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(8).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(6)(ii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(6)(ii).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(6)(iii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(6)(iii).

[^ 11] See Matter of Chawathe (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 369 (AAO 2010); Matter of Martinez (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 1035, 1036 (BIA 1997); and Matter of Soo Hoo (PDF), 11 I&N Dec 151 (BIA 1965). Note that in certain circumstances, the self-petitioner may be required to satisfy a higher standard of proof. See Chapter 3, Effect of Certain Life Events, Section B, Self-Petitioner's Marriage or Remarriage [3 USCIS-PM D.3(B)].

[^ 12] See INA 291. See Matter of Brantigan (PDF), 11 I&N Dec. 493 (BIA 1966).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 204.1(f).

[^ 14] See INA 204(a)(1)(J). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(i). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(i). See 61 FR 13061 (PDF) (March 26, 1996).

[^ 15] See INA 204(a)(1)(J). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(i). See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(2)(iii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(i). See 61 FR 13061 (PDF) (March 26, 1996).

[^ 16] See INA 204(a)(1)(J). See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(2)(i). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(2)(i). See 61 FR 13061 (PDF) (March 26, 1996).

[^ 17] See 61 FR 13061, 13068 (PDF) (March 26, 1996).

[^ 18] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(8).

[^ 19] See INA 204(b).

[^ 20] See INA 201(b). See INA 245(a). See 8 CFR 245.2(a)(2)(i). See 8 CFR 245.1(g).

[^ 21] See 8 CFR 245.2(a)(2)(i)(B) and (C).

[^ 22] See INA 203(a). See INA 245(a). See 8 CFR 245.2(a)(2)(i). See 8 CFR 245.1(g). Visa availability depends on several factors, including the self-petitioner's immigrant classification. Information on visa availability and priority dates is available at the Adjustment of Status Filing Charts from the Visa Bulletin web page. For more information, see Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part A, Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures, Chapter 3, Filing Instructions, Section B, Definition of Properly Filed, Subsection 4, Visa Availability Requirement [7 USCIS-PM A.3(B)(4)] and Chapter 6, Adjudicative Review, Section C, Verify Visa Availability [7 USCIS-PM A.6(C)].

[^ 23] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(3)(i). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(3)(i).

[^ 24] See INA 204(a)(1)(K). See INA 204(a)(1)(D)(i)(II). See INA 204(a)(1)(D)(i)(IV).

[^ 25] See INA 204(a)(1)(K). See the Petition for Amerasian, Widow(er), or Special Immigrant (Form I-360).

[^ 26] For additional information on VAWA-based employment authorization, see Instructions for Form I-360 and the Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765).

[^ 27] See INA 103(a). See INA 204(a)(1)(D)(i)(II). See INA 204(a)(1)(D)(i)(IV). See Heckler v. Chaney, 470 U.S. 821, 831 (1985). Note that deferred action does not permit a person to re-enter the United States lawfully without prior approval if the person were to depart the country.

[^ 28] See 8 CFR 204.2(c)(3)(ii). See 8 CFR 204.2(e)(3)(ii). See 8 CFR 103.3(a).

[^ 29] See 8 U.S.C. 1367. See DHS Directive, “Implementation of Section 1367 Information Provisions,” Instruction Number: 002-02-001, issued November 1, 2013 (PDF). For more information, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part A, Public Services, Chapter 7, Privacy and Confidentiality, Section E, VAWA, T, and U Cases [1 USCIS-PM A.7(E)].

[^ 30] See 8 U.S.C. 1367(a)(1).

Chapter 6 - Post-Adjudicative Matters

A. Revocations

USCIS may revoke the approval of a self-petition with notice to the self-petitioner if, at any time prior to adjustment of status or consular processing, USCIS becomes aware of information that constitutes “good and sufficient cause” warranting revocation.^[1] Examples of reasons why the approval of a self-petition may be revoked may include, but are not limited to:

- The self-petitioner is no longer a person of good moral character; or
- The self-petitioner was not eligible for Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) classification at the time of filing.

Unless the revocation is an automatic revocation,^[2] USCIS must provide self-petitioners with notice of the intent to revoke the approval of the self-petition and provide them an opportunity to respond.^[3]

If USCIS decides to revoke the approval of the self-petition following consideration of the response, the officer must provide written notification of the decision explaining the specific reasons for the revocation.^[4] The self-petitioner may appeal the decision to revoke the approval within 15 calendar days after service of the notice of the revocation or 18 days if the decision was sent by mail.^[5]

1. Authority to Revoke a Self-Petition

The service centers have sole authority to revoke the approval of a self-petition. Service center officers who adjudicate VAWA self-petitions receive specialized training on domestic violence and abuse and have developed expertise in this subject matter, including expertise in identifying fraud. Therefore, in order to ensure consistency in the adjudication of VAWA self-petitions, USCIS field offices that believe a self-petition should be reviewed for possible revocation must return it to the appropriate service center for review and decision on the revocation.

2. USCIS Field Office – Officer’s Request for Review of an Approved Self-Petition

Officers in USCIS field offices adjudicating an Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (Form I-485) based on an approved VAWA self-petition generally may not inquire about instances of abuse or extreme cruelty or attempt to re-adjudicate the merits of the underlying approved self-petition. If, however, officers find or obtain new information that leads them to reasonably believe that the approval of the self-petition should be revoked, they must prepare a detailed memorandum for their supervisor.

The officer must explain why the self-petition should be reviewed for possible revocation, and the memorandum must state what the new information is and how USCIS obtained it. Information is not considered new if it was available to the service centers at the time of the approval of the self-petition.

Officers must keep in mind the 8 U.S.C. 1367 confidentiality provisions preventing USCIS from making an adverse determination using information provided solely by an abuser, a family member of the abuser living in the same household, or someone acting on the abuser’s behalf, as well as the prohibition on the unauthorized disclosure of information related to a protected person, including acknowledgment that a self-petition exists.^[6]

3. USCIS Field Office – Supervisory Review

If after reviewing the officer’s memorandum, the supervisor concurs with the officer’s recommendation to revoke the approval of the self-petition, the supervisor must sign the memorandum and forward it along with the A-File to the appropriate service center with an attention to “VAWA I-360.”

4. Service Center VAWA I-360 Unit – Supervisory Review

A VAWA I-360 supervisor at the service center must review the field office memorandum and the related file to determine whether to initiate the revocation process or to reaffirm the self-petition. If the supervisor disagrees with the recommendation of the field office and decides to reaffirm the self-petition, a separate memorandum must be prepared explaining why the self-petition was reaffirmed. The service center then returns the memorandum to the USCIS field office that made the recommendation. If the supervisor agrees with the recommendation to revoke the approval of the self-petition, the service center issues a notice of intent to revoke the approval to the self-petitioner.

The service center is expected to complete its review process on an expedited basis. In all cases, self-petitions that are sent to a service center from a USCIS field office or to a USCIS field office from a service center must be accompanied by a memorandum that is signed by the appropriate supervisor.

B. Appeals, Motions to Reopen, and Motions to Reconsider

If USCIS denies a Petition for Amerasian, Widow(er), or Special Immigrant (Form I-360), and a self-petitioner disagrees with the decision or has additional evidence to show the decision was incorrect, the self-petitioner may file an appeal, a motion to reopen, or a motion to reconsider by submitting a Notice of Appeal or Motion (Form I-290B).^[7]

The self-petitioner must file the appeal or motion within 30 days of the denial or 33 days if USCIS sent the denial by mail.^[8] There is no exception to the filing period for appeals and motions to reconsider. For a motion to reopen, USCIS may excuse, in its discretion, the self-petitioner's failure to file before this period expires where the self-petitioner demonstrates that the delay was reasonable and beyond their control.^[9]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 205. See 8 CFR 205.1(a). See 8 CFR 205.2(a).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 205.1(a).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 205.2(b).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 205.2(c).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 205.2(d). See 8 CFR 103.8(b). Self-petitioners may appeal the decision to revoke the self-petition by filing a Notice of Appeal or Motion (Form I-290B).

[^ 6] See 8 U.S.C. 1367(a)(1)-(2).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 103.5.

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 103.5.

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 103.5(a)(1)(i).

Part E - Employment Authorization for Abused Spouses of Certain Nonimmigrants

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 30 - Nonimmigrants in General \(External\) \(PDF, 426.43 KB\)

Part F - Parolees

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 21 - Family-based Petitions and Applications \(External\) \(PDF, 1.82 MB\)

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

The Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) gives the Secretary of Homeland Security discretionary authority to parole into the United States temporarily, under conditions the Secretary may prescribe, on a case-by-case basis for urgent humanitarian reasons or significant public benefit, any noncitizen applying for admission to the United States, regardless of whether the person is inadmissible to, or removable from, the United States.^[1]

Congress did not define the phrase "urgent humanitarian reasons or significant public benefit," entrusting the interpretation and application of these standards to the Secretary.

B. Background

Parole decisions are discretionary determinations made on a case-by-case basis consistent with the INA. To exercise its parole authority, USCIS must determine that parole into the United States is justified by urgent humanitarian reasons or significant public benefit.

USCIS has the authority to impose conditions on the grant of parole, including requiring reasonable assurances that the parolee will appear at all hearings and will depart the United States when required to do so.^[2]

In general, if USCIS favorably exercises its discretion to authorize parole for a noncitizen located outside of the United States, then either USCIS or the U.S. Department of State issues a travel document to enable the noncitizen to travel to a U.S. port of entry and request parole from U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP). CBP officers make the ultimate determination, upon the noncitizen's arrival at a U.S. port of entry, whether to parole the noncitizen into the United States and for what length of time. Once a noncitizen is paroled into the United States, the parole allows the noncitizen to stay temporarily in the United States.

Parole is not an admission to the United States.^[3] When a noncitizen is paroled into the United States, the noncitizen is still deemed to be an applicant for admission.^[4]

Parole terminates automatically upon the expiration of the authorized parole period or upon the parolee's departure from the United States.^[5] Parole also may be terminated upon written notice to the noncitizen if USCIS determines the purpose for which the parole was authorized has been accomplished or if USCIS determines that neither humanitarian reasons nor public benefit warrant the continued presence of the parolee in the United States. When parole is terminated, the noncitizen is "restored to the status that he or she had at the time of parole."^[6]

Generally, a noncitizen who is paroled into the United States is not employment authorized incident to status.^[7] Rather, most parolees must apply for and be granted employment authorization before they may work in the United States.^[8] The grant of parole is a separate determination from the grant of employment authorization.

C. Legal Authorities [Reserved]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 212(d)(5)(A). USCIS, U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE), and U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP) all have authority to authorize parole. See Delegation of Authority to the Commissioner of U.S. Customs and Border Protection, Delegation 7010.3, signed May 11, 2006. See Delegation of Authority to the Assistant Secretary for U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement, Delegation 7030.2, signed November 13, 2004 (effective March 1, 2003). See Delegation of Authority to the Bureau of Citizenship and Immigration Services, Delegation 0150.1, signed June 5, 2003 (effective March 1, 2003). See Memorandum of Agreement, Coordinating the Concurrent Exercise by USCIS, ICE, and CBP, of the Secretary's Parole Authority under INA 212(d)(5) (A) with Respect to Certain Aliens Located Outside of the United States, signed September 2008.

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 212.5(d).

[^ 3] See INA 101(a)(13)(B). See INA 212(d)(5)(A). See 8 CFR 1.2 (“An arriving alien remains an arriving alien even if paroled pursuant to section 212(d)(5) of the Act, and even after any such parole is terminated or revoked.”).

[^ 4] See INA 212(d)(5)(A).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 212.5(e)(1).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 212.5(e). See Hassan v. Chertoff, 593 F.3d 785, 789 (9th Cir. 2010).

[^ 7] One exception is international entrepreneur parolees under 8 CFR 274a.12(b)(37) who are employment authorized incident to their parole by a specific employer.

[^ 8] Under 8 CFR 274a.12(c)(11). See 8 CFR 274a.13.

Part G - International Entrepreneur Parole

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

The international entrepreneur parole regulations provide a framework for DHS to use its parole authority^[1] to grant a period of authorized stay, on a case-by-case basis, to noncitizen entrepreneurs who possess a substantial ownership interest in a start-up entity and who can demonstrate that their stay in the United States would provide a significant public benefit through that start-up entity’s potential for rapid business growth and job creation.

Although an individual who is paroled into the United States has not been admitted into the United States for purposes of immigration law, parolees may enter and remain in the United States and may be authorized to work.

B. Background

Given the complexities involved in adjudicating applications from entrepreneurs claiming a significant public benefit, DHS established, by regulation, criteria for the case-by-case evaluation of parole applications filed by entrepreneurs of start-up entities. By including such criteria in a regulation, as well as establishing application requirements that are specifically tailored to capture the necessary information for processing parole requests on this basis, DHS facilitated the use of parole in this area. [2]

DHS published a final rule introducing the criteria for entrepreneurs seeking significant public benefit parole on January 17, 2017, with an effective date of July 17, 2017.^[3] While DHS subsequently issued a rule with request for comment delaying the effective date of the rule to March 14, 2018,^[4] the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia vacated the delay rule.^[5] Subsequently, on May 29, 2018, DHS issued a proposed rule that sought to remove the International Entrepreneur Rule.^[6] DHS, however, did not finalize that rule. Instead, it withdrew the proposed removal rule, signifying its support of the program.^[7]

On September 13, 2021, consistent with the investment and revenue amount adjustment provision in the final rule, DHS issued a technical amendment of the regulation adjusting amounts by the Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers (CPI-U) as of October 1, 2021.^[8]

C. Legal Authorities

- INA 212(d)(5) – Parole
- INA 274A – Unlawful employment of aliens
- 8 CFR 212.19 – Parole for entrepreneurs
- 8 CFR 274a – Control of employment of aliens

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 212(d)(5).

[^ 2] See 82 FR 5238 (PDF) (Jan. 17, 2017).

[^ 3] See 82 FR 5238 (PDF) (Jan. 17, 2017).

[^ 4] See 82 FR 31887 (PDF) (Jul. 11, 2017).

[^ 5] See Nat'l Venture Capital Ass'n v. Duke, 291 F. Supp. 3d 5 (D.D.C. Dec. 1, 2017).

[^ 6] See 83 FR 24415 (PDF) (May 29, 2018) (proposed rule).

[^ 7] See 86 FR 25809 (PDF) (May 11, 2021). See 86 FR 8277 (PDF) (Feb. 5, 2021), which directed agencies to identify any agency actions that fail to promote access to the legal immigration system.

[^ 8] See 86 FR 50839 (PDF) (Sept. 13, 2021).

Chapter 2 - Requirements for Consideration

A. Applicant and Start-up Entity Criteria

An applicant files an Application for Entrepreneur Parole (Form I-941) to be considered for parole as an international entrepreneur. To be considered for such parole, the applicant must demonstrate that a grant of parole will provide a significant public benefit to the United States based on the applicant's entrepreneurial role with a start-up entity in the United States that has significant potential for rapid growth and job creation.^[1]

An applicant need not be outside the United States to apply. Persons outside the United States, persons in the United States in nonimmigrant status, and those who are in the United States not presently maintaining nonimmigrant status may apply.

If their Form I-941 is approved, those applicants who are in the United States would have to depart the United States and would need to appear at a port of entry to request parole into the United States. However, applicants who are in the United States but are not in a lawful status (for example, their Arrival/Departure Record (Form I-94) expired and they are no longer in a nonimmigrant status) may have accrued unlawful presence and may face immigration consequences upon departure from the United States.

1. Applicant Requirements

Central and Active Role

The applicant must have a central and active role in the operations of the start-up entity.^[2] Within that role, the applicant must be well-positioned, due to their knowledge, skills, or experience, to substantially assist the entity with the growth and success of its business.^[3]

Substantial Ownership Interest

The applicant must also have a substantial ownership in the start-up entity. USCIS considers the applicant to have substantial ownership if the applicant possesses at least a 10 percent ownership interest in the start-up entity at the time of adjudication of the Form I-941.^[4] If granted parole, an applicant may reduce their ownership interest below 10 percent during the period of initial parole, so long as the applicant maintains at least a 5 percent ownership interest in the start-up entity during the initial parole period.^[5]

While the applicant does not need to be the sole owner, no more than three entrepreneurs may be granted international entrepreneur parole based on the same start-up entity.^[6]

2. Start-up Entity Requirements

The applicant's start-up entity must be:

- A corporation, limited liability company, partnership, or other entity that is organized under federal law or the laws of any state, and that conducts business in the United States;
- Not primarily engaged in the offer, purchase, sale or trading of securities, futures contracts, derivatives, or similar instruments;^[7]
- Formed within the 5 years immediately preceding the date the applicant filed the initial parole application and lawfully doing business during any period of operation since its date of formation; and
- An entity with substantial potential for rapid growth and job creation.^[8]

B. Qualified Investment or Government Award or Grant

1. Investment Option

An applicant can demonstrate the start-up entity's substantial potential for rapid growth and job creation through a qualified investment if, within the 18 months immediately preceding the filing of the Form I-941, one or more qualified investors made qualified investments that together are at least the required amount. The required amount automatically adjusts every 3 years by the Consumer Price Index for All Urban Consumers (CPI-U).^[9]

The following table outlines the required amount of investment in the start-up, which varies based on the date the applicant filed the Form I-941.

Required Amount of Investment in the Start-up

Filing Date	Investment Amount
Before October 1, 2021	$250,000
On or after October 1, 2021	$264,147

Qualified Investment

To be considered a qualified investment, the investment must be made in good faith and not be an attempt to circumvent any limitations imposed on investments under 8 CFR 212.19. The investment must be lawfully derived capital in a start-up entity that is a purchase from such entity of its equity, convertible debt, or other security convertible into its equity commonly used in financing transactions within such entity's industry.

A qualified investment does not include an investment, directly or indirectly, from:

- The entrepreneur;
- The parents, spouse, brother, sister, son, or daughter of such entrepreneur; or
- Any corporation, limited liability company, partnership, or other entity in which such entrepreneur or the parents, spouse, brother, sister, son, or daughter of such entrepreneur directly or indirectly has any ownership interest.

Qualified Investor

While an applicant is not prohibited from personally investing in the start-up entity or otherwise securing additional funding, only investments from a qualified investor count towards the minimum investment amount.

A qualified investor is an individual who is a U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident (LPR) of the United States, or an organization that is located in the United States and operates through a legal entity organized under the laws of the United States or any state, that is majority owned and controlled, directly and indirectly, by U.S. citizens or LPRs of the United States.

A qualified investor must also regularly make substantial investments in start-up entities that subsequently exhibit substantial growth in terms of revenue generation or job creation by demonstrating that during the preceding 5 years:

- The qualified investor made investments in start-up entities in exchange for equity, convertible debt, or other security convertible into equity commonly used in financing transactions within their respective industries comprising a total in such 5-year period of no less than the investment amount in the chart below; and
- Subsequent to such investment by such individual or organization, at least two such entities each either created at least five qualified jobs or generated revenue of at least the amount in the chart below with average annualized revenue growth of at least 20 percent.^[10]

The following table outlines the required amount of investment and revenue for qualified investors' prior investments, which varies based on the date the applicant filed the Form I-941.

Required Investment and Revenue Amounts for Qualified Investors' Prior Investments

Filing Date	Investment Amount	Revenue Amount
Before October 1, 2021	$600,000	$500,000
On or after October 1, 2021	$633,952	$528,293

The term qualified investor does not include an individual or organization that has been:

- Permanently or temporarily enjoined from participating in the offer or sale of a security or in the provision of services as an investment adviser, broker, dealer, municipal securities dealer, government securities broker, government securities dealer, bank, transfer agent or credit rating agency;
- Barred from association with any entity involved in the offer or sale of securities or provision of such services; or
- Otherwise found to have participated in the offer or sale of securities or provision of such services in violation of law.^[11]

2. Government Award or Grant Option

An applicant can demonstrate the start-up entity's substantial potential for rapid growth and job creation through a qualified government award or grant. The applicant must show that, within the 18 months immediately preceding the filing of the Form I-941, the start-up entity received one or more qualified government awards or grants of at least the minimum required amount.^[12]

Qualified awards or grants include those for economic development, research and development, or job creation (or other similar monetary awards typically given to start-up entities) made by a federal, state, or local government entity (not including foreign government entities) that regularly provides such awards or grants to start-up entities. Contractual commitments for goods or services do not constitute qualifying awards or grants.^[13]

The following table outlines the minimum required amount for government awards and grants, which varies based on the date the applicant filed the Form I-941.

Government Awards and Grants Amounts

Filing Date	Award or Grant Amount
Before October 1, 2021	$100,000
On or after October 1, 2021	$105,659

3. Alternative Option

If the applicant satisfies the criteria demonstrating that they are an entrepreneur in a start-up entity but only partially meets one or both of the criteria for qualified investments or qualified awards or grants, USCIS may still consider the applicant for entrepreneur parole if the applicant provides additional reliable and compelling evidence of the start-up entity's substantial potential for rapid growth and job creation. When considered in totality, the evidence must serve as a compelling validation of the entity's substantial potential for rapid growth and job creation.^[14]

C. Significant Public Benefit

There is no statutory or regulatory definition of significant public benefit.^[15] Parole determinations are case-by-case discretionary determinations that consider the totality of the circumstances of each case.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 212.19(b)(2)(i).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 212.19(a)(1).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 212.19(a)(1).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 212.19(a)(1). For information on the percentage of ownership required for re-parole see Chapter 5, Additional Periods of Parole, Section B, Criteria for Consideration [3 USCIS-PM G.5(B)].

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 212.19(a)(1).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 212.19(f).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 212.19(a)(9) (defining U.S. business entity).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 219.12(a)(2).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 212.19(l).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 212.19(a)(5). Qualified job means full-time employment located in the United States that has been filled for at least 1 year by one or more U.S. citizens, LPRs, or other immigrants lawfully authorized to be employed in the United States, who is not an entrepreneur of the relevant start-up entity (or the parent, spouse, brother, sister, son, or daughter of such entrepreneur) nor an independent contractor. See 8 CFR 212.19(a)(6) and 8 CFR 212.19(a)(7).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 212.19(a)(5).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 212.19(a)(3) and 8 CFR 212.19(b)(2)(ii)(B)(2).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 212.19(a)(3).

[^ 14] See 82 FR 5238, 5240 (PDF) (Jan. 17, 2017).

[^ 15] However, 8 CFR 212.19 lists some of the factors USCIS considers when determining whether an applicant's proposal would provide a significant public benefit to the United States.

Chapter 3 - Documentation and Evidence

A. Entrepreneur

1. Ownership

The entrepreneur applying for parole is required to have a substantial ownership interest in the start-up entity. USCIS considers at least 10 percent ownership interest to be substantial at the time of the adjudication of the initial grant of parole and 5 percent to be substantial at the adjudication of re-parole.^[1]

Evidence of ownership interest may include, but is not limited to:

- Organizational documents (such as articles of incorporation, bylaws, articles of organization, operating agreement, certificate of partnership, or partnership agreement);
- Equity purchase or grant agreements;
- Equity ledger;
- Equity certificates;
- Ownership schedules;
- Capitalization tables; and
- Any other relevant, probative, and credible documentation establishing ownership.

2. Central and Active Role in a Start-up Entity

The applicant is required to have a central and active role in the start-up entity. Within that role, the applicant must be well-positioned, due to their knowledge, skills, or experience, to substantially assist the entity with the growth and success of its business.^[2]

The applicant must provide a detailed description of their central and active role in the start-up entity along with supporting evidence that may include, but is not limited to:

- Letters from relevant government agencies, qualified investors, or established business associations with an understanding of the applicant's knowledge, skills, or experience that would advance the entity's business;
- News articles or other similar evidence indicating that the applicant has received significant attention and recognition;
- Documentation showing that the applicant or entity has been recently invited to participate in, is currently participating in, or has graduated from one or more established and reputable start-up accelerators;
- Documentation showing that the applicant has played an active and central role in the success of prior startup entities or other relevant business entities;
- Degrees or other documentation indicating that the applicant has knowledge, skills, or experience that would significantly advance the entity's business;
- Documentation pertaining to intellectual property of the start-up entity, such as a patent, that was obtained by the applicant or as a result of the applicant's efforts and expertise;
- Position description; and
- Any other relevant, probative, and credible evidence indicating the applicant's ability to advance the entity's business in the United States.^[3]

B. Start-up Entity

A start-up entity is a U.S. business entity that was recently formed, has lawfully done business during any period of operation since its date of formation, and has substantial potential for rapid growth and job creation.^[4]

Evidence to demonstrate the company meets the definition of a start-up entity may include, but is not limited to:

- Organizational documents such as articles of incorporation, bylaws, articles of organization, operating agreements, certificates of partnership, partnership agreements, or other evidence of formation, as applicable;
- Tax records;
- Financial records; or
- Other relevant documentation.

C. Qualified Investment, Award, or Grant

1. Investment Option

If the applicant is using a qualified investment to demonstrate the start-up entity's potential for rapid growth and job creation, the applicant must provide evidence that a qualified investor is the source of the investment, as well as evidence of the amount and date of the investment in the start-up entity, rather than in a parent, subsidiary, affiliated, or related company.^[5]

Source of the Investment

If the investor is an individual, the applicant must submit evidence showing that the investor is a U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident (LPR) of the United States. The applicant should submit a copy of a government-issued identity document showing the photograph, name, and date of birth of the investor, along with evidence showing that the investor is a U.S. citizen or LPR of the United States. The copy must clearly show the photo and identity information.

If the investor is an organization, such as a venture capital firm or other U.S. business investing in the start-up entity, the applicant must submit evidence that the organization operates through a legal entity organized under the laws of the United States. Such evidence may include, but is not limited to, organizational documents such as articles of incorporation, bylaws, articles of organization, operating agreement, certificate of partnership, or partnership agreement.

The applicant must also submit evidence showing that the investing organization is majority owned and controlled, directly and indirectly, by U.S. citizens or LPRs of the United States.^[6] Such evidence may include an ownership structure chart outlining the direct and indirect ownership of the organization together with evidence that the individuals ultimately owning and controlling a majority of the organization are U.S. citizens or LPRs of the United States. Many investment firms based in the United States, such as venture capital firms, have a wide range of funding from limited partners that vest control in U.S. citizen partners who manage and even control the fund.

While USCIS does not require the applicant to establish that at least 50 percent of the capital contributed to the fund is sourced from U.S. citizens or LPRs, in the venture capital firm context, the applicant must nevertheless show that the firm is majority owned and controlled, directly and indirectly, by U.S. citizens or LPRs.

To demonstrate the individual investor's or organization investor's successful track record of investment in start-up entities, the applicant must submit evidence such as, but not limited to, bank records, wire transfers, debt agreements, equity purchase agreements, equity certificates, equity ledgers, or capitalization tables.

To satisfy the job creation or revenue generation requirement, the applicant must submit documentation, such as tax records, payroll records, Employment Eligibility Verification (Form I-9) records, or audited financial statements.

Receipt of the Investment

The applicant must submit evidence that the start-up entity received the investment.^[7] Such evidence may include copies of the start-up entity's bank records, accounting documents, or corporate ownership records. These records must demonstrate the trail of lawfully derived capital from a qualified investor into the applicant's start-up entity. The records must demonstrate that the invested capital was used to purchase equity, convertible debt, or other security convertible into an equity interest in the applicant's start-up entity.

2. Government Award or Grant Option

If the applicant is using a qualified government award or grant to establish the start-up entity's substantial potential for rapid growth and job creation, the applicant must submit evidence to establish that the award or grant is for economic development, research and development, or job creation (or other similar monetary award typically given to start-up entities), made by a federal, state, or local government entity that regularly provides such awards or grants to start-up entities.^[8] Such evidence may include records such as:

- Copies of grant or award letters;
- Other documentation from the government entity confirming the issuance of the award or grant, including the amount of the award or grant as well as the recipient; and
- Bank records confirming receipt of the award or grant.

3. Alternative Evidence Option

If the applicant provides sufficient evidence to demonstrate that they meet the regulatory definition of entrepreneur and that the entity meets the regulatory definition of a start-up but only partially meets the requirements for a qualified investment or a qualified award or grant, the applicant may provide other reliable and compelling evidence of the start-up entity's substantial potential for rapid growth and job creation.^[9]

In the final rule, DHS recognized that reliable and compelling evidence of the start-up entity's substantial potential for rapid growth may vary depending on the nature of the business and the industry in which it operates. Therefore, applicants providing other reliable and compelling evidence of the start-up entity's potential are not limited to certain types of evidence.^[10]

The preamble to the final rule, however, did recognize that non-monetary contributions and funding from non-U.S. sources may not be considered as relevant or probative evidence.^[11]

Additional supporting evidence may include, but is not limited to:

- Number of users or customers;
- Revenue generated by the start-up entity;
- Additional investments or fundraising, including through crowdfunding platforms;
- Social impact of the start-up entity;
- National scope of the start-up entity;
- Positive effects on the start-up entity's locality or region; and
- Any other reliable and compelling evidence that the start-up entity has substantial potential for rapid growth and job creation.

D. Significant Public Benefit

In addition to meeting the investment, grant, or award criteria, the applicant should submit additional supporting evidence describing their start-up idea and demonstrating its substantial potential for rapid growth and job creation. Such supporting evidence may include:

- Evidence of investments from any investors, government awards or grants, or revenue generation. Such evidence could include bank records, wire transfers, equity purchase agreements, equity certificates, equity ledgers, or capitalization tables;
- Letters from relevant government agencies, qualified investors, or established business associations with knowledge of the entity's research, products or services. Letters from the same organizations or individuals confirming that the applicant's knowledge, skills, or experience would advance the entity's business;
- Newspaper articles or other similar evidence that the applicant or their entity have received significant attention or recognition;
- Evidence that the applicant or their entity have been recently invited to participate in, are currently participating in, or have graduated from one or more established and reputable start-up accelerators;
- Patent awards or other documents indicating that the applicant or their entity are focused on developing new technologies or cutting-edge research;
- Evidence that the applicant has played an active and central role in the success of prior start-ups, such as letters from relevant government agencies, qualified investors, or established business associations with knowledge of the applicant's prior start-up activities;

- Degrees or other documentation indicating that the applicant has the knowledge, skills, or experience that would significantly advance their entity's business;
- Tax or payroll records, I-9 records, or other documents indicating that the applicant's entity has created qualified jobs before the applicant files for parole;
- Any other reliable evidence indicating the applicant's entity's potential for growth and the applicant's ability to advance their entity's business in the United States; or
- Any other evidence that a grant of parole would provide a significant public benefit to the United States based on the applicant's role as the entrepreneur of a start-up entity, if the other listed evidence does not apply to the applicant's entrepreneurial activities.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 212.19(a)(1).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 212.19(a)(1).

[^ 3] See 82 FR 5238, 5246 (PDF) (Jan. 17, 2017).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 212.19(a)(2).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 212.19(a)(5).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 212.19(a)(19).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 212.19(b)(2)(ii)(B)(1).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 212.19(a)(3).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 212.19(b)(2)(iii).

[^ 10] See 82 FR 5238, 5248 (PDF) (Jan. 17, 2017).

[^ 11] See 82 FR 5238, 5249, 5252 (PDF) (Jan. 17, 2017).

Chapter 4 - Adjudication

A. Discretion

USCIS' authority to grant international entrepreneur parole (IEP) is discretionary and decided on a case-by-case basis. The officer determines, based on the totality of the evidence, whether an applicant's presence in the United States will provide a significant public benefit and that the applicant otherwise merits a favorable exercise of discretion.

In determining whether an applicant's presence in the United States will provide a significant public benefit and whether a favorable exercise of discretion is warranted, USCIS considers and weighs all evidence, including any derogatory evidence or information, such as, but not limited to, evidence of criminal activity and national security concerns.^[1]

B. Decision

1. Approvals

If the applicant establishes that the applicant's presence in the United States will provide a significant public benefit, USCIS may, in its discretion, approve the application for the applicant to be paroled into the United States for a period of up to 30 months. After approval of the application, the applicant may appear at a port of entry to request to be paroled into the United States.^[2] The process after approval of the application is as follows:

Applicants in the United States

If the applicant is currently in the United States when USCIS approves the application, the applicant must obtain an advance parole document (Form I-512L) and depart the United States before appearing at a U.S. port of entry for a final parole determination by U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP). A pending or conditionally approved application does not authorize the applicant, if they are present in the United States in nonimmigrant status, to remain in the United States beyond the expiration of their authorized period of stay.

Applicants Outside the United States

For those other than Canadian nationals traveling directly from Canada, if the applicant is currently outside the United States when USCIS approves the application, the applicant must visit a U.S. embassy or consulate to obtain travel documentation before appearing at a U.S. port of entry for a final parole determination. The applicant would be subject to U.S. Department of State (DOS) rules pertaining to the process for obtaining travel documentation.

A Canadian national traveling directly from Canada to a U.S. port of entry may present an approved Application for Entrepreneur Parole (Form I-941) at the U.S. port of entry without first obtaining travel documentation from DOS.

Biometrics

If an applicant is residing outside the United States and seeking initial parole under the IEP program, the applicant must submit biometrics. USCIS will send the applicant a notice explaining where to submit biometrics after USCIS coordinates with DOS or the International USCIS field office closest to the applicant.

Grant of Parole

Although advance authorization of parole by USCIS does not guarantee that the applicant will be issued travel documentation by DOS or paroled by CBP upon their appearance at a port of entry, with a grant of advance parole, the applicant is issued a document authorizing travel (in lieu of a visa) indicating that, so long as circumstances do not meaningfully change after USCIS conditionally approves Form I-941, and DHS does not discover material information that was previously unavailable, CBP's discretion to parole the individual at a port of entry will likely be exercised favorably.

Work Authorization

An entrepreneur who is paroled into the United States is authorized for employment with the start-up entity incident to the conditions of the parole.^[3] It is not necessary for the parolee to apply for an Employment Authorization Document.

2. Denials

If the applicant fails to establish that the applicant's presence in the United States will provide a significant public benefit and that a favorable exercise of discretion is warranted, the officer denies the application and notifies the applicant in writing of the specific reasons for a denial.^[4] An applicant may not appeal or move to reopen or reconsider a denial of international entrepreneur parole.^[5] However, USCIS may reopen or reconsider a denial on its own motion.^[6]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 212.19(d)(1).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 212.19(d)(2).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 212.19(g) and 8 CFR 274a.12(b)(37).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 103.3(a)(1).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 212.19(d)(4).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 103.5(a)(5).

In general, the parolee may be considered for a single period of re-parole for up to 30 months^[1] as an international entrepreneur if the parolee demonstrates that a grant of parole will continue to provide a significant public benefit to the United States based on their role as an entrepreneur of a start-up entity.^[2]

A. Filing

Before expiration of the initial period of parole, an entrepreneur parolee may request an additional period of parole based on the same start-up entity that formed the basis for the initial period of parole. To request such parole, an entrepreneur parolee must timely file an Application for Entrepreneur Parole (Form I-941).^[3]

B. Criteria for Consideration

A parolee seeking re-parole must demonstrate that the parolee continues to be an entrepreneur and that the entity continues to be a start-up entity.^[4]

The applicant is no longer required to demonstrate an ownership interest of 10 percent when applying for re-parole. Instead, as of the date USCIS adjudicates the application for re-parole, the parolee must have retained at least a 5 percent ownership in the start-up entity.^[5]

1. General Criteria

The parolee may seek re-parole by establishing that during the initial parole period the entity has:

- Received a qualified investment, qualified government grants or awards, or a combination of such funding, of at least the amounts specified in the table below;
- Created at least five qualified jobs with the start-up entity; or
- Reached annual revenue in the United States of at least the amount specified in the table below and averaged 20 percent in annual revenue growth.^[6]

The following table outlines the required amount of investment, grants, awards, or revenue, which varies based on the date the applicant filed the Form I-941.

Filing Date	Investment, Grants, Awards, or Revenue Amount
Before October 1, 2021	$500,000
On or after October 1, 2021	$528,293

2. Alternative Criteria

A parolee who partially meets one or more of the general criteria above may alternatively provide other reliable and compelling evidence of the start-up entity's substantial potential for rapid growth and job creation.^[7]

C. Decision

1. Approval

If the applicant establishes that applicant's continued presence in the United States will provide a significant public benefit, USCIS may approve a single request for re-parole in its discretion.

If the entrepreneur is in the United States at the time that USCIS approves the request for re-parole, such approval is considered a grant of re-parole. If the entrepreneur is outside the United States at the time that USCIS approves the request for re-parole, the entrepreneur must appear at a port of entry to be granted parole by Customs and Border Protection (CBP), in lieu of admission.^[8]

2. Denial

If the applicant fails to establish that the applicant's presence in the United States will provide a significant public benefit and that a favorable exercise of discretion is warranted, the officer denies the application and notifies the applicant in writing of the specific reasons for a denial.^[9]

An applicant may not appeal or move to reopen or reconsider a denial of international entrepreneur parole.^[10] However, USCIS may reopen or reconsider a denial on its own motion.^[11]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 212.19(d)(3).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 212.19(c)(2)(i).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 212.19(c)(1).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 212.19(c)(2)(ii)(A).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 212.19(a)(1).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 212.19(c)(2)(ii)(B).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 212.19(c)(2)(iii). For more discussion of consideration of alternative evidence, see Chapter 3, Documentation and Evidence, Section C, Qualified Investment, Award, or Grant, Subsection 3, Alternative Evidence Option [3 USCIS-PM G.3(C)(3)].

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 212.19(d)(3).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 103.3(a)(1).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 212.19(d)(4).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 103.5(a)(5).

Chapter 6 - Family Members

An entrepreneur parolee's spouse and children may also apply for parole.^[1] The spouse and children of an entrepreneur parolee may be granted parole for no longer than the period of parole granted to the entrepreneur.^[2]

A. Application

The entrepreneur's spouse and children who are seeking parole as derivatives must individually file an Application for Travel Document (Form I-131) with evidence that the applicant has a qualifying relationship to the entrepreneur and otherwise merits a grant of parole in the exercise of discretion.^[3]

B. Work Authorization

The spouse of the entrepreneur parolee, after being paroled into the United States, may be eligible for employment authorization on the basis of parole under this section. To request employment authorization, an eligible spouse paroled into the United States must file an Application for Employment Authorization (Form I-765).^[4] The applicant must submit evidence establishing eligibility, including evidence of the spousal relationship.^[5]

A child of the entrepreneur parolee may not be authorized for and may not accept employment on the basis of parole.^[6]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 212.19(h).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 212.19(h)(2).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 212.19(h)(1).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 212.19(h)(3).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 212.19(h)(3).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 212.19(h)(4).

Chapter 7 - Conditions on Parole and Termination

USCIS may impose reasonable conditions in its sole discretion with respect to any parolee and may request verification of the parolee's compliance with any such condition at any time.^[1] Violation of any condition of parole may lead to termination of the parole or denial of re-parole.^[2]

USCIS, in its discretion, may terminate a grant of international entrepreneur parole at any time and without prior notice or opportunity to respond if it determines that the entrepreneur's continued parole in the United States no longer provides a significant public benefit.^[3]

Alternatively, USCIS, in its discretion, may provide the entrepreneur notice and an opportunity to respond before terminating the parole.^[4]

A. Conditions

As a condition of international entrepreneur parole, a parolee must maintain household income that is greater than 400 percent of the federal poverty guidelines for their household size as defined by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.^[5]

B. Reporting of Material Changes

Parolees are required to report any material changes to USCIS immediately.

If the entrepreneur will no longer be employed by the start-up entity or will cease to possess a qualifying ownership stake, the entrepreneur must immediately notify USCIS in writing.

If the start-up entity continues to employ the entrepreneur, who maintains a qualifying ownership interest, the entrepreneur must submit the Application for Entrepreneur Parole (Form I-941) with the applicable fee to notify USCIS of the material change.^[6]

A material change is any change in facts that could reasonably affect the outcome of the determination whether the entrepreneur provides, or continues to provide, a significant public benefit to the United States. Such changes include, but are not limited to:

- Any criminal charge, conviction, plea of no contest, or other judicial determination in a criminal case concerning the entrepreneur or start-up entity;
- Any complaint, settlement, judgment, or other judicial or administrative determination concerning the entrepreneur or start-up entity in a legal or administrative proceeding brought by a government entity;

- Any settlement, judgment, or other legal determination concerning the entrepreneur or start-up entity in a legal proceeding brought by a private individual or organization other than proceedings primarily involving claims for damages not exceeding 10 percent of the current assets of the entrepreneur or start-up entity;
- A sale or other disposition of all or substantially all of the start-up entity's assets;
- The liquidation, dissolution, or cessation of operations of the start-up entity;
- The voluntary or involuntary filing of a bankruptcy petition by or against the start-up entity;
- A significant change with respect to ownership and control of the start-up entity; and
- A cessation of the entrepreneur's qualifying ownership interest in the start-up entity or the entrepreneur's central and active role in the operations of that entity.^[7]

C. Automatic Termination

International entrepreneur parole or re-parole^[8] automatically terminates without notice upon the expiration of the time for which parole was authorized, unless, during the initial parole period, the parolee timely files a non-frivolous application for re-parole.^[9]

Before the expiration, USCIS automatically terminates parole when USCIS receives written notice from the entrepreneur parolee that the parolee will no longer be employed by the start-up entity or will cease to possess a qualifying ownership stake in the start-up entity.^[10]

When the entrepreneur's parole automatically terminates, the parole of the spouse or child of the entrepreneur also automatically terminates without notice.^[11] Any employment authorization based on terminated parole is automatically revoked.^[12]

D. Termination on Notice

USCIS may terminate the period of parole or re-parole upon written notice to the entrepreneur or the entrepreneur's spouse or children, as applicable, of its intent to terminate parole if USCIS believes that:

- The facts or information contained in the request for parole were not true and accurate;
- The parolee failed to timely file or otherwise comply with the material change reporting requirements;^[13]
- The entrepreneur parolee is no longer employed in a central and active role by the start-up entity or ceases to possess a qualifying ownership stake in the start-up entity;

- The parolee otherwise violated the terms and conditions of parole; or
- Parole was erroneously granted.^[14]

1. Notices of Intent to Terminate

A notice of intent to terminate generally identifies the grounds for termination of the parole and provides a period of up to 30 days for the parolee's written rebuttal.^[15] The parolee may submit additional evidence in support of the rebuttal, when applicable, and USCIS considers all relevant evidence presented in deciding whether to terminate the parole.^[16] Failure to timely respond to a notice of intent to terminate will result in termination of the parole.^[17]

2. Charging Documents

If a charging document is served on the parolee, the charging document will constitute written notice of termination of parole (if parole has not already been terminated), unless otherwise specified.^[18]

3. Termination Decisions

An applicant may not appeal or move to reopen or reconsider a termination of international entrepreneur parole.^[19] However, USCIS may reopen or reconsider a termination on its own motion.^[20]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 212.19(i).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 212.19(i).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 212.19(k)(1).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 212.19(k)(1).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 212.19(i).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 212.19(j).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 212.19(a)(10).

[^ 8] For more on re-parole, see Chapter 5, Additional Periods of Parole [3 USCIS-PM G.5].

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 212.19(k)(2). For more on applying for re-parole, see Chapter 5, Additional Periods of Parole [3 USCIS-PM G.5].

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 212.19(k)(2).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 212.19(k)(2).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 212.19(k)(2).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 212.19(j).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 212.19(k)(3).

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 212.19(k)(4).

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 212.19(k)(4).

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 212.19(k)(4).

[^ 18] See 8 CFR 212.19(k)(4).

[^ 19] See 8 CFR 212.19(k)(4).

[^ 20] See 8 CFR 103.5(a)(5).

Part H - Deferred Action

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 21 - Family-based Petitions and Applications \(External\) \(PDF, 1.82 MB\)

Part I - Humanitarian Emergencies

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 38 - Temporary Protected Status and Deferred Enforced Departure (External) (PDF, 285.23 KB)

Part J - Temporary Protected Status

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 38 - Temporary Protected Status and Deferred Enforced Departure (External) (PDF, 285.23 KB)

Volume 4 - Refugees and Asylees

In accordance with Section 4(m) of Executive Order 14013 of February 4, 2021, Rebuilding and Enhancing Programs to Resettle Refugees and Planning for the Impact of Climate Change on Migration, 86 FR 8839 (Feb. 9, 2021), and considering necessary safeguards for program integrity, USCIS published several current policies and procedures related to the U.S. Refugee Admissions Program. For more information, see the Refugee Adjudications: Policy and Procedures webpage.

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 21 - Family-based Petitions and Applications \(External\) \(PDF, 1.82 MB\)

Volume 5 - Adoptions

Part A - Adoptions Overview

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

Each year, thousands of U.S. citizens and lawful permanent residents adopt children from other countries. The adoption or legal custody of a foreign-born child alone does not convey U.S. immigration status to the child or enable the child to travel to the United States. Congress enacted legislation so that eligible foreign-born adoptees can obtain citizenship or lawful immigration status in the United States.

B. Scope

This volume addresses requirements for prospective adoptive parents (PAPs) and adoptive parents to submit immigrant petitions to USCIS on behalf of adopted children so they can obtain lawful immigration status in the United States.

This guidance does not address:

- Other adoption-related requirements, such as those of the child's country of origin,^[1] state of proposed residence,^[2] or other federal agencies, such as the U.S. Department of State (DOS);
^[3]

- The specific requirements for an adopted child to obtain U.S. citizenship;^[4] or
- Requirements for stepparents to file a petition based on the stepparent-stepchild relationship (and not based on an adoptive relationship).^[5]

C. Background

1. Adoption Processes

There are three different ways for a child to immigrate to the United States based on adoption. The laws, regulations, and eligibility requirements that govern immigration based on adoption depend on which of the processes the adoptive parent (petitioner) follows. The processes are:

- Hague Adoption Convention – for children from a country that is party to the Convention of 29 May 1993 on Protection of Children and Co-operation in Respect of Intercountry Adoption;^[6]
- Orphan (non-Hague) – for children from a country that is not party to the Hague Adoption Convention; and
- Family-based petition – for certain adopted children who have been in the legal custody of and jointly resided with the adoptive parent(s) for at least 2 years.

A child may only immigrate through the family-based process if the child was already adopted.^[7] The orphan and Hague Adoption Convention processes provide the option for a child to immigrate to the United States after an adoption outside of the United States or for the purpose of adoption in the United States.

2. Federal Agency Roles

Both USCIS and DOS play a role in the intercountry adoption and immigration process.

USCIS Roles

USCIS determines the:

- Eligibility and suitability of the adoptive parents (for the Hague Adoption Convention and orphan processes);
- Eligibility of a child to immigrate to the United States (for all three of the processes); and
- Eligibility of adoptees to receive a certificate of citizenship or to naturalize.

DOS Roles

The roles of DOS in intercountry adoption include the following:

- Serves as the U.S. Central Authority for the Hague Adoption Convention. This role includes monitoring accrediting entities to ensure that adoption service providers perform their functions consistent with the Hague Adoption Convention and the Intercountry Adoption Act.^[8]
- Determines the eligibility of a child to immigrate to the United States for certain orphan petitions filed outside the United States, completes the Determination on Child for Adoption (Form I-604) for certain orphan petitions, and completes the final adjudication of certain Hague Adoption Convention petitions at consular posts.
- Adjudicates visa applications for adopted children to immigrate to the United States.
- Adjudicates applications for U.S. passports.

3. Legislative History

The Displaced Persons Act of 1948 contained the first laws relating to the immigration of foreign-born orphans. In enacting legislation on foreign-born orphans and adoptees, Congress was primarily concerned with the welfare of the children. Since then, Congress has enacted several acts and amendments related to orphans and intercountry adoption. The table below provides an overview of major legislation and international treaties related to intercountry adoption.

Intercountry Adoption: Overview of Acts, Amendments, and Treaties

Acts and Amendments	Key Changes or Provisions
Displaced Persons Act of 1948 ^[9]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Contained the first laws relating to the immigration of foreign-born orphans.
The Act of September 26, 1961 ^[10]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Defined the term eligible orphan.
Immigration and Nationality Act of 1965 ^[11]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Defined the term orphan.
Immigration and Nationality Act Amendment of 1999 ^[12]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Amended the definition of a child to provide that an adopted child who is age 16 or over (but less than 18 years of age) may be considered a child under the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) if adopted with or after a sibling who is a child under INA 101(b)(1)(E) or INA 101(b)(1)(F).

Acts and Amendments	Key Changes or Provisions
Convention of 29 May 1993 on Protection of Children and Co-operation in Respect of Intercountry Adoption (Hague Adoption Convention)	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • An international treaty that provides safeguards to protect the best interests of children involved in intercountry adoptions. By setting clear procedures and prohibiting improper financial gain, the Convention provides greater security, predictability, and transparency for all parties to the adoption, including children, birth parents, and adoptive parents. • Entered into force for the United States on April 1, 2008.
Intercountry Adoption Act (IAA 2000) ^[13]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Added INA 101(b)(1)(G). Implemented the Hague Adoption Convention provisions in the United States on April 1, 2008. Requires the Hague process to be followed for any petition filed on or after April 1, 2008, by a U.S. citizen habitually resident in the United States seeking to adopt a child who is habitually resident in a foreign country that is a party to the Hague Adoption Convention. It also requires that individuals or bodies be accredited or approved to provide adoption services.
International Adoption Simplification Act of 2010 ^[14]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Amended INA 101(b)(1)(G) to allow the birth sibling of an adopted child described in INA 101(b)(1)(E)(i), INA 101(b)(1)(F)(i), or INA 101(b)(1)(G)(i) to qualify as a Hague Adoption Convention adoptee if a petition is filed before the birth sibling's 18th birthday.
Intercountry Adoption Universal Accreditation Act of 2012 (UAA) ^[15]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Amended requirements for orphan cases related to home studies, certain regulatory definitions, the duty of disclosure, and identifying a primary provider. Unless a limited exception applies,^[16] requirements for home studies for Hague Adoption Convention and orphan cases are now very similar. • Requires that adoption service providers (ASPs) providing adoption services in orphan cases follow the same accreditation or approval process required of ASPs providing such services in Hague Adoption Convention cases.

Acts and Amendments	Key Changes or Provisions
	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Assures that ASPs will comply with the same standards of practice and ethical conduct, regardless of the country from which the child will be adopted. • Made certain portions of the regulations governing adoptions completed under the Hague Adoption Convention applicable to (non-Hague) orphan cases.^[17]
Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2014 (CAA) ^[18]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Changed the INA definition of an orphan so that only one adoptive parent in a married couple has to personally see and observe the orphan before or during the adoption proceedings in order for the adoption to be considered full and final for immigration purposes.

D. Legal Authorities

- INA 101(b)(1)(E) – Definition of a child adoptee for family-based process
- INA 101(b)(1)(F) – Definition of a child adoptee for orphan process
- INA 101(b)(1)(G) – Definition of a child adoptee for Hague Adoption Convention process
- INA 201(b)(2)(A)(i) – Immediate relatives
- INA 203(a) – Preference allocation for family-sponsored immigrants
- INA 204 – Procedure for granting immigrant status
- 8 CFR 204.1 – General information about immediate relative and family-sponsored petitions
- 8 CFR 204.2(d) – Petition for a child or son or daughter
- 8 CFR 204.3 - Orphan cases under section 101(b)(1)(F) of the Act (non-Hague cases)
- 8 CFR 204 Subpart C – Intercountry adoption of a Convention adoptee
- 8 CFR 103.2 – Submission and adjudication of benefit requests

Footnotes

[^ 1] For general information on other countries' requirements, see the U.S. Department of State (DOS)'s Country Information webpage.

[^ 2] For general information about state laws, see the Child Welfare Information Gateway's State Laws Related to Adoption webpage.

[^ 3] For DOS guidance, see the Foreign Affairs Manual.

[^ 4] For guidance on citizenship for adopted children, see Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization, Part H, Children of U.S. Citizens [12 USCIS-PM H].

[^ 5] A stepparent is not required to adopt the stepchild in order for USCIS to approve a Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130) or Refugee/Asylee Relative Petition (Form I-730). For information on filing a Form I-130 based on a non-adoptive relationship, see Form I-130 instructions. For information on filing a Form I-730, see Form I-730 instructions. For guidance on citizenship for stepchildren, see Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization, Part H, Children of U.S. Citizens [12 USCIS-PM H].

[^ 6] The Convention of 29 May 1993 on Protection of Children and Co-operation in Respect of Intercountry Adoption is referred to in this Volume as the Hague Adoption Convention.

[^ 7] The adoption may have occurred in or outside of the United States. Certain restrictions may apply if the child is from a Hague Convention country. See Chapter 2, Adoption Processes [5 USCIS-PM A.2] for information on determining which adoption process (Hague Adoption Convention, orphan, or family-based) applies, depending on the PAP's circumstances.

[^ 8] See Pub. L. 106-279 (PDF) (October 6, 2000).

[^ 9] See Pub. L. 80-774 (PDF) (June 25, 1948).

[^ 10] See Pub. L. 87-301 (PDF) (September 26, 1961).

[^ 11] See Pub. L. 89-236 (PDF) (October 3, 1965).

[^ 12] See Pub. L. 106-139 (PDF) (December 7, 1999).

[^ 13] See Pub. L. 106-279 (PDF) (October 6, 2000).

[^ 14] See Pub. L. 111-287 (PDF) (November 30, 2010).

[^ 15] See Pub. L. 112-276 (PDF) (January 14, 2013).

[^ 16] The UAA does not apply to cases that meet certain criteria (for example, UAA-grandfathered cases). See Guidance on the Implementation of the Intercountry Adoption Universal Accreditation Act of 2012 and the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2014 in Intercountry Adoption Adjudications (PDF, 987.28 KB), PM-602-0103, issued June 30, 2014.

[^ 17] The regulations at 8 CFR 204.3(e) and certain definitions in 8 CFR 204.3(b) no longer apply in orphan cases that are subject to the UAA. See 8 CFR 204.301 for the definitions of adult member of the household, home study preparer, suitability as adoptive parent(s), officer, adoption, and applicant, which includes both a married U.S. citizen and the citizen's spouse. See 8 CFR 204.311 for home study requirements.

[^ 18] See Pub. L. 113-76 (PDF) (January 17, 2014).

Chapter 2 - Adoption Processes

The primary elements that determine which adoption process (Hague Adoption Convention, orphan, or family-based) an adoptive parent (petitioner) may follow include:

- The child's country of habitual residence;
- The petitioner's citizenship and country of habitual residence;
- The date of any adoption or legal custody order; and
- The length of time the child has been in the legal custody of and jointly resided with the petitioner.

The following table describes which process a petitioner generally must follow to petition for a child to immigrate based on adoption.

General Applicability of Adoption Processes

Process	General Principles
Hague Adoption Convention	Generally for U.S. citizens adopting children habitually resident in a Hague Adoption Convention country. ^[1]
Orphan	Generally for U.S. citizens adopting children who are not habitually resident in a Hague Adoption Convention country.
Family-Based Petition	Open to both U.S. citizens and lawful permanent residents (LPRs) of the United States. A U.S. citizen cannot, however, use the family-based petition process for a child that is from a Hague Adoption Convention country unless they can establish that the Convention does not apply.

Process	General Principles

A. Hague Adoption Convention^[2]

1. Applicability

The petitioner must follow the Hague Adoption Convention process if:^[3]

- The petitioner is a U.S. citizen who is habitually resident in the United States; and
- The petitioner seeks to adopt a child who is habitually resident in a Hague Adoption Convention country (other than the United States) based on an adoption occurring on or after April 1, 2008, and on or after the Hague Adoption Convention entered into force in the other country.^[4]

If the child is from a Hague Adoption Convention country, a U.S. citizen petitioner cannot pursue the orphan or family-based petition process unless the petitioner establishes that the Hague Adoption Convention does not apply. The U.S. Hague Adoption Convention process does not apply if:

- USCIS determines that the U.S. citizen petitioner was not habitually resident in the United States at the time of the adoption;
- The child was not deemed to be habitually resident in a Hague Adoption Convention country at the time of the adoption;
- The petitioner was not a U.S. citizen at the time of the adoption;
- The U.S. citizen petitioner completed the adoption before the Hague Adoption Convention went into effect for the United States (April 1, 2008) or the other country;^[5] or
- The U.S. citizen petitioner filed an orphan-based adoption petition or application^[6] whose period of approval or extension had not expired before the date the Hague Adoption Convention went into effect for the United States or the other country, provided that the laws of the child's country of origin permits continuation under the orphan process.^[7]

Habitual Residence Determinations - Prospective Adoptive Parent(s)

In general, for the purposes of petitioning for a Hague Convention adoptee, USCIS considers a U.S. citizen petitioner to be habitually resident in the United States at the time of the adoption unless:

- The petitioner adopted the child outside the United States and completed the 2-year legal custody and 2-year joint residence requirements for a family-based petition by living with the child outside the United States;^[8] or
- The petitioner establishes that the petitioner was not domiciled in the United States and did not intend to bring the child to the United States as an immediate consequence of the adoption.

Habitual Residence Determinations - Child

In general, USCIS considers a child's country of citizenship to be the child's country of habitual residence. USCIS may consider the child to be habitually resident in a country other than that of the child's citizenship if:

- The child actually resides in that country; and
- The Central Authority^[9] of the country the child is residing in, or another competent authority in either a Hague Adoption Convention or non-Hague country, determines that the child's status in that country is sufficiently stable to make it appropriate for that country to exercise jurisdiction over the adoption of the child.^[10]

Children who are Physically Present in the United States

USCIS deems a child who is present in the United States, but whose habitual residence was in another Hague Adoption Convention country before the child came to the United States, to be habitually resident in the other Hague Adoption Convention country.^[11] Therefore, a petitioner in this situation must generally follow the Hague Adoption Convention process,^[12] even if the child is already in the United States.^[13]

The petitioner may file a Hague Adoption Convention petition if the other Hague Adoption Convention country is willing to complete the Hague Adoption Convention process.^[14] If, however, the petitioner can establish^[15] that the Hague Adoption Convention and the implementing regulations no longer apply,^[16] then the petitioner may follow the family-based process.

2. Process

For the Hague Adoption Convention process, the petitioner must file both a suitability application^[17] and a petition^[18] for the child. The following table provides a summary of requirements to obtain lawful immigration status in the United States for the child through the Hague process.

Summary of Requirements

Requirement	Related Form	For More Information
USCIS must find that the prospective adoptive parent(s) (PAP(s)) is suitable and eligible to adopt.	Application for Determination of Suitability to Adopt a Child from a Convention Country (Form I-800A)	See Part B, Adoptive Parent Suitability Determinations [5 USCIS-PM B].
USCIS and the U.S. Department of State (DOS) must find that the child meets Hague Convention adoptee eligibility requirements.	Petition to Classify Convention Adoptee as an Immediate Relative (Form I-800)	See Part D, Child Eligibility Determinations (Hague) [5 USCIS-PM D]

B. Orphan

1. Applicability

The petitioner may follow the orphan process if:

- At least one of the PAPs is a U.S. citizen; and
- The child is not from a Hague Adoption Convention country.^[19]

If the child is from a Hague Adoption Convention country, a U.S. citizen cannot pursue the orphan petition process unless the petitioner establishes that the Hague Adoption Convention does not apply. ^[20]

2. Process

For the orphan process, the petitioner must file a suitability application^[21] and a petition^[22] for the child. The following table provides a summary of requirements to obtain lawful immigration status in the United States for the child through the orphan process.

Summary of Requirements

Requirement	Form	For More Information
USCIS must find that the PAP(s) is suitable and eligible to adopt.	Application for Advance Processing of an Orphan Petition (Form I-600A)	See Part B, Adoptive Parent Suitability Determinations [5 USCIS-PM B].

Requirement	Form	For More Information
USCIS (and DOS, as applicable) must find that the child meets orphan eligibility requirements.	Petition to Classify Orphan as an Immediate Relative (Form I-600)	See Part C, Child Eligibility Determinations (Orphan) [5 USCIS-PM C].

C. Family-Based

1. Applicability

Generally, the petitioner may follow the family-based^[23] petition process if:

- The adoptive parent petitioner is a U.S. citizen or LPR;
- The petitioner establishes the Hague Adoption Convention does not apply;^[24]
- A final adoption was completed before the child turned 16 (or 18 if the sibling exception applies); ^[25] and
- The child has been in the legal custody of and jointly resided with a U.S. citizen or LPR adoptive parent for at least 2 years at the time of filing the petition.

USCIS does not have the authority to waive the 2-year legal custody and 2-year joint residence requirement for a family-based petition, except for certain battered children.^[26]

If a U.S. citizen petitioner who was not habitually resident in the United States at the time of adoption decides to move to the United States, USCIS cannot approve a family-based petition for the child before the petitioner has satisfied the 2 year legal custody and 2 year joint residence requirements.^[27]

If the child is from a Hague Adoption Convention country, a U.S. citizen petitioner cannot follow the family-based petition process unless the petitioner establishes that the Hague Adoption Convention does not apply.^[28]

2. Process

The family-based petition process involves a USCIS determination that the child is eligible to immigrate as the adopted child, son, or daughter^[29] of the petitioner. In contrast to the other two processes, the family-based petition process does not involve a USCIS determination of the adoptive parent's suitability.

To pursue the family-based petition process, the petitioner may file a Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130).^[30]

The adoptive parent-child relationship^[31] is recognized in all applicable immigration requests under U.S. immigration law, including, but not limited to:

- Refugee/Asylee Relative Petition (Form I-730);
- Application for Certificate of Citizenship (Form N-600);
- Application for Citizenship and Issuance of Certificate Under Section 322 (Form N-600K); or
- A claim to eligibility for an immigrant visa as a derivative.^[32]

Adoption Between Hague Adoption Convention Countries Other Than the United States

An officer may encounter a petition or application related to an adoption in a Hague Adoption Convention country (other than the United States) for a child who is habitually resident in another Hague Adoption Convention country (other than the United States). The immigration laws of the United States determine whether an adoption properly certified according to the Hague Adoption Convention (by the Central Authorities of the other countries involved in the adoption) may form the basis for a U.S. immigration benefit.^[33]

Footnotes

[^ 1] For a list of countries that are party to the Hague Adoption Convention, see the U.S. Department of State (DOS)'s Convention Countries webpage.

[^ 2] See Part D, Child Eligibility Determinations (Hague) [5 USCIS-PM D].

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 204.303.

[^ 4] For a list of countries that are party to the Hague Adoption Convention, see the U.S. Department of State (DOS)'s Convention Countries webpage. For information on the entry into force date for each country, see the Hague Conference on Private International Law's webpage, Status Table.

[^ 5] If the petitioner acquired custody of the child for purposes of emigration and adoption before April 1, 2008, but did not actually complete the adoption before April 1, 2008, the adoption of the child on or after April 1, 2008, is governed by the Hague Adoption Convention.

[^ 6] See Application for Advance Processing of an Orphan Petition (Form I-600A) or a Petition to Classify Orphan as an Immediate Relative (Form I-600).

[^ 7] If the child's country of habitual residence agrees, such cases may proceed under the orphan process (known as transition cases). See Part C, Child Eligibility Determinations (Orphan) [5 USCIS-PM C].

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 204.2(d)(2)(vii)(D) and (E).

[^ 9] Central authority means the entity designated as such under Article 6(1) of the Hague Adoption Convention by any Convention country, or, in the case of the United States, DOS. See 22 CFR 96.2.

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 204.303(b).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 204.2(d)(2)(vii)(F).

[^ 12] See Part D, Child Eligibility Determinations (Hague) [5 USCIS-PM D].

[^ 13] However, a child from a Hague Adoption Convention country who is admitted to the United States as a refugee or granted asylum is no longer considered habitually resident in the child's prior country of citizenship or residence because the purpose of the child's travel to the United States was not in connection with an adoption, and would therefore not circumvent the Hague Adoption Convention. Restrictions on the approval of a Form I-130 for a child from a Hague Adoption Convention country do not apply to children admitted as refugees or granted asylum as they are no longer considered habitually resident in their country of citizenship or residence.

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 204.309(b)(4).

[^ 15] For information on related evidence the petitioner must file, including when the other country is not willing to complete the Hague Adoption Convention process, see Part E, Family-Based Adoption Petitions [5 USCIS-PM E].

[^ 16] USCIS can conclude that 8 CFR 204.2(d)(2)(vii)(F) no longer applies if there is a sufficient basis to establish that the Hague Adoption Convention and the implementing regulations no longer apply to a child who came to the United States from another Hague Adoption Convention country. USCIS interprets 8 CFR 204.303(b) to permit a finding that a child is habitually resident in the United States, even if, under 8 CFR 204.2(d)(2)(vii)(F), the child is initially presumed to be habitually resident in another Hague Adoption Convention country. For more information on requirements for making a determination that a child is not habitually resident in the Convention country, see Criteria for Determining Habitual Residence in the United States for Children from Hague Convention Countries (PDF, 745.49 KB), PM 602-0095, issued November 20, 2017.

[^ 17] See the Application for Determination of Suitability to Adopt a Child from a Convention Country (Form I-800A).

[^ 18] See the Petition to Classify Convention Adoptee as an Immediate Relative (Form I-800).

[^ 19] For a list of countries that are party to the Hague Adoption Convention, see DOS's Convention Countries webpage. For information on the entry into force date for each country, see the Hague Conference on Private International Law's Status Table webpage.

[^ 20] See Section A, Hague Adoption Convention, Subsection 1, Applicability [5 USCIS-PM A.2(A)(1)].

[^ 21] See the Application for Advance Processing of an Orphan Petition (Form I-600A). PAPs typically file the suitability application before the petition to determine the child's eligibility to immigrate based on the adoption. If the PAP has already identified a child for adoption, the PAP may apply for the suitability determination at the same time as the petition to determine the child's eligibility (known as a combination or concurrent filing), by filing evidence in support of the suitability determination with the Petition to Classify Orphan as an Immediate Relative (Form I-600).

[^ 22] See the Petition to Classify Orphan as an Immediate Relative (Form I-600).

[^ 23] See INA 101(b)(1)(E).

[^ 24] See Section A, Hague Adoption Convention, Subsection 1, Applicability [5 USCIS-PM A.2(A)(1)].

[^ 25] See Part E, Family-Based Adoption Petitions, Chapter 2, Eligibility, Section B, Qualifying Relationship [5 USCIS-PM E.2(B)].

[^ 26] See INA 101(b)(1)(E)(i).

[^ 27] If it becomes necessary to return to the United States before the 2-year legal custody and 2-year joint residence requirements are met, the petitioner may try to pursue the orphan process (if the child is not from a Hague Adoption Convention country) or the Hague Adoption Convention process instead of the family-based adoption process. The petitioner may encounter issues, however, if the child was adopted before the completion of the Hague Adoption Convention process. See Part D, Child Eligibility Determinations (Hague), Chapter 3, Required Order of Immigration and Adoption Steps [5 USCIS-PM D.3].

[^ 28] See Section A, Hague Adoption Convention, Subsection 1, Applicability [5 USCIS-PM A.2(A)(1)].

[^ 29] See Part E, Family-Based Adoption Petitions, Chapter 2, Eligibility, Section A, Age, Marital Status, and Immigration Status Requirements [5 USCIS-PM E.2(A)].

[^ 30] See Part E, Family-Based Adoption Petitions [5 USCIS-PM E].

[^ 31] As described in INA 101(b)(1)(E).

[^ 32] See INA 203(d).

[^ 33] See INA (101)(b)(1).

Chapter 3 - U.S. Citizens Residing Outside the United States

Options for a child to obtain U.S. immigration status based on adoption by a U.S. citizen prospective adoptive parent (PAP) who resides outside of the United States depend on many factors, including:

- Whether the family will continue to reside outside the United States or will reside in the United States before the child turns age 18;
- The laws of the country where the PAP resides; and
- The laws of the country where the child resides (if different from the PAP's country of residence).

Before initiating an adoption or legal custody, the PAP should contact the competent authority (for non-Hague countries) or Central Authority (for Hague Adoption Convention countries) in the country where the PAP resides and where the child resides (if different). These authorities may provide more information to assist the PAP in understanding the process a U.S. citizen residing in that foreign country may be required to follow regarding the adoption and immigration of the child.^[1]

A domestic adoption or legal custody of a child in the child's country of origin alone does not convey U.S. immigration status to the child or enable the child to travel to the United States. If a U.S. citizen^[2] PAP residing outside of the United States wishes to secure lawful U.S. immigration status for the PAP's adopted child, the PAP generally may use one of the U.S. immigration processes (Hague Adoption Convention, orphan, or family-based).

The following table explains which U.S. immigration process a PAP who resides outside of the United States generally may pursue,^[3] based on whether the child resides in a country that is a party to the Hague Adoption Convention.

Immigration Options for Adopted Children of U.S. Citizens Residing Outside the United States

If child resides in...	U.S. immigration processes ^[4] generally available
Non-Hague country	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Orphan process (using the Application for Advance Processing of an Orphan Petition (Form I-600A) or Petition to Classify Orphan as an Immediate Relative (Form I-600)); or• Family-based petition process (using Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130))

If child resides in...	U.S. immigration processes ^[4] generally available
Hague Adoption Convention country	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Hague Adoption Convention process (using the Application for Determination of Suitability to Adopt a Child from a Convention Country (Form I-800A) or Petition to Classify Convention Adoptee as an Immediate Relative (Form I-800)); or • Family-based petition process (Form I-130) if the PAP can establish that the Hague Adoption Convention does not apply

This table does not address the process to obtain U.S. citizenship for the child.^[5]

Additional Considerations for Children from a Hague Adoption Convention Country

Generally, a U.S. citizen who adopts a child from a Hague Adoption Convention country must use the Hague Adoption Convention process.^[6] The U.S. Hague Adoption Convention process is generally available to any U.S. citizen residing outside the United States.^[7]

The Hague Adoption Convention requires a determination of the U.S. citizen PAP's habitual residence. If the PAP resides in a Hague Adoption Convention country, the Central Authority of the PAP's country of residence generally determines whether it considers the PAP to be habitually resident in that country for the purpose of adoption under the Hague Adoption Convention process.

If the Central Authority of that country determines the PAP is habitually resident in the country where the PAP resides, and it is the receiving country for the purposes of adoption of a child from another Hague Adoption Convention partner country, the PAP generally must follow the Hague Adoption Convention process of the country where the PAP is habitually resident.

The PAP may also be able to simultaneously pursue the U.S. Hague Adoption Convention process to immigrate the child to the United States if the PAP is able to obtain the required Convention documents from the Central Authority in the child's country of origin. However, if the PAP is not able to obtain the required Convention documents, the U.S. Hague Adoption Convention process may not be available.

Footnotes

[^ 1] For information about the competent or central adoption authorities in each country and to determine if a particular country is party to the Hague Adoption Convention, see the U.S. Department of State's webpage, Country Information.

[^ 2] A lawful permanent resident of the United States may follow the family-based process, if otherwise eligible.

[^ 3] The same processes that are available to PAPs who reside in the United States are generally available to PAPs who reside outside of the United States. For more information on applicability of adoption processes, see Chapter 2, Adoption Processes [5 USCIS-PM A.2].

[^ 4] For information on how to secure U.S. citizenship for the child of a PAP residing outside the United States, see Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization, Part H, Children of U.S. Citizens [12 USCIS-PM H].

[^ 5] For information on citizenship for adopted children, see Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization, Part H, Children of U.S. Citizens [12 USCIS-PM H]. For information on the naturalization process for children who reside outside of the United States, see Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization, Part H, Acquisition of Citizenship After Birth, Chapter 5, Child Residing Outside of the United States (INA 322) [12 USCIS-PM H.5].

[^ 6] The petitioner may encounter issues, however, if the child was adopted before the completion of the Hague Adoption Convention process. See Part D, Child Eligibility Determinations (Hague), Chapter 3, Required Order of Immigration and Adoption Steps [5 USCIS-PM D.3].

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 204.303.

Chapter 4 - Adoption Definition and Order Validity

A child may be eligible to immigrate through the orphan or Hague Adoption Convention process if otherwise eligible and:

- The child was adopted, and the adoption meets the definition of an adoption for immigration purposes; or
- The child is not yet the subject of a final adoption^[1] but meets certain criteria to come to the United States for adoption.^[2]

Unlike the Hague Adoption Convention and orphan processes, a child may only immigrate through the family-based process if the child was already adopted (and is otherwise eligible).

Definition of Adoption

To meet the definition of adoption for immigration purposes, an adoption must create a legal status comparable to that of a natural legitimate child between the adopted child and the adoptive parent.

[3] An adoption must be valid under the law of the country or place granting the order and must:

- Terminate the legal parent-child relationship between the child and the prior legal parent(s);
- Create a legal permanent parent-child relationship between the child and the adoptive parent; and
- Comply with the law of the country or place granting the adoption.

A. Determining the Validity and Effect of an Adoption

In general, USCIS accepts an adoption decree or order as primary evidence of an adoption. The validity of an adoption is relevant to the eligibility of a child to immigrate to the United States on the basis of adoption.^[4] The law of the jurisdiction that issued the adoption order determines the validity of the adoption.^[5]

USCIS may question the validity of the adoption order if there is credible and probative evidence that:

- The adoption was flawed in its execution, such as when the court (or other official body) granting the adoption appears to have lacked jurisdiction over the adoption, when the prior legal parent(s) did not consent to the adoption, or were not given proper notice of the termination of parental rights;
- The adoption was granted due to official corruption or the use of fraud or material misrepresentation; or
- The adoption order document is fraudulent.^[6]

If there is credible and probative evidence that the adoption may be invalid for one of these reasons, the burden falls on the petitioner to establish that the adoption is valid under the law of the jurisdiction where the adoption order was issued.

1. Adoption as Judicial or Administrative Act

The law of the jurisdiction that issued the adoption order governs what official act constitutes an adoption in that jurisdiction. In many countries, adoption is a judicial process. The evidence of the adoption is therefore a court order. In other countries, adoption is an administrative process, not a judicial process. For example, in some countries, adoption is accomplished by adding the adopted child to one's Family Registry.^[7] In some countries, a legal adoption can be accomplished according to legal custom, without a court or administrative order.

2. Whether Adoption is Legally Possible in a Given Jurisdiction

The law of the jurisdiction where the adoption order was issued governs whether or not a legal parent-child relationship can be created by adoption.

Islamic Law

With some limited exceptions,^[8] in countries that follow traditional Islamic law, adoption in the sense required for immigration purposes generally does not exist.^[9] Typically, a Kafala order is issued in countries that follow traditional Islamic law, and while the Kafala order may grant legal custody sufficient for purposes of emigration for adoption, they generally do not terminate the legal parent-child relationship with their prior parents. For that reason, a Kafala order generally would not qualify as an adoption for immigration purposes. In countries which follow traditional Islamic Law, the specific laws of that country must be applied in considering the legal effect of an adoption order, and its validity for immigration purposes.

Multi-Ethnic or Multi-Religious Countries

In some multi-ethnic or multi-religious countries, the personal status laws for each ethnic or religious group governs adoptions. In such countries, different bodies of law govern adoption for different children, even within the same neighborhood. For example, an adoption valid for immigration purposes may not be available for a Muslim child under Islamic family law but may be available for another child under Jewish or Christian family law.

3. Customary Adoption

In some countries, customary adoption may exist instead of, or in addition to, adoption through a judicial or administrative procedure. If a customary adoption terminates the legal parent-child relationship with the prior parents and creates a legal parent-child relationship with the adoptive parent under local law, then that customary adoption is valid for immigration purposes.^[10]

The petitioner has the burden to show that the law of the jurisdiction where the adoption order was issued actually creates a valid adoption for immigration purposes.^[11] The petitioner must establish that the customary adoption complies with the requirements of the relevant customary law and meets the definition of adoption for immigration purposes.^[12]

4. Simple Adoption

Some countries have a type of adoption commonly called simple adoption, in addition to another type that may be called full, plenary, or perfect adoption. Whether simple adoption is valid for immigration purposes depends on the law of the jurisdiction where the adoption order was issued.^[13]

Even if a simple adoption might be more easily terminated than a full adoption, the petitioner may still establish that a permanent relationship was created by the simple adoption. A simple adoption may be valid for immigration purposes if it meets the definition of an adoption for immigration purposes and the parent-child relationship cannot be terminated for other than serious or grave reasons. If a simple adoption creates a permanent legal parent-child relationship, it might be valid for immigration purposes.^[14]

5. Contact with Birth or Prior Parents After the Adoption

The mere fact that contact between the adoptee and the birth or prior parents (as in open adoptions) is ongoing does not mean that the legal parent-child relationship with the prior legal parent(s) was not terminated. As long as the adoptive parents, rather than the prior parents, exercise full parental authority over the child as a result of the adoption, the adoption order may be valid to form the basis of granting an immigration benefit under U.S. immigration law (if otherwise eligible).

6. Adoptive Stepparents

In some jurisdictions, the law allows a stepparent to adopt the child(ren) of the stepparent's spouse if the legal parent-child relationship with the other legal or birth parent has been terminated by death or legal action. Such termination may meet the requirement that the legal parent-child relationship between the child and the prior legal parent(s) was terminated. The continuing legal parent-child relationship between the child and the adopting stepparent's spouse does not preclude recognition of the adoption.

7. Evidence About the Applicable Adoption Law

The law of the jurisdiction where the adoption order was issued is a question of fact that the petitioner must prove with evidence.^[15] If the evidence of record does not clearly show that an adoption creates a permanent legal parent-child relationship, the officer issues a request for evidence (RFE) or notice of intent to deny (NOID) asking for a copy of the relevant laws, along with properly certified English translations.^[16] In this way, the officer provides the petitioner with notice and an opportunity to respond before denying a petition based on information about the jurisdiction's adoption law that the petitioner may not be aware of.^[17]

B. Effect of an Adoption

If the requirements for an adoption-based petition have been met, the adoptee is considered to be the child, son, or daughter of the adopting parent(s), not the birth parent(s), for immigration purposes.^[18] Similarly, the adoptee is considered the sibling of the adoptive parent's other legal children, but not of the birth parent's children.^[19]

Petition by Adopted Child for Birth Parent(s) Prohibited

An adoption that meets the requirements in immigration law and terminates any prior legal parent-child relationship^[20] precludes the birth parent(s) from gaining any immigration benefit from that child.

[21] Accordingly, such child is prohibited from petitioning for the child's birth parent(s), since the relationship between the child and the birth parent(s) was severed at the time of the adoption.

If, however, the adoption in question did not terminate the legal parent-child relationship with the birth parent, then the relationship between the child and the birth parent(s) was not severed, and the child is not prohibited from petitioning for such birth parent(s). A natural parent-child relationship can again be recognized for immigration purposes following the legal termination of an adoption if the petitioner can establish that:

- No immigration benefit was obtained or conferred through the adoptive relationship;
- A natural parent-child relationship meeting the requirements of INA 101(b) once existed;
- The adoption has been lawfully terminated under applicable law; and
- The natural relationship has been reestablished by law.^[22]

C. Effect of Legal Termination of an Adoption

The law of the jurisdiction where the legal termination of the adoption was ordered governs the validity of a termination of an adoption.

Termination of an adoption does not necessarily mean that the legal parent-child relationship has actually been restored with the prior legal parent(s).^[23] Even if the child received no immigration benefits as a result of the adoption, the evidence must show that the legal relationship to the prior legal parent(s) is re-established according to law in order for that relationship to form the basis for granting a benefit under U.S. immigration law.

Footnotes

[^ 1] Not all countries grant a final adoption for immigration purposes. The petitioner may also obtain a legal custody order for purposes of emigration and adoption.

[^ 2] For criteria for orphan cases, see Part C, Child Eligibility Determinations (Orphan), Chapter 5, Qualifying Adoptive or Custodial Relationship [5 USCIS-PM C.5]. For criteria for Hague Adoption Convention cases, see Part D, Child Eligibility Determinations (Hague), Chapter 2, Eligibility, Section C, Qualifying Adoptive or Custodial Relationship [5 USCIS-PM D.2(C)].

[^ 3] See Matter of Mozeb (PDF), 15 I&N Dec. 430 (BIA 1975).

[^ 4] See Guidance for Determining if an Adoption is Valid for Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) Purposes (PDF, 854.17 KB), PM 602-0070.1, issued November 6, 2012.

[^ 5] See Matter of T-, 6 I&N Dec. 634 (1955).

[^ 6] Not recognizing an adoption in one of these situations is consistent with legal principles generally observed by courts in the United States with respect to foreign country judgments. See Sections 482(2)(a)-(c) of Restatement (Third) Foreign Relations Law of the United States.

[^ 7] See Matter of Cho (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 188 (BIA 1977).

[^ 8] See Guidance for Determining if an Adoption is Valid for Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) Purposes (PDF, 854.17 KB), PM 602-0070.1, issued November 6, 2012.

[^ 9] See Matter of Mozeb (PDF), 15 I&N Dec. 430 (BIA 1975). See Matter of Ashree, Ahmed and Ahmed (PDF), 14 I&N Dec. 305 (BIA 1973).

[^ 10] See Matter of Lee (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 511 (BIA 1978).

[^ 11] See Matter of Annang (PDF), 14 I&N Dec. 502 (BIA 1973).

[^ 12] See Matter of Kodwo (PDF), 24 I&N Dec. 479 (BIA 2008).

[^ 13] For example, in Matter of Kong (PDF), 15 I&N Dec. 224 (BIA 1975), Matter of Kong (PDF) 14 I&N Dec. 649 (BIA 1974) and Matter of Chang (PDF), 14 I&N Dec. 720 (BIA 1974), the Board of Immigration Appeals (BIA) held that “Appatitha,” a form of simple adoption in Burma, did not create a legal parent-child relationship.

[^ 14] See Matter of Chin (PDF), 12 I&N Dec. 240 (BIA 1967).

[^ 15] See Matter of Annang (PDF), 14 I&N Dec. 502 (BIA 1973).

[^ 16] See Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications [1 USCIS-PM E].

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(16).

[^ 18] See INA 101(b)(1).

[^ 19] See Matter of Li (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 700 (BIA 1993).

[^ 20] See Guidance for Determining if an Adoption is Valid for Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) Purposes (PDF, 854.17 KB), PM 602-0070.1, issued November 6, 2012.

[^ 21] See INA 101(b)(1). See Matter of Li (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 700 (BIA 1993).

[^ 22] See Matter of Xiu Hong Li (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 13, 13 (BIA 1995).

[^ 23] As the Board noted in Xiu Hong Li, “We do not assume that natural relationships are automatically reestablished solely by virtue of the fact that an adoption has been lawfully terminated.” See Matter of Xiu Hong Li (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 13 (BIA 1995).

Chapter 5 - Authorized Adoption Service Providers

The Intercountry Universal Accreditation Act of 2012 (UAA) requires that all agencies or persons providing adoption services in orphan and Hague Adoption Convention cases be accredited or approved, unless a limited exception applies.^[1] Supervised providers, exempted providers, public domestic authorities, and public foreign authorities do not require accreditation or approval.

Adoption service means any one of the following six services:^[2]

- Identifying a child for adoption and arranging an adoption;
- Securing the necessary consent to termination of parental rights and to adoption;
- Performing a background study on a child or a home study on a prospective adoptive parent(s) (PAP(s)), and reporting on such a study;
- Making non-judicial determinations of the best interests of a child and the appropriateness of an adoptive placement for the child;
- Monitoring a case after a child has been placed with PAP(s) until final adoption; or
- When necessary, because of a disruption before final adoption, assuming custody and providing (including facilitating the provision of) childcare or any other social service pending an alternative placement.

A primary adoption service provider is the accredited agency or approved person who is responsible under 22 CFR 96 for ensuring all six adoption services defined in 22 CFR 96.2 are provided according to the law, for supervising and being responsible for supervised providers when used,^[3] and for developing and implementing a service plan in accordance with 22 CFR 96.44.^[4] PAPs provide primary adoption service provider information on the petition for orphan and Hague cases.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See the Intercountry Adoption Universal Accreditation Act of 2012, Pub. L. 112-276 (PDF) (January 14, 2013). See Guidance on the Implementation of the Intercountry Adoption Universal Accreditation Act of 2012 and the Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2014 in Intercountry Adoption Adjudications (PDF, 987.28 KB), PM-602-0103, issued June 30, 2014 and USCIS' Universal Accreditation Act webpage. See the U.S. Department of State (DOS) Accreditation Regulations at 22 CFR 96. For a list of accredited agencies and approved persons, see DOS' Adoption Service Provider Search webpage.

[^ 2] Defined at 22 CFR 96.2.

[^ 3] See 22 CFR 96.14.

[^ 4] See 22 CFR 96.

Part B - Adoptive Parent Suitability Determinations

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

USCIS must find that a prospective adoptive parent (PAP)^[1] is suitable and eligible to adopt for a PAP to complete the intercountry adoption process, whether through the Hague Adoption Convention^[2] or orphan (non-Hague) process. Congress gave this authority to USCIS to ensure that only people who can provide proper parental care are approved for intercountry adoption.

USCIS has the sole authority to determine the suitability and eligibility of PAPs for intercountry adoption. USCIS makes suitability determinations based on the evidence in the record, including the PAP's home study and the results of criminal background and security checks.

B. Scope

The guidance in this Part only applies to Hague Adoption Convention and orphan cases. Certain children may be eligible to immigrate based on a family-based adoption petition,^[3] which does not require a USCIS determination of the adoptive parent's suitability.

C. Background

USCIS must be satisfied that the PAP remains suitable and eligible to adopt a child throughout the intercountry adoption process. This involves a USCIS suitability determination at all the following points:

- Before USCIS can approve any suitability application, extension request, request for an updated approval notice, or change of country request;^[4]
- Before USCIS (or the U.S. Department of State (DOS), where designated) can approve any intercountry adoption-related petition; and
- Before DOS issues any immigrant visa and the child immigrates to the United States.

Both DHS and DOS have rules that govern home studies for intercountry adoptions. The Intercountry Adoption Universal Accreditation Act of 2012 (UAA),^[5] effective July 14, 2014, impacted requirements for home studies in orphan cases, including home study preparation, home study elements, and the duty of disclosure.^[6] As a result and unless an exception applies,^[7] Hague Adoption Convention and orphan suitability determinations are now very similar.

D. Legal Authorities

- INA 101(b)(1)(F) – Definition of a child for orphan process
- INA 101(b)(1)(G) – Definition of a child for Hague Adoption Convention process
- 8 CFR 204.3 – Orphan cases under section 101(b)(1)(F) of the Act (non-Hague cases)
- 8 CFR 204 Subpart C – Intercountry adoption of a Convention adoptee (Hague Adoption Convention cases)
- 22 CFR 96 – Intercountry adoption accreditation of agencies and approval of persons

Footnotes

[^ 1] In this Part, the term PAP refers to the applicant or petitioner and the PAP's spouse, if any.

[^ 2] The Convention of 29 May 1993 on Protection of Children and Co-operation in Respect of Intercountry Adoption is referred to in this Part as the Hague Adoption Convention.

[^ 3] See Part E, Family-Based Adoption Petitions [5 USCIS-PM E].

[^ 4] Extension requests, requests for an updated approval notice, and change of country requests are all requests for action on an approved and valid suitability application. For more information on these types of requests, see Chapter 5, Action on Pending or Approved Suitability Determinations [5 USCIS-PM B.5].

[^ 5] See Pub. L. 112-276 (PDF) (January 14, 2013).

[^ 6] The UAA superseded parts of the orphan regulations at 8 CFR 204.3 and made certain portions of the regulations governing adoptions completed under the Hague Adoption Convention at 8 CFR 204.300 through 8 CFR 204.314 applicable to orphan cases.

[^ 7] See the Intercountry Adoption Universal Accreditation Act of 2012, Pub. L. 112-276 (PDF) (January 14, 2013). For more information on when this Act applies, see The Universal Accreditation Act of 2012 webpage.

A. Eligibility

A prospective adoptive parent (PAP) is eligible to adopt if the PAP meets the following requirements:

- The applicant^[1] is a U.S. citizen;
- If married, the applicant's spouse must:
 - Intend to also adopt the child; and
 - Be in lawful immigration status if residing in the United States.^[2]
- If single, is at least 24 years old when filing the suitability application,^[3] and at least 25 years old when filing the immigration petition;^[4] and
- Establish that they will provide proper parental care.

B. Filing

1. Advanced Processing

To apply to have the suitability determination processed in advance, the PAP must file an Application for Advance Processing of an Orphan Petition (Form I-600A), in accordance with the form instructions and include all applicable supplements^[5] and evidence.

2. Combination Filing

PAPs typically file the suitability application before the petition to determine the child's eligibility to immigrate based on adoption. If the PAP has already identified a child for adoption, the PAP may apply for the suitability determination at the same time as the petition to determine the child's eligibility (known as a combination or concurrent filing).

To submit a combination filing, the PAP should file the supporting documentation and evidence for the suitability determination (in addition to the documentation relating to the identified child), with the petition to determine the child's eligibility.^[6]

C. Documentation and Evidence

The PAP must submit evidence in accordance with the form instructions.^[7] The following is a summary of the evidence the PAP must provide.

1. Proof of the Applicant's U.S. Citizenship

The applicant must submit proof of U.S. citizenship. Examples of such proof include a birth certificate, an unexpired U.S. passport, a certificate of naturalization, or a certificate of citizenship. If such primary evidence is unavailable, USCIS may consider secondary evidence.^[8]

2. Proof of the Spouse's Immigration and Citizenship Status (If Applicable)

If the applicant is married, they must submit evidence that their spouse is a U.S. citizen, noncitizen U.S. national, or is otherwise in a lawful immigration status, provided the spouse resides in the United States. Examples of evidence of U.S. citizenship or U.S. national status include a birth certificate, an unexpired U.S. passport, a certificate of naturalization, or a certificate of citizenship. Examples of evidence of lawful immigration status may consist of a Permanent Resident Card (Form I-551), a foreign passport with an I-551 stamp, a foreign passport with an unexpired visa and a valid admission stamp, a valid Arrival/Departure Record (Form I-94), or other evidence of lawful status in the United States.

3. Proof of Marriage (If Applicable)

If married, the PAP must submit a copy of their marriage certificate.

If previously married, the PAP must include evidence of the termination of any prior marriages. Examples of such proof include, but are not limited to, a divorce decree, annulment decree, other legal termination of the marriage, or death certificate of previous spouse.

4. Proof of Compliance with Pre-Adoption Requirements (If Applicable)

If the suitability application or combination filing indicates that the child will be coming to the United States for adoption, the PAP must establish that any pre-adoption requirements of the state of the child's intended residence have been or will be met. USCIS considers an orphan to be coming to the United States for adoption if:

- Neither parent personally saw and observed the child before or during the adoption;
- The PAP will not complete the adoption outside the United States (and will therefore need to complete the adoption in the United States); or
- In the case of a married couple, only one of the adoptive parents adopts the child outside of the United States (therefore, the spouse will need to adopt the child in the United States).

5. Biometrics

The PAPs and any adult members of the household^[9] must submit biometrics.^[10]

For those residing in the United States, USCIS schedules biometrics collection at an Application Support Center (ASC). Persons residing outside of the United States must submit biometrics at a USCIS international field office, U.S. embassy, consulate, or military installation.

USCIS considers biometric based background check results to be valid for a period of 15 months. The PAP or additional adult member of the household (AMH) may need to update their biometrics during the intercountry adoption process.^[11]

Unclassifiable Biometrics

USCIS submits biometrics to the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) for criminal history background checks. On occasion, the FBI is unable to provide USCIS with a criminal history based on biometrics submitted. When this happens, the FBI refers to the biometrics as “unclassifiable.” If USCIS receives two consecutive sets of unclassifiable biometrics,^[12] USCIS issues a Request for Evidence (RFE) to the PAP or adult household member for police clearances^[13] for all residences (domestic or foreign) for the last 5 years. If a U.S. state record is available, it is required in place of a clearance from a local police department:

- When an arrest record is needed to provide information about a conviction;
- To document that there were no arrests; or
- To document that an arrest did not lead to court action.

Police clearances are not available from certain countries.^[14] If a police clearance is generally available, but a country is unable to provide one, the PAP or adult household member must provide a letter from the appropriate foreign authority stating that it is not available.

Like other criminal history results, police clearance letters are also valid for a period of 15 months from the date of issuance. If more than one letter is submitted, the date of the earlier letter becomes the validity period start date.

6. Home Study^[15]

The PAP must submit a valid, original^[16] home study to USCIS within 1 year of filing the suitability application.^[17] If the PAP makes a combination (or concurrent) filing, the PAP must submit the home study with the filing.

The PAP may need to update the home study during the intercountry adoption process.^[18] The home study, or the most recent update of the home study, cannot be more than 6 months old at the time of submission to USCIS. This means that no more than 6 months have passed since the home study preparer signed and dated the home study. If a home study will be more than 6 months old at the time of submission to USCIS, the PAP must ensure that it is updated by the home study preparer before submission.^[19]

Footnotes

[^ 1] The applicant refers to the person who is filing the suitability application or the petitioner who is filing a combination or concurrent filing. For information on combination filings, see Section B, Filing, Subsection 2, Combination Filings [5 USCIS-PM B.2(B)(2)].

[^ 2] If the spouse is not a U.S. citizen, noncitizen U.S. national, or a lawful permanent resident, the officer should evaluate the impact of this status on the stability and suitability of the home. For example, a U.S. citizen who ordinarily resides outside the United States could be temporarily assigned to a job in the United States and the U.S. citizen's spouse may be eligible for a valid nonimmigrant status during the term of the U.S. citizen's temporary assignment to the United States. Generally, the lack of LPR status of the spouse would not preclude a favorable suitability determination. Similarly, USCIS factors a spouse who resides outside the United States into the suitability determination.

[^ 3] See Application for Advance Processing of an Orphan Petition (Form I-600A). See Application for Determination of Suitability to Adopt a Child from a Convention Country (Form I-800A).

[^ 4] See the Petition to Classify Orphan as an Immediate Relative (Form I-600).

[^ 5] See Listing of Adult Member of the Household (Supplement 1 for Form I-600A and I-600). See Consent to Disclose Information (Supplement 2 for Form I-600A and I-600).

[^ 6] See Petition to Classify Orphan as an Immediate Relative (Form I-600).

[^ 7] See instructions for Application for Determination of Suitability to Adopt an Orphan (Form I-600A).

[^ 8] For more information on secondary evidence, see 8 CFR 204.1(g)(2). See instructions for Application for Advance Processing of an Orphan Petition (Form I-600A).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 204.301.

[^ 10] For more information on biometrics collection, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part C Biometrics Collection and Security Checks, Chapter 2, Biometrics Collection [1 USCIS-PM C.2].

[^ 11] For information on biometrics validity and updates, see Chapter 5, Action on Pending or Approved Suitability Determinations, Section E, Biometrics Validity and Updates [5 USCIS-PM B.5(E)].

[^ 12] The physical condition of certain hands or fingers may make it difficult to collect a useable set of fingerprints. For example, a person could have a medical or skin condition or may have worked with chemicals that damaged the surface of their fingers. If the FBI deems a person's fingerprints unclassifiable, that person must provide a second set of biometrics unless USCIS grants an exemption.

[^ 13] The term police clearance means official evidence of a record of arrests, lack of arrests, or confirmation that an arrest did not result in court action from a local police department or from a state agency responsible for maintaining arrest records.

[^ 14] Officers must check DOS's reciprocity tables to determine a country's police clearance availability.

[^ 15] For information on USCIS' home study requirements, see Chapter 4, Home Studies [5 USCIS-PM B.4].

[^ 16] USCIS requires an original home study (not a photocopy) with original signature.

[^ 17] If the PAP does not submit the requisite home study within 1 year of filing the suitability application for an orphan case, USCIS must deny the suitability application. See 8 CFR 204.3(h)(5).

[^ 18] For examples of reasons that require a home study update and home study update requirements, see Chapter 5, Action on Pending or Approved Suitability Determinations [5 USCIS-PM B.5]. If the PAP submits an updated home study, the PAP must include a copy of the original home study that is being updated, including any prior updates.

[^ 19] See Chapter 5, Action on Pending or Approved Suitability Determinations, Section B, Validity Periods and Extensions [5 USCIS-PM B.5(B)].

Chapter 3 - Eligibility, Documentation, and Evidence (Hague Process)

A. Eligibility

A prospective adoptive parent (PAP) is eligible to adopt if the PAP meets the following requirements:

- The applicant^[1] is a U.S. citizen who is habitually resident in the United States;^[2]
- If married, the applicant's spouse must:
 - Intend to also adopt the child; and
 - Be in lawful immigration status if residing in the United States;^[3]
- If single, is at least 24 years of age when filing the suitability application,^[4] and at least 25 years old when filing the adoption petition;^[5] and
- Establishes that they will provide suitable parental care.

B. Filing

To apply for a suitability determination, the PAP must file an Application for Determination of Suitability to Adopt a Child from a Convention Country (Form I-800A) in accordance with the form instructions, and include all applicable supplements^[6] and evidence.

C. Documentation and Evidence

The PAP must submit evidence in accordance with the form instructions.^[7] The following is a summary of the evidence the PAP must provide.

1. Proof of Applicant's U.S. Citizenship

The applicant must submit proof of U.S. citizenship. Examples of such proof include a birth certificate, an unexpired U.S. passport, a certificate of naturalization, or a certificate of citizenship. If such primary evidence is unavailable, USCIS may consider secondary evidence.^[8]

2. Proof of Spouse's Immigration and Citizenship Status (If Applicable)

If the applicant is married, they must submit evidence that their spouse is a U.S. citizen, noncitizen U.S. national, or is otherwise in a lawful immigration status, provided the spouse resides in the United States. Examples of evidence of U.S. citizenship or U.S. national status include a birth certificate, an unexpired U.S. passport, a certificate of naturalization, or a certificate of citizenship. Examples of evidence of lawful immigration status may consist of a Permanent Resident Card (Form I-551), a foreign passport with an I-551 stamp, a foreign passport with an unexpired visa and a valid admission stamp, a valid Arrival/Departure Record (Form I-94), or other evidence of lawful status in the United States.

If the spouse does not reside in the United States, the PAP must submit evidence of the spouse's name, identity, and citizenship. An example of such proof is a copy of the spouse's passport from the country of citizenship.

3. Proof of Marriage

If married, the PAP must submit proof of marriage. This includes evidence of the termination of any prior marriages.

4. Proof of Compliance with Pre-Adoption Requirements (If Applicable)

If the suitability application indicates that the child will be coming to the United States for adoption, the applicant must establish that any pre-adoption requirements of the state of the child's intended residence have been or will be met. USCIS considers a Convention adoptee to be coming to the United States for adoption if:

- The PAP will not complete the adoption outside the United States (and will therefore need to complete the adoption in the United States); or

- In the case of a married couple, only one of the adoptive parents adopts the child outside the United States (therefore, the spouse will need to adopt the child in the United States).

5. Biometrics

The PAPs and any adult members of the household^[9] must submit biometrics.

For those residing in the United States, USCIS schedules biometrics collection at an Application Support Center (ASC). Persons residing outside of the United States must submit biometrics at a USCIS international field office, U.S. embassy, consulate, or military installation.

USCIS considers biometric based background check results to be valid for a period of 15 months. The PAP or additional adult member of the household (AMH) may need to update their biometrics during the intercountry adoption process.^[10]

Unclassifiable Biometrics

USCIS submits biometrics to the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) for criminal history background checks. On occasion, the FBI is unable to provide USCIS with a criminal history based on biometrics submitted. When this happens, the FBI refers to the biometrics as “unclassifiable.” If USCIS receives two consecutive sets of unclassifiable biometrics,^[11] USCIS issues a Request for Evidence (RFE) to the PAP or adult household member for police clearances^[12] for all residences (domestic or foreign) for the last 5 years. If a U.S. state record is available, it is required in place of a clearance from a local police department:

- When an arrest record is needed to provide information about a conviction;
- To document that there were no arrests; or
- To document that an arrest did not lead to court action.

Police clearances are not available from certain countries.^[13] If a police clearance is generally available, but a country is unable to provide one, the PAP or AMH must provide a letter from the appropriate foreign authority stating that it is not available.

Like other criminal history results, police clearance letters are also valid for a period of 15 months from the date of issuance. If more than one letter is submitted, the date of the earlier letter becomes the validity period start date.

6. Home Study^[14]

A PAP must submit a valid, original^[15] home study to USCIS with the suitability application.^[16]

The PAP may need to update the home study during the intercountry adoption process.^[17] The home study, or the most recent update of the home study, cannot be more than 6 months old at the time of submission to USCIS. This means that no more than 6 months have passed since the home study preparer signed and dated the home study. If a home study will be more than 6 months old at the time of submission to USCIS, the PAP must ensure that it is updated by the home study preparer before submission.^[18]

Footnotes

[^ 1] The applicant refers to the person who is filing the suitability application.

[^ 2] For information on which process a PAP may follow and habitual residence determinations, see Part A, Adoptions Overview, Chapter 2, Adoption Processes [5 USCIS-PM A.2].

[^ 3] If the spouse is not a U.S. citizen, noncitizen U.S. national, or a lawful permanent resident, the officer should evaluate the impact of this status on the stability and suitability of the home. For example, a U.S. citizen who ordinarily resides outside the United States could be temporarily assigned to a job in the United States and the U.S. citizen's spouse may be eligible for a valid nonimmigrant status during the term of the U.S. citizen's temporary assignment to the United States. Generally, the lack of LPR status of the spouse would not preclude a favorable suitability determination. Similarly, USCIS factors a spouse who resides outside the United States into the suitability determination.

[^ 4] See Application for Determination of Suitability to Adopt a Child from a Convention Country (Form I-800A).

[^ 5] See the Petition to Classify Convention Adoptee as an Immediate Relative (Form I-800).

[^ 6] See Listing of Adult Member of the Household (Form I-800A Supplement 1). See Consent to Disclose Information (Form I-800A Supplement 2).

[^ 7] See instructions for Application for Determination of Suitability to Adopt a Child from a Convention Country (Form I-800A). See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(1).

[^ 8] For more information on secondary evidence, see 8 CFR 204.1(g)(2).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 204.301.

[^ 10] For information on biometrics validity and updates, see Chapter 5, Action on Pending or Approved Suitability Determinations, Section E, Biometrics Validity and Updates [5 USCIS-PM B.5(E)].

[^ 11] The physical condition of certain hands or fingers may make it difficult to collect a useable set of fingerprints. For example, a person could have a medical or skin condition or may have worked with chemicals that damaged the surface of their fingers. If the FBI deems a person's fingerprints unclassifiable, that person must provide a second set of biometrics unless USCIS grants an exemption.

[^ 12] The term police clearance means official evidence of a record of arrests, lack of arrests, or confirmation that an arrest did not result in court action from a local police department or from a state agency responsible for maintaining arrest records.

[^ 13] Officers must check DOS's reciprocity tables to determine a country's police clearance availability.

[^ 14] For more information on home study requirements, see Chapter 4, Home Studies [5 USCIS-PM B.4].

[^ 15] USCIS requires an original home study (not a photocopy) with original signature.

[^ 16] The PAP may submit the suitability application without the home study only if an exception applies because the PAP's state of residence must review and directly forward the home study to USCIS. See instructions for Application for Determination of Suitability to Adopt a Child from a Convention Country (Form I-800A).

[^ 17] For examples of reasons that require a home study update and home study update requirements, see Chapter 5, Action on Pending or Approved Suitability Determinations [5 USCIS-PM B.5]. If the PAP submits an updated home study, the PAP must include a copy of the original home study that is being updated, including any prior updates.

[^ 18] See Chapter 5, Action on Pending or Approved Suitability Determinations, Section B, Validity Periods and Extensions [5 USCIS-PM B.5(B)].

Chapter 4 - Home Studies

A. Purpose and Scope

A home study is a process where a licensed or authorized home study preparer screens and prepares prospective adoptive parents (PAPs) for adoption. A home study concludes with a report that makes recommendations about a PAP's suitability to adopt based on the assessments described in this chapter. Home studies must address all required content,[1] but USCIS does not have a required format. Home studies must comply with applicable laws and policies in the:

- PAP's place of residence (U.S. state or territory, or foreign country);
- Child's country of origin; and
- United States (federal laws governing adoption and immigration).[2]

Summary of Home Study Requirements

Requirement	Summary
Authorized home study preparers	Only licensed or authorized persons or agencies may conduct home studies.
Visits and interviews	The home study preparer must conduct at least one interview in-person and at least one home visit with the PAP, at least one interview with any adult member of the household (AMH), and observe any children in the home, when possible.
Household member information	The home study preparer must assess the impact of each household member (PAP, AMH, and child in the home) on the suitability of the PAP's household.
Family history	The home study preparer must assess the PAP's family and parenting history.
Living accommodations	The home study preparer must assess the suitability of the PAP's living accommodations.
PAP immigration status	The home study preparer must ask the PAPs about their citizenship and immigration status. If the applicant's spouse resides in the United States and does not have lawful permanent resident status, the home study preparer should address any impact this may have on the stability of the home so USCIS can evaluate if the family's situation is sufficiently stable to be found suitable.
Financial resources	The home study preparer must assess the PAP's ability to financially support adopted child(ren).
Physical, medical, emotional, and	The home study preparer must assess the physical, mental, emotional, and behavioral health of all household members (the PAP, AMH, and children in

Requirement	Summary
behavioral health	the home, as applicable).
Criminal history and history of abuse or violence	The home study preparer must assess if any household member (the PAP, AMH, and children in the home, as applicable) has a criminal history or history of abuse or violence as an offender, including child abuse, sexual abuse, family or domestic violence, substance abuse and criminal activity, and if so, the impact on suitability.
Child abuse registry check	The home study preparer must ensure a check has been done with any available child abuse registries ^[3] for any state, territory, or foreign country in which a PAP or any AMH has resided since their 18th birthday.
Evidence of rehabilitation	If the PAP or any household member has a criminal history, or a history of any kind of abuse or violence as an offender, the home study preparer may only make a favorable finding if the person has achieved appropriate rehabilitation.
Prior home studies	The home study preparer must evaluate the relevance of any prior or terminated home studies on suitability.
Preparation and training	The home study preparer must ensure the PAP receives the required number of hours of preparation and training unless an exemption applies. The home study should summarize training provided and plans for any future training and preparation.
Country-specific requirements	The home study preparer must assess the PAP's suitability specific to each country from which they may adopt.
State-specific requirements	The home study preparer must prepare the home study according to the requirements that apply to a domestic adoption in the state of residence if the PAP's actual or proposed residence is in the United States.

Requirement	Summary
Special needs-specific requirements	If the PAP seeks to adopt a child with special needs, the home study preparer must assess the PAP's ability to care for a child with special needs.
Specific recommendation for adoptions	The home study preparer must make specific recommendations for adoption based on their assessment of the PAP's suitability. The home study preparer must address any potential problem areas in their assessment. This includes making a referral to an appropriate licensed professional for an evaluation and written report.
Duty of disclosure	The home study preparer must advise the PAP and any AMH of the ongoing duty of disclosure throughout the intercountry adoption process.
Review, signature, and attestation	An accredited agency ^[4] must review and approve the home study if not performed in the first instance by an accredited agency, unless a public domestic or public foreign authority conducted the home study.
Validity	The home study, or the most recent update, cannot be more than 6 months old at the time of submission to USCIS. If a home study will be more than 6 months old at the time of submission to USCIS, it must be updated before submission.

Authorized Home Study Preparers: Requirements

Only licensed or authorized persons or agencies may conduct home studies.^[5] The home study preparer (other than a public domestic or public foreign authority) must hold any license or other authorization required under the law of the jurisdiction where the home study provider conducts the home study.^[6] The following table provides an overview of who can be an authorized home study preparer for PAPs who reside in the United States and for those who reside outside of the United States.^[7]

Overview of Authorized Home Study Preparers

Home Study Preparer	PAPs Residing in the United States	PAPs Residing Outside the United States
Accredited Agency	X	X
Approved Person	X	X
Supervised Provider	X	X
Exempted Provider	X
Public Domestic Authority	X
Public Foreign Authority		X

Statement of Home Study Preparer's Authority

The home study preparer must include a statement of the preparer's authority to conduct home studies.^[8] The statement must:

- Specify the state, territory, or country under whose authority the home study preparer is licensed or authorized;
- Cite the specific law or regulation authorizing the preparer to conduct home studies;
- Indicate the license number and expiration date, if any, of the home study preparer's authorization or license; and
- Specify the basis^[9] for this authorization.

B. Visits and Interviews

1. Requirements

Prospective Adoptive Parents

The home study preparer must conduct at least one interview in-person and at least one home visit with the PAP.^[10]

Adult Members of the Household

The home study preparer must conduct at least one interview with any additional adult member of the household (AMH).^[11] The interview should be in-person, unless the home study preparer determines that an in-person interview is not reasonably feasible and explains the reason for this conclusion.^[12]

Children in the Home

When possible, the home study preparer should observe in-person any child in the home during the home visit or at some point during the home study process. If observation is not possible, the home study preparer should explain why.

2. Required Home Study Content

The home study must address^[13] the:

- Number of interviews and home visits;
- Participants, dates, and locations of each contact, interview, and visit; and
- If the home study preparer did not interview an AMH in person or observe a child in the home, an explanation of why it was not feasible.

C. Household Member Information

1. Required Assessment

The home study preparer must assess the impact of each household member (both children and adults) on the suitability of the PAP's household.^[14] An adult household member may also include a person who is not yet 18 years old, or a person who does not actually live at the same residence, but whose presence in the household impacts suitability.^[15]

2. Required Home Study Content

The home study must identify each household member (PAP, AMH, and child in the home) by name, alien registration number (if any), date of birth, and country of birth. For any AMH and child in the home, the home study must also indicate the relationship to the PAP.^[16]

The home study must describe each household member, including how the household member's characteristics impact the overall suitability of the household and the PAP's ability to care for adopted children. The home study preparer should include the following:

- Each person's overall well-being, including physical, mental, emotional, and behavioral health;
- Any special needs;
- Any criminal history or history of arrest or investigation;
- Any history of abuse (sexual, substance, or child abuse) or family violence as an offender even if it did not result in an arrest or conviction;
- Any evidence of rehabilitation;
- Any potential problems areas; and
- Any additional information about the person that is relevant to the overall suitability of the home and the applicant's ability to care for adopted children.

D. Family History

1. Required Assessment

To assess the PAP's family history and ability to parent adopted children,^[17] the home study preparer must assess the PAP's family and parenting history. This includes any biological children and any children for whom the PAP was the primary care provider,^[18] even if such children no longer reside in the PAP's home.

2. Required Home Study Content

The home study must discuss the PAP's parenting experience with any such children, including the relationship to the PAP, the circumstances of the relationship, and the termination of such relationship (if applicable).

E. Living Accommodations

1. Required Assessment

The home study preparer must assess the suitability of the PAP's living accommodations.^[19]

2. Required Home Study Content

The home study must include:

- A detailed description of the PAP's current living accommodations;
- A description of the PAP's intended living accommodations (if moving or if the PAP lives outside the United States and intends to move to an identified residence in the United States);

- A determination of which properties the PAP uses as a primary residence and which properties are used for other purposes (if the PAP owns more than one property);
- A determination of whether the living space meets any applicable state requirements, or a statement that no requirements exist; and
- An assessment of the suitability of the living accommodations.

F. PAP Immigration Status

1. Assessments

The home study preparer should ask the PAPs their citizenship and immigration status.^[20]

If the applicant's spouse resides in the United States and does not have lawful permanent resident (LPR) status,^[21] the home study preparer should ask for an explanation of lawful immigration status.

2. Home Study Content

The home study should indicate the reported U.S. citizenship or immigration status of the PAPs.

If the applicant's spouse resides in the United States and does not have LPR status, the home study preparer should indicate the reason for this so the officer can evaluate if the family's situation is sufficiently stable to be found suitable.^[22]

G. Financial Resources

1. Required Assessment

The home study preparer must assess the PAP's ability to financially support adopted children.^[23]

Any income designated for the support of children in the PAP's care (such as foster care subsidies), or any income designated for the support of another member of the household, cannot be counted towards the financial resources available for the support of the prospective adoptive children. In addition, financial contributions from other family members (such as AMHs) cannot be counted towards the PAP's financial resources.

2. Required Home Study Content

The home study must include:

- A description of the PAP's income, financial resources, debts, and expenses;
- A statement summarizing the evidence the home study preparer considered in verifying the PAP's financial resources; and

- An assessment of the PAP's financial suitability.

H. Physical, Medical, Emotional, and Behavioral Health

1. Required Assessment

The home study preparer must assess the physical, mental, emotional, and behavioral health of all household members (the PAP, any AMH, and any children in the home).^[24]

2. Required Home Study Content

The home study must include the following as it relates to all household members:

- A general description of their current physical, mental, emotional, and behavioral health; and
- A description of any history of illness or mental, emotional, psychological, or behavioral instability that may adversely impact the suitability of the home.^[25]

I. Criminal History and History of Abuse or Violence

1. Required Assessment

The home study provider must assess if any household member (PAP, AMH, or children in the home) has a criminal history or history of abuse or violence as an offender.^[26] USCIS considers someone to have a history of abuse or violence even if it only happened once, and even if the incident did not result in an arrest or conviction. The home study preparer must assess the history of all types of abuse, violence, or criminal history as an offender, including:

- Child abuse (including neglect and unregulated custody transfer);
- Sexual abuse;
- Family or domestic violence;
- Drug or alcohol abuse (substance abuse); and
- Criminal activity.

The home study provider must ask the PAP and any AMH to disclose any criminal history and any history of abuse or violence as an offender.^[27] The home study provider should also ask if any of the child household members have any criminal history or any other history of abuse or violence as an offender by asking the child's parents or the child (if age appropriate).

Child Abuse Registries

The home study provider must ensure a check has been done with any available child abuse registries^[28] for any state, territory, or foreign country in which a PAP or any AMH has resided since their 18th birthday.^[29] If a country no longer exists or if its name has changed, the home study preparer must identify the geographic location where the PAP or any AMH lived to determine what country it is now and check its child abuse registry. If a country's border has changed, the home study preparer must generally check with both the new and former country.

The following table outlines how a home study provider should conduct the registry check and secure consents, depending on the applicable law.

Child Abuse Registry Check

If the law of the state, territory, or foreign country where the PAP or AMH resided ... Allows the home study preparer to access the child abuse registry information ^[30]	Then (for the PAP and any AMH)... The home study preparer must submit a written records request to the child abuse registry.
Only allows a home study preparer to check a child abuse registry with a person's consent	The home study preparer must obtain the PAP's and AMH's consent and submit a written records request to the child abuse registry. ^[31]
Only allows the release of child abuse registry information to the subject of the record	The PAP and any AMH must obtain the information from the registry and provide it to the home study preparer. ^[32]
Does not allow the release of registry information to the home study preparer or the subject of the record	The home study preparer must address the unavailability of the information in the home study.

A home study provider may proceed with the home study without the results of available child abuse registries if at least 6 months have gone by since making the request, and the jurisdiction has not released the information. The home study preparer must address the unavailability of the information in the home study, including efforts made to obtain the results.^[33]

Child abuse registry checks cannot be more than 15 months old^[34] at the time the home study preparer signs the home study.

Child Abuse or Neglect and Custody Transfers

As part of the home study preparer's assessment of any history of child abuse or neglect, the home study preparer must assess the involvement of the PAP and any AMH in any custody transfers of children, including:

- Unregulated custody transfers (also known as rehoming);^[35] and
- Terminations of prior adoptive placements (known as an adoption disruption or dissolution).^[36]

Not all custody transfers of children involve child abuse or neglect. The home study preparer must ask the PAP and any AMH if they ever transferred or received permanent custody of a child. The home study preparer must then ask more narrow questions to determine if the custody transfer was an unregulated custody transfer or involved other child abuse or neglect.

If the PAP or any AMH has been involved in an unregulated custody transfer or an adoption disruption or dissolution, the home study preparer must assess the impact on the suitability and address whether the PAP or any AMH involved has been appropriately rehabilitated, as applicable.

Substance Abuse

The home study preparer must evaluate suitability in light of any history of substance abuse by the PAP or any member of the household, including child household members, as age appropriate.^[37] USCIS considers a person to have a history of substance abuse if current or past use of alcohol, controlled substances,^[38] or other substances impaired or impairs the person's ability to fulfill obligations at work, school, or home, or creates other social or interpersonal problems that may adversely affect suitability.

Rehabilitation

If the PAP or any household member has a criminal history, or a history of any kind of abuse or violence as an offender, the home study preparer may only make a favorable finding if the person has achieved appropriate rehabilitation.

A home study preparer^[39] cannot make a favorable recommendation based on rehabilitation while the PAP or household member is on probation, parole, supervised release, or other similar arrangement for a conviction.^[40]

2. Required Home Study Content

Required Questions

The home study must include responses for PAPs and AMHs to the questions listed below. USCIS requires each person's direct response to the questions on their history. For child household members, USCIS permits the information to come from the child's parents or legal guardians, or the child, as is age appropriate. The questions include:

- Whether the person has any arrests, convictions, or investigations in the United States or outside the United States (other than minor traffic and parking violations);^[41] and

- Whether the person has a history as an offender of substance abuse, sexual or child abuse (including any unregulated custody transfers), or family violence even if it did not result in an arrest or conviction.^[42]

Child Abuse Registries and Background Check Results

The home study must include results of the child abuse registry checks^[43] for every state, territory, or foreign country in which the PAP or any AMH has resided since the person's 18th birthday. The home study must indicate that each check:

- Was completed and:
 - A record was found and a summary of the results; or
 - No record was found to exist; or
- Was not completed because the state, territory, or foreign country:
 - Will not release information to the home study preparer or anyone in the household,
 - Has not released the information and at least 6 months have passed since the request was made; or
 - The state, territory, or foreign country does not have a child abuse registry.

Child Abuse or Neglect and Custody Transfers

The home study must indicate if the PAP or any AMH has ever been involved in a child custody transfer, and if so, describe the circumstances. The home study must indicate if circumstances involved an unregulated child custody transfer or other child abuse or neglect, and if so, discuss the impact on suitability and rehabilitation of the PAP or AMH involved.

Description and Summary of Each Incident

For each household member's incident of abuse, violence, or criminal activity (even if the person was not arrested or convicted) and for each arrest or conviction, the home study must include the:^[44]

- Relevant dates or time periods;
- Details of any mitigating circumstances; and
- A statement whether the information was disclosed by the PAP, AMH, or child (as age appropriate) or if it was discovered by the home study preparer.

Impact on Suitability and Rehabilitation Assessment

The home study must contain an evaluation of suitability in light of any household member's criminal history or history of abuse or violence as an offender.^[45] This must include a discussion of any rehabilitation that demonstrates suitability, including:^[46]

- An evaluation of the seriousness of any relevant arrest(s), conviction(s), and history of abuse;
- The number of such incidents;
- The length of time since the last incident;
- The offender's acceptance of responsibility for the offender's conduct; and
- Any counseling or rehabilitation programs the person has successfully completed or a written opinion by an appropriate licensed professional.

3. Required Supporting Documentation

The PAP must submit the following to the home study preparer for consideration in the preparer's assessment:^[47]

- A statement disclosing and describing any history of abuse, violence, or criminal history as an offender, including mitigating circumstances, signed under penalty of perjury, by the household member that committed the abuse, violence, or criminal activity; and
- A certified copy of the documentation showing the final disposition of each incident which resulted in arrest, indictment, conviction, or any other judicial or administrative action.

The PAP must also attach this documentation to the home study for USCIS' review.

J. Prior Home Studies

1. Required Assessment

The home study preparer must evaluate the relevance of any prior home studies on suitability.^[48] The home study preparer must ask each PAP and all AMH whether the person previously underwent any sort of home study assessment for any form of custodial care (domestic or intercountry), whether or not it was completed, and the outcome. If so, the home study preparer must review any prior home study reports as part of their assessment, if the report is available.

2. Required Home Study Content

The home study must:

- Include the PAP's and any AMH's response to the question on whether they have been the subject of any prior home studies;

- If applicable, identify the agency involved in each prior or terminated home study and the dates the prior home study process began and ended;
- If applicable, indicate the outcome of the home study, including whether a favorable recommendation was made, or if the home study was terminated before a recommendation was made, why it was terminated;
- If applicable, indicate if the prior home study is available, and if not, include an explanation why; and
- If applicable, include an evaluation of the relevance of any prior unfavorable or incomplete home study on the PAP's suitability.

3. Supporting Documentation

The PAP or any AMH must submit to the home study preparer, for the home study preparer to consider in the home study assessment, a copy of any previous rejections or unfavorable home studies. Copies of any such available prior home studies must be attached to the home study.

K. Preparation and Training

1. Required Assessment

The PAP must receive the required number of hours of preparation and training unless an exemption applies.^[49] The home study preparer must ensure the PAP receives the required preparation and training necessary to promote a successful intercountry adoption,^[50] including discussing with the PAP:

- The intercountry adoption process, including the requirements, expenses, challenges, and timeframes; and
- The adjustment of adopted children and parenting.

The home study preparer must tailor the preparation and training to the PAP's particular situation.^[51]

2. Required Home Study Content

The home study must contain a summary of:^[52]

- The preparation and training given to the PAP(s);
- Plans for future preparation and training; and
- Any plans for post-placement monitoring, in the event the child will be adopted in the United States rather than outside the United States.

L. Country-Specific Requirements

1. Required Assessment

The home study preparer must assess the PAP's suitability as it specifically relates to each country from which the PAP may adopt.^[53]

2. Required Home Study Content

The home study must be tailored to the specific country from which the PAP intends to adopt.^[54] This means that the home study should include a full and complete statement of all facts relevant to the PAP's eligibility for adoption in that country, in light of the country's specific requirements (if any).^[55] If the PAP may adopt from more than one country, the home study must separately assess the PAP's suitability to each specific country.

M. State-Specific Requirements

1. Required Assessment

The home study preparer must prepare the home study according to the requirements that apply to a domestic adoption in the state^[56] of the PAP's actual or proposed residence in the United States.^[57] If the PAP resides outside of the United States and has no actual or proposed residence in the United States, then state law standards generally do not apply unless the PAP intends to finalize the child's adoption in the United States.^[58]

If the child will be coming to the United States for adoption, then the home study preparer must discuss with the PAP, the PAP's ability to comply with any pre-adoption and post-adoption requirements in the state in which the child will reside.^[59] Children come to the United States for adoption if:

- The PAP will not complete the adoption outside the United States (but will only obtain legal custody for the purposes of emigration to the United States for adoption);
- Only one parent of a married couple adopts the child outside the United States; or
- In orphan cases, neither parent saw or observed the child before or during the adoption proceedings.

2. Required Home Study Content

The home study must:

- Comply with any requirements of the PAP's state of residence; and

- Indicate if the child will be coming to the United States for adoption.

If the child will be coming to the United States for adoption, the home study must also:

- Describe any pre-adoption requirements for any state(s) in which the child will reside, and:
 - Cite any relevant state statutes and regulations and the steps the PAP has taken or will take to comply; or
 - Explain that the state(s) of intended residence do not have any pre-adoption requirements; [60] and
- Describe plans for post-placement monitoring.[61]

N. Special Needs-Specific Requirements

1. Required Assessment

If the PAP seeks to adopt a child with special needs, the home study preparer must assess the PAP's ability to care for a child with special needs.[62]

2. Required Home Study Content

The home study must include a discussion of the preparation, willingness, and the PAP's ability to provide proper care to a child with special needs.[63]

O. Specific Recommendation for Adoption

1. Required Assessment

The home study preparer must make specific recommendations for adoption based on the preparer's assessment of the PAP's suitability.[64]

The home study preparer must address any potential problem areas in the assessment.[65] This includes making a referral to an appropriate licensed professional for an evaluation and written report if.[66]

- The home study preparer determines that there are issues beyond the preparer's expertise that need to be further assessed; or
- The state law of the PAP's actual or proposed place of residence would require such a referral for a domestic adoption.

2. Required Home Study Content

The home study must include a specific recommendation and discussion of the reasons for the recommendation.^[67] The recommendation must state:

- The number of children the PAP is recommended to adopt;
- The country or countries from which the PAP is recommended to adopt;
- Any specific restrictions, such as age, gender, or other characteristics (for example, special needs) of the child(ren) the PAP is recommended to adopt; and
- If the PAP has been specifically approved to adopt a child with special needs (if applicable).

The home study recommendations must address suitability in light of any potential problems. This includes indicating if the home study preparer made any referrals for additional or outside evaluations, and if so, the home study preparer's assessment of the impact of the outside report on the suitability. [68]

3. Supporting Documentation

The PAP must submit to the home study preparer, for the home study preparer to consider in the home study assessment, a copy of any outside evaluation(s) that was conducted to help assess suitability (such as a psychological or psychiatric exam). Such outside evaluations must be attached to the home study.^[69]

P. Duty of Disclosure

1. Requirements

The home study preparer must advise the PAP and any AMH of the duty of disclosure.^[70] This duty includes the need for the PAP and any AMH to:

- Give true and complete information to the home study preparer;
- Disclose any other relevant information, such as physical, mental, or emotional health problems or behavioral issues;
- Disclose any arrest, conviction, or other criminal history, whether in the United States or outside the United States, even if the record of the arrest, conviction, or other criminal history was expunged, sealed, pardoned, or otherwise cleared;^[71]
- Disclose any history of substance abuse, sexual abuse, child abuse or neglect, or family violence as an offender,^[72] even if closed or unsubstantiated; and

- Notify the home study preparer and USCIS of any new event or information that might require them to submit an updated home study.^[73]

The PAP and any AMH have an ongoing duty of disclosure throughout the intercountry adoption process.^[74] The duty of disclosure continues until:^[75]

- There is a final decision admitting the child to the United States with a visa; or
- Final approval of the immigration petition for PAPs who reside outside the United States and do not intend to immediately seek an immigrant visa for their child.^[76]

USCIS requires the PAP and any AMH to notify the home study preparer and USCIS of any of the above outlined significant changes. The PAP should provide this notification within the timeframes outlined in the following table.

Notification Timeframes

If...	Then the PAP should notify USCIS and the home study preparer...
The suitability application or request for action on an approved suitability application is pending	Immediately
USCIS has approved the suitability application or request for action on an approved suitability application, but the PAP has not yet filed the child's petition	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> As soon as practical (generally within 30 days of the event), if the change is related to criminal history or other history of abuse or violence as an offender; or Within 30 days of the event, or at the next suitability determination point,^[77] if the change is not related to criminal history or other history of abuse or violence as an offender
The child's petition is pending or approved, but the child has not yet been admitted to the United States ^[78]	Immediately

2. Required Home Study Content

The home study preparer must sign under penalty of perjury that they have advised the PAP and any AMH of the duty of disclosure.^[79]

Q. Review, Signature, and Attestation

1. Requirements

The home study preparer must sign the home study, include a declaration, and date the home study (and any updates). The home study preparer's signature on the home study (and any updates) must be original.

An accredited agency must review and approve the home study if not completed in the first instance by an accredited agency, unless a public domestic or public foreign authority conducted the home study.^[80] Therefore, if an approved person, supervised provider, or exempted provider conducted the home study, an accredited agency must review and approve the home study before the PAP submits it to USCIS.^[81]

If the PAP resides in a state that requires the state's (child welfare) authorities to review the home study, such review must occur and be documented before the home study is submitted to USCIS.^[82]

2. Required Home Study Content

The home study preparer (or if the home study is prepared by an entity, the officer or employee who has authority to sign the home study for the entity) must personally sign the home study. The preparer must declare, under penalty of perjury under U.S. law, that:

- The home study was either conducted or supervised by the person signing as the home study preparer. If the home study preparer did not conduct the study, then the home study must identify the person who conducted the home study;^[83]
- The factual statements in the home study are true and correct, to the best of the signer's knowledge;^[84] and
- The home study preparer has advised the PAP and any AMH of the duty of disclosure, and that their duty to disclose is ongoing until there is a final decision admitting the child to the United States with a visa, or if the PAP resides outside the United States and does not intend to immediately seek an immigrant visa for the child, until petition approval.^[85]

The home study must indicate whether the PAP's state of residence requires the state's (child welfare) authorities to review the home study.^[86]

3. Supporting Documentation

The home study preparer must attach evidence of:

- The home study preparer's certification;

- Review of the home study by the state's competent authority (to review home studies), if the PAP resides in a state which requires such review; and
- Review and approval by an accredited agency, if required.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 204.311. See 22 CFR 96.47.

[^ 2] Regardless of whether the PAP resides within or outside of the United States, the home study must meet all applicable USCIS and U.S. Department of State (DOS) requirements. See 8 CFR 204.311. See 22 CFR 96.47.

[^ 3] See the Child Abuse Registries in Foreign Countries and Geographic Entities webpage.

[^ 4] See DOS's Adoption Service Provider Search webpage.

[^ 5] See 22 CFR 96.

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 204.311(b).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 204.301 and 22 CFR 96.2 for definitions related to home study preparers. The Hague Adoption Convention and the DOS regulations at 22 CFR 96 distinguish between an agency (a private non-profit organization) and a person (an individual person or for-profit entity).

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 204.311(s). See 22 CFR 96. If the PAP resides outside the United States, the home study provider may first contact the central authority in a Hague Adoption Convention country, or the competent adoption authority in a non-Hague country, to determine what laws might apply in a particular jurisdiction outside the United States. If the foreign country does not have any laws on the subject, then the home study preparer need only comply with U.S. requirements and should indicate this in the statement. Since the home study preparer must be licensed or authorized to complete home studies in the jurisdiction where the home study is completed, the license or authorization in the foreign jurisdiction may require the home study preparer to also apply the local jurisdiction's home study standards. For example, the home study might also evaluate suitability in accordance with the local standards where the PAP resides outside the United States.

[^ 9] See 22 CFR 96.

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 204.311(g)(1). USCIS does not require that the home study preparer conduct more than one in-person interview or home visit unless the family has moved, the law of the jurisdiction requires it, or the home study preparer requires it. For information on requirements for updated home studies, see Chapter 5, Action on Pending or Approved Suitability Determinations [5 USCIS-PM B.5]. If the PAP temporarily resides outside the United States during the adoption process, but intends to return to the United States after the adoption, it may be possible to facilitate the requirements of the home study by traveling to the United States or coordinating with the home study preparer to conduct a personal interview outside the United States.

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 204.311(c)(3). See 8 CFR 204.311(g)(2).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 204.311(g)(2).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 204.311(c)(7). See 8 CFR 204.311(g).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 204.311(c)(3). See 8 CFR 204.311(g)(3).

[^ 15] See the definition of adult member of the household at 8 CFR 204.301 which includes a person under 18 years of age if USCIS determines the person impacts the suitability of the household.

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 204.311(c)(2).

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 204.311(g)(3).

[^ 18] For example, experience as a foster parent or kinship care provider.

[^ 19] See 8 CFR 204.311(o).

[^ 20] The applicant must be a U.S. citizen. For more information on immigration status eligibility requirements for the orphan process, see Chapter 2, Eligibility, Documentation and Evidence (Orphan Process) [5 USCIS-PM B.2]. For more information on immigration status eligibility requirements for the Hague process, see Chapter 3, Eligibility, Documentation and Evidence (Hague Process) [5 USCIS-PM B.3].

[^ 21] If married, the applicant's spouse must be in lawful immigration status if residing in the United States. For more information on PAP immigration status eligibility requirements for the orphan process, see Chapter 2, Eligibility, Documentation and Evidence (Orphan Process) [5 USCIS-PM B.2]. For more information on PAP immigration status eligibility requirements for the Hague process, see Chapter 3, Eligibility, Documentation and Evidence (Hague Process) [5 USCIS-PM B.3].

[^ 22] See 8 CFR 204.307(a)(3).

[^ 23] See 8 CFR 204.311(h).

[^ 24] See 8 CFR 204.311(c)(15). See 8 CFR 204.311(m). See 8 CFR 204.311(d)(1)(iii).

[^ 25] For information on outside professional evaluations if a PAP's or AMH's history of psychiatric care or other abuse requires further assessment, see Section O, Specific Recommendation for Adoption [5 USCIS-PM B.4(O)].

[^ 26] For information on outside professional evaluations if a PAP's or AMH's criminal history or history of abuse or violence as an offender requires further assessment, see Section O, Specific Recommendation for Adoption [5 USCIS-PM B.4(O)].

[^ 27] See 8 CFR 204.311(j) and 8 CFR 204.311(k). See 8 CFR 204.311(d)(1)(ii).

[^ 28] See the Child Abuse Registries in Foreign Countries and Geographic Entities webpage.

[^ 29] See 8 CFR 204.311(i).

[^ 30] See 8 CFR 204.311(i)(1).

[^ 31] See 8 CFR 204.311(i)(2).

[^ 32] See 8 CFR 204.311(i)(3).

[^ 33] See 8 CFR 204.311(i)(4).

[^ 34] For more information on child abuse registry checks, see the Guidance on Determining Suitability of Prospective Adoptive Parents for Intercountry Adoption (PDF, 886.91 KB), PM-602-0165, issued November 9, 2018.

[^ 35] An unregulated custody transfer occurs when a parent places a child in the care of other persons with the intent to transfer permanent custody of the child, or receives a child with the intent to gain permanent custody, without involving child welfare authorities or following the law of their place of residence. USCIS considers unregulated custody transfers to be a form of child abuse or neglect. The Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA) identifies a minimum set of acts or behaviors that define child abuse and neglect, which include: “any recent act or failure to act on the part of a parent or caretaker which results in death, serious physical or emotional harm, sexual abuse or exploitation” or “an act or failure to act which presents an imminent risk of serious harm.” See CAPTA Reauthorization Act of 2010, Pub. L. 111-320 (PDF) , 124 Stat. 3482 (December 20, 2010). See the Child Welfare Information Gateway’s Definitions of Child Abuse & Neglect webpage.

[^ 36] An adoption disruption occurs when a PAP (or a custodian escorting the child on the PAP’s behalf) is granted legal custody of the child, but the placement terminates before the PAP finalizes the adoption. An adoption dissolution occurs when the legal relationship between the child and the adoptive parent(s) is severed, either voluntarily or involuntarily, after the adoption is legally finalized.

[^ 37] See 8 CFR 204.311(c)(14).

[^ 38] See 21 U.S.C 802 for federal definition of “controlled substance.”

[^ 39] For information on when USCIS cannot make a favorable recommendation, see Chapter 6, Adjudication, Section B, USCIS Actions and Decisions, Subsection 4, Denials [5 USCIS-PM B.6(B) (4)].

[^ 40] See 8 CFR 204.311(l).

[^ 41] See 8 CFR 204.311(k).

[^ 42] See 8 CFR 204.311(j).

[^ 43] See 8 CFR 204.311(i).

[^ 44] See 8 CFR 204.311(d). See 8 CFR 204.311(j)(1)-(3). 8 CFR 204.311(k).

[^ 45] See 8 CFR 204.311(c)(14).

[^ 46] See 8 CFR 204.311(l).

[^ 47] See 8 CFR 204.311(j).

[^ 48] See 8 CFR 204.311(n).

[^ 49] See 22 CFR 96.48(a) (hours requirement). See 22 CFR 96.48(g) (exemption).

[^ 50] For information on required preparation and training, see 22 CFR 96.48.

[^ 51] See 8 CFR 204.311(c)(1).

[^ 52] See 8 CFR 204.311(c)(8).

[^ 53] The child's country of origin determines how to apply its own adoption requirements in a given case.

[^ 54] See 8 CFR 204.311(c)(1). See 8 CFR 204.311(q).

[^ 55] For general information on other countries' requirements, see DOS's Country Information webpage.

[^ 56] See the Child Welfare Information Gateway's State Laws Related to Adoption webpage.

[^ 57] See 8 CFR 204.311(e).

[^ 58] The PAP is also not required to provide a permanent or temporary address in the United States in order to complete a home study.

[^ 59] See 8 CFR 204.305. See 8 CFR 204.311(c)(8).

[^ 60] See 8 CFR 204.3(c)(1)(iv). See 8 CFR 204.305. See 8 CFR 204.310(a)(3)(vii). See 8 CFR 204.311(u)(1)(vii).

[^ 61] See 8 CFR 204.311(c)(8). See 22 CFR 96.50.

[^ 62] See 8 CFR 204.311(p).

[^ 63] See 8 CFR 204.311(p).

[^ 64] See 8 CFR 204.311(r).

[^ 65] See 8 CFR 204.311(c)(5).

[^ 66] See 8 CFR 204.311(g)(4).

[^ 67] See 8 CFR 204.311(r).

[^ 68] See 8 CFR 204.311(g)(4). See 8 CFR 204.311(c)(5). See 8 CFR 204.311(c)(9).

[^ 69] See 8 CFR 204.311(c)(5).

[^ 70] See 8 CFR 204.311(f)(3).

[^ 71] See 8 CFR 204.311(d)(ii). The fact that an arrest or conviction or other criminal history was expunged, sealed, pardoned, or the subject of any other amelioration does not relieve the PAP or additional member of the household of the obligation to disclose. See 8 CFR 204.309(a). See 8 CFR 204.3(h)(4).

[^ 72] See 8 CFR 204.309(a)(1).

[^ 73] See Chapter 5, Action on Pending or Approved Suitability Determinations [5 USCIS-PM B.5].

[^ 74] See 8 CFR 204.311(d).

[^ 75] For a list of these significant events, see Chapter 5, Action on Pending or Approved Suitability Determinations, Section C, Significant Changes [5 USCIS-PM B.5(C)].

[^ 76] For a PAP who resides outside the United States, the duty of disclosure continues until the child has been admitted. However, if a PAP does not intend to immediately seek an immigrant visa for the child, this duty of disclosure will generally be limited to the petition approval.

[^ 77] For a summary of suitability determination points, see Chapter 1, Purpose and Background, Section C, Background [5 USCIS-PM B.1(C)].

[^ 78] If the PAP resides outside the United States and immediately seeks an immigrant visa for the child, the PAP must notify USCIS and the home study provider of a significant change.

[^ 79] See 8 CFR 204.311(f)(3).

[^ 80] For information on how to search for accredited agencies and approved persons, see DOS's Adoption Service Provider webpage. If home study review and approval is needed, the date of the home study preparer's signature (and not the reviewer and approver's signature) is the applicable date for the purposes of the requirement that the home study be no more than 6 months old at the time it is submitted to USCIS.

[^ 81] See 22 CFR 96.47(c).

[^ 82] See 8 CFR 204.311(t).

[^ 83] See 8 CFR 204.311(f)(1).

[^ 84] See 8 CFR 204.311(f)(2).

[^ 85] See 8 CFR 204.311(f)(3). For a PAP who resides outside the United States and does not intend to immediately seek an immigrant visa for the child, the notice requirement extends to the Form I-600 or Form I-800 approval. However, the duty of disclosure continues until the child is admitted to the United States with a visa. If circumstances change and a PAP seeks a visa for the admission of the child to the United States the PAP should notify USCIS and the home study provider of a significant change.

[^ 86] See 8 CFR 204.311(t).

Chapter 5 - Action on Pending or Approved Suitability Determinations

A. Overview

Throughout the intercountry adoption process, USCIS must be satisfied that the prospective adoptive parent (PAP) remains suitable to adopt a child. Therefore, it may be necessary for the PAP to request action on a pending or approved suitability determination.

The PAP must submit an updated home study^[1] when any of the following occur before the child immigrates to the United States or before final approval of the child's immigration petition if the child and PAP will reside outside the United States and do not seek an immigrant visa for the child:

- The PAP wants to request an extension of the suitability application approval or submit a new suitability application after the approval has expired; or
- There is a significant change (that was not previously assessed).^[2]

USCIS does not limit the number of times a home study preparer can update a home study.

PAPs and adult members of the households (AMHs) also may need to update their biometrics throughout the intercountry adoption process.^[3] PAPs and AMHs are not required to maintain continuous biometric validity. However, all biometric background check results must be valid for USCIS to approve a:

- Suitability application;
- Request for action on an approved suitability application; or
- Immigration petition (for the child).^[4]

B. Validity Periods and Extensions

1. Home Study Validity

The home study, or the most recent update of the home study, cannot be more than 6 months old at the time of submission to USCIS.^[5] If a home study will be more than 6 months old at the time of submission to USCIS, the PAP must ensure that it is updated by the home study preparer before submission.

USCIS considers a home study that is valid at the time of submission, to remain valid until the suitability application approval expires or there is a significant change (that was not previously assessed).^[6]

2. Suitability Approval

Orphan (Non-Hague) Suitability Approval

For orphan (non-Hague) adoptions, the initial approval of the suitability application is valid for 18 months from the date USCIS approves the application.

PAPs seeking a one-time, no-fee extension of their suitability application approval should submit a written request and updated home study before their approval expires and may do so up to 90 days before its expiration.^[7]

If USCIS grants the extension request, the extended suitability approval expires 18 months from the expiration of the initial approval notice. After a PAP has used the one-time, no fee extension, the PAP cannot further extend the orphan suitability approval and must instead begin with a new suitability application or combination filing if they are unable to file the child's immigration petition before the extended suitability application expires.

The PAP may obtain a duplicate suitability approval notice by filing an Application for Action on an Approved Application or Petition (Form I-824), with fee.

If USCIS does not approve a request for an extension of an approved suitability application, it does not serve as a revocation or denial of the original approval notice. For this reason, the PAP cannot appeal or challenge the USCIS decision on the extension request. The PAP has the right to file a new suitability application,^[8] with the required fee and documentation even if USCIS denied the extension request.

Hague Suitability Approval

For Hague adoptions, the initial approval of the suitability application^[9] expires 15 months from the date of the PAP's biometric-based background check results. A PAP may request an extension of the suitability approval and submit an updated home study up to 90 days before its expiration. USCIS does not limit the number of extensions that a PAP may request. However, if the PAP's suitability application approval expires before the PAP submits the request, the PAP must file a new suitability application with fee.

To request an extension or duplicate approval notice, the PAP files the Form I-800A, Supplement 3, Request for Action on an Approved Form I-800A (Form I-800A Supplement 3), in accordance with form instructions, with the accompanying fee, as applicable. There is no fee for the first extension request.

C. Significant Changes

USCIS has the discretion to consider any new information or event that might affect a PAP's suitability to be a significant change that necessitates an updated home study. PAPs must notify USCIS of any significant changes.^[10] Significant changes include, but are not limited to, the following:

- A significant change in the PAP's household such as a change of residence, marital status, criminal history, significant decrease in financial resources, or a change in the number or identity of children in the home or of AMHs;^[11]
- A change in the number or characteristics of the child(ren) the PAP intends to adopt that was not previously assessed (such as age, gender, nationality, or special needs);^[12]
- A change that requires that the home study preparer address state pre-adoption requirements or address a new state's requirements if the child will be coming to the United States for adoption and the last home study submitted did not address these requirements;^[13] or
- A change in the country from which the PAP seeks to adopt if the last home study submitted to USCIS did not recommend the PAP for the new country.^[14]

If a significant change occurs, the PAP must notify USCIS and submit an updated home study that reflects the significant change, in accordance with the form instructions.^[15]

1. Significant Change in the PAP's Household

Significant changes include, but are not limited to, a change in marital status, household composition, residence, financial resources, or criminal history.^[16]

Change in Marital Status

If the significant change that occurs is a change in marital status, the PAP must submit a new suitability application with an updated home study. If the PAP is married, the spouse must also sign the new form. If the change in marital status takes place before USCIS approves the suitability application or combination filing, there is no fee. However, if the change in marital status takes place after USCIS has approved the suitability application, combination filing, or request, the PAP must submit a new version of the appropriate form or request with any appropriate fee.^[17]

Household Composition

The PAP must submit an updated home study if there is any change in the number or identity of children or AMHs in the PAP's household.

Financial Resources

USCIS generally only considers a change in financial resources to be a significant change if there is significant decrease in the PAP's financial resources that causes reasonable concern about the PAP's financial suitability. This includes, but is not limited to:

- Any decrease or loss of assets that impacts the PAP's financial suitability or puts the PAP's income below the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' (HHS) poverty guidelines; or
- A significant increase in debts or expenses that would impact the PAP's financial suitability or put the family below the HHS poverty guidelines.^[18]

Pregnancy

USCIS generally does not consider pregnancy a significant change unless it significantly impacts the household member's physical, mental, emotional, or behavioral health or significantly decreases the PAP's financial resources.

Once the household member gives birth, if the child is part of the household, USCIS considers this a change in household composition that counts as a significant change.

Miscarriage

USCIS generally does not consider miscarriage a significant change unless it significantly impacts the household member's physical, mental, emotional, or behavioral health or significantly decreases the PAP's financial resources.

Serious Health Conditions

USCIS considers a household member's development of a serious health condition to be a significant change. Serious health conditions include, but are not limited to, heart attacks, heart conditions requiring operation, cancers, strokes, conditions requiring extensive therapy or surgical procedures, chronic obstructive pulmonary disease, severe respiratory conditions or nervous disorders, mental disorders or dementia, and severe injuries.

History as an Offender

USCIS considers any change in criminal history or the history of abuse or violence as an offender (substance use, sexual abuse, child abuse or neglect, or family violence), whether or not it resulted in an arrest or criminal charges, to be a significant change.

Child Placement or Adoption

If multiple children are adopted and enter the household at different times throughout the suitability application validity period, an updated home study addressing the addition of a child into the home and an updated suitability application approval is required.

2. Change of Country

A PAP must file for a change of country if the PAP seeks to adopt from a country that is different than what the PAP indicated on the suitability application. A PAP may file for a change of country at any time. USCIS does not limit the number of change of country requests that the PAP may submit.

Orphan (Non-Hague)

The PAP must notify USCIS in writing of a change of country. There is no fee associated with a change of country before the initial approval of the suitability application or for the first change of country request. For any subsequent change of country request, the PAP must follow the suitability application form instructions^[19] to submit an Application for Action on an Approved Application or Petition (Form I-824), with fee. For both first-time and subsequent change of country requests, the PAP must submit an updated home study if the initial approval did not specify the new country.

Hague

There is no fee associated with a change of country before the initial approval of the suitability application or for the first change of country request. For any subsequent change of country request, the PAP must submit a Request for Action on Approved Form I-800A (Form I-800A Supplement 3), with fee. For both first-time and subsequent change of country requests, the PAP must submit an updated home study if the initial approval did not specify the new country.

3. Summary of Change and Update Requirements

The following tables provide a summary of the change and update requirements associated with suitability determinations.

Requested Action	Type of Request	PAP Submits to USCIS^[20]	Fee Requirement
Extend the validity of an approved suitability application	First time extension	A written request	No fee
Extend the validity of an approved suitability application	Subsequent extensions	A new suitability application	With fee
Change the country from which the PAP is approved to adopt	Before approval of suitability application	A written notification	No fee
Change the country from which the PAP is approved to adopt	After suitability application is approved – first request	A written notification	No fee
Change the country from which the PAP is approved to adopt	After suitability application is approved – second or additional request	An Application for Action on an Approved Application or Petition (Form I-824)	With fee
Notify USCIS of a significant change	Before approval of suitability application or Form I-600	A written notification	No fee
Notify USCIS of a significant change	After approval of suitability application or Form I-600	A written notification	No fee
Notify USCIS of a change in marital status	Before approval of suitability application or Form I-600	A new suitability application or Form I-600 combination filing	No fee
Notify USCIS of a change in marital status	After approval of suitability application or Form I-600	A new suitability application or Form I-600 combination filing	With fee

Hague Suitability Determinations

Requested Action	Type of Request	PAP Submits to USCIS^[21]	Fee Requirement

Requested Action	Type of Request	PAP Submits to USCIS^[21]	Fee Requirement
Extend the validity of an approved suitability application	First time	A Request for Action on Approved Form I-800A (Form I-800A Supplement 3)	No fee
Extend the validity of an approved suitability application	Subsequent extensions	Form I-800A Supplement 3	With fee
Change the country from which the PAP is approved to adopt	Before approval	A written notification	No fee
Change the country from which the PAP is approved to adopt	After suitability application is approved – first time	Form I-800A Supplement 3	No fee
Change the country from which the PAP is approved to adopt	After suitability application is approved – second or additional request	Form I-800A Supplement 3	With fee
Notify USCIS of a significant change	Before approval of suitability application	A written notification	No fee
Notify USCIS of a significant change	After approval of suitability application	Form I-800A Supplement 3	With fee
Notify USCIS of a change in marital status	Before approval of suitability application	A new suitability application	No fee

Requested Action	Type of Request	PAP Submits to USCIS ^[21]	Fee Requirement
Notify USCIS of a change in marital status	After approval of suitability application	A new suitability application	With fee

D. Home Study Update Requirements

1. Contact Requirements

USCIS does not require that the home study preparer conduct another home visit unless the PAP has moved,^[22] the law of the jurisdiction requires it, or the home study preparer requires it. The home study preparer may conduct the home study update by any means of contact.

The home study update must describe the contacts made to update the home study, including the:

- Number of interviews and visits;
- Participants;
- Date(s); and
- Location and type of each contact (such as home visit, other location, telephonic, email, or video conference).

2. Format

USCIS does not prescribe a set format or length for home study updates. A home study update may be either:

- An update that just addresses the circumstance(s) that require the update; or
- A new and complete home study.

USCIS does not accept addendums or corrections that do not address all necessary requirements.

3. Required Screening and Assessments

The home study preparer must assess if anything has changed since the last home study or home study update. If so, the home study preparer must assess what changed, and any impact on suitability.

The home study preparer must update the required screenings,^[23] which requires that the home study preparer:

- Re-ask the questions about abuse or violence;^[24]
- Re-ask the questions about criminal history, and if applicable, rehabilitation;^[25] and
- Update the child abuse registry checks.^[26]

For a home study update, the home study preparer only needs the results of such child abuse registry checks for the current residence and any state or foreign country the PAP or any AMH has resided in since the prior home study or home study update. The home study preparer does not need to recheck child abuse registries for prior residences that were included in a prior home study or prior home study update unless the PAP or any AMH have resided in that state or foreign country since the last check was completed. Child abuse registry checks for the PAP's state of residence and any place they have resided in since the prior home study (or home study update) must be current^[27] at the time the home study preparer signs the home study update.

The home study update must:

- Include the dates and results of the required screenings and assessments (the updated child abuse registry check and responses to the questions on criminal history or history of abuse or violence);
- Fully address anything that has changed since the last home study or home study update; and
- Confirm that the other areas of the last home study or home study update have not changed.

4. Recommendation, Signature, and Attestations

The home study update must:

- Include a statement from the preparer that the preparer has reviewed the home study being updated and is personally and fully aware of its contents; and
- Address whether the preparer recommends the PAP and the specific reasons for the recommendation.

The home study preparer must sign and date the home study update. The home study preparer's signature on an update must be original.^[28]

5. Supporting Documentation

The home study update must be accompanied by a copy of the home study that is being updated.

E. Biometrics Validity and Updates^[29]

PAP and AMH biometric-based background check results are valid for 15 months.

In its discretion, USCIS may update or refresh a biometric-based background check result one-time, without fee, for intercountry adoption cases if the 15-month validity period has or will expire before final adjudication of a PAP's case.^[30] When USCIS receives a no-fee extension or a one-time, no-fee biometrics request, USCIS first attempts to refresh PAP and AMH biometrics rather than requiring a new biometrics submission at an Application Support Center (ASC).^[31] If, for any reason, USCIS is unable to update or refresh a biometric-based background check result, that person is required to submit biometrics again or failure to do so may result in a denial for abandonment.^[32]

Footnotes

[^ 1] This Part uses the term updated home study or home study update, rather than amended home study or home study amendment. See 8 CFR 204.311(u).

[^ 2] See Section C, Significant Changes [5 USCIS-PM.B(5)(C)].

[^ 3] For more information, see Chapter 5, Action on Pending or Approved Suitability Determinations, Section E, Biometrics Validity and Updates [5 USCIS-PM B.5(E)].

[^ 4] See the Petition to Classify Orphan as an Immediate Relative (Form I-600). See the Petition to Classify Convention Adoptee as an Immediate Relative (Form I-800).

[^ 5] This means that no more than 6 months have passed since the home study preparer signed and dated the home study.

[^ 6] The jurisdiction where the PAP resides and the country from which they are adopting may have additional requirements for home study updates.

[^ 7] For information on submitting extension requests, see the form instructions for the Application for Advance Processing of an Orphan Petition (Form I-600A). See the USCIS Extension and Validity Periods webpage.

[^ 8] See the Application for Advance Processing of an Orphan Petition (Form I-600A).

[^ 9] See the Application for Determination of Suitability to Adopt a Child from a Convention Country (Form I-800A).

[^ 10] See Chapter 4, Home Studies, Section P, Duty of Disclosure [5 USCIS-PM B.4(P)].

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 204.311(u)(1)(i)-(iii). See the Guidance on Determining Suitability of Prospective Adoptive Parents for Intercountry Adoption (PDF, 886.91 KB), PM-602-0165, issued November 9, 2018.

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 204.311(u)(1)(iv).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 204.311(u)(1)(vii).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 204.311(u)(1)(v).

[^ 15] See instructions for the Application for Advance Processing of an Orphan Petition (Form I-600A). See instructions for the Application for Determination of Suitability to Adopt a Child from a Convention Country (Form I-800A). See USCIS' Updated Home Studies and Significant Changes webpage. See USCIS' Change of Country webpage.

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 204.311(u)(1).

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 304.312(e)(2)(i).

[^ 18] PAPs generally need to demonstrate income at 125% of the poverty level for their household size unless the 100% exemption applies. The HHS poverty guidelines are a key tool that USCIS uses when evaluating financial resources but are not the sole factor.

[^ 19] See instructions for the Application for Advance Processing of an Orphan Petition (Form I-600A).

[^ 20] For information on how to submit certain written requests and notifications, see the USCIS Adoption Contact Information webpage.

[^ 21] For information on how to submit certain written requests and notifications, see the USCIS Adoption Contact Information webpage.

[^ 22] If the PAP has a new permanent residence outside the United States and the adopted child will reside with the PAP there, the home study preparer must complete at least one home visit. The home study update must include a detailed description of where the PAP resides at the time of the update. The primary provider may use a foreign supervised provider (holding any license or other authorization that may be required to conduct adoption home studies in that country) to prepare that portion of the updated home study. An accredited agency must review and approve that portion of the home study. Alternatively, a public foreign authority may complete the update in compliance with U.S. regulations.

[^ 23] See 8 CFR 204.311(i)-(l). For more information on required screenings, see Chapter 4, Home Studies, Section I, Criminal History and History of Abuse or Violence [5 USCIS-PM B.4(l)].

[^ 24] See 8 CFR 204.311(j).

[^ 25] See 8 CFR 204.311(k)-(l).

[^ 26] See 8 CFR 204.311(i).

[^ 27] For more information on child abuse registry checks, see the Guidance on Determining Suitability of Prospective Adoptive Parents for Intercountry Adoption (PDF, 886.91 KB), PM-602-0165, issued November 9, 2018.

[^ 28] For more information on home study review and signature requirements, see Chapter 4, Home Studies, Section Q, Review, Signature, and Attestation [5 USCIS-PM B.4(Q)].

[^ 29] USCIS follows standard operating procedures when refreshing biometric results.

[^ 30] For more information, see the Background Checks webpage.

[^ 31] Since there are no ASCs abroad, PAPs who reside abroad must submit a completed Applicant Fingerprint Card (Form FD-258) or appear for biometrics collection where available.

[^ 32] For information on unclassifiable prints for the orphan process, see Chapter 2, Eligibility, Documentation, and Evidence (Orphan Process) [5 USCIS-PM B.2]. For information on unclassifiable prints for the Hague process, see Chapter 3, Eligibility, Documentation, and Evidence (Hague Process) [5 USCIS-PM B.3]. For information on failure to appear for interview or biometrics capture, see 8 CFR 103.2(b)(13).

Chapter 6 - Adjudication

A. Review and Independent Decision

The adjudicating officer must make an independent evaluation of the merits of the case. The officer who is adjudicating the suitability determination must be satisfied that proper care will be provided for the child.^[1] This evaluation is based on review of the application or combination filing, home study, background checks, and any other evidence the officer is aware of.

1. Home Study Review

Although a favorable home study is required to establish eligibility, it is not the end of the officer's review. If there is reason to believe that a favorable home study was based on inadequate or erroneous evaluation of all of the facts, the officer must attempt to resolve these issues with the home study preparer, the prospective adoptive parent (PAP), and the state agency that reviewed the home study (if any). Issues that may need to be addressed include, but are not limited to, PAP or adult member of the household (AMH): criminal history, history of abuse or violence as an offender, disabilities, financial issues, and inappropriate behavior when interacting with USCIS that raises questions about the PAP's suitability.

2. Background Check Review

All background checks on the PAP and AMHs must be completed and current before the officer can make a final decision.^[2] The officer must follow all required procedures regarding biometrics. USCIS issues a Request for Evidence (RFE) if:

- A PAP's or AMH's fingerprints are expired (and they already received their one-time, no fee fingerprints refresh); or
- An additional person needs to provide biometrics.

The officer must check the PAP's and AMH's responses from the home study on the questions on criminal history and history of abuse or violence as an offender against the background checks. USCIS may deny the suitability application if the PAP or AMH failed to disclose an arrest, conviction, or history of substance, sexual abuse, child abuse, or domestic violence to the agency conducting the home study and to USCIS.

B. USCIS Actions and Decisions

1. Communication

USCIS sends communication of its actions and decisions directly to the PAP for all case-related matters.

If a Notice of Entry of Appearance as Attorney or Accredited Representative (Form G-28) or Notice of Entry of Appearance as Attorney in Matters Outside the Geographical Confines of the United States (Form G-28I) is completed by an attorney or by an accredited representative,^[3] the officer also sends a copy of USCIS decision notices to such authorized attorney or accredited representative.^[4] A person representing an organization such as non-profit or charitable organization must first be accredited by the Board of Immigration Appeals. In general, adoption agencies do not qualify as Accredited Representatives.

Information about the particulars of any case can only be given to the PAP, or to an attorney or accredited representative with a Form G-28 or Form G-28I on file. The Privacy Act forbids disclosing information about the case to anyone else unless the PAP has signed a written consent^[5] to the disclosure or such disclosure is not prohibited by law.^[6]

2. Requests for Evidence and Notices of Intent to Deny

The officer issues an RFE or Notice of Intent to Deny (NOID), as appropriate, if any of the required home study elements or other required evidence is missing or deficient.^[7]

USCIS may issue an RFE if a PAP or AMH is on probation, parole, supervised release, or other similar arrangement for any conviction, or if criminal charges are pending or adjudication is deferred.^[8] USCIS does not make a favorable suitability determination if there are pending criminal charges or deferred decisions against the PAP or any AMH. If the person completes the period of probation, parole, supervised release, or other arrangement, resolves the pending or deferred criminal adjudication, and the PAP provides a favorable home study recommending that the person has been appropriately rehabilitated within the RFE response period, USCIS may consider the person to have been appropriately rehabilitated.^[9]

3. Approvals

If the officer approves the suitability application, the officer sends a notice of approval to the PAP and the PAP's legal representative, if any.^[10]

4. Denials

The officer denies the case if:^[11]

- Any of the eligibility requirements are not met;^[12]
- The officer is not satisfied that the PAP will provide proper care to the child;^[13]
- The PAP or any AMH failed to disclose to the home study preparer or to USCIS, or concealed or misrepresented, any fact(s) about the PAP or any additional member of the household concerning the arrest, conviction, or history or substance abuse, sexual abuse, child abuse, or family violence, or any other criminal history as an offender;^[14]
- The PAP or any AMH failed to cooperate in having available child abuse registries checked; or^[15]
- The PAP or any AMH failed to disclose any prior home studies, whether completed or not, including those that did not favorably recommend for adoption or custodial care, the person(s) to whom the prior home study related.^[16]

If the officer cannot approve the suitability application, the officer must explain in writing the specific reasons for denial.^[17]

C. Revocations

USCIS may revoke an approved suitability application automatically or upon notice as described in corresponding regulations.^[18]

D. Appeals and Motions to Reopen or Reconsider

A PAP may file a Notice of Appeal or Motion (Form I-290B) to request that USCIS reopen or reconsider an adverse decision.^[19]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 204.3(h)(2).

[^ 2] For information on submitting biometrics for the orphan process, see Chapter 2, Eligibility, Documentation, and Evidence (Orphan Process) [5 USCIS-PM B.2]. For information on submitting biometrics for the Hague process, see Chapter 3, Eligibility, Documentation, and Evidence (Hague Process) [5 USCIS-PM B.3]. For information on biometrics validity and updates, see Chapter 5, Action on Pending or Approved Suitability Determinations, Section E, Biometrics Validity and Updates [5 USCIS-PM B.5(E)].

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 292.2.

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(19).

[^ 5] A PAP following the Hague Adoption Convention process may use the Form I-800, Supplement 1, Consent to Disclose Information (Supplement 1). USCIS does not have a disclosure form for the orphan process. A PAP following the orphan process who wishes to consent to the disclosure of information about the case may submit a signed, written waiver that specifies the information USCIS is explicitly authorized to release and to whom.

[^ 6] See Privacy Act of 1974, Pub. L. 93-579 (PDF), 88 Stat. 1896 (December 31, 1974) (codified at 5 U.S.C. 552a).

[^ 7] For more information on RFEs or NOIDs, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications [1 USCIS-PM E].

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 204.311(l).

[^ 9] Although a favorable home study is required to establish suitability and eligibility, USCIS is not bound by the recommendation in the home study and makes the ultimate decision whether a PAP is suitable and eligible to adopt. See Section A, Review and Independent Decision [5 USCIS-PM B.6(A)].

[^ 10] See the Notice of Favorable Determination Concerning Application for Advance Processing of Orphan Petition (Form I-171H) or Notice of Action (Form I-797). See the Form I-600 Notice of Suitability Determination (Form I-171S). For more information on approvals, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications [1 USCIS-PM E].

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 204.312(c). See 8 CFR 204.3(h).

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 204.3. See 8 CFR 204.3(h)(6). See 8 CFR 204 Subpart C. See 8 CFR 204.307.

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 204.312(c)(ii). See 8 CFR 204.3(h)(2). In order to help determine suitability, a home study is required. For Hague Adoption Convention cases, the PAP must submit the home study with the suitability application. For orphan cases, if the PAP does not submit the home study within 1 year of filing the suitability application, USCIS denies the case. See 8 CFR 204.3(h)(5).

[^ 14] A PAP cannot submit a new petition or application for reconsideration until a 1-year period has elapsed from a denial on this basis. See 8 CFR 204.309(a). See 8 CFR 204.3(h)(4). In Hague cases, the one-year bar also applies to a failure to disclose all prior home studies.

[^ 15] USCIS denies any new application or petition filed within a year of such denial. See 8 CFR 204.311. See 8 CFR 204.3(h)(4).

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 204.311.

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 103.3. For more information on denials, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications [1 USCIS-PM E].

[^ 18] See 8 CFR 204.312(e)(2)(i). See 8 CFR 204.3(h)(14). See 8 CFR 205.1. See 8 CFR 205.2. For more information on revocation, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications [1 USCIS-PM E].

[^ 19] For more information, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part F, Motions and Appeals [1 USCIS-PM F]. See 8 CFR 204.314.

Part C - Child Eligibility Determinations (Orphan)

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

In enacting legislation regarding orphans, Congress was primarily concerned with the welfare of the children. The orphan process is one of three different ways for a child to immigrate to the United States based on adoption.^[1] The prospective adoptive parent (PAP) generally may pursue the orphan process^[2] if:

- The child is not habitually resident in a Hague Adoption Convention Country;^[3] and
- At least one of the PAPs is a U.S. citizen.

The orphan process involves a USCIS determination of the PAP's suitability^[4] and eligibility to adopt and a determination of the child's eligibility to immigrate as an orphan.

B. Background

The Displaced Persons Act of 1948 contained the first laws relating to the immigration of orphans. Since then, Congress has enacted several acts and amendments related to orphans and intercountry adoption. Significant recent changes include the:

- Intercountry Adoption Universal Accreditation Act of 2012 (UAA),^[5] which requires that adoption service providers (ASPs) providing adoption services in orphan cases follow the same accreditation or approval process required of ASPs providing such services in Hague Adoption Convention cases; and
- Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2014 (CAA),^[6] which changed the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) definition of an orphan so that only one adoptive parent in a married couple has to personally see and observe the orphan before or during the adoption proceedings in order for the adoption to be considered “full and final” for immigration purposes.^[7]

C. Legal Authorities

- INA 101(b)(1)(F) – Definition of an orphan child
- INA 101(b)(2) – Definition of parent, father, or mother
- INA 201(b)(2)(A)(i) – Immediate relatives
- INA 204(d) – Recommendation of valid home study
- 8 CFR 204.1 – General information about immediate relative and family-sponsored petitions
- 8 CFR 204.3 – Orphan cases under section 101(b)(1)(F) of the Act
- 8 CFR 204.301 – Definitions
- 8 CFR 204.311 – Convention adoption home study requirements
- 8 CFR 205.1 – Automatic revocation
- 8 CFR 205.2 – Revocation on notice

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Part A, Adoptions Overview [5 USCIS-PM A] for information on determining which adoption process (Hague Adoption Convention, orphan, or family-based) a prospective adoptive parent (PAP) should follow.

[^ 2] See the Application for Advance Processing of an Orphan Petition (Form I-600A) or a Petition to Classify Orphan as an Immediate Relative (Form I-600).

[^ 3] For a list of countries that are party to the Hague Adoption Convention, see the U.S. Department of State (DOS)'s Convention Countries webpage.

[^ 4] See Part B, Adoptive Parent Suitability Determinations [5 USCIS-PM B].

[^ 5] See Pub. L. 112-276 (PDF) (January 14, 2013).

[^ 6] See Section 7083 of the CAA, Pub. L. 113-76 (PDF), 128 Stat. 5, 567 (January 17, 2014).

[^ 7] For more information, see 9 FAM 502.3-3(B)(3)(U)(1), Adoption or Intent to Adopt. See 9 FAM 502.3-3(B)(7)(U)(c), Immediate Relative (IR-3 vs. IR4) Orphan Classifications and the Child Citizenship Act.

Chapter 2 - Eligibility

A child^[1] must qualify as an orphan^[2] to be eligible to immigrate using the orphan process. The table below reflects the general eligibility criteria for the orphan process.

Summary of Eligibility Criteria

Requirement	For More Information
The prospective adoptive parents (PAPs) are suitable and eligible to adopt.	See Part B, Adoptive Parent Suitability Determinations [5 USCIS-PM B].
The child meets age and identity requirements.	See Chapter 3, Identity and Age [5 USCIS-PM C.3].
The child meets specific requirements for eligibility as an orphan.	See Chapter 4, Eligibility Requirements Specific to Orphans [5 USCIS-PM C.4].
The child has a qualifying adoptive or custodial relationship as a child to a U.S. citizen parent.	See Chapter 5, Qualifying Adoptive or Custodial Relationship [5 USCIS-PM C.5].
There must be no child-buying, fraud, misrepresentation, or non-bona fide intent.	See Chapter 6, Additional Requirements, Section A, No Child-Buying, Fraud, Misrepresentation, or Non-Bona Fide Intent [5 USCIS-PM C.6(A)].

Requirement	For More Information
The child must match the characteristics that the PAP has been approved to adopt.	See Chapter 6, Additional Requirements, Section B, Child Matches Characteristics that Prospective Adoptive Parent Is Approved For [5 USCIS-PM C.6(B)].
The PAP must have identified a primary adoption service provider (unless a limited exception applies).	See Chapter 6, Additional Requirements, Section C, Primary Provider [5 USCIS-PM C.6(C)].

Footnotes

[^ 1] To meet the definition of a child under INA 101(b)(1), the child must be unmarried and under the age of 21.

[^ 2] See INA 101(b)(1)(F).

Chapter 3 - Identity and Age

A. Identity

The child's identity must be properly documented.^[1]

B. Age

Even if the prospective adoptive parent (PAP) has not yet completed the adoption or obtained all of the required supporting documentation, the PAP must file the Petition to Classify Orphan as an Immediate Relative (Form I-600) before the child turns 16 unless one of the following exceptions apply.^[2]

Sibling Exception

A child 16 years of age or older qualifies for the sibling exception if the child is under the age of 18 at the time the petition is filed and that child's birth^[3] sibling:

- Is or was previously classified as an orphan^[4] while under the age of 16 and is coming to the United States to be adopted by the same PAP(s); or

- Meets the definition of adopted child for a family-based adoption petition^[5] and was under the age of 16 at the time of adoption by the same PAP(s).

Suitability Application Exception for Certain 15-Year-Olds

USCIS deems the suitability application^[6] filing date to be the petition filing date if both of the following requirements are met:^[7]

- The PAP filed the suitability application after the child's 15th birthday, but before the child's 16th birthday (or, if the sibling exception applies, after the child's 17th birthday but before the child's 18th birthday); and
- The PAP files the petition not more than 180 days after the initial approval of the suitability application.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Chapter 7, Documentation and Evidence, Section B, Required Evidence [5 USCIS-PM C.7(B)].

[^ 2] USCIS generally issues a Request for Evidence for the remaining supporting documentation. See Chapter 8, Adjudication, Section E, Decisions and Actions, Subsection 3, Requests for Evidence and Notices of Intent to Deny [5 USCIS-PM C.8(E)(3)].

[^ 3] In this Volume, USCIS uses birth and natural synonymously.

[^ 4] See INA 101(b)(1)(F).

[^ 5] See INA 101(b)(1)(E).

[^ 6] See Application for Advance Processing of an Orphan Petition (Form I-600A).

[^ 7] While regulations at 8 CFR 204.3 do not directly address the relationship between the separate filing of a Form I-600A and the statutory requirement to file the petition while the child is under the age of 16 (or, as permitted in INA 101(b)(1)(F)(ii), under the age of 18), this exception is consistent with the regulations for Hague Adoption Convention cases.

Chapter 4 - Eligibility Requirements Specific to Orphans

A. Eligibility Requirements

To meet the specific orphan eligibility requirements and meet the definition of orphan under the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA), a child must either have:

- No legal parents because of the death or disappearance of, abandonment or desertion by, or separation from or loss of both parents; or
- A sole or surviving legal parent who is incapable of providing proper care.^[1]

The loss of each of the child's parents must meet the definition of at least one of these terms under immigration law. The child is not required to have lost each parent in the same way. For example, one parent may have been separated from the child, while the other parent may have abandoned the child to an orphanage.

Generally, USCIS first evaluates whether the child has no legal parents because of abandonment, desertion, disappearance, loss, death, or separation. USCIS generally conducts a sole or surviving parent analysis only if a child does not meet any of those definitions and when:

- There has been a direct relinquishment of the child by the birth mother, or by the birth father as a surviving parent, to the prospective adoptive parent (PAP); or
- The child has been released or relinquished in anticipation of, or preparation for, adoption to a third party providing custodial care to the child who is not authorized to provide custodial care^[2] under the child welfare laws of the foreign-sending country.^[3]

Definitions

Foreign official documents and laws may use different terms from those used in U.S. immigration law or use the same terms but with different meanings. A child must meet the definition of an orphan as defined by U.S. immigration law.^[4] To determine if the child meets one of the below definitions under U.S. immigration law, USCIS considers the laws of the child's country of origin and what actions the foreign competent authorities must take. USCIS also considers the actual facts and circumstances of the case as supported by the evidence of record.

B. No Legal Parent

1. Abandonment

Abandonment must include not only the intention to surrender all parental rights, obligations, and claims to the child, and control over and possession of the child, but also the actual act of surrendering such rights, obligations, claims, control, and possession. Abandonment means that the child's parent(s):

- Willfully forsake all parental rights, obligations, and claims to the child, as well as all control over and possession of the child; and
- Acted without intending to transfer or without transferring these rights to any specific person(s).

If the parent(s) released the child to a third party to provide custodial care prior to the adoption, the third party was authorized under the child welfare laws of the foreign-sending country.

Abandonment does not include a release or relinquishment by one or both parents:

- Directly to the PAP;^[5]
- To an authorized third party for a specific adoption;
- To a third party that is not authorized under the child welfare laws of the foreign-sending country to accept released or relinquished children in anticipation of or preparation for adoption; or
- For temporary placement in an orphanage if the parent(s) express an intention to retrieve the child, are contributing or attempting to contribute to the support of the child, or otherwise exhibit ongoing parental interest in the child.

Release to an Orphanage

U.S. immigration law generally considers a child whose parent(s) have unconditionally released him or her to an authorized orphanage to be abandoned.

It is not uncommon for parents in some countries to entrust their children to the care of orphanages temporarily without intending to abandon the child or for the child to be adopted. USCIS does not consider such releases to be unconditional, and they do not meet the definition of abandoned under U.S. immigration law.

Ongoing Contact

A child can still meet the abandonment definition even if the birth parent(s) show an interest in ongoing contact or the adoption service provider and the PAP commits to ongoing contact with birth parents. However, USCIS may further investigate if:

- There is any indication that the birth parent(s) did not understand the finality of adoption; or
- The release was not unconditional.

2. Desertion

Desertion means:

- The parent(s) have willfully forsaken the child;

- The parent(s) have refused to carry out their parental rights and obligations; and
- As a result, the child has become a ward of a competent authority in accordance with the laws of the foreign-sending country.

Desertion does not mean that the parents have disappeared, but rather that they refuse to carry out their parental rights and obligations towards the child. Desertion differs from abandonment in that the parents have not taken steps to divest themselves of parental duties, but the parents' inaction has caused a local authority to step in to assume custody of the child.

3. Disappearance

Disappearance means:

- The parent(s) have unaccountably or inexplicably passed out of the child's life;
- The parent(s)' whereabouts are unknown;
- There is no reasonable hope of the parent(s)' reappearance; and
- A competent authority determined reasonable efforts were made to locate the parent(s) as required by the laws of the foreign-sending country.

4. Loss

Loss means the involuntary severance or detachment of the child from the child's parents:

- In a manner that is permanent;
- That is caused by a natural disaster, civil unrest, or other calamitous events beyond the control of the parents; and
- Is verified by a competent authority in accordance with the laws of the foreign-sending country.

5. Death

Death means one or both parents are legally deceased. A child meets orphan requirements if:

- The child's parent(s) are legally deceased; and
- The child has not acquired another parent (such as a stepparent or legal adoptive parent) as defined by U.S. immigration law.

6. Separation

Separation (commonly known as termination of parental rights) means:

- The involuntary severance of the child from the child's parents by action of a competent authority for good cause (such as child abuse or neglect) and in accordance with the laws of the foreign-sending country;
- The competent authority properly notified the parents and granted the opportunity to contest such action; and
- The termination of all parental rights and obligations is permanent and unconditional.

C. Sole or Surviving Parent

1. Sole Parent

Only a birth mother can be a sole parent. The birth mother may qualify as a sole parent if:

- The birth mother was unmarried at the time of the child's birth (child was born out of wedlock);^[6]
- The child was not legitimated while in the legal custody of the birth father (as described in the legitimization section below);
- The birth father is unknown, or has disappeared, abandoned, or deserted the child, or irrevocably released the child for emigration and adoption (in writing), in accordance with the laws of the foreign-sending country;
- The child does not have any other legal parents within the meaning of U.S. immigration law;^[7]
- The birth mother is incapable of providing proper care (is unable to provide for the child's basic needs, consistent with the local standards of the foreign-sending country);^[8] and
- The birth mother, in writing, irrevocably releases the child for emigration and adoption, in accordance with the laws of the foreign-sending country.

Legitimation

The birth mother cannot be a sole parent if the child was legitimated while in the legal custody of the birth father. Legitimation means "placing a child born out of wedlock in the same legal position as a child born in wedlock."^[9] The law of the child's residence or domicile, or the law of the father's residence or domicile, is the relevant law to determine whether a child has been legitimated. It is not necessary to consider whether a child has been legitimated unless the birth father ever had sole or joint legal custody of the child.^[10]

An officer must evaluate legitimization, paternity, and legal custody separately under the laws of the particular country. It is possible for a child's paternity to be established, but for the child to not be legitimated. It is also possible for a child's paternity to be established, but for the child's father to never have had legal custody. Legitimation, however, cannot be established unless paternity has been established.^[11]

2. Surviving Parent

Surviving parent means a child's living parent when the child's other parent is dead and the child has not acquired another parent within the meaning of U.S. immigration law.^[12]

Essential elements include:

- One living parent;
- One deceased parent;
- The child has not acquired a new legal parent;^[13]
- The living parent is incapable of providing proper care;^[14] and
- The living parent has, in writing, irrevocably released child for emigration and adoption in accordance with the laws of the foreign-sending country.

D. Other Legal Parents

USCIS considers a parent to include any person who is related to a child as the child's legal parent, mother, or father as specified in the definition under U.S. immigration law.^[15] The officer must determine for each parent whether the person has legal rights to the child in accordance with the laws of the foreign-sending country. If the officer determines a parent is a legal parent, the officer must determine whether the child has lost the parent.

Stepparents

USCIS must consider the existence of a stepparent in determining whether a child is an orphan.^[16] The officer must determine whether the stepparent has legal rights to the child in accordance with the laws of the foreign-sending country.

If an officer determines that the child has a stepparent, the officer should request additional evidence from the PAP, including:

- A copy (with a certified English translation) of the relevant statutes, regulations, court judgments, or other legal authority from the foreign-sending country addressing whether a stepparent has a legal parent-child relationship to the stepchild; and
- A statement from the stepparent (with a certified English translation) indicating that the stepparent has neither adopted the stepchild nor obtained any other form of legal custody of the stepchild and has no interest in doing so.

USCIS considers a stepparent to be a parent for purposes of adjudication of an orphan petition if:

- The stepparent actually adopted the stepchild as specified in U.S. immigration law;^[17]
- Under the law of the foreign-sending country, the marriage between the parent and stepparent creates a legal parent-child relationship between the stepparent and stepchild; or
- The stepparent has obtained legal custody of the stepchild so that the stepparent does have a legal relationship to the stepchild.

In some jurisdictions, a stepparent does not have a legal parent-child relationship to a stepchild and would therefore not have any legal standing to perform any action terminating the non-existent rights and duties. USCIS does not consider a stepparent to be a child's parent for purposes of an orphan petition if the PAP establishes that, under the law of the foreign-sending country, the stepparent has no legal parent-child relationship to a stepchild.

The burden is on the PAP to establish that a stepparent has no legal parent-child relationship to the child. The PAP may not simply assert that the stepparent has no legal parental rights in relation to the child.

If the officer determines the stepparent is a legal parent, the officer must determine whether the child has lost the stepparent (in addition to the birth father and birth mother).

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 101(b)(1)(F).

[^ 2] Custodial care prior to an adoption must be provided without transferring these rights to any specific person(s). USCIS considers placement of a child with a third party that is not authorized to provide custodial care in anticipation of, or preparation for, adoption, to be a direct relinquishment. Direct relinquishments are excluded from the definition of abandonment.

[^ 3] That is, the country of the child's citizenship, or if the child is not permanently residing in the country of citizenship, the country of the child's habitual residence. This excludes a country to which the child travels temporarily, or to which the child travels either as a prelude to, or in conjunction with, adoption or immigration to the United States. See 8 CFR 204.3(b).

[^ 4] See INA 101(b)(1)(F). See 8 CFR 204.3(b).

[^ 5] To be considered abandonment, a direct relinquishment by a sole or surviving parent must meet the requirements for an irrevocable release by a sole or surviving parent, as well as that the parent is incapable of providing proper care. See Section C, Sole or Surviving Parent [5 USCIS-PM C.4(C)].

[^ 6] In November 1995, a statutory amendment changed references in INA 101(b)(1)(A), (1)(D), and INA 101(b)(2) from “legitimate” and “illegitimate” children to “children born in wedlock” and “children born out of wedlock,” respectively. See Pub. L. No. 104-51 (PDF) (Nov. 15, 1995). Guidance was issued concerning the adjudication of orphan petitions in Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) Cable HQ 204.21-P, 204.22-P. This INS guidance remains in effect for USCIS. The definition in 8 CFR 204.3 has not yet been updated to reflect the statutory amendment.

[^ 7] See INA 101(b)(2).

[^ 8] Incapable of providing proper care means that a sole or surviving parent is unable to provide for the child's basic needs, consistent with the local standards of the foreign-sending country. This determination is not limited to economic or financial concerns. A parent could be unable to provide proper care due to a number of reasons, including, but not limited to: extreme poverty; medical, psychological, or emotional difficulties; or long-term incarceration. See 8 CFR 204.3(b).

[^ 9] See Matter of Moraga (PDF), 23 I&N Dec. 195, 197 (BIA 2001).

[^ 10] The natural father of the child will be presumed to have had legal custody of that child at the time of legitimization, in the absence of affirmative evidence indicating otherwise. See Matter of Rivers (PDF), 17 I&N Dec. 419 (BIA 1980). However, it is possible for a child to have been legitimated by operation of law, but for the father to never have had legal custody.

[^ 11] However, the establishment of paternity may or may not result in the birth father having legal custody, depending on the laws where the child or birth father resides and any applicable court decisions.

[^ 12] See INA 101(b)(2).

[^ 13] See Section D, Other Legal Parents [5 USCIS-PM C.4(D)].

[^ 14] Incapable of providing proper care means that a sole or surviving parent is unable to provide for the child's basic needs, consistent with the local standards of the foreign-sending country. This determination is not limited to economic or financial concerns. A parent could be unable to provide proper care due to a number of reasons, including, but not limited to, extreme poverty; medical, psychological, or emotional difficulties; or long-term incarceration. See 8 CFR 204.3(b).

[^ 15] See INA 101(b)(2).

[^ 16] Under the law of some jurisdictions, a stepparent may adopt the stepparent's spouse's children without terminating the legal parent-child relationship between the children and their other parent. The adoptive stepparent may then qualify as a parent through INA 101(b)(1)(E), as well as 101(b)(1)(B).

[^ 17] See INA 101(b)(1)(E).

Chapter 5 - Qualifying Adoptive or Custodial Relationship

A prospective adoptive parent (PAP) must have one of the following to petition for a child to immigrate based on an adoption:

- A final adoption granted by the foreign-sending country, or
- Legal custody of the child granted by the foreign-sending country for emigration and adoption in the United States.^[1]

A. Final Adoption

A child may qualify to immigrate based on a final adoption if:

- The adoption meets USCIS requirements for a final adoption (is valid under the law of the foreign-sending country, creates a legal permanent parent-child relationship, and terminates the prior legal parent-child relationship),^[2]
- The petitioner (and spouse, if married) adopted the child; and
- The petitioner (or spouse, if married) personally saw and observed the child before or during the adoption proceedings abroad.

If these requirements are met, the child may qualify for an IR-3 visa (child adopted outside the United States by U.S. citizen)^[3] based on a valid final adoption in accordance with the laws of the foreign-sending country. USCIS considers a final adoption that meets these requirements a “full and final” adoption.

A child does not, however, meet requirements to immigrate based on a “full and final” adoption if the petitioner is married and neither the petitioner nor the spouse actually saw and observed the child before or during the adoption proceedings.^[4] Additionally, a child does not meet the requirements if only one parent of a married couple adopted the child. USCIS may, however, consider the final foreign adoption to have established legal custody for emigration and adoption and the child may be eligible for an IR-4 visa (child to be adopted in the United States by U.S. citizen).^[5]

B. Legal Custody for Emigration and Adoption

Not all countries grant what USCIS considers final adoptions abroad for immigration purposes.^[6] A child may, however, be eligible on the basis of legal custody for the purpose of emigration and adoption if the following criteria are met:

- The PAP secured legal custody in accordance with the laws of the foreign-sending country;

- The person, organization, or competent authority that has legal custody or control over the child irrevocably released the child for emigration and adoption;
- The PAP is in compliance with all state pre-adoption requirements, if any; and
- If there was an adoption outside the United States that did not meet the requirements for a “full and final” adoption for U.S. immigration purposes, the child’s proposed state of residence allows re-adoption or provides for judicial recognition of the foreign adoption.

If the child meets these requirements, the child may qualify for an IR-4 visa to come to the United States for adoption.^[7]

Footnotes

[^ 1] Some countries will not allow a child to emigrate without a final adoption decree. To determine the specific laws of a foreign-sending country, see the U.S. Department of State’s Country Information webpage.

[^ 2] For more information on what qualifies as a final adoption for immigration purposes, see Part A, Adoptions Overview, Chapter 4, Adoption Definition and Order Validity [5 USCIS-PM A.4].

[^ 3] Visa category for an immediate relative under INA 201(b) and INA 204(a)(1), as a child adopted abroad by a U.S. citizen.

[^ 4] An adoption in which neither adoptive parent actually saw and observed the child before or during the adoption is known as a proxy adoption. If the laws of the foreign-sending country allow proxy adoptions, U.S. citizen petitioners may complete an adoption abroad without ever traveling to a foreign-sending country or meeting the child before the child’s entry into the United States. This type of adoption may be fully valid in the United States as a matter of domestic relations law, however, a child adopted through this process is not eligible to immigrate under the basis of a “full and final” adoption and receive an IR-3 visa. Instead, a child with a final adoption order that is not considered “full and final” may be eligible to immigrate and receive an IR-4 visa.

[^ 5] Visa category for an immediate relative under INA 201(b) and INA 204(a)(1), as a child coming to be adopted in the United States by a U.S. citizen.

[^ 6] For example, guardianships, simple adoptions, or Kafala orders in countries that follow traditional Islamic law may not qualify as final adoptions abroad. Such guardianship, Kafala, or other custody orders may, however, be sufficient to establish that the PAPs have secured legal custody of the child. See 8 CFR 204.3(d)(1)(iv)(B)(1). If the legal custody is for emigration and adoption and all other requirements are met, such an order could support approval of an orphan petition.

[⁷] See Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization, Part H, Children of U.S. Citizens [12 USCIS-PM H] for information on citizenship for adopted children. A PAP needs to take additional steps to secure U.S. citizenship for a child entering with an IH-4 visa because the adoption of the child has to be finalized in the United States or recognized under state law, unlike in cases of children entering with IH-3 visas on the basis of “full and final” adoptions.

Chapter 6 - Additional Requirements

In addition to meeting general eligibility requirements, the following requirements also must be met:

- There is no child-buying, fraud, misrepresentation, or non-bona fide intent;
- The child matches the characteristics that the prospective adoptive parent (PAP) has been approved to adopt; and
- The petitioner has identified a primary adoption service provider (unless a limited exception applies).

A. No Child-Buying, Fraud, Misrepresentation, or Non-Bona Fide Intent

The officer must determine whether there are allegations or indications of child-buying, fraud, misrepresentation, or non-bona fide intent (that is, the PAP does not intend to form a parent-child relationship).

1. Child-Buying

Child-buying is when the PAP(s) or a person or entity working on their behalf gave or will give money or other consideration, either directly or indirectly, to the child's parent(s), agent(s), other person(s), or entity as payment for the child or as an inducement to release the child.^[1]

An orphan petition must be denied or revoked if there is evidence of child-buying demonstrating the PAP has not established eligibility by a preponderance of the evidence. Officers must review any allegations of child-buying or other evidence that indicates child-buying took place in the case and determine whether it constitutes child-buying.

Child-buying does not include reasonable payment for necessary activities such as administrative, court, legal, translation, or medical services related to the adoption proceedings. Foreign adoption services are sometimes expensive and the costs may seem disproportionately high in comparison with other social services. In many countries, there may be a network of legitimate adoption facilitators, each playing a transparent role in processing a case and reasonably expecting to be paid for their services.

The U.S. Department of State (DOS) works closely with foreign governments to identify costs related to intercountry adoption in particular countries.^[2] In most intercountry adoption cases, the expenses incurred can be explained in terms of reasonable payments. Even cash given directly to a birth mother may be justifiable if it relates directly to expenses such as pre-natal or neo-natal care, transportation, lodging, or living expenses.

2. Fraud or Misrepresentation

Fraud in the adoption context typically involves concealment of a material fact to obtain an official document or judgment by a court or authorized entity (for example, an adoption decree). To meet the requirement of materiality, evidence of fraud must be documented and generally relate to the child's eligibility as an orphan.

B. Child Matches Characteristics that Prospective Adoptive Parent Is Approved For

During the suitability application process (or orphan petition process, if there was no prior suitability application), the officer determined that the PAP was a suitable adoptive parent for a child with specific characteristics.^[3] The child must match the characteristics that the PAP has been approved to adopt (such as age, gender, nationality, and special needs).

If the child does not match the characteristics for which USCIS has approved the PAP to adopt, then the officer should issue a Request for Evidence (RFE)^[4] for an updated home study and any related documents.

1. Special Needs

The officer should review evidence to verify whether the child has any special needs (such as a significant disability or medical condition). The officer should:

- Ensure that any significant or serious disability or medical condition of the child is not excluded by special conditions established in the suitability application approval; and
- Verify that the PAP is aware of and accepts any significant medical, physical, or mental condition.

If an officer discovers that the child has a significant disability or medical condition that the PAP is not aware of, the officer must:

- Furnish the PAP with all pertinent details concerning the impairment, disability, or condition. This is especially important in cases where the PAP has not personally observed the child; and
- Halt adjudication of the case until the PAP submits an updated home study recommending the PAP to provide proper care for such child and USCIS determines the PAP is suitable to provide proper care for such child.^[5]

2. Age

The child must meet the age range listed on the suitability application approval at the time the referral or match was accepted by the PAP, or if the accepted referral or match date cannot be established, the filing date of the orphan petition.^[6] If the child does not match the age range for which USCIS has approved the PAP to adopt, then the officer should issue an RFE^[7] for an updated home study and any related documents.

C. Primary Provider

The PAP must indicate a primary service provider on the orphan petition, unless a limited exception applies.^[8] If the officer determines that the PAP has not sufficiently identified a primary adoption service provider on the orphan petition, the officer may issue an RFE.^[9]

If an officer receives notice or learns that the PAP's primary adoption service provider has withdrawn from the PAP's case, the officer should issue an RFE for proof that either the current primary adoption service provider remains as such or the PAP has identified a new primary adoption service provider.
^[10]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 204.3(i).

[^ 2] DOS posts general information about adoption-related costs on their Country Information webpage.

[^ 3] See Part B, Adoptive Parent Suitability Determinations [5 USCIS-PM B].

[^ 4] For more information on RFEs, see Chapter 8, Adjudication, Section E, Decisions and Actions [5 USCIS-PM C.8(E)].

[^ 5] See Part B, Adoptive Parent Suitability Determinations, Chapter 5, Action on Pending or Approved Suitability Determinations [5 USCIS-PM B.5].

[^ 6] For example, if a suitability determination states that the PAP is approved to adopt a child aged 0-4 years old, then a child who is 4 years old but not yet 5 at the time the PAP accepted a match (or alternatively the filing date of the orphan petition) would meet this age range. This is true even if the child has turned 5 by the time the officer is adjudicating the application. See The Jurisdiction of Amended Home Studies and the Application of Home Study Age Restrictions for Prospective Adoptive

Child(ren) in Intercountry Adoption Cases Policy Memo (PDF, 398.74 KB), PM-602-0071.1, issued November 5, 2012.

[^ 7] For more information on RFEs, see Chapter 8, Adjudication, Section E, Decisions and Actions [5 USCIS-PM C.8(E)].

[^ 8] See Part A, Adoptions Overview, Chapter 5, Authorized Adoption Service Providers [5 USCIS-PM A.5].

[^ 9] For more information on RFEs, see Chapter 8, Adjudication, Section E, Decisions and Actions [5 USCIS-PM C.8(E)].

[^ 10] For more information see the If Your Adoption Service Provider Is No Longer Accredited or Approved webpage.

Chapter 7 - Documentation and Evidence

A. Filing

A prospective adoptive parent (PAP) files the Petition to Classify Orphan as an Immediate Relative (Form I-600) once the PAP has identified an orphan to adopt. The PAP must file the petition, required evidence, and any required supplements, in accordance with form instructions and with the appropriate fee.^[1] The PAP may file an orphan petition in the United States, or outside the United States if the PAP meets certain criteria.^[2] If the PAP files the petition while there is a suitability application^[3] pending or within 18 months of a favorable decision on a suitability application, there is no new filing fee for one child or for more than one child if they are natural siblings.

Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006 (Adam Walsh Act)^[4]

A petitioner who has been convicted of a specified offense against a minor is prohibited from filing a family-based petition^[5] on behalf of any family-based beneficiary.^[6]

B. Required Evidence

The PAP must submit the following evidence to petition for the PAP's adopted child's immigration into the United States:

- Evidence that must be submitted with a suitability application (if not previously submitted with an Application for Advance Processing of an Orphan Petition (Form I-600A));
- Evidence the PAP has a primary provider (unless a limited exception applies);^[7]

- Proof of the child's age and identity;
- Evidence the child is an orphan;
- Certified copy of the adoption or custody decree and certified translation; and
- Proof of compliance with pre-adoption requirements (if any).

1. Evidence to Support Suitability Application

If a PAP previously submitted a suitability application^[8] with the required evidence, the PAP does not need to re-submit it (unless requested by USCIS).

If a PAP did not submit a suitability application before filing the petition, USCIS considers the PAP to be filing both the suitability application and petition as a combination filing.^[9] This means the PAP must submit the following documents that USCIS requires for a suitability application,^[10] in addition to the documents that USCIS requires for the orphan petition:

- Proof of the petitioner's U.S. citizenship;
- Proof of the petitioner's spouse's U.S. citizenship or lawful immigration status (if married and the spouse resides in the United States);
- Proof of the marriage between the petitioner and the spouse (if married) and evidence of the termination of any prior marriages (if previously married); and
- Home study.

2. Evidence the Prospective Adoptive Parent has a Primary Provider

The PAP must identify a primary provider (unless a limited exception applies) and provide evidence that the PAP has a primary provider.^[11]

If a home study is prepared by an accredited agency or approved person, or is reviewed and approved by an accredited agency, and the same agency or approved person is listed on the petition, the officer may accept this as evidence of a primary provider. If a different accredited agency or approved person is listed on the petition as the primary provider or the officer is uncertain as to who is serving as the primary provider, the officer must request additional evidence to establish that the accredited agency or approved person is acting as the primary provider.

Evidence of the PAP's primary adoption service provider may include, but is not limited to:

- A letter from the primary adoption service provider stating that the accredited or approved adoption service provider is acting as the primary provider in the case, or demonstrating that the accredited or approved adoption service provider is involved in the provision of an adoption service if only one accredited agency or approved person is involved in providing adoption services in the case;

- A copy of the service plan (detailing the six adoption services); or
- A copy of the contract between the petitioner and the primary adoption service provider demonstrating that the accredited agency or approved person is acting as the primary provider in the case.

3. Proof of Orphan's Identity and Age

The PAP must submit a copy of the orphan's birth certificate, or if such a certificate is not available, an explanation together with other proof of the child's identity and age.^[12] Such secondary evidence could include medical records, school records, church records, entry in a family Bible, orphanage intake sheets, or affidavits from persons with first-hand knowledge of the event(s) to which they are testifying. If there is a doubt that the child is the birth child of the purported birth parent, USCIS may provide the PAP the option of submitting DNA evidence in compliance with USCIS standards to establish the claimed relationship.^[13]

Delayed Birth Certificates

Generally, USCIS does not give the same weight to delayed birth certificates as birth certificates issued at the time of birth due to the potential for fraud.^[14] Certain jurisdictions, however, may not issue birth certificates to children until they become involved in an intercountry adoption. An officer must determine the reliability of the facts contained in the delayed certificate, for an orphan child, in light of the other evidence in the record and should not reject the delayed certificate's evidentiary value simply because it was not issued at the time of the child's birth. Officers should check the U.S. Department of State (DOS)'s Country Reciprocity Schedule to determine a document's availability and reliability.

4. Evidence Child is an Orphan

The PAP must submit evidence that the child is an orphan as defined under U.S. immigration law.^[15]

- No legal parent - If the child does not have a sole or surviving parent, the PAP must submit evidence that the child is an orphan because of the death or disappearance of, abandonment or desertion by, or separation or loss from the child's parents. It is not necessary to establish that each parent is gone for the same reason.
- Sole parent - If the orphan is a child of a sole parent, the PAP must submit evidence that the birth mother^[16] is a sole parent, is incapable of providing proper care for the child, and has irrevocably released the child for emigration and adoption in writing.

- Surviving parent - If the orphan is a child of a surviving parent, the PAP must submit evidence that the other parent is deceased, the surviving parent is incapable of providing proper care for the child, and the surviving parent has irrevocably released the child for emigration and adoption in writing.

Incapable of Providing Proper Care of the Child

Evidence that a parent is incapable of providing proper care of a child may consist of:

- Proof of the parent's wages in comparison to the local area's average wages for a family of the same size;
- Medical records of the child's or parent's psychological or physical difficulties;
- Court records or other proof that the parent is incarcerated and the duration of the sentence;
- A social welfare report submitted to the adoption authority in support of an adoption that discusses the background and living situation of the child;^[17] or
- Any other documentation that demonstrates the inability of the parent to provide proper care for the child.

Irrevocable Release of Child for Emigration and Adoption

Proof that the sole or surviving parent has irrevocably (knowingly and voluntary) released the child for emigration and adoption must be a written release that is:

- In a language the parent is capable of reading and signing or marking (if the parent is illiterate, an interview can establish that the parent had full knowledge of the contents of the document and understood its irrevocable nature);
- Irrevocable; and
- Without stipulations or conditions.

The release may identify the person to whom the parent is releasing the child, even if that person is a PAP.^[18]

Death

Primary evidence of death is a death certificate in the name of the deceased parent.^[19]

If a death certificate is not available, an officer should consider the explanation of why such a certificate is unavailable, along with secondary evidence provided by the PAP, such as funeral details, obituaries, newspaper articles, church records, or affidavits from persons with first-hand knowledge of the parent's death.^[20] The officer may also consider the length of time since the child's parent(s) are reported to have died, and during which time, the parent has not been seen or heard from, and if relatives have cared for the child since the parent(s) died.

Abandonment, Disappearance, Desertion, Loss, or Separation

Primary evidence of abandonment, disappearance, desertion, loss, or separation is a decree from a court or other competent authority^[21] unconditionally divesting the parent(s) of all parental rights over the child because of such abandonment, disappearance, desertion, loss, or separation.^[22] A valid court order terminating parental rights over the objections of one or both parents is sufficient if the parents received notice and an opportunity to contest such action.

In the case of abandonment, primary evidence may also include a written release by the parent(s)^[23] of a child to an authorized orphanage (or other third party authorized under the child welfare laws of the foreign-sending country to provide custodial care in anticipation of or preparation for adoption) demonstrating that the parent(s) gave up all parental rights to the child and physically gave up control and possession unconditionally to the orphanage or other third party.

5. Certified Copy of Adoption or Custody Decree and Certified Translation

If the PAP met the requirements for a "full and final" adoption of the child abroad,^[24] the PAP must submit:

- A legible, certified copy of the final adoption decree showing that the PAP (and the PAP's spouse, if married) adopted the child; and
- Evidence that the petitioner (or spouse, if married) personally saw and observed the child before or during the adoption proceedings.^[25]

If the PAP did not meet the requirements for a "full and final" adoption of the child abroad, but did obtain a final adoption or legal custody, the PAP must submit:

- A certified copy of the adoption decree or custodial decree, showing that the PAP secured legal custody in accordance with the laws of the foreign-sending country; and
- Evidence that the person, organization, or competent authority that has legal custody or control over the child has irrevocably released the child for emigration and adoption. This may be evidenced by a court order or release by the previous legal custodian of the child giving the child up for adoption to the named PAP(s) with their U.S. residence clearly incorporated into the order.

6. Proof of Compliance with Pre-Adoption and State Requirements

If the PAP did not meet the requirements for a “full and final” adoption of the child abroad, [26] the PAP must submit:

- Evidence that the state of the child’s proposed residence allows (re)adoption or provides for judicial recognition of the adoption abroad; and
- Evidence of compliance with all state pre-adoption requirements, if any. If state law prevents the PAP from complying with any pre-adoption requirements before the child’s arrival in the United States, the PAP must note the missing requirements and provide an explanation. USCIS does not, however, approve orphan petitions for a specific child without evidence of compliance with requirements or an explanation why the PAP cannot meet the requirements before the child’s arrival.

C. Primary and Secondary Evidence

A PAP should submit primary evidence when available. Primary evidence is evidence that, on its face, proves a fact. For example, primary evidence of death is a death certificate.

Not all countries, however, have the same kind of documentary practices as the United States. If primary evidence is not available, a PAP must demonstrate its unavailability and should submit secondary evidence.^[27] If both primary and secondary evidence are unavailable, the PAP must demonstrate the unavailability of the primary and secondary evidence and submit two or more affidavits that are sworn to or affirmed by persons who are not parties to the petition who have direct personal knowledge of the event and circumstances.^[28]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 103.2. See instructions for Petition to Classify Orphan as an Immediate Relative (Form I-600).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 204.3(g). See the Filing Instructions for Form I-600, Petition to Classify Orphan as an Immediate Relative webpage.

[^ 3] See Application for Advance Processing of an Orphan Petition (Form I-600A).

[^ 4] See Pub. L. 109-248 (PDF) (July 27, 2006).

[^ 5] This includes the Petition to Classify Orphan as an Immediate Relative (Form I-600).

[^ 6] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(i). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(i). See INA 101(a)(15)(K). See Volume 6, Immigrants, Part C, Adam Walsh Act [6 USCIS-PM C].

[^ 7] See Part A, Adoptions Overview, Chapter 5, Authorized Adoption Service Providers [5 USCIS-PM A.5].

[^ 8] See the Application for Advance Processing of an Orphan Petition (Form I-600A).

[^ 9] See Part B, Adoptive Parent Suitability Determinations, Chapter 2, Eligibility, Documentation and Evidence (Orphan Process), Section B, Filing, Subsection 2, Combination Filing [5 USCIS-PM B.2(B) (2)].

[^ 10] See instructions for the Petition to Classify Orphan as an Immediate Relative (Form I-600).

[^ 11] See Part A, Adoptions Overview, Chapter 5, Authorized Adoption Service Providers [5 USCIS-PM A.5].

[^ 12] See 8 CFR 204.3(d)(1)(ii). When possible, the PAP should submit the birth certificate showing the child's birth parent(s), and not only a new birth certificate issued after the adoption.

[^ 13] See DNA Evidence of Sibling Relationships (PDF, 149.23 KB), PM-602-0106.1, issued April 17, 2018.

[^ 14] See Matter of Bueno-Almonte (PDF), 21 I&N Dec. 1029, 1032-33 (BIA 1997). See Matter of Ma (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 394 (BIA 1991). See Matter of Serna (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 643 (BIA 1978).

[^ 15] See Chapter 4, Eligibility Requirements Specific to Orphans [5 USCIS-PM C.4].

[^ 16] The father of an orphan is ineligible for classification as a sole parent as defined in 8 CFR 204.3(b).

[^ 17] See Matter of Rodriguez (PDF), 18 I&N Dec. 9, 11 (Reg. Comm. 1980) which cites a social welfare agency study as evidence of a sole parent's inability to provide proper care.

[^ 18] This is different from the definition of abandonment, which does not allow a release to be made directly to a PAP.

[^ 19] To determine whether a document may be available in a particular country, see DOS's Country Reciprocity Schedule webpage.

[^ 20] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(2)(i).

[^ 21] This could be a separate decree or incorporated into the adoption decree itself.

[^ 22] In the case of desertion or disappearance, the decree must also make the child a ward of the state because of such disappearance or desertion.

[^ 23] This includes a subsequent guardian who becomes the legal adoptive parent of the child.

[^ 24] For information on “full and final” adoptions for orphan cases, see Chapter 5, Qualifying Adoptive or Custodial Relationship [5 USCIS-PM C.5]. For general information on what qualifies as a final adoption for immigration purposes, see Part A, Adoptions Overview, Chapter 4, Adoption Definition and Order Validity [5 USCIS-PM A.4].

[^ 25] If the petitioner is married, only one spouse needs to have seen and observed the child before or during the adoption proceedings.

[^ 26] See Chapter 5, Qualifying Adoptive or Custodial Relationship [5 USCIS-PM C.5].

[^ 27] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(2)(i).

[^ 28] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(2)(i)-(ii).

Chapter 8 - Adjudication

A. General Guidelines for Adjudication

The following table outlines steps an officer uses to make a decision on an orphan petition.

General Guidelines for Adjudication of Orphan Petition
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Ensure the prospective adoptive parent (PAP) meets suitability determination and eligibility requirements.^[1]
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Verify the child’s identity.
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Determine if the child meets age requirements.
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Determine if any of the terms in the orphan definition apply to the child.^[2]
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Determine if there is evidence of a “full and final” adoption or legal custody for emigration and adoption in the United States.^[3]
<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Verify there is no material evidence of fraud, child-buying, other misrepresentation, or non-bona fide intent that impacts eligibility.

General Guidelines for Adjudication of Orphan Petition

- Confirm the child matches the characteristics that the PAP has been approved to adopt.
- Verify the petitioner has identified an accredited primary adoption service provider or approved person (unless a limited exception applies), and that they are providing adoption services.^[4]
- Send the case to the corresponding U.S. government office to complete the orphan determination.^[5]

B. Burden and Standard of Proof

In matters involving immigration benefits, the petitioner always has the burden of proving eligibility for the immigration benefit sought.^[6] This determination may include questions of foreign law. When a PAP relies on foreign law to establish eligibility for the beneficiary, the application of the foreign law is a question of fact, which must be proved by the PAP. Therefore, the burden of proof is on the PAP to establish that the child is eligible.^[7]

The standard of proof relates to the persuasiveness of the evidence necessary to meet the eligibility requirements for a particular benefit.^[8]

The standard of proof for establishing eligibility for orphan petitions is that of a preponderance of the evidence.^[9] The PAP meets this standard if the evidence permits a reasonable person to conclude that the claim that the child is an orphan is probably true.^[10]

The PAP satisfies the standard of proof if:	The PAP does not satisfy the standard of proof if:
The PAP submits relevant, probative, and credible evidence that leads USCIS to believe that the claim is probably true or more likely than not to be true. ^[11]	USCIS can articulate a material doubt based on the evidence that leads USCIS to believe that the claim is probably not true. ^[12]

C. Weight and Reliability of Evidence

1. Weight of Evidence

In applying the preponderance of the evidence standard (to determine whether it is more likely than not that the child is eligible for orphan classification), an officer must consider all the evidence and make a determination based on the totality of the evidence.

If there are inconsistencies in the record, the officer should investigate and request more information^[13] to resolve any inconsistencies and give appropriate weight to the evidence in question. The officer must determine whether:

- The court or local authority was aware of any potentially derogatory information;^[14]
- Gaps or inconsistencies in the record are material; and
- The inconsistencies are overcome by other evidence in the record indicating the child meets the definition of an orphan.

If the inconsistencies or omissions are...	Then the inconsistencies or omissions...
Minor and not material to the determination of orphan status	Generally do not support a denial or make an otherwise approvable orphan petition not clearly approvable.
Not minor (such as multiple inconsistencies or omissions) and are material to the determination of orphan status	May lead to a denial or a not clearly approvable finding.

If additional investigative steps do not reasonably explain an inconsistency or omission or no plausible explanation exists, then the officer should issue an additional Request for Evidence (RFE) or a Notice of Intent to Deny (NOID), as appropriate.^[15]

2. Reliability of Evidence

Officers should carefully weigh the evidence and may assign differing weight to evidence in the record, depending on the reliability of that evidence.

An officer should consider all evidence regarding the circumstances of the child's eligibility, not just a foreign court order, decree, or certificate. For example, an officer should consider secondary evidence, such as police reports or administrative or lower court documents that led to the foreign government's decision to terminate parental rights.

USCIS generally accepts a foreign decree or order on its face as primary evidence of a determination by a foreign court. Absent specific material information that a court decree is legally invalid^[16] or was obtained by fraud, an officer may generally rely on such authentic decrees as evidence of a determination by a foreign government. An officer may, however, question the validity of a decree or order for various reasons, such as:

- Lack of jurisdiction by the foreign court or authority;
- Lack of parental consent to the adoption;
- No or improper notice of termination of parental rights;
- Evidence of corruption, fraud, or material misrepresentation;
- Lack of due process or appropriate safeguards in the country or jurisdiction issuing the order; or
- Other credible and probative evidence to question the reliability of the documentation.

If there is reason to doubt the validity of the decree or order, the officer may request additional evidence.

D. Orphan Determination

1. Purpose

The Determination on Child for Adoption (Form I-604) (also known as an orphan determination or Form I-604) must be completed in every orphan case.^[17] The Form I-604 determination:

- Verifies that the child meets the eligibility criteria to be classified as an orphan under U.S. immigration law; and
- Ensures that the PAP meets all the immigration-related legal requirements to petition for a child to immigrate to the United States.

Generally, DOS completes the Form I-604 orphan determinations on behalf of USCIS in the child's country of origin or where the adoption or grant of legal custody is completed to provide integrity in the orphan adjudication and to ensure that foreign documents submitted to support the orphan petition are sufficient.

2. U.S. Government Agency Roles

Domestically-Filed Petitions with USCIS

When a PAP files an orphan petition domestically (in the United States), the orphan determination is normally completed after USCIS has approved the orphan petition. However, if USCIS has articulable concerns that can only be resolved through the orphan determination, then the adjudicating officer may request that the orphan determination be completed before the final adjudication of the orphan petition.^[18] Generally, a consular officer in the child's country of origin completes the orphan determination.

Petitions Filed Outside the United States with U.S. Department of State

If the petitioner filed the orphan petition outside the United States with the U.S. Department of State (DOS) at a U.S. embassy or consulate, the consular officer completes the orphan determination before completing the adjudication of the orphan petition and visa.

E. Decisions and Actions

1. Federal Agency Roles

The adjudication of orphan petitions and the completion of orphan determinations are the exercise of the DHS Secretary's authority, delegated to USCIS.^[19] DHS further delegated authority to DOS consular officers to approve orphan petitions and to complete orphan determinations under certain circumstances.^[20]

Under this delegated authority, a consular officer has the authority to approve, but not deny, an orphan petition. In addition, while consular officers may ask PAPs for additional information, a consular officer is not authorized to issue an RFE, a NOID, or a Notice of Intent to Revoke (NOIR). If the consular officer believes that an orphan petition filed at the post is not clearly approvable, the consular officer must refer the orphan petition to USCIS.^[21]

2. Approvals

USCIS may approve an orphan petition if:

- The petition was properly filed;
- The PAP meets suitability determination and eligibility requirements;^[22]
- All security checks are current at the time of approval;^[23] and
- The PAP has met the PAP's burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the beneficiary is eligible for classification as an orphan.

If the officer approves the petition, the officer sends a notice of approval^[24] to the PAP and the PAP's legal representative, if any.^[25]

3. Requests for Evidence and Notices of Intent to Deny

If USCIS is adjudicating the orphan petition and any of the required evidence is missing, deficient, or adverse, or the eligibility requirements have otherwise not been demonstrated,^[26] the officer issues an RFE or NOID, as appropriate.

4. Not Clearly Approvable Cases

If the consular officer reviews the record and it does not establish by a preponderance of the evidence the child meets the U.S. immigration definition of an orphan, the consular officer must refer the petition to USCIS as a not clearly approvable case.

A case is not clearly approvable if the record does not establish the child is eligible for classification as an orphan. This may happen when:

- There is a change that necessitates an RFE for an updated home study;^[27]
- Any state pre-adoption requirements have not been met for IR-4 cases;
- There is not enough information in the record to meet the preponderance of evidence standard and make a favorable determination;
- There is materially inconsistent or conflicting information in the record that must be reconciled; or
- There is adverse information in the record, such as evidence of child-buying, fraud (including fraudulent documentation), misrepresentation, or non-bona fide intent.

Consular officers cannot issue RFEs or NOIDs. A consular officer must refer any orphan petition that is not clearly approvable to the USCIS office with jurisdiction over its adjudication, along with the supporting documents, the completed orphan determination, and any other relevant documentation.

^[28] Consular officers may contact USCIS before referring a case as not clearly approvable. This may be especially important in circumstances where there is a compelling medical or humanitarian need.

Once USCIS receives a not clearly approvable case, USCIS consults with the consular post and DOS's Visa Office as necessary to understand the consular officer's concerns before proceeding. Then the USCIS officer does one of the following:

- If the available evidence is sufficient to establish that the child is an orphan by a preponderance of the evidence, the officer approves the petition and returns the petition to the consular post for visa adjudication.
- If the evidence is insufficient, the officer issues an RFE or NOID.^[29] The PAP has the opportunity to respond to the RFE or NOID with additional information. The officer must then assess the totality of the evidence in the record to determine if the PAP has met the burden of proving that the child beneficiary qualifies as an orphan.

- If there is no possibility that the petitioner can rebut the reason for the denial, the officer issues a denial.^[30]

5. Consular Returns

In some cases, after USCIS approves the orphan petition, a consular officer discovers adverse information during the orphan determination or visa process. If a consular officer discovers probative evidence^[31] that would have led USCIS to deny the petition had USCIS been aware of the information at the time of adjudication, the consular officer returns the petition to USCIS for possible revocation. A consular officer cannot revoke an approved orphan petition or issue a NOIR.

The DOS Foreign Affairs Manual contains DOS policies related to consular returns. In general, to recommend revocation of an orphan petition, the consular officer sends the orphan petition to USCIS, via the National Visa Center, along with a revocation memo, case-specific evidence, the completed orphan determination, and any other relevant documentation. Consular officers may contact USCIS to enhance coordination.

Once USCIS receives a consular return case, a USCIS officer consults with the consular post as necessary to understand the consular officer's concerns. USCIS may then:

- Issue a NOIR^[32] or
- Reaffirm the orphan petition and send the case back to the appropriate U.S. consulate or embassy, via the National Visa Center, for visa adjudication.

If USCIS reaffirms a petition but the consular officer believes that the applicant is not eligible for a visa or discovers new evidence that the consular officer believes would result in a revocation request, the DOS's Foreign Affairs Manual guides the consular officer's next steps.^[33]

6. Revocation

An orphan petition must be revoked when information is discovered that would have resulted in denial had it been known at the time of adjudication.^[34] Only USCIS officers have authority to revoke approval of an orphan petition.^[35]

Before revoking an orphan petition, an officer generally must provide the PAP with a NOIR.^[36] USCIS can properly issue a NOIR when:

- There is good and sufficient cause; and
- The evidence of record at the time of the NOIR issuance, if unexplained and unrebutted, would warrant denial of the petition based upon the PAP's failure to meet the PAP's burden of proof.^[37]

A NOIR gives the petitioner an opportunity to submit evidence sufficient to overcome the intended revocation. If USCIS has properly issued a NOIR, the PAP bears the burden of establishing that the child qualifies for the benefit sought.^[38] If the PAP fails to overcome the grounds for revocation stated in the NOIR in the PAP's response, or the PAP fails to respond, USCIS may revoke the approval of the orphan petition if USCIS establishes good and sufficient cause for revocation.

Good and sufficient cause for revocation must be based upon adverse information, including errors of fact or law, which would have resulted in a denial had the information been known to USCIS at the time the petition was adjudicated because the PAP would have failed to meet the burden of proof at that time.^[39] Generally, such adverse information must be specific and material to the case and based upon detailed evidence. Concerns that are conclusory, speculative, equivocal, and irrelevant to eligibility do not warrant revocation.^[40] Only factual allegations that are supported by probative evidence^[41] in the record and that call the beneficiary's eligibility into question can support revocation.^[42]

7. Denials

If the officer cannot approve the orphan petition, the officer must explain in writing the specific reasons for denial.^[43] A NOID is not required unless an intended denial is based upon information or evidence of which the applicant is unaware.^[44] The denial notice must include information about appeal rights and the opportunity to file a motion to reopen or reconsider.^[45]

8. Communication and Correspondence

USCIS sends communication of its actions and decisions directly to the PAP for all case-related matters.

If a Notice of Entry of Appearance as Attorney or Accredited Representative (Form G-28) or Notice of Entry of Appearance as Attorney in Matters Outside the Geographical Confines of the United States (Form G-28I) is completed by an attorney or by an accredited representative,^[46] the officer also sends a copy of USCIS decision notices to such authorized attorney or accredited representative.^[47] A person representing an organization such as a non-profit or charitable organization must first be accredited by the Board of Immigration Appeals. In general, adoption agencies do not qualify as accredited representatives.

Information about the particulars of any case can only be given to the PAP, or to an attorney or accredited representative with a Form G-28 or Form G-28I on file. The Privacy Act forbids disclosing information about the case to anyone else, unless the PAP has signed a written consent^[48] to the disclosure or such disclosure is not prohibited by law.^[49]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Part B, Adoptive Parent Suitability Determinations [5 USCIS-PM B].

[^ 2] The officer examines the actual circumstances to determine whether the child meets the conditions for an orphan under U.S. immigration law. See Chapter 5, Qualifying Adoptive or Custodial Relationship [5 USCIS-PM C.5].

[^ 3] See Chapter 5, Qualifying Adoptive or Custodial Relationship [5 USCIS-PM C.5].

[^ 4] See Part A, Adoptions Overview, Chapter 5, Authorized Adoption Service Providers [5 USCIS-PM A.5].

[^ 5] See Section D, Orphan Determination [5 USCIS-PM C.8(D)].

[^ 6] See INA 291. See Matter of Brantigan (PDF), 11 I&N Dec. 493 (BIA 1966). See Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications, Chapter 4, Burden and Standards of Proof [1 USCIS-PM E.4].

[^ 7] See Matter of Kodwo (PDF), 24 I&N Dec. 479, 482 (BIA 2008) (citing Matter of Fakalata (PDF) 18 I&N Dec. 213 (BIA 1982) and Matter of Annang (PDF), 14 I&N Dec. 502 (BIA 1973)).

[^ 8] See Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications, Chapter 4, Burden and Standards of Proof [1 USCIS-PM E.4].

[^ 9] See Matter of Chawathe (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 369, 375 (AAO 2010).

[^ 10] See Matter of Chawathe (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 369, 376 (AAO 2010). See Matter of E-M- (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 77, 80 (Comm. 1989).

[^ 11] See INS v. Cardoza-Fonseca, 480 U.S. 421 (1987), which defines more likely than not as a greater than 50 percent probability of something occurring.

[^ 12] See Matter of Chawathe (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 369, 376 (AAO 2010).

[^ 13] If USCIS is adjudicating the case, see Section E, Decisions and Actions, Subsection 3, Requests for Evidence and Notices of Intent to Deny [5 USCIS-PM C.8(E)(3)]. If a consular officer is adjudicating the case, see Section E, Decisions and Actions, Subsection 4, Not Clearly Approvable Cases [5 USCIS-PM C.8(E)(4)] and Subsection 5, Consular Returns [5 USCIS-PM C.8(E)(5)].

[^ 14] If there are any indicators of fraud, see Chapter 6, Additional Requirements, Section A, No Child-Buying, Fraud, Misrepresentation, or Non-Bona Fide Intent [5 USCIS-PM C.6(A)].

[^ 15] For a full discussion on RFEs and NOIDs, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications, Chapter 6, Evidence, Section F, Requests for Evidence and Notices of Intent to Deny [1 USCIS-PM E.6(F)].

[^ 16] An order may be legally invalid if the order was issued by an entity without proper authority to issue such orders or if the court invalidated its order.

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 204.3(k)(1).

[^ 18] See 8 CFR 204.3(k)(1).

[^ 19] See INA 103(a). See INA 204(b).

[^ 20] See 8 CFR 204.3(k)(2).

[^ 21] See 8 CFR 204.3(k)(2).

[^ 22] See Part B, Adoptive Parent Suitability Determinations [5 USCIS-PM B].

[^ 23] See Part B, Adoptive Parent Suitability Determinations [5 USCIS-PM B].

[^ 24] See Notice of Approval of Relative Visa Petition (Form I-171) or the Notice of Action (Form I-797).

[^ 25] For more information on approvals, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications [1 USCIS-PM E].

[^ 26] See Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications [1 USCIS-PM E].

[^ 27] See Part B, Suitability Determinations, Chapter 5, Action on Pending or Approved Suitability Determinations [5 USCIS-PM B.5].

[^ 28] See 8 CFR 204.3(h)(11).

[^ 29] See Subsection 3, Requests for Evidence and Notices of Intent to Deny [5 USCIS-PM C.8(E)(3)].

[^ 30] See Subsection 7, Denials [5 USCIS-PM C.8(E)(7)].

[^ 31] Probative evidence is evidence which proves or helps prove a fact or issue.

[^ 32] See Subsection 6, Revocation [5 USCIS-PM C.8(E)(6)].

[^ 33] For more information, see 9 FAM 502.3-3(C)(7), Orphan Visa Applications.

[^ 34] See 8 CFR 205.2. See 8 CFR 204.3(h)(14). For more information on revocations, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications [1 USCIS-PM E].

[^ 35] See 8 CFR 205.2(b).

[^ 36] See 8 CFR 205.2(b). A NOIR is not required when the petitioner or beneficiary dies or when some other automatic ground for revocation applies. See 8 CFR 205.1. See 8 CFR 205.2(b).

[^ 37] See INA 205. See 8 CFR 205.2. See 8 CFR 204.3(h)(14). See Matter of Estime (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 450 (BIA 1987).

[^ 38] See Matter of Cheung (PDF), 12 I&N Dec. 715 (BIA 1968).

[^ 39] See Matter of Estime (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 450, 451 (BIA 1987).

[^ 40] See Matter of Arias (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 568, 570-51 (BIA 1988).

[^ 41] Probative evidence is evidence which proves or helps prove a fact or issue.

[^ 42] See Matter of Estime (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 450, 451 (BIA 1987).

[^ 43] A DOS consular officer does not have the authority to deny an orphan petition. For more information on denials, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications [1 USCIS-PM E].

[^ 44] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(16).

[^ 45] For more information on appeals and motions, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part F, Motions and Appeals [1 USCIS-PM F].

[^ 46] Under 8 CFR 292.2.

[^ 47] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(19).

[^ 48] See Consent to Disclose Information (Supplement 2 for Form I-600A and I-600).

[^ 49] See Privacy Act of 1974, Pub. L. 93-579 (PDF), 88 Stat. 1896 (December 31, 1974) (codified at 5 U.S.C. 552a).

Chapter 9 - Pre-Adoption Immigration Review Programs

In certain countries, USCIS and the U.S. Department of State (DOS) have implemented Pre-Adoption Immigration Review (PAIR) programs, which require the orphan determination to be completed before the final adoption or grant of custody in the child's country of origin. The sections below outline when the orphan determination is conducted and who conducts it in each country that has a PAIR program.

A. Ethiopia

USCIS may accept orphan petitions filed on behalf of a child from, and physically located in, Ethiopia who is not yet the subject of a final legal custody order or final adoption by a prospective adoptive parent (PAP).^[1] PAPs adopting such children may file^[2] the orphan petition for a preliminary determination before traveling to and adopting a child in Ethiopia.

B. Taiwan

USCIS accepts orphan petitions filed on behalf of a child from, and physically located in, Taiwan who is not yet the subject of a final legal custody order or final adoption by a PAP.^[3] PAPs adopting such children are encouraged to file^[4] the orphan petition with USCIS in the United States before traveling to and adopting a child in Taiwan. The American Institute in Taiwan (AIT) may accept orphan petitions but forwards such petitions to USCIS in the United States for a preliminary determination of eligibility.

A PAP should file with USCIS a completed orphan petition together with all required evidence, except the adoption decree or grant of legal custody.^[5] In addition, a PAP adopting from Taiwan should submit:

- Evidence of availability for intercountry adoption generated by the Taiwan island-wide database;
- Signed adoption agreement between birth parents and PAPs for use in Taiwan district family courts; and
- Power of attorney appointing the Taiwan adoption service provider to represent the PAPs.

A USCIS officer reviews the petition and supporting evidence and requests that AIT conduct the necessary orphan determination to determine whether the child appears to qualify as an orphan and is otherwise likely eligible to immigrate to the United States based on the orphan petition. If USCIS makes a favorable preliminary determination that the child appears to meet the definition of an orphan^[6] and otherwise appears eligible to immigrate, USCIS issues a PAIR letter. This preliminary eligibility determination is not a final adjudication of the orphan petition and is not binding on USCIS. USCIS then forwards the file to AIT.

After the adoption or grant of legal custody is completed, the PAP submits the adoption decree or legal custody order and required identity documents for the child to AIT. AIT then issues the final approval of the orphan petition, if approvable. If AIT determines that the orphan petition is not clearly approvable at that time, AIT returns the orphan petition to USCIS for further processing.^[7]

Footnotes

[^ 1] For information on the current viability of intercountry adoption from Ethiopia, see DOS's Ethiopia webpage. The PAP may be residing in the United States, overseas, or have traveled overseas to complete an adoption.

[^ 2] For filing instructions, see the Petition to Classify Orphan as an Immediate Relative (Form I-600) webpage.

[^ 3] The PAP may be residing in the United States, overseas, or have traveled overseas to complete an adoption.

[^ 4] For filing instructions, see the Form I-600 webpage.

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 103.2.

[^ 6] See INA 101(b)(1)(F) for the definition of an orphan.

[^ 7] See Chapter 8, Adjudication, Section E, Decisions and Actions, Subsection 4, Not Clearly Approvable Cases [5 USCIS-PM C.8(E)(4)].

Part D - Child Eligibility Determinations (Hague)

Chapter 1 - Purpose

A. Purpose

The Convention of 29 May 1993 on Protection of Children and Co-operation in Respect of Intercountry Adoption^[1] (Hague Adoption Convention) is an international treaty that provides safeguards to protect the best interests of children involved in intercountry adoptions. By setting clear procedures and prohibiting improper financial gain, the Convention provides greater security, predictability, and transparency for all parties to the adoption, including children, birth parents, and adoptive parents. The Hague Adoption Convention applies to the adoption of a child who:

- Is habitually resident in one Convention country (the country of origin) by someone habitually resident in another Convention country (the receiving country); and
- Who has been, is being, or is to be moved from the country of origin to the receiving country, either after the adoption or for the purposes of adoption.^[2]

A prospective adoptive parent (PAP)^[3] must generally follow the Hague Adoption Convention process^[4] if:

- The PAP is a U.S. citizen who is habitually resident in the United States;^[5] and
- Seeks to adopt a child who is habitually resident in a Hague Adoption Convention country^[6] (other than the United States) on or after April 1, 2008, and on or after the date the Hague

Adoption Convention entered into force for the other country.^[7]

B. Background

The Hague Adoption Convention entered into force for the United States on April 1, 2008. On the same day, the DHS Hague Adoption Convention regulations^[8] also took effect.

C. Scope

For the Hague Adoption Convention process, the PAP must file both an application to determine the PAP's suitability and eligibility as an adoptive parent^[9] and a petition to determine the child's eligibility to immigrate as a Hague Convention adoptee.^[10] This Part D addresses the requirements for a PAP to submit a petition for a determination of a child's eligibility to immigrate as a Hague Convention adoptee.

USCIS guidance does not address other adoption-related requirements, such as the child's country of origin, state of proposed residence, or other federal agencies including the U.S. Department of State (DOS).^[11]

Additionally, this Volume does not address the specific requirements for adopted children to obtain U.S. citizenship.^[12]

D. Legal Authorities

- The Convention of 29 May 1993 on Protection of Children and Co-operation in Respect of Intercountry Adoption (PDF) (Hague Adoption Convention)
- INA 101(b)(1)(G) – Definition of child (for Hague Convention adoptee)
- INA 201(b) – Immediate relatives
- INA 204 – Procedure for granting immigrant status
- 8 CFR 204 Subpart C – Intercountry adoption of a Convention adoptee

Footnotes

[^ 1] This convention is referred to in this Part as the Hague Adoption Convention (PDF).

[^ 2] See Hague Adoption Convention (PDF), Article 2(1).

[^ 3] USCIS uses the term PAP in this Part to refer to the applicant or petitioner and the applicant or petitioner's spouse, if any.

[^ 4] See Part A, Adoptions Overview [5 USCIS-PM A] for information on determining which adoption process (Hague Adoption Convention, orphan, or family-based) applies, depending on the PAP's circumstances.

[^ 5] If the PAP is a U.S. citizen residing outside of the United States and seeks to adopt a child residing in a Hague Adoption Convention country, the PAP may be able to use the U.S. Hague Adoption Convention Process (even if the PAP does not intend to immediately immigrate the child to the United States). The PAP may also be required to follow the law and procedures for immigration and adoption in the country where the PAP resides. See Part A, Adoptions Overview [5 USCIS-PM A] for information on determining which U.S. immigration process applies.

[^ 6] For a list of countries that are party to the Hague Adoption Convention, see the U.S. Department of State (DOS)'s Convention Countries webpage.

[^ 7] The Hague Adoption Convention entered into force for the United States on April 1, 2008. For information on the entry into force date for each country, see the Hague Conference on Private International Law's webpage, Status Table.

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 204 Subpart C.

[^ 9] See the Application for Determination of Suitability to Adopt a Child from a Convention Country (Form I-800A). For information on suitability applications, see Part B, Adoptive Parent Suitability Determinations [5 USCIS-PM B].

[^ 10] See the Petition to Classify Convention Adoptee as an Immediate Relative (Form I-800).

[^ 11] For general information on other countries' requirements, see DOS's Country Information webpage. For more information on requirements of the state of proposed residence, see the Child Welfare Information Gateway's State Laws Related to Adoption webpage. For DOS guidance, see the Foreign Affairs Manual.

[^ 12] For more information on citizenship for adopted children, see Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization, Part H, Acquisition of Citizenship After Birth [12 USCIS-PM H].

Chapter 2 - Eligibility

A. Identity and Age [Reserved]

B. Eligibility Requirements Specific to Convention Adoptees [Reserved]

C. Qualifying Adoptive or Custodial Relationship

1. Final Adoption [Reserved]

2. Legal Custody for Emigration and Adoption

A foreign adoption order that does not qualify as an adoption^[1] for U.S. immigration purposes may nonetheless be sufficient to establish legal custody for purposes of emigration and adoption under the laws of the sending country. Such legal custody may support approval of a petition^[2] for a child coming to the United States to be adopted, provided all other requirements are met. The child may then be adopted in the United States.

Because a Hague Convention adoptee can be brought to the United States for adoption, if not adopted outside the United States, a guardianship, simple adoption, Kafala order,^[3] or other legal custody order might qualify as a decree or administrative order establishing the prospective adoptive parent's legal custody of the child.^[4] The document giving legal custody must be valid under the law of the country in which it was obtained. Depending on the governing law, the legal custody document may be either a court order or an administrative act.

Provided the legal custody is for purposes of emigration and adoption, in accordance with the laws of the sending country, and all other requirements are met, the evidence could support approval of the petition for a child who is coming to the United States for adoption on an IH-4 visa (child from a Hague Adoption Convention country coming to the United States for adoption by a U.S. citizen).^[5]

D. Additional Requirements [Reserved]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Part A, Adoptions Overview [5 USCIS-PM A] for more information on what qualifies as an adoption for immigration purposes.

[^ 2] See the Petition to Classify Convention Adoptee as an Immediate Relative (Form I-800).

[^ 3] For countries that follow traditional Islamic law.

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 204.313(h)(1)(ii)(A).

[^ 5] Visa category for an immediate relative under INA 201(b) and INA 204(a)(1), as the adopted child from a Hague Adoption Convention country adopted in the United States by a U.S. citizen.

Chapter 3 - Required Order of Immigration and Adoption Steps

A. General

The prospective adoptive parent (PAP) must follow the adoption and U.S. immigration process in a specific order. Specifically, a PAP should not adopt or obtain legal custody of a child for purposes of emigration and adoption before completing certain steps in the Hague Adoption Convention process. [1] The table below highlights some of the key determinations and when they must be made in the process.

Hague Adoption Convention Process

Step	Required Documentation
Before a placement is made	The receiving country (the United States) must determine that the PAP is suitable and eligible to adopt a foreign-born child; and the sending country must determine that the child is eligible for intercountry adoption.
Before the adoption or legal custody order is obtained	The receiving country must determine that the child appears eligible as a Hague Convention adoptee and notify the sending country that the adoption may proceed. ^[2]
Before a visa is issued	The receiving country and sending country must determine that the adoption, or custody for purposes of emigration and adoption, was completed in compliance with the Hague Adoption Convention.

B. Out-of-Order Adoption or Legal Custody Order

If the PAP adopts or obtains legal custody of the child out of order, before the required immigration processing steps take place, USCIS considers the adoption or custody order to be premature. If the PAP obtained an adoption or custody order prematurely, the petition^[3] must generally be denied.^[4] USCIS considers an adoption or custody order to be premature when the PAP adopted the child, or obtained custody for purposes of adoption, before USCIS provisionally approved the petition.

The PAP must show that an order obtained prematurely was voided, vacated, annulled, or otherwise terminated, in order for USCIS to provisionally approve a petition.^[5] USCIS may provisionally approve the petition if the PAP can establish that an order obtained prematurely was terminated^[6] (no longer in effect) at the time of filing the petition.

Additional Evidence

If the PAP obtained an order prematurely, the officer should send a Request for Evidence (RFE) or a Notice of Intent to Deny (NOID) asking the PAP to submit:

- A copy of the applicable law governing the termination of adoption and custody orders, as well as a certified English translation of that law; and
- Evidence showing the following:

- The order is no longer in effect, as demonstrated by an order from a competent authority terminating the adoption or custody order; or
- Why the order cannot be terminated (order is still in effect) and why the PAP did not follow the proper sequence.

The PAP may demonstrate the order cannot be terminated by providing both:

- A statement from the Central Authority of the sending country indicating that, under the law of that country, the petitioner is not able to obtain an order terminating the adoption or custody order; and
- A statement from the PAP, signed under penalty of perjury under U.S. law, explaining why, despite the clearly stated requirements^[7] and the warnings on the form instructions,^[8] the PAP obtained the adoption or custody order before receiving provisional approval of the (immigration) petition.

If the PAP submits evidence that the order obtained prematurely was terminated, the officer may provisionally approve^[9] the petition, if it is otherwise approvable.

Some countries may not have readily available legal mechanisms for terminating adoption or custody orders. If the PAP's response establishes that the PAP is not able to obtain an order terminating the adoption or custody order obtained prematurely, USCIS considers the evidence of record and adjudicates the petition in light of the fact that the adoption or custody order appears to have been obtained without compliance with the Hague Adoption Convention requirements and related U.S. laws^[10] and regulations.

The officer must deny the petition if the evidence of record establishes that the PAP knowingly obtained the adoption or custody order before filing the petition with the specific intent to circumvent the Convention's requirements, U.S. immigration laws, and the implementing regulations.^[11]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Articles 4, 5, 16, 17, and 23 of the Hague Adoption Convention (PDF).

[^ 2] See Articles 5 and 17 of the Hague Adoption Convention (PDF).

[^ 3] See Petition to Classify Convention Adoptee as an Immediate Relative (Form I-800).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 204.309(b)(1).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 204.309(b)(1).

[^ 6] For purposes of this section, the terms terminated, terminating, and termination all refer to adoption or custody orders that are voided, vacated, annulled, or otherwise terminated under the law of the child's country of habitual residence.

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 204.309(b)(2).

[^ 8] See instructions for Application for Determination of Suitability to Adopt a Child from a Convention Country (Form I-800A) and Petition to Classify Convention Adoptee as an Immediate Relative (Form I-800).

[^ 9] USCIS may only deem the premature order voiding requirement at 8 CFR 204.309(b)(1) to be met for purposes of provisional approval.

[^ 10] See Section 301(b) of the Intercountry Adoption Act, Pub. L. 106-279 (PDF), 114 Stat. 825, 837 (October 6, 2000).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 204.309(b)(1).

Chapter 4 - Documentation and Evidence

A. Filing

A prospective adoptive parent (PAP) must file a Petition to Classify Convention Adoptee as an Immediate Relative (Form I-800), and any required supplements or supporting forms in accordance with form instructions.^[1]

Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006 (Adam Walsh Act)^[2]

A petitioner who has been convicted of a specified offense against a minor is prohibited from filing a family-based petition^[3] on behalf of any family-based beneficiary.^[4]

B. Required Evidence

The PAP must submit required evidence in accordance with form instructions.^[5]

C. Primary and Secondary Evidence [Reserved]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See instructions for Petition to Classify Convention Adoptee as an Immediate Relative (Form I-800).

[^ 2] See Pub. L. 109-248 (PDF) (July 27, 2006). For more information, see Volume 6, Immigrants, Part C, Adam Walsh Act [6 USCIS-PM C].

[^ 3] This includes the Petition to Classify Convention Adoptee as an Immediate Relative (Form I-800).

[^ 4] See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(i), INA 204(a)(1)(B)(i), and INA 101(a)(15)(K).

[^ 5] See instructions for Petition to Classify Convention Adoptee as an Immediate Relative (Form I-800). See 8 CFR 103.2(b).

Chapter 5 - Adjudication

A. General Guidelines for Adjudication [Reserved]

B. Burden and Standards of Proof [Reserved]

C. Weight and Reliability of Evidence [Reserved]

D. Decisions and Actions

If USCIS provisionally approves the petition, the prospective adoptive parent (PAP) may continue on with the next steps in the Hague process, which include U.S. Department of State (DOS) issuance of the Article 5/17 letter,^[1] a final adoption or custody of the child, and applying for an immigrant visa for the child.^[2]

As part of this process, the DOS issues the Hague Adoption Convention certification.^[3] This certification establishes that the final adoption of the child, or the grant of custody of the child for the purpose of emigration and adoption, was done in accordance with the Hague Adoption Convention and the Intercountry Adoption Act of 2000. Such a certified final adoption is entitled to recognition in the United States as a valid adoption order. USCIS (or DOS, on behalf of USCIS) may then grant final approval of the petition.

Footnotes

[^ 1] If DOS determines that the child appears eligible to immigrate to the United States and that the information provided indicates that the adoption process thus far has complied with the Hague Adoption Convention and the Intercountry Adoption Act, DOS notifies the Convention country's Central Authority by issuing an Article 5/17 letter. The Article 5/17 letter informs the foreign Central Authority that U.S. competent authorities have determined the PAP is eligible and suitable to adopt, that the child may enter and reside permanently in the United States, and that the U.S. Central Authority agrees that the adoption may proceed.

[^ 2] See 22 CFR 42.24.

[^ 3] See INA 204(d)(2).

Part E - Family-Based Adoption Petitions

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

The family-based petition process is one of the three processes for a beneficiary to immigrate to the United States based on adoption.^[1] Unlike the Hague Adoption Convention^[2] or orphan processes, eligibility for the family-based process generally requires the adoptee beneficiary to have been in the legal custody of and jointly resided with the adoptive parent for at least 2 years (amongst other requirements),^[3] and it does not require a USCIS determination of the adoptive parent's suitability.

There are certain restrictions for U.S. citizens on using the family-based petition process for an adoptee beneficiary from a Hague Adoption Convention country. USCIS can only approve a family-based petition filed by a U.S. citizen for an adoptee beneficiary from a Hague Adoption Convention country under limited circumstances.^[4]

B. Background

The family-based petition process describes the process by which a U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident (LPR) petitions for an adopted child, son, or daughter. The petition process establishes the petitioner's^[5] relationship to an adopted child, son, or daughter so that the adoptee beneficiary can apply to become an LPR.^[6]

Filing a family-based petition^[7] is the first step for an adopted child, son, or daughter to become an LPR. The filing or approval of the petition does not give the adoptee beneficiary any immigration status or benefit. Generally, if the petition is approved, the adoptee beneficiary will need to take additional steps to become an LPR.

C. Scope

This Part discusses the requirements for a qualifying family member to file a Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130) on behalf of an adoptee beneficiary.

This Policy Manual does not address other adoption-related requirements, such as those of the adoptee beneficiary's country of origin,^[8] state of proposed residence,^[9] or other federal agencies, such as the U.S. Department of State.^[10]

Additionally, this Part does not discuss how to obtain U.S. citizenship for an adoptee beneficiary.^[11]

D. Legal Authorities

- INA 101(b)(1)(E) – Definition of an adopted child
- 8 CFR 204.1 – General information about immediate relative and family-sponsored petitions
- 8 CFR 204.2 – Petitions for relatives, widows and widowers, and abused spouses and children
- 8 CFR 204.303 – Determination of habitual residence

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Part A, Adoptions Overview [5 USCIS-PM A] for information on determining which adoption process (Hague Adoption Convention, orphan, or family-based) applies.

[^ 2] The Convention of 29 May 1993 on Protection of Children and Co-operation in Respect of Intercountry Adoption (PDF) is referred to as the Hague Adoption Convention.

[^ 3] See INA 101(b)(1)(E).

[^ 4] For general information on when a U.S. citizen can file a family-based petition for a child from a Hague Adoption Convention country, see Part A, Overview and Guiding Principles [5 USCIS-PM A]. For information on how restrictions apply if the child is physically present in the United States, see Chapter 3, Hague Restrictions on Family-Based Petitions [5 USCIS-PM E.3].

[^ 5] Petitioner refers to the petitioning adoptive parent in this Part.

[^ 6] A person can apply for lawful permanent residence through either consular processing outside of the United States or adjustment of status within the United States. See Volume 7, Adjustment of Status [7 USCIS-PM]. Additional eligibility requirements apply to applicants seeking adjustment as opposed to consular processing.

[^ 7] See Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130).

[^ 8] For general information on other countries' requirements, see the U.S. Department of State (DOS)'s Country Information webpage.

[^ 9] See the Child Welfare Information Gateway's State Laws Related to Adoption webpage.

[^ 10] For DOS guidance, see their Foreign Affairs Manual.

[^ 11] For information on acquisition of citizenship for the adopted children of a U.S. citizen, see Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization, Part H, Children of U.S. Citizens [12 USCIS-PM H]. For information on naturalization, see Volume 12, Citizenship and Naturalization [12 USCIS-PM].

Chapter 2 - Eligibility

The following table outlines the main eligibility factors USCIS considers when adjudicating a family-based adoption petition.^[1]

Eligibility for Family-Based Adoption Petition

Eligibility Requirements	For More Information
The adoptee beneficiary must meet requirements for age and marital status and the petitioner ^[2] must be a U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident (LPR).	See Section A, Age, Marital Status, and Immigration Status Requirements [5 USCIS-PM E.2(A)].
The petitioner must establish that the petitioner has a qualifying adoptive relationship with the adoptee beneficiary.	See Section B, Qualifying Relationship [5 USCIS-PM E.2(B)].
The petition is compliant with the Hague Adoption Convention, if applicable.	See Part A, Adoptions Overview, Chapter 2, Adoption Processes [5 USCIS-PM A.2]; and See Chapter 3, Hague Restrictions on Family-Based Petitions [5 USCIS-PM E.3].

Derivatives

The children and spouse of certain adoptee beneficiaries can accompany or follow to join the adoptee beneficiary.^[3]

A. Age, Marital Status, and Immigration Status Requirements

The adoptee beneficiary must meet requirements for age^[4] and marital status^[5] and the petitioner must meet immigration status requirements.

1. Adoptee Beneficiary Age and Marital Status

Child Beneficiary (Unmarried and Under 21)

To qualify under the definition of an adopted child under immigration law, the adoptee beneficiary must be unmarried and under 21 years of age.^[6] A U.S. citizen or LPR may file a petition on behalf of an adoptee beneficiary who meets the definition of a child under immigration law.^[7]

Son or Daughter Beneficiary (Married or Age 21 or Over)

An adoptee beneficiary who no longer meets the definition of an adopted child (because the beneficiary is currently married or age 21 or over) may still be eligible as a son or daughter, if the beneficiary previously met the definition of adopted child as set forth in immigration law.^[8]

2. Immigration Status of Petitioner

The following persons are eligible to file a petition on behalf of an adoptee beneficiary:

- A U.S. citizen; or
- An LPR of the United States (unless the adoptee beneficiary is married).^[9]

U.S. Citizen Petitioner

A U.S. citizen may file a petition on behalf of an adopted son or daughter who is now 21 years of age or over, or who is currently married, if the adoptee beneficiary previously met the definition of adopted child as set forth in immigration law.^[10]

Lawful Permanent Resident Petitioner

An LPR may file a petition for an adopted son or daughter who is 21 years of age or older, if the adoptee beneficiary previously met the definition of child as set forth in immigration law.^[11] However, USCIS must deny a petition filed by an LPR if the adoptee beneficiary is married at the time of filing or adjudication (unless the beneficiary can demonstrate the marriage was terminated).^[12]

B. Qualifying Relationship

The petitioner must establish that the petitioner has a qualifying adoptive relationship with the adoptee beneficiary. To satisfy the requirements for a qualifying relationship, the petitioner must establish the:

- Adoptee beneficiary's age at time of adoption; and
- Validity of relationship between the petitioner and the adoptee beneficiary.

1. Age at Time of Adoption

The petitioner must have adopted the adoptee beneficiary while the beneficiary was under the age of 16, unless the sibling exception applies.^[13] This means that the court or other entity must have entered the adoption order before the adoptee beneficiary's 16th birthday.

Sibling Exception

An adoptee beneficiary who was adopted on or after the beneficiary's 16th birthday, but before the beneficiary's 18th birthday, meets the age at time of adoption requirement if the beneficiary is the birth sibling of another child who:

- Was adopted by the same petitioning parent(s) before the beneficiary's 16th birthday; and
- Immigrated, or is immigrating, as an adopted child or orphan based on an adoption by the same petitioning parent(s).^[14]

Retroactive Adoption Orders

A retroactive adoption order (known as a nunc pro tunc order) entered on or after the adoptee beneficiary's 16th birthday (or 18th birthday if the sibling exception applies) does not meet the age at time of adoption requirement unless the petitioner establishes that:

- The petitioner initiated the adoption proceeding before the adoptee beneficiary's 16th birthday (or 18th birthday if the sibling exception applies);^[15]
- The law of the jurisdiction where the order was issued expressly permits an adoption decree to be dated retroactively; and
- The court's order grants the adoption with an effective date before the adoptee beneficiary's 16th birthday (or 18th birthday if the sibling exception applies).^[16]

Amended Orders

An order entered to correct an error in an order that actually was entered before the adoptee beneficiary's 16th birthday (or 18th birthday if the sibling exception applies) may also establish eligibility. For example, if a court intended to enter an adoption order but mistakenly entered a guardianship order, an amended order correcting the earlier order would support approval of the petition.^[17] In these circumstances, the petitioner should submit both the original order and the later order correcting the original order.

2. Validity of the Relationship

Bona fide Adoption

USCIS assesses whether the adoptive relationship is bona fide. USCIS evaluates the petition to determine if the intent of the adoption was to form a genuine parent-child relationship and not solely for immigration purposes.^[18]

Legal Custody and Joint Residence

In order to establish the validity of the relationship, the petitioner must establish that the adoptee beneficiary has been in the legal custody of and jointly resided^[19] with the adoptive parent(s) for at least 2 years.^[20] The legal custody and joint residence requirement may be met by custody and residence before or after the final adoption, but any pre-adoption custody must be based on a formal grant of custody from a court or authorized governmental entity according to the law of the country where it was obtained.

The 2-year time period does not need to be continuous and multiple periods of time can be added together to accrue the 2 years. The legal custody and joint residence requirements are reviewed independently. If the adoptive parents are a married couple who jointly adopted, the 2 years of legal custody and joint residence cannot be split between the parents. However, only one adoptive parent needs to establish 2 years of legal custody and joint residence. The two years the child was in the legal custody of the adoptive parent do not have to be the same two years the child jointly resided with the adoptive parent.

In order to establish that the adoptee beneficiary jointly resided with the adoptive parent(s) in a familial relationship, the petitioner must establish that the adoptive parent(s) exercised parental control over the adoptee beneficiary.^[21] Specifically, if an adopted child continues to reside in the same household as the birth parent(s) during the period in which the adoptive parent petitioner seeks to establish compliance with this requirement, the petitioner must establish that an adoptive parent exercised primary parental control during that period of residence despite joint residence with the birth parents.

Once the petitioner submits evidence to establish compliance with parental control requirements, USCIS generally presumes the relationship is bona fide,^[22] absent any evidence indicating otherwise.

A petitioner who is a stepparent who adopted the petitioner's stepchild also has to meet the 2-year legal custody and 2-year joint residence requirements and obtain a final adoption before the child's 16th birthday (or 18th birthday if the sibling exception applies) before the petitioner can be considered an adoptive parent under immigration law.^[23]

Final Adoption Requirements

In order for an adoption to meet USCIS requirements for a final adoption, the adoption must:

- Be valid under the law of the jurisdiction where it was issued;
- Create a permanent legal parent-child relationship; and

- Terminate the prior legal parent-child relationship.^[24]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130).

[^ 2] Petitioner refers to the adoptive parent.

[^ 3] See INA 203(d). For more information, see Volume 6, Immigrants, Part B, Family-Based Immigrants [6 USCIS-PM B].

[^ 4] There are also requirements related to the age of the adoptee beneficiary at the time of the adoption. See Section B, Qualifying Relationship, Subsection 1, Age at Time of Adoption [5 USCIS-PM E.2(B)(1)].

[^ 5] Unmarried means never been married or has terminated any and all prior marriages.

[^ 6] See INA 101(b)(1)(E). For information on how a beneficiary's age at the time of filing the petition impacts eligibility for an immigrant visa, see Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part A, Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures, Chapter 7, Child Status Protection Act [7 USCIS-PM A.7].

[^ 7] See INA 101(b)(1)(E).

[^ 8] See INA 101(b)(1)(E).

[^ 9] See INA 101(b)(1)(E). See INA 203(a)(2)(A). See 8 CFR 204.2(d).

[^ 10] See INA 101(b)(1)(E).

[^ 11] See INA 101(b)(1)(E).

[^ 12] See INA 203(a)(2)(A). See 8 CFR 204.2(d).

[^ 13] See INA 101(b)(1)(E).

[^ 14] See INA 101(b)(1)(E)(ii). See INA 101(b)(1)(F). Note that the sibling exception does not apply to someone whose sibling immigrated as a Hague Convention adoptee.

[^ 15] The petitioner must submit evidence that the adoptive parent filed a formal petition or application to adopt the child with the court or other competent authority to grant the adoption before the beneficiary's 16th (or 18th) birthday.

[^ 16] Overruling Matter of Drigo and Matter of Cariaga in part, the Board of Immigration Appeals held in Matter of Huang, 26 I&N Dec. 627 (BIA 2015), that a nunc pro tunc adoption can support approval of a Form I-130 if the petitioner establishes that the adoptive parent initiated the adoption proceeding before the adoptee's 16th birthday; and the law of the forum "expressly" permits the court to give retroactive effect to an adoption decree. In the Fourth Circuit, in Ojo v. Lynch, 813 F.3d 533 (4th Cir. 2016), the court concluded that Matter of Huang is not sufficiently deferential to a court's authority to determine the scope of its own jurisdiction. The court held that the term "adopted" while under the age of 16 for purposes of INA 101(b)(1)(E) is the date the state court rules the adoption is effective, without regard to the date on which the act of adoption occurred. Therefore, in the Fourth Circuit, Ojo imposes no requirement that the adoption proceeding have been initiated prior to the beneficiary's 16th or 18th birthday and defers to a state court's facially valid nunc pro tunc order.

[^ 17] See Allen v. Brown, 953 F. Supp. 199 (N.D. Ohio 1997).

[^ 18] See Matter of Marquez (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 160 (BIA 1990). Matter of Marquez rejects a strict statutory interpretation of INA 101(b)(1)(E) and relies instead upon the legislative history of the statute which indicates that Congress did not intend to recognize ad hoc adoptions designed to circumvent the immigration laws. This decision found that an adoptive relationship to be more akin to marital relationships than to step-relationships, and therefore, USCIS may evaluate the bona fides of adoptions.

[^ 19] The legal custody must have been the result of a formal grant of custody from a court or other governmental entity. The regulations incorporate the definitions for both legal custody and joint residence in paragraphs (vii)(A), (vii)(B), and (vii)(C) of 8 CFR 204.2(d)(2).

[^ 20] Exceptions may apply for certain battered children. See INA 101(b)(1)(E)(ii). For more information, see Volume 3, Protection and Parole, Part D, Violence Against Women Act [3 USCIS-PM D].

[^ 21] See 8 CFR 204.2(d)(2)(vii)(B) for types of evidence of that may be submitted to establish such parental control.

[^ 22] USCIS may further evaluate the bona fides of the relationship. See Matter of Marquez (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 160 (BIA 1990).

[^ 23] See INA 101(b)(1)(E). Note that 2 years of legal custody and joint residence is not required to establish a qualifying step-relationship under INA 101(b)(1)(B). For information on (non-adoptions based) family-based petitions, see Volume 6, Immigrants, Part B, Family-Based Immigrants [6 USCIS-PM B].

[^ 24] For more information on what qualifies as a final adoption for immigration purposes, see Part A, Adoptions Overview, Chapter 4, Adoption Definition and Order Validity [5 USCIS-PM A.4].

Chapter 3 - Hague Restrictions on Family-Based Petitions

There are restrictions on approving a family-based adoption petition if the petitioner is a U.S. citizen and the adoptee beneficiary is from a Hague Adoption Convention country.^[1] USCIS cannot approve a family-based adoption petition^[2] filed by a U.S. citizen who is habitually resident in the United States on behalf of an adoptee beneficiary who is habitually resident in a Hague Adoption Convention country^[3] unless the petitioner establishes that the Hague Adoption Convention does not apply because either:

- The U.S. citizen adoptive parent is not habitually resident in the United States;^[4] or
- The child is not habitually resident in the other Hague Adoption Convention country.^[5]

A. Adoptee Beneficiary in the United States

U.S. regulations state that if a child is a citizen of a Hague Adoption Convention country (other than the United States) and is present in the United States based on an adoption, the child should generally be deemed to be habitually resident in the child's country of citizenship, even though the child is already in the United States.^[6] Therefore, a U.S. citizen petitioner generally must adopt such child by following the Hague Adoption Convention process for the child to acquire lawful permanent residence based on the adoption.^[7]

A child is generally deemed to be habitually resident in a Hague Adoption Convention country if they are a citizen of that Convention country. A child's country of citizenship is usually the child's country of origin. However, a child living outside the country of the child's citizenship may be deemed habitually resident in the child's country of actual residence based on a determination by the Central Authority^[8] or another competent authority^[9] of the country where the child actually physically resides.^[10]

USCIS is a competent authority that can make a factual determination of habitual residence when a child is present in the United States. Accordingly, USCIS may determine that a child living in the United States is habitually resident in the United States. If USCIS makes such a determination, the Hague Adoption Convention would not apply to the adoption of the child.^[11]

Language in the adoption order alone is not sufficient to establish that the Hague Adoption Convention does not apply to a particular case. Although an adoption order issued by a court in the United States may contain language indicating that the adoptee beneficiary was not habitually resident in the adoptee beneficiary's country of origin or that the adoption is not governed by the Hague Adoption Convention, such language is not determinative. Only USCIS can determine whether the Hague Adoption Convention applies when adjudicating the family-based petition.

USCIS must generally know whether the Central Authority of the child's country of origin still considers the child habitually resident in that country before USCIS can determine if a child is habitually resident in the United States. USCIS denies any family-based petition filed for an adoptee beneficiary in the United States if the Central Authority of the adoptee beneficiary's country of origin advises the U.S. government, the petitioner, or the U.S. court with jurisdiction over the adoption that it considers an adoptee beneficiary to remain habitually resident in the adoptee beneficiary's country of origin, despite the adoptee beneficiary's presence in the United States.

If the Central Authority of the adoptee beneficiary's country of origin states that it considers the adoptee beneficiary to be habitually resident in that country, the petitioner(s) must follow the Hague Adoption Convention process.^[12]

If the child is present in the United States, the petitioner may establish the child is not habitually resident in the Hague Adoption Convention country by providing either:

- A written statement from the child's country of origin indicating the child is no longer deemed habitually resident in that country;^[13] or
- If the petitioner cannot obtain such written statement, evidence that the petitioner meets intent, actual residence, and notice criteria.^[14]

B. Written Statement for Adoptee Beneficiary Physically Present in United States

In order to establish that the child is not habitually resident in the Hague Adoption Convention country, the petitioner may submit:

- An adoption order or an amended adoption^[15] order that expressly states that the Central Authority of the other Hague Adoption Convention country advised the adoption court in the United States in a written statement that the Central Authority is aware of the adoptee beneficiary's presence in the United States, and of the proposed adoption, and that the Central Authority has determined that the adoptee beneficiary is not habitually resident in that country; and
- A copy of the written statement from the Central Authority.^[16]

C. No Written Statement for Adoptee Beneficiary Physically Present in United States

A petitioner may be unable to obtain a written statement regarding the adoptee beneficiary's habitual residence because the Central Authority of the adoptee beneficiary's country of origin:

- Does not issue statements concerning habitual residence, as confirmed by the U.S. Department of State;^[17]
- Has informed the petitioner in writing that it will not make a determination on habitual residence upon the petitioner's request; or

- Has not issued a statement of habitual residence for at least 120 days following the petitioner's request to obtain such a statement.

In these situations, USCIS may approve a family-based petition if:^[18]

- At the time the adoptee beneficiary entered the United States, the purpose(s) of the entry was (or were) for reasons other than adoption (see intent criteria below);
- Before the U.S. domestic adoption, the adoptee beneficiary actually resided in the United States for a substantial period of time, establishing compelling ties in the United States (see actual residence criteria below); and
- For any adoption decrees issued after February 3, 2014,^[19] the decree confirms that the Central Authority of the adoptee beneficiary's country of origin was notified of the adoption or amended adoption proceedings in a manner satisfactory to the court and that the Central Authority did not object to the proceeding with the court within 120 days after receiving notice or within a longer period of time determined by the court (see notice criteria below).

1. Intent Criteria

USCIS reviews the petition to determine whether the adoptee beneficiary entered the United States for adoption purposes.^[20]

Evidence

USCIS considers the following evidence regarding intent:

- An affidavit, made under penalty of perjury, from the petitioning adoptive parent(s), which should include a:
 - Description of the adoptee beneficiary's circumstances before entering the United States (such as where the adoptee beneficiary lived or went to school, who cared for the adoptee beneficiary, what events led to the adoptee beneficiary's travel to the United States, and the reason for the adoptee beneficiary's travel to the United States);
 - List of people who have cared for the adoptee beneficiary since the beneficiary entered the United States and their relationships to the beneficiary;
 - Description of any contact the petitioning adoptive parent(s) had with the adoptee beneficiary, the birth parents, or any adoption or child welfare agency or nongovernmental organization (in the United States or abroad) related to the adoptee beneficiary that took place either before the adoptee beneficiary came to the United States or after the adoptee beneficiary's arrival but before a court placed the adoptee beneficiary with the petitioning adoptive parent(s); and

- Petitioning adoptive parent(s)'s declaration that on the date the adoptee beneficiary entered the United States, the petitioner did not intend to adopt the adoptee beneficiary or circumvent the Hague Adoption Convention procedures.
- Evidence establishing the timeline and course of events that led to the adoptee beneficiary's availability for adoption by the petitioner, which may include one or more of the following:
 - An order from a court with jurisdiction over the adoptee beneficiary that includes express findings related to the adoptee beneficiary's purpose for entering the United States, such as a finding that the adoptee beneficiary did not enter the United States for the purpose of adoption. (However, this information in a court order is not, by itself, determinative.);
 - Addresses where the birth parents have resided since the adoptee beneficiary's date of birth (if known), and any time periods the birth parents resided with the adoptee beneficiary;
- Any other evidence to support the statements made in the affidavit (such as informal consent documentation) or to document that the petitioner did not intend to adopt the adoptee beneficiary when the beneficiary entered the United States;
- Method of arrival, as indicated in visa records or other government system checks; specifically, any records related to the adoptee beneficiary's stated purpose of travel to the United States or whether the adoptee beneficiary had any intent to immigrate;
- Evidence that the adoptee beneficiary was a ward of a U.S. state or state court before the adoption. In such cases, the evidence should establish that the adoptee beneficiary was in state care due to the adoptee beneficiary's bona fide need for state managed care and was not abandoned in order for the petitioner to adopt the adoptee beneficiary;
- Evidence of the birth parents' inability to provide proper care for the adoptee beneficiary;
- Evidence to establish one or both birth parents are deceased;
- Evidence to establish any living birth parents freely consented to the proposed adoption or the birth parents' parental rights were fully and properly terminated; or
- Any other evidence to establish that entry into the United States was for purposes other than adoption.

Adverse Factors

USCIS considers the following adverse factors in determining if the adoptee beneficiary entered the United States for the purpose of adoption:

- A prior adoption of the adoptee beneficiary in the country of origin by the adoptive parent(s) in the United States. (This is a significant adverse factor.)
- Prior contact between the adoptive parent(s) and the adoptee beneficiary. (This could be an adverse factor if the contact was related to the adoption.) USCIS considers present and prior family relationships when reviewing the intent criteria. Prior contact between the adoptive parent(s) and the adoptee beneficiary may not be an adverse factor if the adoptee beneficiary is a relative, but USCIS reviews the case based on the totality of the evidence.
- Any evidence that suggests that the entry was for the purpose of adoption.

2. Actual Residence Criteria

If the adoptee beneficiary was physically present in the United States for 2 years or more before the adoption, USCIS presumes that the adoptee beneficiary has actually and physically resided in the United States for a substantial period of time, establishing compelling ties in the United States prior to the U.S. domestic adoption (and that the adoptee beneficiary meets actual residence criteria). However, if the adoptee beneficiary has been present in the United States for less than 2 years, the officer considers the length of time that the adoptee beneficiary has spent in the United States before the adoption and supporting evidence establishing the adoptee beneficiary's actual residence and compelling ties in the United States before the adoption.

Evidence

Documentation from the time period before the adoption may include, but is not limited to, the following:

- Evidence of ongoing medical care in the United States;
- Statement from the petitioners explaining the adoptee beneficiary's social interactions, including family and peer relationships;
- School records;
- Registration for extra-curricular activities;
- Affidavits from knowledgeable people (such as the adoptee beneficiary's doctor or teacher, day care provider, landlord, or neighbors) attesting to the adoptee beneficiary's actual residence in the United States;
- Evidence that the adoptee beneficiary's birth parent(s), guardian, or caretaker resided in the United States;
- An order from a court with jurisdiction over the adoptee beneficiary if that order includes express findings that the adoptee beneficiary actually resided in the United States for a substantial period of time or had compelling ties in the United States before the adoption (The information in a court order does not in itself guarantee that USCIS will determine that the adoptee beneficiary is no longer habitually resident in the country of origin.); or

- Evidence that the adoptee beneficiary was a ward of the state or court before the adoption.

Adverse Factors

If there is evidence that the adoptee beneficiary lived outside of the United States shortly before the adoption, USCIS may consider it as an adverse factor.

3. Notice Criteria

The notice criteria is required in any case where the adoption took place on or after February 3, 2014.

If the petitioner cannot obtain a written statement addressing an adoptee beneficiary's habitual residence from the Central Authority of the adoptee beneficiary's country of origin in 120 days, the petitioner still must notify the Central Authority of the adoption in a manner satisfactory to the court. The Central Authority then has an additional 120 days to object to the adoption.

Notification Process

When notifying the Central Authority in the adoptee beneficiary's country of origin of the adoption proceedings, the petitioner must follow the court's rules of procedure or the instructions in a specific order from the court. If permitted by the court, the petitioner can send both the request for a habitual residence statement and the notice of the court proceeding to the Central Authority at the same time. The notification can take the form of a court order or another document authorized by the court. Notice by email or fax is generally not sufficient unless the court rules clearly allow for email or fax notifications.

The notice must include a copy of the adoption petition or the motion for amended adoption order and must clearly specify:

- The name of the adoptee beneficiary, together with the place and date of birth of the adoptee beneficiary, and the name(s) of the birth parent(s), if known;
- The country of the adoptee beneficiary's nationality;
- The name of the agency or person who is the Central Authority in the adoptee beneficiary's country of origin;
- The names of the adopting parents;
- The date of the adoptee beneficiary's departure from the adoptee beneficiary's country of origin, if known;

- The date of the adoptee beneficiary's arrival in the United States, if known;
- The court name and the date, time, and place of the court's hearing on the adoption petition or motion for amended adoption order; and
- An indication that the Central Authority should notify the court if the Central Authority does not intend to object or requires additional time beyond 120 days.

Both the request for a statement addressing the adoptee beneficiary's habitual residence (if applicable) and the notice of the court proceeding must be provided directly to the Central Authority. Notice to another competent authority or an embassy or consulate of the country of origin in the United States is generally insufficient. If a country has a different Central Authority for different parts of the country (such as a regional or state Central Authority), the petitioner must provide the request for a statement addressing the adoptee beneficiary's habitual residence and the notice of the court proceeding to the Central Authority for the place where the adoptee beneficiary last resided in that country.

The petitioner does not need to give 120-day notice of the court hearing on the adoption proceeding more than once. If the Central Authority does not respond to the notice of the court hearing on the adoption proceeding within the 120-day period, there is no need to give additional notice, even if the court grants a continuance in the adoption proceeding and the adoption hearing takes place at a later date than what was stated in the notice provided to the Central Authority.

Evidence

USCIS considers the following evidence regarding notice:

- Copy of the notice provided to the Central Authority of the adoptee beneficiary's country of origin informing it of the pending adoption and providing the Central Authority with 120 days to object;
- Any and all responses received from the Central Authority;
- If the Central Authority of the adoptee beneficiary's country of origin does not reply to the notice, an adoption order (or amended adoption order) containing language regarding the:
 - Petitioner's request for a statement of habitual residence (if applicable);
 - Indication the Central Authority did not respond to the court notice; and
 - The court's confirmation that the court required the petitioner(s) and their representatives (if any) to provide all correspondence from the Central Authority to the court, even responses stating the adoptee beneficiary is considered habitually resident in the country of origin; and

- Copies of the request for a statement of habitual residence (if applicable) and court notice in the language used for official proceedings in the adoptee beneficiary's country of origin and a certified English translation of each document and proof of service in the manner specified by the court.

Central Authority Response

If the Central Authority informs the court in writing that it does not consider the adoptee beneficiary to be habitually resident in that country before the expiration of the 120-day period, there is no need to delay the hearing for the 120-day period. USCIS does not apply the intent, residence, and notice criteria when adjudicating a family-based petition if requirements are met for a written statement from the adoptee beneficiary's country of origin.

D. Amended Orders

If the petitioner does not obtain a written statement from the Central Authority in the adoptee beneficiary's country of origin until after the adoption is finalized, the petitioner must submit an amended order that contains the required language and the Central Authority's written statement.

For purposes of the age, custody, and joint residence requirements,^[21] the date of the adoption is the date of the original order, not the amended order.

If a court amends an order after February 3, 2014 to meet the notice criteria, USCIS considers the amended order not as the adoption order itself, but as a confirmation that the state court had jurisdiction to make the original order when the court did so. The notice and amended order may therefore be issued after an adoptee beneficiary's 16th birthday as long as the original adoption order took place before the adoptee beneficiary's 16th birthday (or 18th birthday in the case of a qualifying sibling).

If the petitioner(s) cannot obtain an amended order within the standard Request for Evidence (RFE) response period, the petitioner must:

- Submit all other requested evidence by the RFE response date, including a copy of the written notice provided to the Central Authority of the country of origin; and
- Request in writing that USCIS administratively close the family-based petition for up to 1 year.

USCIS may or may not grant the petitioner's request, depending on the circumstances of the case and the evidence provided.

If the petition is administratively closed, once the petitioner obtains the amended order, the petitioner may ask USCIS to reopen the case administratively without being required to file a Notice of Appeal or Motion (Form I-290B). If the petitioner does not request to reopen the case within 1 year, USCIS denies the petition.

Footnotes

[^ 1] For a list of countries that are party to the Hague Adoption Convention, see the U.S. Department of State (DOS)'s Convention Countries webpage. For general information about determining if the Hague Adoption Convention applies, see Part A, Adoptions Overview, Chapter 2, Adoption Processes [5 USCIS-PM A.2]. For information about determining if the Hague Adoption Convention applies specifically when the adoptee beneficiary is from a Hague Adoption Convention country and is present in the United States based on an adoption, see Section A, Adoptee Beneficiary in the United States [5 USCIS-PM E.3(A)].

[^ 2] See Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130).

[^ 3] For information on determinations of habitual residence, see 8 CFR 204.303.

[^ 4] For information on habitual residence determinations for U.S. citizens who reside outside of the United States, see Part A, Adoptions Overview, Chapter 2, Adoption Processes [5 USCIS-PM A.2].

[^ 5] For information on how and when the petitioner may establish that the Hague Adoption Convention does not apply, see Part A, Adoptions Overview, Chapter 2, Adoption Processes [5 USCIS-PM A.2].

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 204.2(d)(2)(vii)(F) and 8 CFR 204.303(b).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 204.309(b)(4), which specifically provides that a Petition to Classify Convention Adoptee as an Immediate Relative (Form I-800) can be filed, even if the child is in the United States, if the other Hague Adoption Convention country is willing to complete the Hague Adoption Convention process with respect to the child.

[^ 8] Central Authority means the entity designated as such under Article 6(1) of the Hague Adoption Convention by any Convention country, or, in the case of the United States, DOS. See 22 CFR 96.2.

[^ 9] Competent authority means a court of governmental authority of a foreign country that has jurisdiction and authority to make decisions in matters of child welfare, including adoption. See 22 CFR 96.2.

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 204.303.

[^ 11] If there is a sufficient basis for saying that the Hague Adoption Convention and the implementing regulations no longer apply to a child who came to the United States from another Hague Adoption Convention country, then USCIS can conclude that 8 CFR 204.2(d)(2)(vii)(F) does not preclude approval of the Form I-130.

[^ 12] See Part D, Child Eligibility Determinations (Hague) [5 USCIS-PM D].

[^ 13] See Section B, Written Statement for Adoptee Beneficiary [5 USCIS-PM E.3(B)].

[^ 14] See Criteria for Determining Habitual Residence in the United States for Children from Hague Convention Countries (PDF, 745.49 KB), PM-602-0095, issued November 20, 2017. See Section C, No Written Statement for Adoptee Beneficiary Physically Present in United States [5 USCIS-PM E.3(C)].

[^ 15] If the petitioner did not obtain a written statement from the Central Authority of the adoptee beneficiary's country of origin until after the adoption was finalized, the petitioner must submit an amended order that contains the required language.

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 204.303.

[^ 17] Currently, Mexico is the only country DOS has confirmed does not issue such statements. For more information, see DOS's Mexico webpage.

[^ 18] USCIS denies the petition if these criteria are not met.

[^ 19] The notice criteria applies to adoptions issued on or after February 3, 2014.

[^ 20] Restrictions on approving a Form I-130 for a child from a Hague Adoption Convention country do not apply to children admitted as refugees or in asylee status because the child did not travel to the United States in connection with an adoption, and because children admitted as refugees or granted asylum as they are no longer considered habitually resident in their country of citizenship or residence.

[^ 21] See INA 101(b)(1)(E).

Chapter 4 - Documentation and Evidence

A. Filing

The petitioner must file the Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130) with the proper fee, in accordance with the applicable form instructions.^[1]

Adam Walsh Child Protection and Safety Act of 2006 (Adam Walsh Act)

A petitioner who has been convicted of a specified offense against a minor is prohibited from filing a family-based petition^[2] on behalf of any family-based beneficiary.^[3]

B. Required Evidence

The petitioner must submit all required evidence^[4] in accordance with the form instructions.^[5]

The officer must carefully evaluate the evidence and adoption order to determine eligibility. The officer should be aware that evidence regarding an adopted child's birth and parentage may vary with the circumstances and the jurisdiction. For example, some jurisdictions annotate birth certificates issued for adopted children to indicate the adoption, while others do not. Officers should consult on questions of foreign and state laws through appropriate USCIS channels, including with USCIS counsel.

Footnotes

[^ 1] For current information about filing locations, fees, and other information about how to file, see instructions for Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130). See 8 CFR 103.2.

[^ 2] This includes the Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130).

[^ 3] See Adam Walsh Act, Pub. L. 109-248 (PDF) (July 27, 2006). See INA 204(a)(1)(A)(i). See INA 204(a)(1)(B)(i). See INA 101(a)(15)(K). See Volume 6, Immigrants, Part C, Adam Walsh Act [6 USCIS-PM C].

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 103.2. See 8 CFR 204.2(d)(2)(vii) for information regarding primary evidence for an adopted child or son or daughter. See Matter of Cuello (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 94 (BIA 1989) and Matter of Marquez (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 160 (BIA 1990). See 8 CFR 204.1(g) for evidence to establish the petitioner's status as a U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident.

[^ 5] See form instructions for Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130).

Chapter 5 - Adjudication

A. Evidentiary Standards

In matters involving immigration benefits, the burden of proof in establishing eligibility rests with the petitioner.^[1]

The standard of proof for establishing eligibility for an adoption petition is that of a preponderance of the evidence.^[2] USCIS reviews petitions on a case-by-case basis and based on the totality of the evidence.

However, if the petitioner failed to disclose a relationship to the adoptee beneficiary in a previous immigration application or petition, USCIS applies the higher standard of proof of clear and convincing evidence.^[3]

B. Requests for Evidence

USCIS generally issues a Request for Evidence or Notice of Intent to Deny, as appropriate, if any of the requirements or required evidence are missing or deficient.^[4]

C. Approval

An officer approves a family-based adoption petition^[5] if:

- The petition was properly filed;
- The petitioner has met the petitioner's burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the beneficiary is eligible; and
- Any adverse information is resolved.

If the officer approves the petition, USCIS notifies the petitioner and the petitioner's legal representative, if any, of the approval.^[6]

The approval of the petition only means that USCIS recognizes the relationship for immigration purposes; the approval does not provide any immigration status by itself. If the petition is approved, the adoptee beneficiary can generally go on to apply to become a lawful permanent resident based on the recognized relationship. The adoptee beneficiary still, however, needs to meet the requirements for lawful permanent residence.^[7]

D. Denial

If the petitioner fails to establish eligibility, the officer denies the petition and notifies the petitioner in writing of the reasons for the denial. The denial notice must include information about appeal rights and the opportunity to file a motion to reopen or reconsider.^[8]

The petitioner may appeal the denial of a family-based petition to the Board of Immigration Appeals.^[9]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 291. See Matter of Brantigan (PDF), 11 I&N Dec. 493 (BIA 1966). See Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications, Chapter 4, Burden and Standards of Proof, Section A, Burden of Proof [1 USCIS-PM E.4(A)].

[^ 2] The person who bears the burden of proof must submit evidence to satisfy the applicable standard of proof. For more information on standards of proof, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications, Chapter 4, Burden and Standards of Proof, Section B, Standards of Proof [1 USCIS-PM E.4(B)].

[^ 3] See Matter of Ma (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 394 (BIA 1991).

[^ 4] For more information, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications, Chapter 6, Evidence, Section F, Requests for Evidence and Notices of Intent to Deny [1 USCIS-PM E.6(F)].

[^ 5] See Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(19). For additional information on approvals, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications, Chapter 9, Rendering a Decision [1 USCIS-PM E.9].

[^ 7] See Volume 7, Adjustment of Status [7 USCIS-PM].

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 103.3. For additional information on denials, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications, Chapter 9, Rendering a Decision [1 USCIS-PM E.9].

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 1003.1(b)(5).

Chapter 6 - Post-Adjudication Actions

Revocation

USCIS may revoke an approved family-based petition^[1] automatically or upon notice.^[2]

The petitioner may appeal the revocation of a family-based petition to the Board of Immigration Appeals.^[3]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 205.1 (automatic revocation). See 8 CFR 205.2 (revocation upon notice).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 1003.1(b)(5).

Volume 6 - Immigrants

Part A - Immigrant Policies and Procedures

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 20 - Immigrants in General \(External\) \(PDF, 635.67 KB\)

Part B - Family-Based Immigrants

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 21 - Family-based Petitions and Applications \(External\) \(PDF, 1.82 MB\)

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

The Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) provides that U.S. citizens and lawful permanent residents (LPRs) may petition for certain noncitizen relatives to immigrate to the United States.^[1] If the petitioners and the beneficiaries of such petitions meet the eligibility requirements, beneficiaries may then pursue LPR status by applying for an immigrant visa at a U.S. embassy or consulate (otherwise known as consular processing), or, if already in the United States, by applying for adjustment of status.^[2]

B. Background [Reserved]

C. Legal Authorities

- INA 201 – Worldwide level of immigration
- INA 202 – Numerical limitations on individual foreign states
- INA 203 – Allocation of immigrant visas
- INA 204; 8 CFR 204 – Procedure for granting immigrant status

Footnotes

[^ 1] In addition, Congress provided that certain noncitizen relatives may self-petition in limited circumstances.

[^ 2] For more information, see Volume 7, Adjustment of Status [7 USCIS-PM].

Chapter 2 - Principles Common to Family-Based Petitions [Reserved]

Chapter 3 - Filing

A U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident (LPR) may file a petition on behalf of a relative using the Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130), in accordance with the form's instructions. In certain cases, noncitizen relatives may self-petition by filing the Petition for Amerasian, Widow(er), or Special Immigrant (Form I-360).^[1]

Generally, family-sponsored petitions must be filed with USCIS.^[2] However, there are some limited circumstances in which the U.S. Department of State (DOS) may accept and adjudicate Form I-130. USCIS no longer accepts and adjudicates routine Form I-130 petitions at its remaining international field offices.^[3]

A. When Department of State is Authorized to Accept and Adjudicate Form I-130

USCIS has delegated authority to DOS to accept and adjudicate a Form I-130 filed by a U.S. citizen petitioner for an immediate relative^[4] if the petitioner establishes exceptional circumstances or falls under blanket authorization criteria defined by USCIS. This policy applies even in countries with a USCIS presence. Without such delegation, DOS has no authority to permit a U.S. embassy or consulate to accept a local Form I-130 filing abroad.

If a consular officer in a U.S. embassy or consulate encounters an individual case that the officer believes has need of immediate processing of a Form I-130, the consular officer may, but is not required to, accept the local filing in exceptional circumstances, in accordance with the guidance below.

Exceptional Circumstances

Examples of exceptional circumstances include:

- Military emergencies – A U.S. service member, who is abroad but who does not fall under the military blanket authorization for U.S. service members stationed abroad on military bases, becomes aware of a new deployment or transfer with little notice. This exception generally applies in cases where the U.S. service member is provided with exceptionally less notice than normally expected.
- Medical emergencies – A petitioner or beneficiary is facing an urgent medical emergency that requires immediate travel.
- Threats to personal safety – A petitioner or beneficiary is facing an imminent threat to personal safety. For example, a petitioner and beneficiary may have been forced to flee their country of residence due to civil strife or natural disaster and are in precarious circumstances in a different country outside of the United States.
- Close to aging out – A beneficiary is within a few months of aging out of eligibility.
- Petitioner has recently naturalized – A petitioner and family member(s) have traveled for the immigrant visa interview, but the petitioner has naturalized and the family member(s) requires a new petition based on the petitioner's citizenship.
- Adoption of a child – A petitioner has adopted a child abroad and has an imminent need to depart the country. This type of case should only be considered if the petitioner has a full and final adoption decree on behalf of the child and the adoptive parent(s) has had legal custody of and jointly resided with the child for at least 2 years.
- Short notice of position relocation – A U.S. citizen petitioner, living and working abroad, has received a job offer in or reassignment to the United States with little notice for the required start date.

Discretion

The list of examples provided above is not exhaustive. DOS may exercise its discretion to accept local Form I-130 filings for other emergency or exceptional circumstances of a non-routine nature, unless specifically noted below. However, such filings must be truly urgent and otherwise limited to situations when filing with USCIS online or domestically with an expedite request would likely not be sufficient to address the time-sensitive and exigent nature of the situation.

DOS may consider a petitioner's residency within the consular district when determining whether to accept a filing, but it is not required.^[5]

B. When Department of State is Not Authorized to Accept and Adjudicate Form I-130

DOS may not exercise discretion to accept local filings in certain scenarios. USCIS does not authorize DOS to accept a local filing abroad when a petitioner based in the United States seeks to travel and file abroad in order to expedite processing. DOS acceptance of Form I-130s abroad is intended to assist petitioners living abroad who demonstrate exceptional circumstances as described above.

In addition, USCIS does not authorize DOS to accept a local filing abroad if the petitioner has already filed a Form I-130 domestically for the same beneficiary. If exigent circumstances exist, the petitioner should request expedited processing for an electronic or domestically-filed petition. Local consular or USCIS staff should inform the petitioner of the process to request expedited adjudication.^[6]

C. Blanket Filing Authorizations

USCIS^[7] may issue a blanket authorization for DOS to exercise its discretion to accept locally-filed Form I-130 immediate relative petitions for certain filing categories. Petitioners in these categories do not need to reside in the country of the U.S. embassy or consulate, but they must meet the blanket exception criteria described below in order to file a Form I-130 with DOS.

Temporary Blanket Authorizations

In instances of prolonged or severe civil strife or a natural disaster, USCIS may authorize a blanket exception for DOS to accept Form I-130 immediate relative petitions from petitioners directly affected by such events.

Temporary blanket authorizations do not require DOS to accept a filing, but rather allow DOS to use its discretion to accept a Form I-130 filed at a U.S. embassy or consulate. Although DOS may accept a local filing by a petitioner who does not reside within the post's jurisdiction, the intent of the temporary blanket authorization is to assist those directly affected by the disruptive event, not to speed up the process for those petitioners who are not directly affected.

U.S. Military Assigned to Military Bases Abroad

USCIS has granted DOS blanket authorization to accept Form I-130 immediate relative petitions filed by U.S. citizen military service members stationed abroad even in countries with a USCIS presence. This blanket authorization does not apply to service members assigned to non-military bases, such as U.S. embassies, international organizations, or civilian institutions, or to service members on temporary duty orders. Qualifying petitioners do not need to establish exceptional circumstances. This blanket authorization is not time-limited, but USCIS may revoke the authorization if warranted.

D. Procedures for Local Filings

DOS may accept and adjudicate a local Form I-130 filing by a U.S. citizen petitioner for an immediate relative if the petitioner establishes exceptional circumstances or meets blanket authorization criteria defined by USCIS.

If DOS declines to accept a local filing, DOS should inform the petitioner of its decision and of the process for filing the Form I-130 at a USCIS lockbox or online in accordance with the USCIS filing instructions.

The petitioner does not have the right to appeal, motion, or otherwise request reconsideration of a USCIS or DOS decision to decline acceptance of a local filing. Although this local filing process is designed to facilitate expedited processing of cases abroad in exceptional circumstances, it is not the only way to file a petition or seek expedited adjudication. If not permitted to file locally abroad, a petitioner may still file a Form I-130 petition with a USCIS lockbox or online and may request expedited processing for that petition in accordance with the published USCIS expedite process and criteria.^[8]

DOS may approve only those Form I-130 petitions that are clearly approvable. If DOS determines a petition is not clearly approvable, DOS forwards the petition to the USCIS office designated to adjudicate the not clearly approvable petitions. This USCIS office is generally a USCIS service center.^[9]

If DOS approves a Form I-130 petition but that U.S. embassy or consulate does not issue immigrant visas, the Consular Section coordinates with the appropriate embassy or consulate with jurisdiction to issue a visa in accordance with DOS guidelines.

Although USCIS has delegated authority to DOS to accept Form I-130 petitions in all locations abroad in the limited instances described above, USCIS retains authority to accept and adjudicate a local Form I-130 filing abroad or conduct an in-person interview abroad as warranted, regardless of where or how the petition was filed.

Footnotes

[^ 1] For more information on self-petitioner categories, see the instructions to Form I-360. Form I-360 is also used for a number of other (non-relative) special immigrant classifications, which are discussed in other Policy Manual parts.

[^ 2] See instructions to the Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130).

[^ 3] The USCIS field offices in Accra, Ghana and London, United Kingdom will continue to accept and adjudicate Form I-130 petitions filed by U.S. citizens residing in-country who are filing on behalf of their spouse, unmarried child under the age of 21, or parent (if the U.S. citizen is 21 years of age or older) through March 31, 2020.

[^ 4] Immediate relative refers to a U.S. citizen's spouse, unmarried child under the age of 21, or parent (if the U.S. citizen is over the age of 21). See INA 201(b)(2)(A)(i). Other Form I-130 filing categories, which may be filed by either U.S. citizens or LPRs and are also referred to as preference category petitions, must be filed with a domestic USCIS lockbox or online in accordance with the filing instructions. See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(1).

[^ 5] See 9 Foreign Affairs Manual (FAM) 504.2-4(B)(1)(b), Adjudicating Exceptional Circumstance I-130 Cases.

[^ 6] See Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part A, Public Services, Chapter 5, Requests to Expedite Applications or Petitions [1 USCIS-PM A.5]. See the How to Make an Expedite Request web page.

[^ 7] Currently, this is handled by the Refugee, Asylum and International Operations Directorate.

[^ 8] For more information, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part A, Public Services, Chapter 5, Requests to Expedite Applications or Petitions [1 USCIS-PM A.5]. See the How to Make an Expedite Request web page.

[^ 9] See 9 Foreign Affairs Manual (FAM) 504.2-4(B)(1)(b), Adjudicating Exceptional Circumstance I-130 Cases.

Chapter 4 - Documentation and Evidence for Family-Based Petitions [Reserved]

Chapter 5 - Adjudication of Family-Based Petitions [Reserved]

Chapter 6 - Post-Adjudication of Family-Based Petitions [Reserved]

Chapter 7 - Spouses [Reserved]

Chapter 8 - Children, Sons, and Daughters

A. Definition of a Child^[1]

In general, a child for immigration purposes is an unmarried person under 21 years of age who is:

- A child born in wedlock^[2] to a U.S. citizen or lawful permanent resident (LPR) parent;
- The legitimated^[3] child of a U.S. citizen or LPR parent who is under 18 and in the legal custody of the legitimating parent or parents at the time of legitimization;
- The stepchild of a U.S. citizen or LPR parent who is under 18 at the time of the marriage, creating the step-relationship;
- A child adopted while under age 16 (or 18 if the sibling exception applies) who has jointly resided with and been in the legal custody of the adopting U.S. citizen or LPR parent for at least 2 years; [4]
- An orphan who has been adopted abroad by a U.S. citizen or who is coming to the United States for adoption by a U.S. citizen;^[5]
- A Hague Convention adoptee who has been adopted abroad by a U.S. citizen or who is coming to the United States for adoption by a U.S. citizen;^[6] or
- A child born out of wedlock to a natural^[7] U.S. citizen or LPR parent. If the petitioning parent is the natural father and the child has not been legitimated, the natural father and child must have had a bona-fide parent-child relationship before the child reached the age of 21 or married.

1. Child Born In or Out of Wedlock

USCIS considers a child to be born in wedlock when the child's legal parents are married to one another at the time of the child's birth and at least one of the legal parents has a genetic or gestational relationship to the child.^[8] Therefore, a child born in wedlock may be:

- A genetic child of a married U.S. citizen or LPR parent if both married parents are recognized by the relevant jurisdiction as the child's legal parents;
- The child of a married non-genetic gestational U.S. citizen or LPR parent (person who carried and gave birth to the child) if both married parents are recognized by the relevant jurisdiction as the child's legal parents; or
- A child of a U.S. citizen or LPR who is married to the child's genetic or gestational parent at the time of the child's birth, if both married parents are recognized by the relevant jurisdiction as the child's legal parents.^[9]

If a child does not meet this definition of born "in wedlock," USCIS considers the child to have been born out of wedlock. While the petitioning U.S. citizen or LPR parent may be the natural mother or natural father, if the petitioning parent is the natural father and the child has not been legitimated, the natural father and child must have had a bona-fide parent-child relationship before the child reached the age of 21 or married. A “natural” parent may be a genetic or a gestational parent (who carries and gives birth to the child) who is recognized by the relevant jurisdiction as the child’s legal parent.

2. Legitimated Child [Reserved]

3. Assisted Reproductive Technology (ART)^[10]

The child of a gestational parent who is also the child’s legal parent may be considered a “child” for immigration purposes. A person who is the gestational and legal parent of a child under the law of the relevant jurisdiction at the time of the child’s birth may file a Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130) for the child if all other eligibility requirements are met.

In addition, a non-genetic, non-gestational legal parent may file a Form I-130 on behalf of the child if the parent is married to the child’s genetic or gestational parent at the time of the child’s birth and both parents are recognized by the relevant jurisdiction as the child’s legal parents. Under those circumstances, the child is considered born in wedlock.^[11]

Legal parentage is generally determined under the laws of the jurisdiction in which the child was born, but there may be circumstances in which the law of the jurisdiction of residence applies, such as when a post-partum act of legitimation occurs in the jurisdiction of residence.

4. Stepchild [Reserved]

B. Eligibility Requirements for Child Petitions [Reserved]

C. Documentation and Evidence [Reserved]

D. Adjudication [Reserved]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 101(b). The Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) provides different definitions of “child” for immigrant visa petitions and for citizenship and naturalization. One significant difference is that a stepchild is not included in the definition relating to citizenship and naturalization. For more information, see Chapter 2, Definition of Child and Residence for Citizenship and Naturalization [12 USCIS-PM H.2].

[^ 2] See Subsection 1, Child Born in or Out of Wedlock [6 USCIS-PM B.8(A)(1)].

[^ 3] A child can be legitimated under the laws of the child’s residence or domicile or under the laws of the father’s residence or domicile. See INA 101(b)(1)(C). A person’s “residence” is the person’s place of general abode, that is, the principal, actual dwelling place without regard to intent. See INA 101(a) (33). A person’s “domicile” refers to a “person’s true, fixed, principal, and permanent home, to which that person intends to return and remain even though currently residing elsewhere.” See Black’s Law Dictionary (11th ed. 2019). In most cases, a person’s residence is the same as a person’s domicile. Legitimated child includes a child of a U.S. citizen or LPR who is the child’s genetic or gestational parent at the time of the child’s birth, if the parent(s) are recognized by the relevant jurisdiction as the child’s legal parents.

[^ 4] See INA 101(b)(1)(E).

[^ 5] See INA 101(b)(1)(F).

[^ 6] See INA 101(b)(1)(G).

[^ 7] A “natural” parent may be a genetic or a gestational parent (who carries and gives birth to the child) who is recognized by the relevant jurisdiction as the child’s legal parent.

[^ 8] The term “genetic child” refers to a child who shares genetic material with the parent. The term “gestational parent” refers to the person who carries and gives birth to the child.

[^ 9] The law of the relevant jurisdiction governs whether the non-genetic parent is the legal parent for purposes of U.S. immigration law. A non-genetic U.S. citizen parent, who is not a legally recognized parent of the child, may not be considered a parent for immigration purposes. USCIS follows any applicable court judgment of the relevant jurisdiction if parentage is disputed. In addition, USCIS does not adjudicate cases involving children whose legal parentage remains in dispute unless there has been a determination by a proper authority.

[^ 10] For additional background and eligibility criteria for Assisted Reproductive Technology see Volume 12, Part H, Children of U.S. Citizens, Chapter 2, Definition of Child and Residence for Citizenship and Naturalization, Section D, Assisted Reproductive Technology [12 USCIS-PM-H.2(D)].

[^ 11] See INA 101(b)(1)(A).

Chapter 9 - Parents of U.S. Citizens [Reserved]

Chapter 10 - Siblings of U.S. Citizens [Reserved]

Part C - Adam Walsh Act

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator’s Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 21 - Family-based Petitions and Applications \(External\) \(PDF, 1.82 MB\)

Part D - Surviving Relatives

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures.

See more

In May 2020, USCIS retired its Adjudicator's Field Manual (AFM), a collection of our immigration policies and procedures. We are working quickly to update and incorporate all of the AFM content into the USCIS Policy Manual, the agency's centralized online repository for immigration policies. Until then, we have moved any remaining AFM content to its corresponding Policy Manual Part. To the extent that a provision in the Policy Manual conflicts with remaining AFM content or Policy Memoranda, the updated information in the Policy Manual prevails. If you have questions or concerns about any discrepancies among these resources, contact PolicyFeedback@uscis.dhs.gov.

AFM Chapter 10 - An Overview of the Adjudication Process \(External\) \(PDF, 2.55 MB\)

AFM Chapter 21 - Family-based Petitions and Applications \(External\) \(PDF, 1.82 MB\)

Part E - Employment-Based Immigration

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

Congress provided several classifications for employment-based immigration to allow a limited number of noncitizens to become lawful permanent residents (LPRs) based on certain skillsets.

B. Background

For a person to immigrate on an employment basis, his or her employer or intending employer must file a petition for an employment-based immigrant classification using a Petition for Alien Workers (Form I-140). The petitioning employer must demonstrate to USCIS that the beneficiary is qualified for the immigrant classification sought.^[1]

If the petition is based on an underlying approved permanent labor certification application, then the immigrant petition must be filed during the validity period of the permanent labor certification established by the U.S. Department of Labor (DOL). The petitioner must demonstrate that the beneficiary is qualified for the position certified by DOL. Not all employment-based immigrant classifications require the petitioner to first obtain permanent labor certification. In addition, in certain classifications, the beneficiary can self-petition for the classification sought.

This Part E provides general information relating to employment-based immigrant petitions. Part F provides a more detailed discussion of the specific immigrant classifications.^[2]

Visa Classifications

The following table lists the categories of employment-based immigrant visa classifications, the corresponding codes of admission, and where to find additional guidance about the classifications.

Employment-Based Visa Classifications

Employment-Based Immigrant	Code of Admission	For More Information
Person of Extraordinary Ability	E11	Part F, Employment-Based Classifications, Chapter 2, Extraordinary Ability [6 USCIS-PM F.2]
Outstanding Professor Outstanding Researcher	E12	See Part F, Employment-Based Classifications, Chapter 3, Outstanding Professor or Researcher [6 USCIS-PM F.3]
Multinational Executive Multinational Manager	E13	See Part F, Employment-Based Classifications, Chapter 4, Multinational Executive or Manager [6 USCIS-PM F.4]
Professional Holding Advanced Degree	E21	See Part F, Employment-Based Classifications, Chapter 5, Advanced Degree or Exceptional Ability [6 USCIS-PM F.5] and Chapter 6, Physician [6 USCIS-PM F.6]

Employment-Based Immigrant	Code of Admission	For More Information
Person of Exceptional Ability
Skilled Worker	E31	See Part F, Employment-Based Classifications, Chapter 7, Skilled Worker, Professional, or Other Worker [6 USCIS-PM F.7]
Professional Holding Baccalaureate Degree	E32	See Part F, Employment-Based Classifications, Chapter 7, Skilled Worker, Professional, or Other Worker [6 USCIS-PM F.7]
Other Worker	EW3	See Part F, Employment-Based Classifications, Chapter 7, Skilled Worker, Professional, or Other Worker [6 USCIS-PM F.7]

C. Legal Authorities

- INA 203(b)(1), (2), (3) – Preference allocation for employment-based immigrants
- 8 CFR 204.5 – Petitions for employment-based immigrants
- 20 CFR 656 – Labor certification process for permanent employment of aliens in the United States

Footnotes

[^ 1] This Part generally uses the simplified terms petition, petitioner, and beneficiary. The term petition refers to the Immigrant Petition for Alien Workers (Form I-140). The term petitioner generally refers to the petitioning employer, though in some circumstances the petitioner may be a self-petitioning noncitizen. The term beneficiary refers to the noncitizen who is the beneficiary of the petition, who in some cases may also be a self-petitioner.

[^ 2] See Part F, Employment-Based Classifications [6 USCIS-PM F].

The employment-based immigrant classifications are comprised of the following categories of workers:

- First preference workers, including persons of extraordinary ability, outstanding professors or researchers, and multinational executives or managers (EB-1);^[1]
- Second preference workers, including members of the professions holding advanced degrees and persons of exceptional ability (EB-2);^[2] and
- Third preference workers, including skilled workers, professionals, and other workers (EB-3).^[3]

The following table outlines the eligibility requirements that must be met in order for a noncitizen to obtain permanent residence in the United States based on employment.

General Eligibility Requirements for Employment-Based Immigration

If a job offer is required, the petitioning employer meets the classification-specific requirements and has the ability to pay the proffered wage.^[4]

The beneficiary qualifies under one of the employment-based immigrant classifications.^[5]

Where applicable, the beneficiary has an individual permanent labor certification application approved by the U.S. Department of Labor or seeks a Schedule A blanket labor certification.^[6]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 203(b)(1).

[^ 2] See INA 203(b)(2).

[^ 3] See INA 203(b)(3).

[^ 4] For more information about employer requirements, see Part F, Employment-Based Classifications [6 USCIS-PM F]. For information about employers that are successors to the entity that filed the labor certification application, see Chapter 3, Successor-in-Interest in Permanent Labor Certification Cases [6 USCIS-PM E.3]. For information on ability to pay, see Chapter 4, Ability to Pay [6 USCIS-PM E.4]. Finally, see generally Chapter 5, Business Structure [6 USCIS-PM E.5].

[^ 5] See Part F, Employment-Based Classifications [6 USCIS-PM F].

[^ 6] See INA 212(a)(5). This requirement only applies to EB-2 and EB-3 classifications. See INA 212(a)(5)(D). For individual applications, see Chapter 6, Labor Certification [6 USCIS-PM E.6]. For Schedule A blanket certification, see Chapter 7, Schedule A Designation Petitions [6 USCIS-PM.E.7].

Chapter 3 - Successor-in-Interest in Permanent Labor Certification Cases

A. Successor Requests to Use a Predecessor's Approved Permanent Labor Certification

When a company is bought, merged, changes corporate structure, or significantly changes owners, the new or reorganized company may demonstrate to USCIS that it can be considered a successor in interest (successor) of the original company to assume the predecessor's prior immigrant benefits requests.

If such a successor company acquires all or some of a business from a predecessor company, it may file a petition that requests to use the approved permanent labor certifications that the predecessor filed with the U.S. Department of Labor (DOL). Such successor may also file a new or amended petition if the predecessor has already filed a petition.

The employer must file such petitions within the validity period of the permanent labor certification and must submit the following evidence:

- Documentation to establish the qualifying transfer of the ownership of the predecessor to the successor;
- Documentation from an authorized official of the successor that evidences the transfer of ownership of the predecessor; the organizational structure of the predecessor prior to the transfer; the current organizational structure of the successor; and the job title, job location, rate of pay, job description, and job requirements for the permanent job opportunity for the beneficiary;
- Documentation to demonstrate that the beneficiary possesses the requisite minimum education, licensure, and work experience requirements specified on the permanent labor certification;
- The original approved permanent labor certification; and
- Documentation to establish the ability to pay the proffered wage by the predecessor and the successor.

B. Situations Not Requiring a New or Amended Petition

Not every change to the petitioner's name or, in certain cases, the location where the beneficiary is to be employed requires a new or amended petition. Specifically, the petitioner does not need to file a new or amended Immigrant Petition for Alien Workers (Form I-140) due to:

- A legal change in the name of the petitioner, including a petitioner's "doing business as" (DBA) name, if the ownership and legal business structure of the petitioner remains the same; or
- A new job location, if the new business location and job are within the same metropolitan statistical area of intended employment stated on the permanent labor certification.

When the beneficiary files an Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (Form I-485) with USCIS or applies for an immigrant visa with the U.S. Department of State, the beneficiary may need to document that the petitioner is the same petitioner that filed the petition or that the job opportunity is still located in the area of intended employment specified on the permanent labor certification.^[1]

C. Change in Employer Due to Transfer of Ownership to a Successor

Successor-in-interest entities that wish to rely on the approval of a petition and the permanent labor certification filed by a predecessor entity must file an amended petition that demonstrates that a qualifying successor-in-interest relationship exists in accordance with the three successor-in-interest factors.^[2]

The petitioner must submit the following evidence with each amended petition:

- Documentation, such as a copy of the Form I-797 approval or receipt notice, that provides the previously filed petition's receipt number and the petitioner's name and address;
- Documentation to establish the ability to pay the proffered wage by the predecessor and the successor;
- Documentation to establish the qualifying transfer of ownership of the predecessor to the successor; and
- Documentation from an authorized official of the successor evidencing the transfer of ownership of the predecessor, the organizational structure of the predecessor before the transfer; the current organizational structure of the successor; and the job title, job location, rate of pay, job description, and job requirements for the permanent job opportunity for the beneficiary.

D. Consolidated Processing of Multiple Successor-In-Interest Petitions

Each successor-in-interest petition must be evaluated according to the three factors and is adjudicated on its own merits with regard to eligibility for the visa preference classification requested in the petition.^[3] However, multiple filings based on the same transfer and assumption of the ownership of the predecessor by the successor may have duplicative evidence provided in each case to establish the transfer and assumption of the ownership of the predecessor by the successor.

In the interest of efficiency and consistency, USCIS may elect to accept consolidated evidence (for example, one copy of the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission Form 10-K for 20 petitions instead of 20 copies of the SEC Form 10-K). Additionally, USCIS may coordinate the adjudication of multiple pending successor petitions so that the petitions are adjudicated at a single USCIS office or at the same time or both, to the extent that other pressing work priorities permit.

Petitioners can initiate a request for the consolidated processing of multiple successor-in-interest cases affected by the same transfer of ownership through the USCIS Contact Center or, if applicable, the appropriate Premium Processing mailbox.^[4] USCIS reviews the submitted request and any related documentation when determining whether USCIS may accept the consolidated evidence.

The decision to grant a request for consolidated case processing rests solely with USCIS.

E. Successor-In-Interest Determinations

Interpretation of Matter of Dial Auto Repair Shop, Inc.

The legacy Immigration and Naturalization Service (legacy INS) Commissioner in Matter of Dial Auto Repair Shop, Inc. (PDF), examined a petitioner (the successor) who had taken over some functions of the employer who filed the permanent labor certification (the predecessor).^[5] The Commissioner found that the petitioner failed to adequately describe how it had acquired its predecessor, Elvira Auto Body's, business. As a result, Dial Auto Repair Shop failed to meet its burden and was not eligible to claim continued validity of the original permanent labor certification.

The Commissioner stated that if Dial Auto Repair Shop's "claim of having assumed all of Elvira Auto's rights, duties, obligations, etc., is found to be untrue, then grounds would exist for invalidation of the labor certification Conversely, if the claim is found to be true, and it is determined that an actual successorship exists, the petition could be approved if eligibility is otherwise shown" ^[6] Notably, the Commissioner did not state that a valid successor relationship could only be established through the assumption of all the predecessor entity's rights, duties, and obligations.

The definition of a successor is "someone who succeeds to the office, rights, responsibilities, or place of another; one who replaces or follows a predecessor."^[7] Similarly, the term "successor" with reference to corporations is defined as "a corporation that, through amalgamation, consolidation, or other assumption of interests, is vested with the rights and duties of an earlier corporation."^[8]

These definitions are consistent with the determinations made in Matter of Dial Auto Repair Shop, Inc., which highlight three factors that should be considered when determining if a previously approved or pending permanent labor certification remains valid for successor-in-interest petition adjudications.

F. Factors for Successorship Determinations

The three successor-in-interest factors are:

- The job opportunity offered by the successor must be the same as the job opportunity originally offered on the permanent labor certification;
- The successor bears the burden of proof to establish all elements of eligibility as of the priority date, including the provision of required evidence from the predecessor entity, such as evidence of the predecessor's ability to pay the proffered wage; and
- For a valid successor-in-interest relationship to exist between the successor and the predecessor that filed the permanent labor certification, the petition must fully describe and document the transfer and assumption of the ownership of the predecessor by the successor.

If a business can establish these three factors, an officer may find a valid successor-in-interest relationship even in situations where a successor does not wholly assume a predecessor entity's rights, duties, and obligations.

1. Same Job Opportunity

The job opportunity offered by the successor must be the same as the job opportunity originally offered on the permanent labor certification.

The job offered in the successor-in-interest petition by the successor must remain unchanged with respect to the rate of pay, metropolitan statistical area, job description, and job requirements specified on the permanent labor certification. USCIS denies successor-in-interest claims where the position with the successor is changed such that the rate of pay, job description, or requirements specified on the permanent labor certification no longer relate to the labor market test.^[9]

In other words, officers should deny any successor claim where the changes to the rate of pay, job description, or job requirements, as stated on permanent labor certification, if made at the time that the permanent labor certification was filed with DOL, could have affected the number or type of available U.S. workers who applied for the job opportunity. However, an increase in the rate of pay due to the passage of time does not affect the successor-in-interest claim.

The job opportunity must also remain valid and available from the time of the filing of the permanent labor certification with DOL until the issuance of an immigrant visa abroad or the beneficiary's adjustment of status to lawful permanent resident while in the United States.^[10] Otherwise, a new test of the labor market and new permanent labor certification application by the successor employer is required.

The original job opportunity ceases to exist if, at any time before the transfer of ownership, the predecessor ceases business operations entirely or even partially so that the beneficiary's services are no longer required or the business operation in which the job opportunity was originally offered has a substantial lapse in business operations after the transfer of ownership.

Example

A predecessor was involved in the operation of a restaurant, and the job opportunity specified on the permanent labor certification is for a specialty cook. The successor acquires the business and closes the restaurant for extensive renovations. The restaurant reopens 6 months later. In this case, the original job opportunity is no longer valid, as there was a substantial lapse in business operations after the transfer of ownership.

The successor would have to conduct a new test of the labor market for the job opportunity through the filing of a permanent labor certification application with DOL. Conversely, if, in the example described above, the restaurant did not close during the renovations to the property but continued business operations in a manner that would require the beneficiary's services as a specialty cook, then the job offer would remain valid during the business transition and no new permanent labor certification would be required.

2. Successor's Burden of Proof

The successor bears the burden of proof to establish all elements of eligibility as of the priority date, including the provision of required evidence from the predecessor entity, such as evidence of the predecessor's ability to pay the proffered wage.

In order to establish its eligibility as a successor-in-interest petitioner and the beneficiary's eligibility for the visa classification, the successor must demonstrate that the beneficiary met all the criteria for the visa classification. This includes the predecessor's ability to pay the proffered wage from the date of the filing of the permanent labor certification with DOL until the date of the transfer of the ownership of the predecessor to the successor.

The successor must meet the definition of "employer" and demonstrate the ability to pay the proffered wage as of the date of the transfer of ownership of the predecessor to the successor, continuing until the time of immigrant visa issuance or the beneficiary's adjustment of status in the United States.^[11] In cases of sales of discrete operational divisions or units of the predecessor,^[12] the predecessor's ability to pay the proffered wage should be analyzed by considering the financial data relating to the predecessor entity, not just the business unit.

The evidence in the petition must also show that the beneficiary possessed the minimum education and work experience requirements specified on the permanent labor certification, as of the filing date of the permanent labor certification with DOL.

Example

A petitioner files and obtains a DOL-approved permanent labor certification for an architect. The petitioner then becomes insolvent in the following year and is unable to meet its existing financial obligations. The firm is ultimately acquired by another architectural firm, which files a successor petition on the beneficiary's behalf.

In this case the second factor is not met because the predecessor entity did not possess the ability to pay the beneficiary's wage from the time of filing of the permanent labor certification until the acquisition of the predecessor by the successor.

The successor would have to conduct a new test of the labor market for the job opportunity through the filing of a permanent labor certification application with DOL. Conversely, if the predecessor had remained solvent until the time that it was acquired by the successor, then the second factor may be met if all other areas of eligibility are established.

3. Transfer and Assumption of Ownership

For a valid successor-in-interest relationship to exist between the successor and the predecessor that filed the permanent labor certification, the petition must fully describe and document the transfer and assumption of the ownership of the predecessor by the successor.

For successor-in-interest purposes, the transfer of ownership may occur at any time after the filing or approval of the original permanent labor certification with DOL.^[13]

Evidence of business transactions resulting in the transfer of ownership may include, but is not limited to:

- Legal agreements evidencing the merger, acquisition, or other reorganization of the predecessor;
- Mortgage closing statements;
- An SEC Form 10-K, Form 10-Q, Form 8-K or other relevant filing;
- Audited financial statements of the predecessor and successor for the year in which the transfer occurred;
- Documentation of the transfer or other assumption of real property, business licenses and other assets and interests from the predecessor to the successor;
- Copies of the financial or other legal instruments used to execute the transfer of ownership; and
- Newspaper articles or other media reports announcing the merger, acquisition, or other reorganization effecting the change between the predecessor and the successor.

The evidence provided must show that the successor not only acquired the predecessor's assets but also that the successor acquired the essential rights and obligations of the predecessor necessary to carry on the business in the same manner as the predecessor. The successor must continue to operate the same type of business as the predecessor, and the way the business is controlled and carried on by the successor must remain substantially the same as it was before the ownership transfer.

However, a valid successor-in-interest relationship may still be established in certain instances where liabilities unrelated to the original job opportunity are not assumed by the successor (for example, where the successor does not assume the liability of pending or potential sexual harassment litigation or other tort obligations unrelated to the job opportunity in the permanent labor certification).

Contractual agreements or other arrangements in which two or more business entities agree to conduct business together or agree to provide services to each other without the transfer of the ownership of the predecessor to the successor do not create a valid successor-in-interest relationship.

Example

Company A filed a permanent labor certification application with DOL for a computer systems analyst, which is ultimately approved. Company A subsequently signs a contract with Company B for the provision of computer systems analyst services to Company A by Company B, effectively outsourcing the computer systems analyst duties that were to be performed by the beneficiary to Company B.

A valid successor-in-interest relationship between Company A and Company B does not exist in this instance. The contractual agreement between the companies did not result in the transfer of the ownership of Company A to Company B in a manner so that its business interests are carried on and controlled in the same manner by Company B.

Conversely, in the example above, Company A sells its computer software development unit to Company B and the computer systems analyst position specified within the approved permanent labor certification is located within that business unit. A valid successor-in-interest relationship may exist between Company A and Company B if the sale of the business unit results in the transfer of the ownership of relevant assets and other interests of the business unit of Company A to Company B in a manner so that its business interests are carried on and controlled in the same manner by Company B.

Transfers in Whole or Part

The transfer of the ownership of the predecessor to the successor may occur through a merger, acquisition, or reorganization. These business transactions may involve business entities with differing organizational structures, such as:

- General partnerships;

- Limited partnerships;
- Limited liability partnerships (LLPs);
- Limited liability companies (LLCs); or
- Corporations (including subchapter C and S corporations).

The structure of business transactions resulting in the transfer of ownership of the predecessor to the successor varies from case to case. Frequently, the acquiring entity (successor) purchases a discrete operational division or unit, resulting in the sale of only a part of the predecessor (often structured to only transfer ownership of the assets or other interests comprising the division or unit to the successor without transferring ownership of the predecessor entity itself).

For successor-in-interest petition purposes, the operational division or unit of the business entity that is being transferred to the successor must be a clearly defined unit within the predecessor entity, and that unit must be transferred as a whole to the successor, with the exception of certain unrelated liabilities such as those previously outlined.

The job offered to the beneficiary in the successor petition must have been, and must continue to be, located within the operational division or unit that is transferred from the predecessor to the successor. The three successor-in-interest factors must also be met.

Example

The manufacturing division of a chemical wholesale corporation, which uses plant facilities and equipment, management, accounting, and operational structures that are readily divisible from the general structure of the predecessor entity might qualify if the manufacturing division (including all relevant divisible assets) is transferred to another business entity that continues to engage in chemical manufacturing.

Example

Another example might involve the sale of a branch office of a bank to another entity engaged in the provision of banking services as a member organization in the banking industry.

Conversely, the sale of a patented chemical formula by Company A to Company B, which allows Company B to manufacture a product using the chemical formula, does not create a successor-in-interest relationship between the two companies, even if Company A ceases to manufacture the product and starts to purchase the product from Company B.

This transaction did not result in the transfer of a clearly defined business unit. Rather, Company A merely sold the manufacturing rights for a given product to Company B without the transfer of the other related assets located within its business unit.

Requests for Evidence

USCIS may issue a Request for Evidence (RFE) to the petitioner if the petitioner has failed to demonstrate a qualified successor-in-interest relationship. The RFE explains why the permanent labor certification that was originally provided in support of the petition is not valid for the proffered position, based on one or more of the reasons outlined above, and other reasons, if any. If the petitioner does not provide a new original permanent labor certification that was valid at the time of filing of the petition or sufficient evidence to overcome the concerns outlined in the RFE, then USCIS denies the petition.

G. Portability on Successor-In-Interest Filing Requirements

The American Competitiveness in the 21st Century Act (AC21)^[14] allows for certain petitions to remain valid even if the beneficiary is no longer seeking to adjust status based on employment with the petitioner that originally filed the petition on that beneficiary's behalf.

In cases where a beneficiary is eligible for portability based on AC21, a successor entity need not file a new petition on the beneficiary's behalf, provided that all the AC21 requirements have been met.^[15] For instance, the beneficiary would have to show for purposes of adjustment that the successor job opportunity is the "same or similar" as the job opportunity on the permanent labor certification, according to applicable guidance on AC21.^[16]

H. Relevance to Permanent Labor Certification Application

Successor-in-interest determinations are principally relevant to the continuing validity of a permanent labor certification. Successor-in-interest petitions are not required to reaffirm the validity of the initial petition requesting visa preference categories that do not require a permanent labor certification, such as the employment-based 1st preference persons of extraordinary ability and certain employment-based 2nd preference national interest waiver cases.

A new or successor employer seeking to classify the beneficiary as an employment-based 1st preference multi-national executive or manager or employment-based 1st preference outstanding professor or researcher must file a new petition and establish the beneficiary's eligibility under the requested category's specific eligibility requirements.

Footnotes

[^ 1] In situations where the beneficiary eligible for portability based on the American Competitiveness in the 21st Century Act (AC21), the area of intended employment is not relevant at the adjustment stage. See Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part E, Employment-Based Adjustment, Chapter 5, Job Portability after Adjustment Filing and Other AC21 Provisions [7 USCIS-PM E.5] and the Form I-485 Supplement J webpage.

[^ 2] See Section F, Factors for Successorship Determinations [6 USCIS-PM E.3(F)].

[^ 3] See Section F, Factors for Successorship Determinations [6 USCIS-PM E.3(F)].

[^ 4] See the Direct Filing Addresses for Form I-140, Immigrant Petition for Alien Worker webpage.

[^ 5] See Matter of Dial Auto Repair Shop, Inc. (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 481 (Comm. 1986).

[^ 6] See Matter of Dial Auto Repair Shop, Inc. (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 481, 482 (Comm. 1986).

[^ 7] See Black's Law Dictionary (11th ed. 2019).

[^ 8] See Black's Law Dictionary (11th ed. 2019).

[^ 9] An exception to this general rule is if a beneficiary is eligible for portability based on AC21. See Pub. L. 106-313 (PDF) (October 17, 2000). See INA 204(j). For more information, see Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part E, Employment-Based Adjustment, Chapter 5, Job Portability after Adjustment Filing and Other AC21 Provisions [7 USCIS-PM E.5]

[^ 10] In situations where the beneficiary eligible for portability based on AC21, the area of intended employment is not relevant at the adjustment stage. See Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part E, Employment-Based Adjustment, Chapter 5, Job Portability after Adjustment Filing and Other AC21 Provisions [7 USCIS-PM E.5] and the Form I-485 Supplement J webpage.

[^ 11] See Matter of Dial Auto Repair Shop, Inc. (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 481, 482 (Comm. 1986).

[^ 12] For more information on transfers in whole or in part, see Subsection 3, Transfer and Assumption of Ownership [6 USCIS-PM E.3(F)(3)].

[^ 13] Where the succession occurred during the pendency of the labor certification application before DOL, including during the pre-filing recruitment phase, prior to filing the permanent labor certification application with DOL, DOL would have the jurisdiction to review the successor claim. See DOL FAQs Round 10 (PDF). In this instance, USCIS will consider tax returns or other documentation pertaining to ability to pay that relate to the predecessor(s).

[^ 14] See Pub. L. 106-313 (PDF) (October 17, 2000). See INA 204(j).

[^ 15] See INA 204(j).

[^ 16] See Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part E, Employment-Based Adjustment, Chapter 5, Job Portability after Adjustment Filing and Other AC21 Provisions [7 USCIS-PM E.5] and the Form I-485 Supplement J webpage.

Chapter 4 - Ability to Pay

A. Assessing the Petitioner's Ability to Pay the Required Wage

The regulations require that any petition that requires a job offer be accompanied by evidence that the petitioner had the ability to pay the proffered wage at the time the permanent labor certification application was filed and continuing until the beneficiary obtains permanent residence.

Establishing that the petitioner has the ability to pay the proffered wage is different from establishing that the petitioner is already paying the proffered wage. A petition may still be approved if the petitioner can demonstrate its continuing ability to pay the required wage as of the priority date through the time the beneficiary becomes a permanent resident, even if the petitioner is not paying that wage when it files the petition, or the beneficiary has not yet been employed by the petitioner.

The evidence must be in the form of annual reports, federal tax returns, or audited financial statements.^[1] In a case where the prospective employer employs 100 or more workers, officers may accept a statement from a financial officer of the organization regarding its ability to pay the proffered wage.^[2]

In certain circumstances, the petitioner can submit or USCIS may request additional evidence, such as profit and loss statements, bank account records, or personnel records. The burden remains on the petitioner to establish its ability to pay the wage.

Depending on corporate structure, acceptable evidence includes:

- Publicly traded corporations – Annual reports are sufficient if they contain detailed financial information, such as audited financial statements issued by an independent accounting firm.
- Privately held corporations – Audited financial statements from an independent accounting firm.
- Partnerships – Audited financial statements from an independent accounting firm.
- Non-profit institutions – A letter from an inside financial officer is sufficient for large, well-established institutions. Documentary evidence of the non-profit's financial status may be required for institutions that are not as well-established.

Sometimes companies operate at a loss for a period to improve their business position in the long run. For example, a company may not expect research and development costs on a product line to generate revenue for several years. In those instances, the documentation should fully explain the sources of funding for the entity (or unit) and the expected profit potential. Whether the petitioner can demonstrate it has the ability to pay the beneficiary the wages described in the petition depends on the specific facts presented and consideration of all of the circumstances.^[3]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 204.5(g)(2).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 204.5(g)(2).

[^ 3] See Matter of Sonegawa (PDF), 12 I&N Dec. 612 (Reg. Comm. 1967).

Chapter 5 - Business Structure [Reserved]

Chapter 6 - Permanent Labor Certification

A. Employer Requirements

A significant percentage of Immigrant Petitions for Alien Workers (Forms I-140) are based on permanent labor certification applications approved by the U.S. Department of Labor (DOL). When adjudicating a permanent labor certification application, DOL does not generally review the beneficiary's qualifications for the position; this authority and responsibility rests with USCIS. Therefore, officers must assess these petitions to ensure that the position offered is the same or similar to the position that the DOL certified and that the beneficiary meets the qualifications for the position.

1. Applicability

Employment-based 1st preference (EB-1)^[1] beneficiaries are not required to be the beneficiaries of approved permanent labor certifications issued by the DOL. Beneficiaries seeking employment-based 2nd preference (EB-2)^[2] or 3rd preference (EB-3)^[3] immigrant visas, however, generally must be the beneficiaries of approved permanent labor certifications.

2. Individual Permanent Labor Certifications

In general, petitioners filing EB-2 and EB-3 petitions must first obtain an approved permanent labor certification application from DOL on behalf of the beneficiary. An approved permanent labor certification application demonstrates that:

- The petitioner tested the labor market in the geographic area where the permanent job offer is located to establish that there are no able, qualified, and available U.S. workers who are willing to accept the permanent job offer; and
- The employment of the beneficiary will not adversely affect the wages and working conditions of similarly employed U.S. workers.

DOL implemented the permanent labor certification system (PERM) on March 28, 2005, effectively eliminating the previous permanent labor certification system, whereby petitioners had an option to file permanent labor certification applications under supervised recruitment or reduction in recruitment rules.

The DOL PERM final rule, published on December 27, 2004 and effective on March 28, 2005, amended the procedures for obtaining permanent labor certification.^[4] DOL approves and issues permanent labor certification applications only after the petitioner has complied with DOL advertising and recruiting requirements and has established that there are no able, qualified, and available U.S. workers for the position and has rejected any U.S. job applicants for valid job-related reasons.

Permanent Labor Certifications filed with DOL on or after March 28, 2005^[5]

The Application for Permanent Employment Certification (ETA Form 9089 (PDF)) replaced the Application for Alien Employment Certification (ETA Form 750) in most cases, effective March 28, 2005.^[6] ETA Form 9089 details the specifics of the job offer and the beneficiary that were contained in the ETA Form 750 Part A and Part B. The ETA Form 9089 can be filed electronically or by mail.^[7]

For the application to be valid, the petitioner, the beneficiary, and the form preparer (if any) must sign the ETA Form 9089. It must also contain the DOL certification stamp and bear the DOL certifying officer's signature and the certification date.

An approved permanent labor certification is not evidence that DOL has certified that the beneficiary named on the permanent labor certification qualifies for the position. Only USCIS has the authority to determine qualifications for nonimmigrant and immigrant classifications.^[8] An approved permanent labor certification means that the petitioner made a good faith effort to test the labor market and demonstrated to DOL that there were no qualified, able, and available U.S. workers for the position.

USCIS determines whether the beneficiary met the minimum education, training, and experience requirements of the permanent labor certification at the time the petitioner filed the application for permanent labor certification with DOL. An immigrant petition for a preference classification is not approvable if the beneficiary was not fully qualified for the classification by the filing date of the permanent labor certification (the petition's priority date).^[9]

B. Validity of Approved Permanent Labor Certifications

1. Validity Period

The validity period for individual permanent labor certifications approved on or after July 16, 2007, is 180 days.^[10] Petitioners have 180 calendar days after the date of the approval of the permanent labor certification application by DOL within which to submit the permanent labor certification in support of a petition with USCIS.^[11]

USCIS rejects petitions that require an approved permanent labor certification if the permanent labor certification has expired or if the petition is filed without the approved permanent labor certification. USCIS denies a petition that was inadvertently accepted without a required, valid permanent labor certification.

2. Exceptions

USCIS continues to accept amended or duplicate petitions that are filed with a copy of a permanent labor certification that is expired at the time the amended or duplicate petition is filed, if the original permanent labor certification was submitted in support of a previously filed petition during the permanent labor certification's validity period. These filings may occur when:

- There is a successor-in-interest employer change, which requires a new or amended petition;
- The petitioner wishes to file a new petition subsequent to the denial, revocation, or abandonment of the previously filed petition, and the permanent labor certification was not invalidated due to material misrepresentation or fraud relating to the labor certification application;
- The petitioner files an amended petition to request a different immigrant visa classification than the classification requested in the previously filed petition; or
- USCIS or U.S. Department of State (DOS) determines that the previously filed petition has been lost.

Petitioners may not appeal a USCIS decision to deny a petition that is filed with an expired permanent labor certification issued by DOL.^[12]

3. Validity Periods Ending on Weekends or Federal Legal Holidays

The petitioner must file a petition supported by an approved permanent labor certification during the certification's validity period as established by DOL. However, USCIS cannot accept paper-based petitions on a Saturday, Sunday, or a federal legal holiday. Therefore, in instances where the last day of a validity period falls on a Saturday, Sunday, or federal legal holiday, USCIS accepts the petition on the next business day.

This action is most consistent with existing USCIS regulations, which allow cut-off dates for the filing of petitions and applications that fall on a Saturday, Sunday, or federal legal holiday to be extended until the next business day.^[13] This procedure provides petitioners the benefit of the full 180-day validity period for approved permanent labor certifications established by DOL.

Electronically-filed petitions are considered filed immediately upon submission; therefore, these filings are not affected by USCIS mailroom closures.

C. Original and Duplicate Permanent Labor Certification Requirements

While photocopies of other initial supporting documents are generally acceptable, the petitioner must submit the original permanent labor certification unless it has already been filed with another petition. [14]

Issuance of a Duplicate Permanent Labor Certification

If the original permanent labor certification has been lost, DOL does not issue a duplicate permanent labor certification to the petitioner but issues a duplicate directly to DOS or USCIS for ETA Form 9089 permanent labor certifications.^[15] DOL only issues these duplicates for permanent labor certifications filed on or after March 28, 2005^[16] and only at the request of DOS or USCIS.

A beneficiary, petitioner, or a beneficiary's or petitioner's attorney or agent must therefore explain the need for a duplicate to USCIS and USCIS may then request that DOL issue a duplicate. DOL retains permanent labor certification information for 5 years and can only issue duplicates during that time frame. The USCIS request must include documentary evidence that a visa application or petition has been filed and must include the U.S. embassy or consulate or USCIS case tracking number that is associated with the visa application or petition.

DOL only sends the duplicate permanent labor certification to DOS or USCIS, regardless of who makes the request.^[17] An officer should only make the request to DOL if it is in conjunction with a petition filed with USCIS where the original permanent labor certification has been irretrievably lost or destroyed. The duplicate permanent labor certification must be retained as part of the record of the petition after it is received from DOL and should not be forwarded to the petitioner or the petitioner's representative.

An officer should not make such a request to DOL if the petitioner's attorney requested a duplicate permanent labor certification in general correspondence to USCIS, merely because he or she would like a copy for his or her records.

If another beneficiary has used or been substituted on a permanent labor certification that the petitioner claims has been lost or denied, the officer should deny the request for a duplicate permanent labor certification.

D. New Approval of Permanent Labor Certification Required

1. In General

The list of conditions that require the submission of a new original permanent labor certification in support of the petition includes, but is not limited to:

- The successor entity (petitioner) has not established that a successor-in-interest relationship exists between the successor and the predecessor in accordance with the three successor-in-interest factors;^[18]

- The permanent labor certification is not valid for the new geographic area of the beneficiary's proposed employment; or
- There has been any other material change in the job opportunity covered by the original permanent labor certification.

2. Permanent Labor Certification Substitution Changes

As of July 16, 2007, DOL regulations prohibit the alteration of any information contained in the permanent labor certification after the permanent labor certification application is filed with DOL, including the substitution of beneficiaries on permanent labor certification applications and resulting certifications.^[19]

E. Revocation of a Permanent Labor Certification

DOL may take steps to revoke the approval of a permanent labor certification if a subsequent finding is made that the certification was not justified.^[20] In such instances, DOL provides notice to the employer in the form of a Notice of Intent to Revoke (NOIR) that contains a detailed statement of the grounds for the revocation of the approved permanent labor certification and the time period allowed for the petitioner's rebuttal.^[21]

The petitioner may submit evidence in rebuttal within 30 days of receipt of the notice. If rebuttal evidence is not filed by the petitioner, the NOIR becomes the final decision of DOL.

If the petitioner files rebuttal evidence and DOL determines the certification should nonetheless be revoked, the petitioner may file an appeal within 30 days of the date of the adverse determination.^[22] If the permanent labor certification is revoked, DOL also sends a copy of the notification to USCIS and DOS.

Permanent labor certifications remain valid unless and until they are revoked. Officers should provide notice to the petitioner in the form of a Notice of Intent to Deny (NOID) or NOIR if the record reflects that the underlying permanent labor certification has been revoked.^[23] This notice gives the petitioner an opportunity to supplement the petition with a valid permanent labor certification. If the rebuttal evidence provided in response to the NOID or NOIR does not include a valid permanent labor certification, USCIS denies or revokes the approval of the petition.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 203(b)(1).

[^ 2] See INA 203(b)(2).

[^ 3] See INA 203(b)(3).

[^ 4] See 20 CFR 656.

[^ 5] Before the new PERM regulation became effective on March 28, 2005, U.S. employers filed the Application for Alien Employment Certification (ETA Form 750) in order to obtain an approved labor certification. Petitioners still use the ETA Form 750 for professional athletes and may submit an uncertified ETA Form 750 or 9089 with a petition seeking a national interest waiver of the labor certification. See Part F, Employment-Based Classifications, Chapter 5, Advanced Degree or Exceptional Ability [6 USCIS-PM F.5] and Chapter 6, Physician [6 USCIS-PM F.6]. The ETA Form 750 has two parts. Part A focuses on the details of the position being certified and describes the name and address of the petitioner, the location of the job opportunity, the proffered wage for the position and the minimum education, training, or experience requirements to successfully perform the duties of the position. Part B focuses on the beneficiary and contains his or her name, date of birth, address, and describes his or her education, training and work history. A valid, approved ETA Form 750 must be signed by the petitioner in Part A and the beneficiary in Part B, contain the DOL certification stamp, and be signed and dated by the DOL certifying officer in the endorsements section on the front page on Part A of the form.

[^ 6] See 20 CFR 656.17.

[^ 7] For more information about filing ETA Form 9089, see the Foreign Labor Certification webpage.

[^ 8] See K.R.K. Irvine, Inc. v. Landon, 699 F.2d 1006, 1008-09 (9th Cir. 1983).

[^ 9] See Matter of Katigbak (PDF), 14 I&N Dec. 45 (Reg. Comm. 1971). See Matter of Wing's Tea House (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 158 (Act. Reg. Comm. 1977). See the discussions of priority dates at 8 CFR 204.5(d) and 20 CFR 656.30(a).

[^ 10] DOL amended its regulations at 20 CFR part 656 on May 17, 2007, with an effective date of July 16, 2007. See 72 FR 27904 (PDF) (May 17, 2007).

[^ 11] See 20 CFR 656.30(b).

[^ 12] The Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) lacks appellate jurisdiction to review denials based on the lack of a labor certification. See DHS Delegation No. 0150.1 para. (2)(U) (Mar. 1, 2003), which delegated the AAO's jurisdiction over the decisions listed in 8 CFR 103.1(f)(3)(iii)(B) (PDF) (as the regulations appeared February 28, 2003).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 1.2 (definition of day).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 204.5(g)(1). In addition, this regulation provides that an officer may request that other original documents be provided when necessary.

[^ 15] DOL also issues duplicates of lost ETA Form 750 permanent labor certification applications directly to USCIS, upon USCIS' request. DOL replaced ETA Form 750 with ETA Form 9089 on March 28, 2005, however, ETA Form 750 is still used in certain situations. For more information, see Section A, Employer Requirements, Subsection 2, Individual Permanent Labor Certifications [6 USCIS-PM E.6(A)(2)].

[^ 16] Before March 28, 2005, DOL provided duplicate labor certifications only in response to a written request by USCIS.

[^ 17] See 20 CFR 656.30(e).

[^ 18] See Chapter 3, Successor-in-Interest in Permanent Labor Certification Cases, Section F, Factors for Successorship Determinations [6 USCIS-PM E.3(F)].

[^ 19] See 20 CFR 656.11. Before July 16, 2007, USCIS and DOL allowed U.S. employers to substitute a beneficiary named on a pending or approved labor certification with another prospective beneficiary while maintaining the previously established “priority date.” Labor certification substitution could occur either while the labor certification application was pending at DOL or while a petition, filed with an approved labor certification, was pending with USCIS. Starting July 16, 2007, USCIS began rejecting all petitions requesting labor certification substitution. In the event USCIS inadvertently accepts such a petition, it denies the petition based on being filed without a valid approved labor certification naming the beneficiary.

[^ 20] See 20 CFR 656.32.

[^ 21] See 20 CFR 656.32(b).

[^ 22] See 20 CFR 656.26.

[^ 23] USCIS also provides the NOIR or a Notice of Revocation to beneficiaries who are otherwise eligible and have properly requested to port to a new employer as USCIS considers them affected parties. For more information, see Chapter 8, Decision and Post-Adjudication, Section C, Revocation [6 USCIS-PM E.8(C)].

Chapter 7 - Schedule A Designation Petitions

A. Background

The U.S. Department of Labor (DOL) adjudicates Applications for Permanent Employment Certification (ETA Form 9089 (PDF)), also referred to as permanent labor certifications. For certain occupations, DOL has predetermined there are not sufficient U.S. workers who are able, willing, qualified, and available pursuant to regulation.^[1] These occupations are referred to as Schedule A occupations. DOL has also determined that sheepherders are eligible for special processing.^[2]

For these two types of cases, the U.S. employer submits an uncertified application for permanent labor certification to USCIS at the time of filing the Immigrant Petition for Alien Workers (Form I-140), and USCIS reviews the application for permanent labor certification during the adjudication of the petition. USCIS applies DOL's regulations to the application for permanent labor certification regarding whether or not the employer and beneficiary have met certain requirements, and USCIS' regulations to the petition.

DOL requirements for Schedule A occupations and sheepherders are different from the normal requirements for other employment-based immigrant visa classifications. The fact that a petitioner can establish eligibility under DOL's regulations only means that the permanent labor certification requirement is met. It does not mean that the beneficiary is eligible for the requested immigrant visa classification.^[3]

B. Eligibility for Schedule A Designation

In order to obtain an employment-based visa classification based on a Schedule A occupation, the petitioning employer must meet the eligibility requirements outlined in the table below.^[4]

Eligibility Requirements for Schedule A Designation

Requirement	For More Information
The employer must offer full-time permanent employment to the beneficiary.	20 CFR 656.3 (definitions of employer and employment)
The employment must be in one of the occupations categorized as a Schedule A occupation.	Section C, Schedule A Occupations [6 USCIS-PM E.7(C)]
The employer must offer the beneficiary at least the prevailing wage.	Section D, Prevailing Wage Determinations and Notices of Filing [6 USCIS-PM E.7(D)]
The employer must provide notice of the position(s) it seeks to fill to the employer's bargaining representative, if applicable, or its employees.	Section D, Prevailing Wage Determinations and Notices of Filing [6 USCIS-PM E.7(D)]
The beneficiary must meet the specific USCIS eligibility requirements. ^[5]	8 CFR 204.5

Requirement	For More Information

C. Schedule A Occupations

For certain occupations, DOL has predetermined that there are not sufficient U.S. workers who are able, willing, qualified, and available. These occupations are referred to as Schedule A occupations, and the process to satisfy the permanent labor certification requirement is referred to as “blanket” labor certification. DOL has predetermined that the wages and working conditions of U.S. workers similarly employed will not be adversely affected by the employment of noncitizens in those occupations.

The following occupations comprise Schedule A:^[6]

- Group I – physical therapists and professional nurses; and
- Group II – immigrants of exceptional ability in the sciences or arts, including college and university teachers, and immigrants of exceptional ability in the performing arts.

Because of the occupational shortage of these U.S. workers, DOL has “pre-certified” Schedule A occupations. This means that an employer who wishes to hire a person for a Schedule A occupation is not required to conduct a test of the labor market and apply for a permanent labor certification with DOL. Rather, this employer must apply for Schedule A designation by submitting an application for permanent labor certification to USCIS in conjunction with the petition.

D. Prevailing Wage Determinations and Notices of Filing

1. Prevailing Wage Determination

An employer must obtain a valid prevailing wage determination from DOL’s National Prevailing Wage Center (NPWC) before it can file the petition with USCIS.^[7] The prevailing wage determination ensures that the wages offered to the beneficiary are reflective of the wages offered for comparable positions at the location where the job offer exists before the petitioner files the petition. In situations where there are multiple worksites (for example, the employer is a staffing agency), if the employer knows where they will place the beneficiary, the prevailing wage is the wage applicable to the area of intended employment where the worksite is located. If an employer with multiple clients does not know where they will place the beneficiary among its multiple clients, the prevailing wage is derived from the area of its headquarters.^[8] The wage offered to the beneficiary must be no less than 100 percent of the prevailing wage.

To obtain a prevailing wage determination, the employer must file an Application for Prevailing Wage Determination (Form ETA-9141 (PDF)) with the NPWC. The NPWC processes prevailing wage determination requests under DOL regulations and guidance and provides the employer with an appropriate prevailing wage rate on Form ETA-9141.

Form ETA-9141 must contain the NPWC's determination date, as well as the validity period of the prevailing wage determination. The validity period may not be less than 90 days or more than 1 year from the determination date. An employer must file a petition within the validity period in order to use the prevailing wage rate provided by the NPWC.^[9]

2. Notice of Filing^[10]

Notice to Employees

Before an employer can file a petition, it must have also provided a notice of the position(s) it is seeking to fill under Schedule A, Group I or II, to the employer's bargaining representative.^[11] Alternatively, if there is no such representative, then the employer must provide notice to its employees.^[12] Such notice must be posted for at least 10 consecutive business days^[13] in a clearly visible location at the facility or location of employment.^[14]

Notice for Every Occupation or Job Classification

An employer must post a separate notice for every occupation or job classification that is the subject of a request for Schedule A designation. However, regulations do not require a separate notice for every petition seeking designation under Schedule A. For example, an employer would post separate notices for a home health nurse and an emergency room nurse because the nurses have different job duties and wage rates. An employer can satisfy the notice of posting requirements with respect to several persons in each job classification with a single notice of posting, if the title, wage, requirements, and job location are the same for each person.^[15]

Applications Filed by Private Households

In the case of a private household, notice of filing is required only if the household employs one or more U.S. workers at the time the ETA Form 9089 is filed.^[16]

Evidence of Compliance

An employer must be able to document that it complied with the notice of posting requirements.^[17]

If the employer notified its bargaining representative, then it may submit as evidence a copy of both the letter and the ETA Form 9089 sent to the bargaining representative(s). If the employer notified its employees, the documentation requirement may be satisfied by providing a copy of the posted notice and stating where it was posted, and by providing copies of all the in-house media, whether electronic or print, that were used to distribute notice of the application in accordance with the procedures used for similar positions within the employer's organization.^[18]

3. Notice of Filing: Posting Requirements^[19]

Visible and Unobstructed

During the requisite posting period, a notice to the employees must be clearly visible and unobstructed while it is posted, and it must be posted in conspicuous places where the employer's U.S. workers can easily read the posted notice on their way to or from their place of employment. Appropriate locations include locations in the immediate vicinity of DOL-required wage and hour notices or occupational safety and health notices.^[20]

Description of Job and Rate of Pay

The notice must contain a description of the job and rate of pay and indicate that it is provided as a result of the filing of an application for permanent employment certification for the relevant position.^[21] The rate of pay must meet or exceed the prevailing wage at the time of posting. If the notice contains a range of wages, the lowest wage rate must meet or exceed the prevailing wage at the time of posting.^[22]

DOL Certifying Officer Contact Information

In addition, a notice to the employees must also state that any person may provide documentary evidence bearing on the Schedule A labor certification application to the appropriate DOL Certifying Officer holding jurisdiction over the location where the beneficiary would be physically working.^[23] The notice must also provide the address of the appropriate Certifying Officer.^[24]

Period of Posting

Finally, the notice must be posted for at least 10 consecutive business days (including weekend days and holidays if these days are regular business days for the employer, that is, the employer is "open for business" on these days). In all cases, the burden is on the employer not only to establish that they posted the notice for 10 consecutive business days, but also that it was in an area that was accessible to its employees on each of these business days.

The notice must have been posted between 30 days and 180 days before the employer filed the petition.^[25] The last day of the posting must fall at least 30 days before filing in order to provide sufficient time for interested persons to submit, if they so choose, documentary evidence bearing on the application to DOL. Officers should deny the petition and any concurrently filed Form I-485 if the notice was not posted between 30 and 180 days before the petition's filing.

"Business Day" for Purposes of Notice

The term “business day” typically means Monday through Friday, except for federal holidays. However, where an employer is open for business on Saturdays, Sundays, or holidays, the employer may include the Saturday, Sunday, or holiday in its count of the 10 consecutive business day period required for the posting of the notice of filing.^[26]

The employer, however, must demonstrate that it was open for business on those days and employees had access to the area where they could view the notice. Similarly, where an employer is not open for business on any day of the week, including Monday through Friday, the employer should not include any such days in its count of the 10 consecutive business days period required for the posting of the notice.

“Open for Business” for Purposes of Notice

If an employer must demonstrate that it was open for business on a Saturday, Sunday, or a holiday at the time of posting, the employer must provide documentation which establishes that on those days:

- Employees were working on the premises and engaged in normal business activity;
- The worksite was open and available to clients or customers, if applicable, as well as to employees; and
- Employees had access to the area where the notice of filing was posted.

4. Notice of Filing: Posting Locations^[27]

Posting at Worksite

If the employer knows where the beneficiary will be placed, then the employer must post the notice at the worksite(s) where the beneficiary will perform the work, and publish the notice internally using in-house media (whether electronic or print) according to the normal internal procedures used by the employer to notify its employees of employment opportunities in the occupation in question. The prevailing wage indicated in the notice is the wage applicable to the area of intended employment where the worksite is located.

If the employer currently employs relevant workers at multiple locations and does not know where the beneficiary will be placed, then the employer must post the notice at the worksite(s) of all of its locations or clients where relevant workers currently are placed, and publish the notice of filing internally using in-house media (whether electronic or print) according to the normal internal procedures used by the employer to notify its employees of employment opportunities in the occupation in question.

The situation of multiple work locations may arise in, but is not limited to, a scenario when the employer is a staffing agency which has clients under contract at the time that the employer seeks to post a timely notice of filing. In support of the petition, the employer may provide a copy of one posting notice supported by a list of all locations where the notice was posted and dates of posting in each location. The employer does not have to submit a copy of each notice.^[28]

Officers might encounter cases in which the employment is not full-time, permanent employment^[29] or where the worksite(s) is unknown and the employer has no current locations or clients. In those cases, the officer may deny the petition because no bona fide job opportunity exists.^[30]

In-house Media

An employer is required to publish the notice in all in-house media, whether electronic or print, that the employer normally uses to announce similar positions within its organization.^[31] The employer must submit as evidence a copy of all in-house media that was used to distribute notice of the application according to the procedures used for similar positions within the employer's organization.

E. Physical Therapists and Registered Nurses (Group I)

1. General Eligibility

A physical therapist is a person who applies the art and science of physical therapy to the treatment of patients with disabilities, disorders, and injuries to relieve pain, develop or restore function, and maintain performance, using physical means, such as exercise, massage, heat, water, light, and electricity, as prescribed by a physician (or a surgeon).^[32]

A professional nurse is a person who applies the art and science of nursing which reflects comprehension of principles derived from the physical, biological, and behavioral sciences. Professional nursing generally includes making clinical judgments involving the observation, care and counsel of persons requiring nursing care; administering of medicines and treatments prescribed by the physician or dentist; and participation in the activities for the promotion of health and prevention of illness in others.

A program of study for professional nurses generally includes theory and practice in clinical areas such as obstetrics, surgery, pediatrics, psychiatry, and medicine.^[33] Officers should compare the duties of the proffered position with the duties stated in the definition of "professional nurse" in determining whether the proffered position qualifies as that of a professional nurse.^[34] The classification for which the nurse is eligible depends on whether the position requires, and the beneficiary has, an advanced degree.

2. Bona Fide Job Offer

For Schedule A petitions, the petitioner must demonstrate that it is more likely than not that the petitioner is offering a bona fide full-time, permanent position.^[35] When considering this question, however, officers may not unilaterally impose novel substantive or evidentiary requirements beyond those set forth in the regulations.^[36] Specifically, there is no evidentiary requirement in the relevant and guiding statute or regulations that requires the petitioner to provide all contracts between the petitioner and its third-party clients for petitions generally and for Schedule A cases specifically.^[37] Officers may, however, review the terms of the job offer and documentation relevant to the other requirements.

The terms of the job offer are derived from the petition and ETA Form 9089. The headquarters' worksite location and all of the potential client worksites to which the beneficiary could be assigned should be evident from the prevailing wage request and posting notice and other descriptive materials the petitioner voluntarily submits.

Other evidence related to the bona fide nature of the job offer includes that submitted to document the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage.^[38] The record should also contain evidence of the beneficiary's qualifications for the classification^[39] and any special requirements required by the job offer on the ETA Form 9089.^[40] Such evidence should illustrate that it is more likely than not that there is a bona fide job offer. An officer should be able to articulate a reasonable concern based on evidence either within or outside of the record to form the basis for a fraud referral for further investigation.

F. Evidence

1. Group I Occupations

For Group I, registered nurse occupations, the employer must submit evidence to establish that the beneficiary currently has (and had at the time of filing):

- A full, unrestricted permanent license to practice nursing in the state of intended employment;
- A certificate from the Commission on Graduates of Foreign Nursing Schools (CGFNS); or
- Evidence that the beneficiary has passed the National Council Licensure Examination for Registered Nurses (NCLEX-RN) as of the date of filing.^[41]

For Group I, physical therapist occupations, the employer must submit evidence to establish that the beneficiary currently has (and had at the time of filing) a permanent license to practice in the state of intended employment. Minimum requirements must meet all state licensure requirements. In the alternative, the employer may submit a letter or statement signed by an authorized state physical therapy licensing official in the state of intended employment. This letter must indicate that the beneficiary is qualified to take the written licensing examination for physical therapists.^[42]

2. Group II Occupations

Immigrants of Exceptional Ability in the Sciences or Arts

To show that a beneficiary is of exceptional ability in the sciences or arts (excluding performing arts), the employer must submit documentary evidence testifying to the widespread acclaim and international recognition accorded to the beneficiary by recognized experts in the beneficiary's field. In addition, the employer must submit documentation showing that the beneficiary's work in that field during the past year did, and the intended work in the United States will, require exceptional ability. Finally, the employer must submit documentation concerning the beneficiary from at least two of the following seven categories, where "field" refers to the one in which the petitioner seeks certification for the beneficiary:

- Documentation of the beneficiary's receipt of internationally recognized prizes or awards for excellence in the field;
- Documentation of the beneficiary's membership in international associations, in the field, which require outstanding achievement of their members, as judged by recognized international experts in their disciplines or fields;
- Published material in professional publications about the beneficiary, about the beneficiary's work in the field, which must include the title, date, and author of such published material;
- Evidence of the beneficiary's participation on a panel, or individually, as a judge of the work of others in the same or in an allied field of specialization;
- Evidence of the beneficiary's original scientific or scholarly research contributions of major significance in the field;
- Evidence of the beneficiary's authorship of published scientific or scholarly articles in the field, in international professional journals or professional journals with an international circulation; and
- Evidence of the display of the beneficiary's work, in the field, at artistic exhibitions in more than one country.^[43]

Immigrants of Exceptional Ability in the Performing Arts

To show that a noncitizen is of exceptional ability in the performing arts, the employer must submit documentary evidence that the beneficiary's work experience during the past 12 months did, and the intended work in the United States will, require exceptional ability.^[44] Finally, the employer must submit sufficient documentation to show this exceptional ability, such as:

- Documentation attesting to the current widespread acclaim and international recognition accorded to the beneficiary, and receipt of internationally recognized prizes or awards for excellence;
- Published material by or about the beneficiary, such as critical reviews or articles in major newspapers, periodicals, or trade journals (the title, date, and author of such material must be indicated);

- Documentary evidence of earnings commensurate with the claimed level of ability;
- Playbills and star billings;
- Documents attesting to the outstanding reputation of theaters, concert halls, night clubs, and other establishments in which the beneficiary has appeared or is scheduled to appear; or
- Documents attesting to the outstanding reputation of theaters or repertory companies, ballet troupes, orchestras, or other organizations in which or with which the beneficiary has performed during the past year in a leading or starring capacity.^[45]

G. Eligibility for Employment-based Immigrant Visa Classification

1. Physical Therapists and Professional Nurses (Group I)

For Schedule A, Group I occupations, an employer may seek to classify the beneficiary as a skilled worker or professional (employment-based 3rd preference or EB-3 category).^[46] Occasionally, an employer may seek to classify the position as an advanced degree professional (employment-based 2nd preference or EB-2 category).^[47]

The minimum requirement for professional nursing occupations is generally less than a bachelor's degree and these occupations are therefore considered under the skilled worker classification.^[48] However, the minimum requirement for certain advanced or specialized professional nursing occupations may be a bachelor's degree.

These occupations may be properly considered under the professional classification. In some cases, the minimum requirements may even be an advanced degree. Those occupations may be properly considered under the advanced degree classification. Officers may refer to The Occupational Information Network (O*NET)^[49] to determine the minimum educational requirements for professional nursing occupations.

According to O*NET, most physical therapist occupations require graduate school. O*NET classifies the position as a "Job Zone Five" with "extensive preparation needed." Based on the state where the beneficiary will practice, these occupations may require a master's degree, and some may even require a Doctor of Physical Therapy (DPT). Therefore, physical therapist occupations may be properly considered under the advanced degree professional classification if the employer can show that, based on the duties and education requirements on the ETA Form 9089, the position requires an advanced degree.

EB-2 classification is appropriate even if the state of intended employment issues physical therapist licenses to those persons who possess less than an advanced degree based on when the therapist obtained the degree (sometimes referred to as “grandfathering”).

As explained below, some states will license a person who only possess a minimum of a bachelor’s degree (and not an advanced degree) as a physical therapist based on the date the person obtained that degree.^[50] As long as an employer can show that the position requires, at a minimum, an advanced degree (including the regulatory equivalence of a bachelor of physical therapy followed by 5 years of progressive experience),^[51] for a worker to satisfactorily perform the job duties, and the physical therapist holds an advanced degree or its equivalent, then a petition may be properly considered under the advanced degree professional classification.

It is not unusual for an employer to require that the position’s duties and requirements exceed the state’s minimum licensing requirements. For example, the employer may require that the beneficiary possess an advanced degree even though the state only requires a bachelor’s degree to obtain licensure as a physical therapist. In this case, a petition may be properly considered under the advanced degree professional classification.

It is possible that the employer does not require that the position’s duties and requirements exceed the state’s minimum licensing requirements. For example, the employer may only require that the beneficiary possess a bachelor’s degree since the state only requires a bachelor’s degree to obtain licensure as a physical therapist. Since the minimum requirements are less than an advanced degree, a petition may be properly considered under the professional classification (and not under the advanced degree classification). However, the employer cannot require that the position’s duties and requirements be less than the state’s minimum licensing requirements.

An advanced degree is commonly the minimum requirement for licensure for the occupation of physical therapist. Previously, a bachelor’s degree was the minimum requirement for licensure in the occupation. As noted above, many states have “grandfathering” clauses that allow those who obtained a bachelor’s degree under the previous licensing requirements to continue working in the field. If a “grandfathered” beneficiary can show that he or she has 5 years of progressive experience following receipt of the bachelor’s degree, then he or she may be able to qualify under the advanced degree professional classification.

USCIS defines an advanced degree as any U.S. academic or professional degree or a foreign equivalent degree above that of a bachelor’s degree. USCIS considers an academic or professional degree above that of a bachelor’s degree an advanced degree if the occupation requires that degree.

Therefore, a U.S. or foreign equivalent bachelor’s degree would not qualify a beneficiary for the advanced degree professional classification, unless the beneficiary also possesses 5 years of progressive experience following the award of the bachelor’s degree.

The beneficiary must have obtained both the bachelor’s degree and the 5 years of progressive experience before the filing date of the permanent labor certification. In addition, USCIS does not consider training certifications and similar documents that are not academic or professional as advanced degrees.^[52]

2. Immigrants of Exceptional Ability (Group II)

For Schedule A, Group II occupations, an employer may seek to classify the position as an advanced degree professional or immigrant of exceptional ability.^[53] However, it is possible that an employer may seek to classify the position as a skilled worker or professional if the position does not require an advanced degree or a person of exceptional ability.

Officers should not confuse the requirements to designate a beneficiary under Schedule A, Group II (immigrants of exceptional ability in the sciences or arts, including performing arts) with the requirements to classify someone under the EB-2 category (for immigrants of exceptional ability in the sciences, arts, or business). Though both DOL and USCIS regulations refer to noncitizens of “exceptional ability,” each regulation defines the term “exceptional ability” differently.

DOL defines “exceptional ability” for Schedule A, Group II designation as “widespread acclaim and international recognition accorded the alien by recognized experts in the alien’s field.” USCIS defines exceptional ability for purposes of the EB-2 category as “a degree of expertise significantly above that ordinarily encountered in the sciences, arts or business.”^[54]

DOL’s standard for Schedule A, Group II designation is therefore somewhat similar to that used to classify a person under the employment-based 1st preference (EB-1A) category (for immigrants of extraordinary ability). Despite this similarity, the standard for the EB-1A category is different than the standard for Schedule A, Group II designation. Therefore, officers should take care not to erroneously apply the standard for the EB-1A category to a request for Schedule A, Group II designation.^[55]

The granting of Schedule A, Group II designation is separate from the adjudication of the immigrant visa petition. Eligibility for Schedule A, Group II designation does not guarantee approval of the petition itself, which must be adjudicated under the relevant regulations. Meeting the requirements for Schedule A designation only means that the petition met the permanent labor certification requirement. Officers must still make a separate determination on whether the position and the beneficiary meet the requirements for the requested classification. Conversely, meeting the eligibility requirements for the classification under the USCIS definition does not establish eligibility for Schedule A, Group II designation under DOL’s regulations.

Minimum Job Requirements

Officers should ensure that the actual education, training, and experience needed to perform the job listed in Item H of ETA Form 9089 reflect the true minimum requirements of the position.

For Schedule A positions, the petitioner submits an uncertified ETA Form 9089 concurrently with the petition directly with USCIS. Therefore, in Schedule A cases, USCIS, and not DOL, reviews the ETA Form 9089 using DOL regulations. The duties shown on the permanent labor certification should be appropriate for a Schedule A occupation (such as a position that requires licensure as a professional nurse, licensure as a physical therapist, or performance of a worker of exceptional ability). If necessary, the officer may issue a Request for Evidence to confirm the precise minimum job requirements.

Self-Petitions Not Allowed

A noncitizen may not self-petition for Schedule A, Group II designation. Each request for Schedule A designation requires a job offer, and a petition that includes a request for such designation filed by a U.S. employer.

H. Filing Requirements

For all Schedule A occupations, an employer must apply for permanent labor certification with USCIS. A USCIS denial is conclusive and is not reviewable by the Board of Alien Labor Certification Appeals (BALCA) under the review procedures provided in regulations.^[56]

DOL does not certify any occupation that is a Schedule A, Group I occupation under the basic permanent labor certification process.^[57] However, if USCIS denies a permanent labor certification application filed by an employer for a Schedule A, Group II occupation, the employer may then apply for a permanent labor certification from DOL using the basic permanent labor certification process.^[58]

Required Documentation

In order to apply for Schedule A designation for petitions filed on or after March 28, 2005,^[59] the petitioning employer must complete and submit:^[60]

- A properly filed Immigrant Petition for Alien Workers (Form I-140), with appropriate filing fees;^[61]
- An uncertified Application for Permanent Employment Certification (ETA Form 9089 (PDF)), with the employer and beneficiary's original signatures (along with any representative's signature, if relevant);
- A prevailing wage determination issued by DOL's NPWC, in which the validity period is not less than 90 days or more than 1 year from the determination date and the petition is filed during that validity period;^[62]
- A copy of the notice sent to an appropriate collective bargaining unit, if applicable, or a copy of the notice posted at the facility or location of the employment,^[63] documenting posting for at least 10 consecutive business days and within the period between 30 and 180 days before the employer filed the petition;

- Copies of all in-house media, whether electronic or printed, in accordance with the normal procedures used in the employer's organization for the recruitment of positions similar to that specified on ETA Form 9089;
- Evidence that the beneficiary meets the specific DOL requirements for Schedule A designation; [64] and
- All other documentation required to show eligibility for the employment-based immigrant visa classification sought, such as evidence of its ability to pay and evidence that the beneficiary meets any additional requirements specified on the ETA Form 9089.

An employer must offer full-time permanent employment to a beneficiary. If USCIS has a reasonable and articulable reason to believe that it is more likely than not that the petitioning employer is not offering a bona fide job offer, officers may request additional evidence, such as copies of the employer's contracts with worksites or clients.^[65] An employer that cannot offer full-time permanent employment as a beneficiary's actual employer is ineligible to petition for the beneficiary.^[66]

I. Adjudication

If an employer meets all requirements for Schedule A designation and the petition is approvable, USCIS retains the ETA Form 9089 with the petition. If an employer did not meet all requirements for Schedule A designation, or the petition is not approvable, USCIS retains the permanent labor certification application with the petition. The officer does not complete Section O of the permanent labor certification.

The petitioner retains the right to file an appeal of USCIS' decision with the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO).^[67] In addition, an employer which cannot meet the requirements for Schedule A, Group II may then apply for a permanent labor certification from DOL using the basic permanent labor certification process.^[68] However, DOL does not consider applications for permanent labor certifications for Schedule A, Group I occupations under the basic permanent labor certification process.^[69]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 20 CFR 656.15. See INA 212(a)(5) for the general labor certification standard.

[^ 2] See 20 CFR 656.16.

[^ 3] See 20 CFR 656. For more information, see Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements [6 USCIS-PM E.2].

[^ 4] See 20 CFR 656.10. See 20 CFR 656.15. These requirements are in addition to the general eligibility requirements for employment-based visa classification. See Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements [6 USCIS-PM E.2].

[^ 5] The employer must also submit all other documentation required to show eligibility for the employment-based immigrant visa classification sought, such as evidence of its ability to pay, that the beneficiary and position qualify for the classification sought, and that the beneficiary meets the job requirements of the blanket labor certification.

[^ 6] See 20 CFR 656.5.

[^ 7] Before January 1, 2010, the State Workforce Agency (SWA) having jurisdiction over the area of intended employment processed prevailing wage determinations.

[^ 8] See the Office of Foreign Labor Certification (OFLC)'s Frequently Asked Questions and Answers webpage.

[^ 9] While the Schedule A regulations require that the employer obtain a prevailing wage determination that is valid at the time the employer files the petition, there is no requirement that the prevailing wage determination be obtained before the employer posts a notice of the position. In addition, there is no requirement that the wage on the posting notice must match the proffered wage, only that both must meet the prevailing wage.

[^ 10] See 20 CFR 656.10(d).

[^ 11] See 20 CFR 656.10(d)(1)(i).

[^ 12] See 20 CFR 656.10(d)(1)(ii).

[^ 13] See Period of Posting section below.

[^ 14] See 20 CFR 656.10(d)(1)(ii).

[^ 15] See generally OFLC's Frequently Asked Questions and Answers webpage regarding the notice of filing.

[^ 16] See 20 CFR 656.10(d)(2).

[^ 17] See 20 CFR 656.15(b)(2). See Section H, Filing Requirements [6 USCIS-PM E.7(H)].

[^ 18] See 20 CFR 656.10(d)(1)(ii).

[^ 19] See Appendix: Sample Notice of Filing [6 USCIS-PM E.7, Appendices Tab].

[^ 20] See 20 CFR 656.10(d)(1)(ii).

[^ 21] See 20 CFR 656.10(d)(6). See 20 CFR 656.10(d)(3)(i).

[^ 22] See 69 FR 77325 (Dec. 27, 2004).

[^ 23] See 20 CFR 656.10(d)(3)(ii).

[^ 24] See 20 CFR 656.10(d)(3)(iii). Before June 1, 2008, there were two addresses depending on the location of the petitioning business: Atlanta or Chicago. On or after June 1, 2008, the Atlanta address must be listed on the posting notice. See DOL Employment and Training Administration (ETA) OFLC's National Federal Processing Centers Contact webpage for the current mailing address for the appropriate Certifying Officer.

[^ 25] See 20 CFR 656.10(d)(3)(iv).

[^ 26] See Matter of II Cortile Restaurant, 2010-PER-00683 (BALCA Oct. 12, 2010).

[^ 27] For all petitions filed after March 20, 2006 (or motions to reopen filed after March 20, 2006 to reopen a petition that was filed and denied after March 28, 2005), employers must comply with these posting requirements.

[^ 28] USCIS established a policy for officers to issue a Request for Evidence (RFE) to provide an employer with the opportunity to comply with the posting requirements if the petition was pending on March 20, 2006 (or was denied and a timely filed motion to reopen or reconsider was pending on March 20, 2006), and the employer timely posted a notice but not in the correct location(s) of intended employment as described above. If all posting requirements are met and the notice was posted the requisite 10 business days before the date of the RFE response, USCIS considers the notice of posting timely for adjudication purposes.

[^ 29] See 20 CFR 656.3.

[^ 30] See Section B, Eligibility for Schedule A Designation [6 USCIS-PM E.7(B)]. See OFLC's Frequently Asked Questions and Answers webpage.

[^ 31] See 20 CFR 656.10(d)(1)(ii).

[^ 32] See 20 CFR 656.5(a)(3)(i).

[^ 33] See 20 CFR 656.5(a)(3)(i). DOL's use of the term "professional" in 20 CFR 656.5(a)(3)(ii) has no bearing on the determination of whether a nurse qualifies as a professional or skilled worker under 8 CFR 204.5(l)(2).

[^ 34] See 20 CFR 656.5(a)(3)(ii). See Adjudication of H-1B Petitions for Nursing Occupations (PDF, 225.58 KB), PM-602-0104, issued February 18, 2015.

[^ 35] See 20 CFR 656.20(c)(10). See 20 CFR 656.3.

[^ 36] See Love Korean Church v. Chertoff, 549 F.3d 749, 758 (9th Cir. 2008). See Kazarian v. INS, 596 F.3d 1115, 1121 (9th Cir. 2010).

[^ 37] Even for Schedule A staffing agency scenarios, the applicable regulatory criteria do not include employment contracts as required evidence. See OFLC's Frequently Asked Questions and Answers webpage, which explains that petitioners are not required to submit employment contracts. For the situation of nurse staffing agencies and “roving” employees (for example, foreign health care workers the petitioner will assign to work at third-party client worksites still to be determined as of the date of filing), DOL advised only that the petitioner should submit a prevailing wage determination for the headquarters location and posting notices at all of its clients’ worksites.

[^ 38] See Chapter 8, Documentation and Evidence [6 USCIS-PM E.8].

[^ 39] See Part F, Employment-Based Classifications [6 USCIS-PM F].

[^ 40] The requirements on the ETA Form 9089 should line up with those reflected on the Application for Prevailing Wage Determination (Form ETA-9141 (PDF)) and posting notice.

[^ 41] See 20 CFR 656.15(c)(2). The NCLEX-RN is administered by the National Council of State Boards of Nursing.

[^ 42] See 20 CFR 656.15(c)(1).

[^ 43] See 20 CFR 656.15(d)(1).

[^ 44] See Matter of Allied Concert Services, Inc., 88-INA-14 (BALCA 1988), which provides an example of how DOL previously evaluated the evidence for Schedule A Group II cases.

[^ 45] See 20 CFR 656.15(d)(2).

[^ 46] See INA 203(b)(3).

[^ 47] See INA 203(b)(2).

[^ 48] Skilled worker positions require 2 years of training or experience, which can include relevant post-secondary education, such as an associate’s degree. See 8 CFR 204.5(l)(2) (definition of skilled worker).

[^ 49] O*NET Online is sponsored by DOL’s Employment and Training Administration, and developed by the National Center for O*NET Development.

[^ 50] Officers must differentiate “grandfathering” for purposes of obtaining licensure and the requirements for obtaining EB-2 classification. States that permit a person to obtain licensure with less than an advanced degree specify the date by which the person would have had to obtain his or her baccalaureate degree to be considered “grandfathered.” In order to be eligible for EB-2 preference classification, even a grandfathered noncitizen would have to demonstrate that he or she obtained the baccalaureate degree and has at least 5 years of progressive post-baccalaureate experience in the field.

[^ 51] See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(2) (definition of advanced degree).

[^ 52] Evidence of a degree is the official academic record. See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(3)(i)(A). See 8 CFR 204.5(l)(3)(ii)(C).

[^ 53] See INA 203(b)(2).

[^ 54] See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(2) (definition of exceptional ability).

[^ 55] For example, Schedule A, Group II designation requires an employer to file the petition and does not allow for the submission of comparable evidence in place of the regulatory criteria.

[^ 56] See 20 CFR 656.26. See 20 CFR 656.15(e). See 20 CFR 656.15(e). For information on appeals to the USCIS Administrative Appeals Office, see Section I, Adjudication [6 USCIS-PM E.7(I)].

[^ 57] See 20 CFR 656.17. See 20 CFR 656.15(f). See DOL ETA's Foreign Labor Certification webpage.

[^ 58] See 20 CFR 656.17. See Chapter 6, Permanent Labor Certification [6 USCIS-PM E.6] for further discussion of the basic permanent labor certification process.

[^ 59] On December 27, 2004, DOL published a final rule entitled Labor Certification for the Permanent Employment of Aliens in the United States; Implementation of New System, which significantly restructured the permanent labor certification process. See 69 FR 77325 (Dec. 27, 2004). For information on Schedule A requirements before March 28, 2005, see prior 20 CFR 656.10 (PDF) and 20 CFR 656.22 (PDF).

[^ 60] See 20 CFR 656.10. See 20 CFR 656.15.

[^ 61] For information on filing fees, see the Form I-140 webpage.

[^ 62] If the petition was filed before January 1, 2010, then the prevailing wage determination would have been issued by the applicable State Workforce Agency (SWA).

[^ 63] For guidance on the appropriate posting location(s) for cases involving multiple worksites, see OFLC's Frequently Asked Questions and Answers webpage.

[^ 64] See 20 CFR 656.5 and 20 CFR 656.15.

[^ 65] If the beneficiary will be assigned to other third-party worksites, that may impact the required contents of the notice of posting, the location of that notice, prevailing wage determination, ETA Form

9089, and the petition.

[^ 66] See 20 CFR 656.3. See Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements [6 USCIS-PM E.2].

[^ 67] See 20 CFR 656.15(e) (the denial of a Schedule A case cannot be appealed through BALCA). DHS delegated the authority to adjudicate appeals to the AAO under the authority vested in the Secretary through the Homeland Security Act of 2002, Pub. L. 107-296 (PDF) (November 25, 2002). See Delegation Number 0150.1 (effective March 1, 2003). See 8 CFR 2.1. The AAO exercises appellate jurisdiction over matters described in 8 CFR 103.1(f)(3) (PDF) (in effect February 28, 2003), including decisions on petitions for an immigrant visa based on employment.

[^ 68] See 20 CFR 656.17. See Part F, Employment-Based Classifications [6 USCIS-PM F] for further discussion of that category.

[^ 69] See 20 CFR 656.15(f). See Section H, Filing Requirements [6 USCIS-PM E.7(H)].

Chapter 8 - Documentation and Evidence

A. Filing

To seek an employment-based immigrant classification on behalf of a beneficiary, the petitioner must properly file an Immigrant Petition for Alien Workers (Form I-140) with the appropriate fee with the appropriate USCIS location.^[1]

1. Priority Dates

The priority date is used in conjunction with the U.S. Department of State's (DOS) Visa Bulletin to determine when a visa is available and the beneficiary can apply for adjustment of status or for an immigrant visa abroad. If an immigrant visa is available for the petition's priority date, and the beneficiary is otherwise eligible for adjustment of status, the beneficiary may file an Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (Form I-485) concurrently with the petition.^[2]

Schedule A Permanent Labor Certifications and Petitions Not Supported by a Permanent Labor Certification

The priority date for a petition supported by a Schedule A designation, or for a petition approved for a classification that does not require a permanent labor certification, is the date the petition is filed with USCIS.^[3]

Individual Permanent Labor Certifications Filed with the U.S. Department of Labor

The priority date for a petition supported by an Application for Permanent Employment Certification (ETA Form 9089) (also referred to as the permanent labor certification application) filed with the U.S. Department of Labor (DOL) on or after March 28, 2005 is the earliest date the application for permanent labor certification is filed with DOL.^[4] In some cases, the date of filing in the certification section of the ETA Form 9089 may be blank. In such instances, USCIS may request a corroborative statement or other evidence from DOL that clarifies what the correct priority date should be.

Where the beneficiary's priority date is established by the filing of the permanent labor certification, once the beneficiary's petition has been approved, the beneficiary retains his or her priority date as established by the filing of the permanent labor certification for any future petitions, unless:

- USCIS revokes the approval of the previously approved petition because of fraud or willful misrepresentation;
- DOL revokes the approval of the permanent labor certification; or
- USCIS determines that the petition approval was based on a material error.^[5]

Retention of the earlier priority date includes cases where a change of petitioner has occurred; however, the new petitioner must obtain a new permanent labor certification if the classification requested requires a permanent labor certification.^[6]

2. Effect of Denial of Petition on Priority Date

If a Schedule A petition or a petition that does not require permanent labor certification is denied, no priority date is established. In addition, no priority date is established by an individual permanent labor certification if a petition based upon that certification was never filed and there is a change of petitioner (except in successor-in-interest cases).^[7]

3. Priority Date Based on Earlier Petition

If a beneficiary is the beneficiary of two (or more) approved petitions, the priority date of the earlier petition may be applied to all subsequently filed petitions.^[8]

For example, Company A files a permanent labor certification request on behalf of a beneficiary as a scientist with an advanced degree on January 10, 2020. DOL issues the certification on March 20, 2020. Company A later files, and USCIS approves, a relating immigrant visa petition under the employment-based 2nd preference (EB-2) category. On July 15, 2020, the beneficiary files a second petition on his or her own behalf as an extraordinary scientist under the employment-based 1st preference (EB-1) category, which USCIS approves. The beneficiary is entitled to use the January 10, 2020 priority date to apply for adjustment under either the EB-1 or the EB-2 classification.^[9]

B. Evidence

1. Job Offers

In most cases, the beneficiary of a petition must have a bona fide job offer from a petitioner in the United States. As evidence of the job offer, most petitioners who file EB-2 and employment-based 3rd preference (EB-3) petitions must first obtain an approved individual permanent labor certification from DOL.

In other cases, where the beneficiary is eligible for Schedule A blanket permanent labor certification, the petitioner submits unapproved permanent labor certification applications to USCIS with the petition. In relatively few cases, such as those involving beneficiaries seeking EB-1 classification,^[10] as well as those seeking EB-2 classification who also qualify for a national interest waiver,^[11] an individual permanent labor certification from DOL is not required.

2. Licensure

Neither the statute nor the regulations require that the beneficiary of a petition be able to engage in the occupation immediately. There are often licensing and other additional requirements that a person must meet before he or she can engage in the occupation. Unless needed to meet the requirements of a permanent labor certification, such considerations are not a factor in the adjudication of the petition.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 103.2(a)(7)(ii)(D). See the Direct Filing Addresses for Form I-140, Immigrant Petition for Alien Worker webpage.

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 245.1(g). See Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part A, Adjustment of Status Policies and Procedures, Chapter 3, Filing Instructions, Section C, Concurrent Filings [7 USCIS-PM A.3(C)].

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 204.5(d).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 204.5(d). The priority date for a petition supported by an Application for Alien Employment Certification (ETA Form 750) filed with DOL before March 28, 2005 is the earliest date the ETA Form 750 was accepted by any office in DOL's employment service system. There may be instances where the petitioner indicates that DOL erred by assigning a new priority date on an ETA Form 9089 filed on or after March 28, 2005, even though the employer previously requested to withdraw the pending ETA Form 750 and refiled an ETA Form 9089 for the identical job opportunity and would have been eligible to use the previously filed ETA Form 750 filing date. For more information on labor certifications, see Chapter 6, Permanent Labor Certification [6 USCIS-PM E.6].

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 204.5(e).

[^ 6] For information about successor-in-interest determinations, see Chapter 3, Successor-in-Interest in Permanent Labor Certification Cases [6 USCIS-PM E.3].

[^ 7] For information on petition denials and portability, see Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part E, Employment-Based Adjustment, Chapter 5, Job Portability after Adjustment Filing and Other AC21 Provisions [7 USCIS-PM E.5] and the Form I-485 Supplement J webpage.

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 204.5(e).

[^ 9] Petitions filed under the old third and sixth preferences were automatically converted to one of the new classifications when the provisions of the Immigration Act of 1990, Pub. L. 101-649 (PDF) (November 29, 1990), went into effect. If the application for labor certification was filed before October 1, 1991, the petition must have been filed by October 1, 1993, in order to preserve the date of the labor certification as the priority date. If the application for labor certification was filed before October 1, 1991, but not granted until after October 1, 1993, the petition must have been filed within 60 days after the date of certification to maintain the priority date. Otherwise, the date the petition was filed with USCIS (or before March 1, 2003, legacy Immigration and Naturalization Service) was the priority date.

[^ 10] See INA 203(b)(1)(A). For visa availability, see DOS's Visa Bulletin.

[^ 11] See INA 203(b)(2)(B).

Chapter 9 - Evaluation of Education Credentials

In cases involving foreign degrees, officers may favorably consider a credentials evaluation performed by an independent credentials evaluator who has provided a credible, logical, and well-documented case for such an equivalency determination that is based solely on the noncitizen's foreign degree(s).
[1]

In addition, officers may accept a comparable evaluation performed by a school official who has the authority to make such determinations and is acting in his or her official capacity with the educational institution.^[2]

Officers should consider the opinions rendered by an education credential evaluator in conjunction with a review of the beneficiary's relevant education credentials and other available credible resource material regarding the equivalency of the education credentials to college degrees obtained in the United States. Opinions rendered that are merely conclusory and do not provide a credible roadmap that clearly lays out the basis for the opinions are not persuasive.

Any educational equivalency evaluation performed by a credentials evaluator or school official is solely advisory in nature; the final determination continues to rest with the officer.^[3]

Footnotes

[^ 1] For information on the specific educational requirements for professional and advanced degree professionals, see Part F, Employment-Based Classifications, Chapter 5, Advanced Degree or Exceptional Ability [6 USCIS-PM F.5], Chapter 6, Physician [6 USCIS-PM F.6], and Chapter 7, Skilled Worker, Professional, or Other Worker [6 USCIS-PM F.7].

[^ 2] For the advanced degree and professional classifications, the beneficiary's educational credentials must be equivalent to a U.S. degree. See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(2) and 8 CFR 204.5(l)(2).

[^ 3] See Matter of Caron International (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 791 (Comm. 1988). See Matter of Sea, Inc. (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 817 (Comm. 1988). See Matter of Ho (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 582 (BIA 1988).

Chapter 10 - Decision and Post-Adjudication

A. Approval

If the petitioner properly filed the petition and the officer is satisfied that the petitioner has met the required eligibility standards, the officer approves the petition.

After a petition has been approved and an immigrant visa is available, a beneficiary may apply for an immigrant visa with U.S. Department of State (DOS) or apply with USCIS to adjust status to permanent residence if in the United States.^[1]

B. Denial

If the petitioner has not established eligibility, the officer denies the petition.

The officer should write the denial in clear and comprehensive language and cover all grounds for denial.^[2] The officer should refer in the denial to the controlling statute or regulations and to any relevant precedent or adopted decisions. The decision must include information about appeal rights and the opportunity to file a motion to reopen or reconsider. The denied petition should then be held locally until the time period for an appeal or motion has passed.

The denial decision may be appealed to the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) if falling within the AAO's jurisdiction.^[3] A petitioner may not appeal a denial decision that is based upon lack of permanent labor certification. A petitioner may appeal a case that is denied because the beneficiary does not qualify for the Schedule A designation or for the waiver of the job offer in the national interest, or because USCIS determined that a successor-in-interest does not exist.

C. Revocation

A petition's approval may be revoked, in the agency's discretion, "for good and sufficient cause."^[4] A petition may also be withdrawn upon a written request for withdrawal of the petition filed by the petitioner (who in some cases may also be the beneficiary).^[5]

DOS may also terminate the registration of a beneficiary with an approved petition if such beneficiary fails to apply for an immigrant visa within 1 year of notification of availability of a visa number. The same statutory provision provides for reinstatement of registration in certain cases.^[6]

According to the AAO's adopted decision in Matter of V-S-G- Inc. (PDF, 363.71 KB), beneficiaries who are otherwise eligible to and have properly requested to port under the American Competitiveness in the 21st Century Act (AC21) are affected parties.^[7] As a result of this decision, USCIS provides a Notice of Intent to Revoke (NOIR) or a Notice of Revocation (NOR) or both to a beneficiary who has an approved petition and an Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (Form I-485) that has been pending for 180 days or more, and has properly requested to port.

The porting request is proper when it has been favorably reviewed by USCIS before the issuance of a NOIR or NOR. Before January 17, 2017, a beneficiary requested to port by submitting a request in writing. Beginning January 17, 2017, a beneficiary must request to port by submitting Confirmation of Bona Fide Job Offer or Request for Job Portability Under INA Section 204(j) (Form I-485 Supplement J).^[8]

D. Fraudulent Marriage Prohibition

USCIS may not approve a petition, including an employment-based petition, filed on behalf of a beneficiary who has been determined to have attempted or conspired to enter into a marriage for the purpose of evading immigration laws.^[9]

Although it is not necessary that the beneficiary has been convicted of, or even prosecuted for the attempt or conspiracy, the evidence of the actual act, attempt, or conspiracy must be contained in the beneficiary's A-file. If a review of the beneficiary's A-file indicates that he or she has attempted or conspired to obtain an immigration benefit by virtue of a fraudulent marriage, USCIS sends the petitioner a Notice of Intent to Deny (NOID) or NOIR that outlines the basis for the determination. The marriage must be shown to have been a sham at its inception for this prohibition to apply.

To overcome this ground of ineligibility, the petitioner must convincingly demonstrate that the beneficiary entered the marriage for the purpose of starting a life with his or her spouse and not strictly for the purpose of obtaining an immigration benefit.

If the evidence provided in response to the NOID or NOIR does not overcome the fraudulent marriage determination, the officer should deny or revoke the approval of a petition filed on behalf of any beneficiary for whom there is substantial and probative evidence of such an attempt or a conspiracy, regardless of whether the beneficiary received a benefit through the attempt or conspiracy.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part E, Employment-Based Adjustment [7 USCIS-PM E].

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 103.3(a)(1)(ii). See DHS Delegation No. 0150.1 para. (2)(U) (Mar. 1, 2003), which delegated the Administrative Appeals Office's jurisdiction over the decisions listed in 8 CFR 103.1(f)(3)(iii)(B) (PDF) (as they appeared February 28, 2003).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 103.3(a)(2).

[^ 4] See INA 205.

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 205.1 and 8 CFR 205.2.

[^ 6] See INA 203(g).

[^ 7] See Pub. L. 106-313 (PDF) (October 17, 2000). See Matter of V-S-G- Inc. (PDF) (PDF, 363.71 KB), Adopted Decision 2017-06 (AAO Nov. 11, 2017).

[^ 8] For more information, see Volume 7, Adjustment of Status, Part E, Employment-Based Adjustment, Chapter 5, Job Portability after Adjustment Filing and Other AC21 Provisions [7 USCIS-PM E.5].

[^ 9] See INA 204(c). The fraudulent marriage prohibition that is articulated in INA 204(c) and 8 CFR 204.2(a)(1)(ii) does not distinguish between forms, but merely states "a petition for immigrant visa classification." See Matter of Christo's, Inc. (PDF), 26 I&N Dec. 537 (AAO 2015).

Part F - Employment-Based Classifications

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

The Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) and implementing regulations provide for several employment-based immigrant visa classifications. Noncitizen beneficiaries approved in these classifications are eligible to apply for lawful admission as a permanent resident or adjustment of status to permanent residence.

B. Background

In general, for an Immigrant Petition for Alien Workers (Form I-140), a petitioner must demonstrate to USCIS that the beneficiary is qualified for the immigrant classification sought.^[1] If the petition is based on an underlying approved permanent labor certification application, then the petition must be filed during the validity period of the permanent labor certification established by the U.S. Department of Labor (DOL).

The petitioner must demonstrate that the beneficiary is qualified for the position certified by DOL. However, as discussed in more detail later in this part, there are several immigrant classifications that do not require the petitioner to first obtain a permanent labor certification. In addition, in certain classifications, the beneficiary is able to self-petition for the classification sought.

General information relating to employment-based immigrant petitions is provided in Part E.^[2] This Part F provides a more detailed discussion of the specific immigrant classifications.

Visa Classifications

The following table lists the employment-based immigrant visa classifications, the corresponding codes of admission, and where to find additional guidance about the classifications.

Employment-Based Visa Classifications

Employment-Based Immigrant	Code of Admission	For More Information
Persons of Extraordinary Ability	E11	See Chapter 2, Extraordinary Ability [6 USCIS-PM F.2]
Outstanding Professor Outstanding Researcher	E12	See Chapter 3, Outstanding Professor or Researcher [6 USCIS-PM F.3]
Multinational Executive Multinational Manager	E13	See Chapter 4, Multinational Executive or Manager [6 USCIS-PM F.4]
Professional Holding Advanced Degree Person of Exceptional Ability	E21	See Chapter 5, Advanced Degree or Exceptional Ability [6 USCIS-PM F.5] and Chapter 6, Physician [6 USCIS-PM F.6]

Employment-Based Immigrant	Code of Admission	For More Information
Skilled Worker	E31	See Chapter 7, Skilled Worker, Professional, or Other Worker [6 USCIS-PM F.7]
Professional Holding Baccalaureate Degree	E32	See Chapter 7, Skilled Worker, Professional, or Other Worker [6 USCIS-PM F.7]
Other Worker	EW3	See Chapter 7, Skilled Worker, Professional, or Other Worker [6 USCIS-PM F.7]

C. Legal Authorities

- INA 203(b)(1), (2), (3) – Preference allocation for employment-based immigrants
- 8 CFR 204.5 – Petitions for employment-based immigrants
- 20 CFR 656 – Labor certification process for permanent employment of aliens in the United States

Footnotes

[^ 1] This Part generally uses the simplified terms petition, petitioner, and beneficiary. The term petition refers to the Immigrant Petition for Alien Workers (Form I-140). The term petitioner generally refers to the petitioning employer, though in some circumstances the petitioner may be a self-petitioning noncitizen. The term beneficiary refers to the noncitizen who is the beneficiary of the petition, who in some cases may also be a self-petitioner.

[^ 2] See Part E, Employment-Based Immigration [6 USCIS-PM E].

Chapter 2 - Extraordinary Ability

A. Eligibility

When seeking classification as a person of extraordinary ability, a petitioner files an Immigrant Petition for Alien Workers (Form I-140) on behalf of a noncitizen (who may be the petitioner) with evidence demonstrating that the beneficiary is eligible.^[1]

Eligibility for Extraordinary Ability Classification

The person has extraordinary ability in the sciences, arts, education, business, or athletics, which has been demonstrated by sustained national or international acclaim, and whose achievements have been recognized in the field through extensive documentation.

The person seeks to enter the United States to continue work in the area of extraordinary ability.

The person's entry into the United States will substantially benefit the United States in the future.

Self-Petitioners

A petition filed on behalf of a person with extraordinary ability does not need to be supported by a job offer; therefore, anyone can file the petition on behalf of the person, including the noncitizen who may file as a self-petitioner.^[2] The person must still demonstrate, however, that he or she intends to continue work in the area of his or her extraordinary ability and that his or her work will substantially benefit the United States in the future.^[3]

1. Sustained National or International Acclaim

When filing a petition for a person with extraordinary ability, the petitioner must submit evidence that the person has sustained national or international acclaim and that the person's achievements have been recognized in the field of expertise.^[4] In determining whether the beneficiary has enjoyed "sustained" national or international acclaim, the officer should consider that such acclaim must be maintained.^[5] However, the term sustained does not imply an age limit on the beneficiary. A beneficiary may be very young or early in his or her career and still be able to show sustained acclaim. There is also no definitive time frame on what constitutes sustained.

If a person was recognized for a particular achievement, the officer should determine whether the person continues to maintain a comparable level of acclaim in the field of expertise since the person was originally afforded that recognition. A person may, for example, have achieved national or international acclaim in the past but then failed to maintain a comparable level of acclaim thereafter.

2. Continuing to Work in the Area of Expertise

To qualify as a person with extraordinary ability, the beneficiary must intend to continue to work in the area of his or her expertise.^[6]

The officer may encounter instances where it is difficult to determine whether the person's intended employment falls sufficiently within the bounds of his or her area of extraordinary ability. Some of the most problematic cases are those in which the beneficiary's sustained national or international acclaim is based on his or her abilities as an athlete, but the beneficiary's intent is to come to the United States and be employed as an athletic coach or manager. Competitive athletics and coaching rely on different sets of skills and in general are not in the same area of expertise. However, many extraordinary athletes have gone on to be extraordinary coaches.

Therefore, in general, if a beneficiary has clearly achieved recent national or international acclaim as an athlete and has sustained that acclaim in the field of coaching or managing at a national level, officers can consider the totality of the evidence as establishing an overall pattern of sustained acclaim and extraordinary ability such that USCIS can conclude that coaching is within the beneficiary's area of expertise.

Where the beneficiary has had an extended period of time to establish his or her reputation as a coach beyond the years in which he or she had sustained national or international acclaim as an athlete, depending on the specific facts, officers may place heavier, or exclusive, weight on the evidence of the beneficiary's achievements as a coach or a manager.

3. Entry to Substantially Benefit the United States

To qualify as a person with extraordinary ability, the person's entry must substantially benefit the United States in the future.^[7] Although neither the statute nor the regulations specifically define the statutory phrase "substantially benefit," it has been interpreted broadly.^[8]

Whether the petitioner demonstrates that the person's employment meets this requirement requires a fact-dependent assessment of the case. There is no standard rule as to what will substantially benefit the United States. In some cases, a Request for Evidence (RFE) may be appropriate if an officer is not yet satisfied that the petitioner has met this requirement.

B. Evidence of Extraordinary Ability

The regulations describe various types of evidence that the petitioner must submit in support of a petition as documentation of the beneficiary's extraordinary ability.^[9] In general, the petitioner must submit evidence that:

- The person has sustained national or international acclaim; and
- The person's achievements have been recognized in the field of expertise.

This initial evidence must include either evidence of a one-time achievement (for example, a major internationally recognized award, such as the Nobel Prize) or at least three of the types of evidence listed in the regulations.^[10]

The evidence provided in support of the petition need not specifically use the words "extraordinary." Rather, the material should be such that it is readily apparent that the person's contributions to the field are qualifying. Also, although some of the regulatory language relating to evidence occasionally uses plurals, it is entirely possible that the presentation of a single piece of evidence in a specific evidentiary category may be sufficient.

On the other hand, the submission of voluminous documentation may not contain sufficient persuasive evidence to establish the beneficiary's eligibility. The evidence provided in support of the petition must ultimately establish that the beneficiary "is one of that small percentage who have risen to the very top of the field of endeavor."^[11]

1. Letters of Endorsement

Many petitions to classify a person with extraordinary ability contain letters of endorsement. Letters of endorsement, while not without weight, should not form the cornerstone of a successful claim for this classification. Rather, the statements made by the witnesses should be corroborated by documentary evidence in the record. The letters should explain in specific terms why the witnesses believe the beneficiary to be of the caliber of a person with extraordinary ability. Letters that merely reiterate USCIS' definitions relating to this classification or make general and expansive statements regarding the beneficiary and his or her accomplishments are generally not persuasive.

The relationship or affiliation between the beneficiary and the witness is also a factor the officer should consider when evaluating the significance of witnesses' statements. It is generally expected that one whose accomplishments have garnered sustained national or international acclaim would have received recognition for his or her accomplishments well beyond the circle of his or her personal and professional acquaintances.

In some cases, letters from others in the beneficiary's field may merely make general assertions about the beneficiary, and at most, indicate that the beneficiary is a competent, respected figure within the field of endeavor, but the record lacks sufficient, concrete evidence supporting such statements. These letters should be considered, but do not necessarily show the beneficiary's claimed extraordinary ability.

2. Two-Step Analysis of Evidence

Officers should use a two-step analysis to evaluate the evidence submitted with the petition to demonstrate eligibility for classification as a person with extraordinary ability.^[12]

Petition for Extraordinary Ability Classification: Overview of Two-Step Evidentiary Review

Step 1	Assess whether evidence meets regulatory criteria: Determine, by a preponderance of the evidence, which evidence submitted by the petitioner objectively meets the parameters of the regulatory description that applies to that type of evidence (referred to as "regulatory criteria").
Step 2	Final merits determination: Evaluate all the evidence together when considering the petition in its entirety for the final merits determination, in the context of the high level of expertise required for this immigrant classification.

Assess Whether Evidence Meets Any Regulatory Criteria

The first step of the evidentiary review is limited to determining whether the evidence submitted with the petition meets the regulatory criteria.^[13] The evidence must be comprised of either a one-time achievement (that is, a major, internationally recognized award) or at least three of the ten regulatory criteria.^[14] The officer should apply a preponderance of the evidence standard when making this determination.

For purposes of the first step of the analysis, officers should consider the quality and caliber of the evidence to determine whether a particular regulatory criterion has been met, to the extent the criterion has qualitative requirements.^[15] Officers should not yet make a determination regarding whether or not the person is one of that small percentage who have risen to the very top of the field or if the person has sustained national or international acclaim.^[16]

Appendix: Extraordinary Ability Petitions - First Step of Reviewing Evidence [6 USCIS-PM F.2, Appendices Tab] describes the limited determinations the officer should make in the first step of the analysis to determine whether the person has met the applicable evidentiary criteria, including any qualifying comparable evidence.^[17]

Notably, the evidence evaluated in this step is also reviewed in the next step where the officer must determine whether the person is one of that small percentage who has risen to the very top of the field of endeavor, and that he or she has sustained national or international acclaim.

However, objectively meeting the regulatory criteria in the first step alone does not establish that the person in fact meets the requirements for classification as a person with extraordinary ability.^[18]

For example:

- Participating in the judging of the work of others in the same or an allied field of specialization alone, regardless of the circumstances, should satisfy the regulatory criteria in the first step of the analysis. However, the second step requires the officer to evaluate the person's participation to determine whether it was indicative of the person being one of that small percentage who have risen to the very top of the field of endeavor and enjoying sustained national or international acclaim.
- Publishing scholarly articles in professional or major trade publications or other major media alone, regardless of the caliber, should satisfy the regulatory criteria in the first step of the analysis. However, the second step requires the officer to evaluate the person's publications to determine whether they were indicative of the person being one of that small percentage who have risen to the very top of the field of endeavor and enjoying sustained national or international acclaim.

The question of whether the person is one of that small percentage who have risen to the very top of the field of endeavor and enjoys sustained national or international acclaim should be addressed in the second step of the analysis (final merits determination). In the first step, the officer is only required to determine if the evidence objectively meets the regulatory criteria.

Final Merits Determination

Meeting the minimum requirement of providing required initial evidence does not, in itself, establish that the person in fact meets the requirements for extraordinary ability classification.^[19] As part of the final merits determination, the quality of the evidence should also be considered, such as whether the judging responsibilities were internal and whether the scholarly articles (if inherent to the occupation) are cited by others in the field.

In the second step of the analysis, the officer should evaluate the evidence together and consider the petition in its entirety to make a final merits determination of whether or not the petitioner has demonstrated that the person has sustained national or international acclaim and that his or her achievements have been recognized in the field of expertise, indicating that the person is one of that small percentage who has risen to the very top of the field of endeavor. The officer applies a preponderance of the evidence standard when making this determination.

An officer cannot predetermine the kind of evidence he or she thinks the person should be able to submit and deny the petition if that particular type of evidence (whether one of the prescribed types^[20] or comparable evidence^[21]) is absent. For example, an officer may think that if a person is extraordinary, there should be published articles about the person and his or her work. However, an officer cannot deny the petition because no published articles were submitted, so long as the petitioner has submitted evidence meeting the three qualifying criteria that demonstrates the person is in fact extraordinary. Approval or denial of a petition must be based on the type and quality of evidence submitted rather than assumptions about the failure to address different criteria.

While a person may be stronger in one particular evidentiary area than in others, the overall impression should be that he or she is extraordinary. If the officer determines that the petitioner has failed to demonstrate eligibility, the officer should not merely make general assertions regarding this failure. Rather, the officer must articulate the specific reasons as to why the officer concludes that the petitioner has not demonstrated by a preponderance of the evidence that the person has extraordinary ability.^[22] As with all adjudications, if an officer believes that the facts stated in the petition are not true, and can articulate why in the denial, then the officer denies the petition and explains the reasons in the written denial.^[23]

If requesting additional evidence is appropriate, officers should provide some explanation of the deficiencies in the evidence already submitted and, if possible, examples of persuasive evidence that the petitioner might provide to corroborate the statements made in the petition. If a petitioner has submitted evidence that he or she believes establishes the person's extraordinary ability, merely restating the evidentiary requirements or stating that the evidence submitted is insufficient does not clarify to the petitioner how to overcome the deficiencies.

3. Evaluating Petitions Filed on Behalf of O-1 Nonimmigrants

An officer might encounter a case where a petition is filed on behalf of a person who was previously classified as an O-1 nonimmigrant with extraordinary ability, or extraordinary achievement in the case of persons in the motion picture and television industry.^[24] Though the prior approval of an O-1 petition may be a relevant consideration in adjudicating an immigrant petition for a person with extraordinary ability, it is not determinative. Eligibility as an O-1 nonimmigrant does not automatically establish eligibility for immigrant extraordinary ability classification.

Each petition is separate and independent and must be adjudicated on its own merits, under the corresponding statutory and regulatory provisions. Moreover, the O-1 nonimmigrant classification has different definitions and standards for persons in the arts and the motion picture and television industry when compared to the definition and standard set forth for the immigrant with extraordinary ability.

For example, a person in the arts may have extraordinary ability under the O-1 category because he or she has "distinction," which is the definition for a nonimmigrant with extraordinary ability in the arts; but does not meet the definition for "extraordinary ability" according to the immigrant criteria, which is that he or she is among the small percentage at the very top of the field.

Notwithstanding the fact that each petition must be adjudicated on its own merits, some courts have asked USCIS to provide an explanation as to why, if the person had previously been classified in a roughly analogous nonimmigrant category, USCIS has determined that the person is not eligible for classification in the employment-based immigrant visa classification in question.

For this reason, where possible, officers issuing denials in such cases should provide a brief discussion as to why, notwithstanding the previous O-1 nonimmigrant visa petition approval, the petitioner has failed to meet its burden to establish the beneficiary's eligibility for approval of the immigrant petition for classification as a person with extraordinary ability.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 203(b)(1)(A). See 8 CFR 204.5(h).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 204.5(h)(5). See 8 CFR 204.5(h)(1) (providing that “[a]n alien, or any person on behalf of the alien,” may file the petition).

[^ 3] See INA 203(b)(1)(A)(ii)-(iii).

[^ 4] See INA 203(b)(1)(A)(i). See 8 CFR 204.5(h)(3).

[^ 5] According to Black's Law Dictionary (11th ed. 2019), the definition of sustain is "to support or maintain, especially over a long period of time . . . To persist in making (an effort) over a long period of time."

[^ 6] See INA 203(b)(1)(A)(ii). See 8 CFR 204.5(h)(5).

[^ 7] See INA 203(b)(1)(A)(iii).

[^ 8] See Matter of Price (PDF), 20 I&N Dec. 953 (Assoc. Comm. 1994) (golfer of beneficiary's caliber will substantially benefit prospectively the United States given the popularity of the sport).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 204.5(h)(3)-(4).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 204.5(h)(3).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 204.5(h)(2).

[^ 12] See Kazarian v. USCIS (PDF), 596 F.3d 1115 (9th Cir. 2010).

[^ 13] See Kazarian v. USCIS (PDF), 596 F.3d 1115 (9th Cir. 2010).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 204.5(h)(3).

[^ 15] For example, in evaluating an award submitted under 8 CFR 204.5(h)(3)(i), it is necessary to consider the level of recognition the award holds to determine whether it is “nationally or internationally recognized,” consistent with the requirements of the criterion. However, evidence that the beneficiary's work was displayed at an artistic exhibition alone, regardless of caliber or significance, would satisfy the requirements of 8 CFR 204.5(h)(3)(vii).

[^ 16] See Kazarian v. USCIS (PDF), 596 F.3d 1115, 1122 (9th Cir. 2010).

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 204.5(h)(3).

[^ 18] See INA 203(b)(1)(A).

[^ 19] As described in INA 203(b)(1)(A).

[^ 20] See 8 CFR 204.5(h)(3).

[^ 21] See 8 CFR 204.5(h)(4).

[^ 22] As described in INA 203(b)(1)(A).

[^ 23] See INA 204(b).

[^ 24] For more information on this classification, see Volume 2, Nonimmigrants, Part M, Nonimmigrants of Extraordinary Ability or Achievement (O) [2 USCIS-PM M].

Chapter 3 - Outstanding Professor or Researcher

A. Eligibility

A U.S. employer, including a university institution of higher learning or private employer, may petition for a professor or researcher who is internationally recognized as outstanding in a specific academic area to work in a tenured or tenure-track position or a comparable position to conduct research.^[1]

B. Evidence

The regulation describes the evidence that the petitioner must submit in support of an Immigrant Petition for Alien Workers (Form I-140) for an outstanding professor or researcher.^[2] The petitioner must submit evidence to demonstrate that the beneficiary professor or researcher (beneficiary) is recognized internationally as outstanding in the academic field specified in the petition. Academic field means "a body of specialized knowledge offered for study at an accredited U.S. university or institution of higher education."^[3]

By regulatory definition, a body of specialized knowledge is larger than a very small area of specialization in which only a single course is taught or that is the subject of a very specialized dissertation. As such, it would be acceptable to find the beneficiary is an outstanding professor or researcher in particle physics rather than physics in general, as long as the petitioner has demonstrated that the claimed field is "a body of specialized knowledge offered for study at an accredited United States university or institution of higher education."^[4]

In addition, the petitioner must submit evidence of an offer from a qualifying prospective employer of tenured or tenure-track employment (for professors) or permanent employment (which can also include tenured or tenure track positions) in the case of research positions.^[5] Finally, the petitioner must provide evidence that the beneficiary has had at least 3 years of experience in teaching or research in the academic field in which the beneficiary will be engaged.^[6]

Officers should use a two-step analysis to evaluate the evidence submitted with the petition to demonstrate eligibility for classification as an outstanding professor or researcher.^[7]

Petition to Classify an Outstanding Professor or Researcher: Overview of Two-Step Evidentiary Review

Step 1	Assess whether evidence meets regulatory criteria: Determine, by a preponderance of the evidence, which evidence submitted by the petitioner objectively meets the parameters of the regulatory description that applies to that type of evidence (referred to as "regulatory criteria").
Step 2	Final merits determination: Evaluate all the evidence together when considering the petition in its entirety for the final merits determination, in the context of the high level of expertise required for this immigrant classification.

Officers should apply a preponderance of the evidence standard when making these determinations.

1. Assess Whether Evidence Meets Any Regulatory Criteria

The first step of the evidentiary review is limited to determining whether the evidence submitted with the petition is comprised of at least two of the six regulatory criteria.^[8]

For purposes of the first step of the analysis, officers should consider the quality and caliber of the evidence to determine whether a particular regulatory criterion has been met, to the extent the criterion has qualitative requirements.^[9] Officers should not yet make a determination regarding whether or not the beneficiary is recognized internationally as outstanding in the academic field.

Appendix: Outstanding Professor or Researcher Petitions - First Step of Reviewing Evidence [6 USCIS-PM F.3, Appendices Tab] provides details on the limited determinations that officers should make when first evaluating the evidence, including comparable evidence.

Objectively meeting the regulatory criteria in step one alone does not establish that the beneficiary in fact meets the requirements for classification as an outstanding professor or researcher.

For example:

- Participating in the judging of the work of others in the same or an allied academic field alone, regardless of the circumstances, should satisfy the regulatory criteria in step one. However, for the analysis in step two, the beneficiary's participation should be evaluated to determine whether it was indicative of the beneficiary being recognized internationally as outstanding in a specific academic area.
- Authorship of scholarly books or articles (in scholarly journals with international circulation) in the academic field alone, regardless of the caliber, should satisfy the regulatory criteria in step one. However, for the analysis in step two, the beneficiary's authorship of books or articles should be evaluated to determine whether they were indicative of the beneficiary being recognized internationally as outstanding in a specific academic area.

The issue of whether the beneficiary is recognized internationally as outstanding in a specific academic area should be addressed in the second step of the analysis (final merits determination), not in the first step where the officer is only required to determine if the evidence objectively meets the regulatory criteria.

2. Final Merits Determination

Meeting the minimum requirement by providing at least two types of initial evidence does not, in itself, establish that the beneficiary in fact meets the requirements for classification as an outstanding professor or researcher.^[10] Officers must also consider the quality of the evidence. In the second step of the analysis in each case, officers should evaluate the evidence together when considering the petition in its entirety to make a final merits determination of whether or not the petitioner, by a preponderance of the evidence, has demonstrated that the beneficiary is recognized internationally as outstanding in a specific academic area.^[11]

When requesting additional evidence or denying a petition, if the officer determines that the petitioner has failed to demonstrate eligibility, the officer should not merely make general assertions regarding this failure. Rather, the officer must articulate the specific reasons as to why the officer concludes that the petitioner, by a preponderance of the evidence, has not demonstrated that the beneficiary is an outstanding professor or researcher.^[12] As with all adjudications, if an officer believes that the facts stated in the petition are not true, and can articulate why in the denial, then the officer denies the petition and explains the reasons in the written denial.^[13]

C. Qualifying Status of Employer

Although a permanent labor certification is not required for the outstanding professor or researcher classification, the petitioner must provide an offer of employment as initial evidence in support of the petition.^[14] The offer of employment must be in the form of a letter from the prospective U.S.

employer to the beneficiary and the offer must state that the employer is offering the beneficiary employment in a tenured or tenure-track teaching position or a permanent research position in the beneficiary's academic field.^[15] In addition, the petitioner must demonstrate that it has the ability to pay the beneficiary's salary.^[16]

The beneficiary of a petition for outstanding professor or researcher must be seeking to work for a university; an institution of higher education; or a department, division, or institute of a private employer if the department, division, or institute employs at least three persons full time in research activities and has achieved documented accomplishments in an academic field.^[17]

In general, positions with government agencies at the federal, state, or local level do not fit within the statutory framework unless the government agency is shown to be a U.S. university or an institution of higher learning.^[18] Therefore, USCIS may only approve a petition for outstanding professor or researcher in instances where the offer of permanent employment is from a government agency if that agency can establish that it is a U.S. university or an institution of higher learning. Government agencies do not qualify as private employers.

Government agencies that do not fit the statutory framework may have other available immigration avenues for offers of permanent employment to professors or researchers. For example, assuming all of the eligibility requirements for that visa preference category have been met, a government agency may file a petition for the person under the extraordinary ability classification.^[19]

D. Offer of Employment

1. Research Positions

The petitioner must submit evidence to establish that the job offer is for a permanent research position.^[20] Officers should not deny a petition where the employer is seeking an outstanding researcher solely because the actual employment contract or offer of employment does not contain a "good cause for termination" clause. The petitioning employer, however, must still establish that the offer of employment is intended to be of an indefinite or unlimited duration and that the nature of the position is such that the employee will ordinarily have an expectation of continued employment.

For example, many research positions are funded by grant money received on a yearly basis. Researchers, therefore, are sometimes employed under employment contracts that are valid in 1-year increments. If the petitioning employer demonstrates, however, the intent to continue to seek funding and a reasonable expectation that funding will continue (such as demonstrated prior renewals for extended long-term research projects), such employment can be considered permanent within the meaning of the regulation.^[21] Officers should also consider the circumstances surrounding the job offer as well as the benefits attached to the position. A position that appears to be limited to a specific term, such as in the example above, can meet the regulatory test if the position normally continues beyond the term (that is, if the funding grants are normally renewed).

2. Tenure or Tenure-Track Positions

The determination as to whether a position qualifies as a tenured or a tenure-track position is not linked to the regulatory requirement that the position be permanent.^[22] The definition of permanent applies only to research positions. Officers do not need to evaluate whether the employment contract for a tenured or tenure-track position has a “good cause for termination” clause and should not deny a petition seeking an outstanding professor for a tenured or tenure-track position on that basis alone.

However, officers should evaluate whether the overall nature of the position is tenured or tenure-track. USCIS does not consider positions that are temporary, adjunct, limited duration fellowships, or similar positions where the employee has no reasonable expectation of long-term employment with the university, to be tenured or tenure-track positions.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 203(b)(1)(B). See 8 CFR 204.5(i).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 204.5(i)(3).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 204.5(i)(2).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 204.5(i)(2) (definition of academic field).

[^ 5] See 8 CFR 204.5(i)(2), defining “permanent, in reference to a research position” as “either tenured, tenure-track, or for a term of indefinite or unlimited duration, and in which the employee will ordinarily have an expectation of continued employment unless there is good cause for termination.”

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 204.5(i)(3)(iii) and 8 CFR 204.5(i)(3)(iv). See 8 CFR 204.5(i)(2) for definitions for permanent and academic field.

[^ 7] See Matter of Chawathe (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 369, 376 (AAO 2010) (“[T]ruth is to be determined not by the quantity of evidence alone but by its quality. Therefore, in adjudicating the application pursuant to the preponderance of the evidence standard, the director must examine each piece of evidence for relevance, probative value, and credibility, both individually and within the context of the totality of the evidence, to determine whether the fact to be proven is probably true”). See Kazarian v. USCIS (PDF), 596 F.3d 1115, 1122 (9th Cir. 2010). USCIS has interpreted Kazarian as applicable to outstanding professor and researcher petitions. See Evaluation of Evidence Submitted with Certain Form I-140 Petitions; Revisions the Adjudicator’s Field Manual (AFM) Chapter 22.2, AFM Update AD11-14, PM-602-0005.1, issued December 22, 2010.

[^ 8] See 8 CFR 204.5(i)(3)(i). The regulation at 8 CFR 204.5(i)(3)(ii) allows a petitioner to submit comparable evidence to establish eligibility if the standards in 8 CFR 204.5(i)(3)(i) do not readily apply.

[^ 9] For example, in evaluating an award submitted under 8 CFR 204.5(h)(3)(i), it is necessary to consider the level of recognition the award holds to determine whether it is “nationally or internationally recognized,” consistent with the requirements of the criterion. However, evidence that the beneficiary’s work was displayed at an artistic exhibition alone, regardless of caliber or significance, would satisfy the requirements of 8 CFR 204.5(h)(3)(vii).

[^ 10] As described in INA 203(b)(1)(B).

[^ 11] See Matter of Chawathe (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 369, 376 (AAO 2010) (“[T]ruth is to be determined not by the quantity of evidence alone but by its quality. Therefore, in adjudicating the application pursuant to the preponderance of the evidence standard, the director must examine each piece of evidence for relevance, probative value, and credibility, both individually and within the context of the totality of the evidence, to determine whether the fact to be proven is probably true”). See Kazarian v. USCIS (PDF), 596 F.3d 1115, 1122 (9th Cir. 2010). USCIS has interpreted Kazarian as applicable to outstanding professor and researcher petitions. See Evaluation of Evidence Submitted with Certain Form I-140 Petitions; Revisions the Adjudicator’s Field Manual (AFM) Chapter 22.2, AFM Update AD11-14, PM-602-0005.1, issued December 22, 2010.

[^ 12] As described in INA 203(b)(1)(B).

[^ 13] See INA 204(b).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 204.5(i)(3)(iv).

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 204.5(i)(3)(iv). See 8 CFR 204.5(i)(2) (defining “permanent”).

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 204.5(g)(2).

[^ 17] See INA 203(b)(1)(B). See 8 CFR 204.5(i)(3)(iii) (which mirrors the language in the Immigration and Nationality Act).

[^ 18] See INA 203(b)(1)(B)(iii).

[^ 19] See INA 203(b)(1)(A). See Chapter 2, Extraordinary Ability [6 USCIS-PM F.2].

[^ 20] See 8 CFR 204.5(i)(2).

[^ 21] See 8 CFR 204.5(i)(2).

[^ 22] See 8 CFR 204.5(i)(2).

Chapter 4 - Multinational Executive or Manager

A. Eligibility

Since 1990, the multinational executive or manager visa classification, which was formerly designated under the U.S. Department of Labor's regulations as Schedule A Group IV, is now a separate visa classification.^[1] A petitioning U.S. employer may file an Immigrant Petition for Alien Workers (Form I-140) on behalf of such an executive or manager. The petitioner must demonstrate that the beneficiary has a permanent job offer in a primarily managerial or executive position with a qualifying U.S. employer. A permanent labor certification is not required for this classification.^[2] The petitioner must demonstrate that the beneficiary was employed abroad by a qualifying organization for 1 year out of the previous 3 years.^[3]

The petitioning U.S. employer must have been doing business in the United States for at least 1 year before filing a petition for its managers and executives (a similar provision was in Schedule A Group IV).^[4] Noncitizens seeking to enter the United States to open a new office are not eligible for the multinational executive or manager immigrant classification.^[5] The executive or manager must be coming to an existing business in the United States.^[6] This requirement was based in part on the pre-existing Schedule A, Group IV requirement.

The requirement was also based on the fact that, unlike in the case of a new office petition for a nonimmigrant intracompany transferee (L-1), which may only be extended upon a showing that the U.S. entity has been doing business for the previous year,^[7] the multinational executive or manager immigrant visa classification is permanent in nature. Further, unlike the immigrant investor fifth preference visa, for example, there is no first preference "conditional resident" status that requires a review of the business after the beneficiary becomes a permanent resident in order for the beneficiary to continue in that status.

A petitioning U.S. employer must demonstrate that the beneficiary has been employed for at least 1 year by a related organization abroad to work in a capacity that is managerial or executive.^[8] Managerial capacity includes personnel and function managers while executive capacity focuses on a person's position within an organization.

The petitioning U.S. employer must demonstrate that it and the related organization abroad:

- Maintain a qualifying relationship; and
- Are both actively engaged in doing business.

The petitioning U.S. employer must also show that it has been actively engaged in doing business for at least 1 year.^[9] In addition, the petitioner must demonstrate that it has the ability to pay the beneficiary's salary.^[10]

B. Petitioner Requirements

When an employer wishes to transfer a noncitizen employee working abroad to a U.S. company location using the multinational executive or manager visa classification, a qualifying relationship must exist between the foreign employer and the petitioning U.S. employer. A qualifying relationship exists when the U.S. employer is an affiliate, parent, or subsidiary of the foreign firm, corporation, or other legal entity.^[11]

To establish a qualifying relationship under the statute and the regulations, the petitioner must show that the beneficiary's foreign employer and the proposed U.S. employer are the same employer (for example, a U.S. entity with a foreign office) or related as a parent and subsidiary or as affiliates. The officer must examine the factors of ownership and control when determining whether a qualifying relationship exists between the United States and foreign entities for purposes of this visa classification.^[12]

Either the foreign or U.S. entity must own and control the other entity or both must be subsidiaries owned and controlled by the same parent entity or person.^[13] In the context of this visa classification, ownership refers to the direct or indirect legal right of possession of the assets of an entity with full power and authority to control. Control means the direct or indirect legal right and authority to direct the establishment, management, and operations of an entity.^[14]

In situations where the petitioner has submitted documentation of a qualifying relationship based on control through possession of proxy votes, the petitioner must show that the proxy votes are irrevocable from the time of filing through the time of adjudication. Further, the petitioner must provide evidence demonstrating that the qualifying relationship will continue to exist until the beneficiary becomes a lawful permanent resident.

1. Subsidiary and Parent

The term subsidiary means a firm, corporation, or other legal entity of which a parent owns, directly or indirectly:

- More than half of the entity and controls the entity;
- Half of the entity and controls the entity;
- 50 percent of a 50-50 joint venture and has equal control and veto power over the entity; or
- Less than half of the entity, but in fact controls the entity.^[15]

While the term parent is not directly defined by the regulations, it is understood to mean the owner of a subsidiary.

2. Affiliate

There are three types of qualifying affiliate relationships:

- One of two subsidiaries, both of which are owned and controlled by the same parent entity or person;
- One of two legal entities owned and controlled by the same group of people, each owning and controlling approximately the same share or proportion of each entity; and
- A partnership that is organized outside the United States to provide accounting services, along with managerial or consulting services, and markets those services under an internationally recognized name, as part of an agreement with a worldwide coordinating organization (of which the U.S. entity is a member) that is owned and controlled by the member accounting firms, partnership, or similar entity organized outside the United States.^[16]

3. Limits on Petitions from Branch Offices and Nonimmigrants

Domestic offices of a foreign employer operated as a branch (that is, not as a separate, domestic legal entity) and nonimmigrants may not offer permanent employment to a beneficiary for the purpose of obtaining an immigrant visa for a multinational executive or manager.^[17] The petitioner must be a U.S. citizen or a U.S. corporation, partnership, or other legal entity in order to file an immigrant visa petition for a multinational executive or manager. Therefore, while a U.S. corporation with a branch abroad may file a petition, a foreign corporation operating an office or division in the United States that is not a separate, domestic legal entity may not.^[18]

4. Sole-Proprietorship

A sole proprietorship is a business in which an individual owns all the assets, owes all the liabilities, and operates the business in his or her personal capacity.^[19] Unlike a corporation, a sole proprietorship does not exist as an entity apart from the individual owner.^[20] A sole-proprietorship may not file a petition on behalf of the noncitizen owner, as such would be considered an impermissible self-petition.

There is a difference between a self-incorporated petitioner and a sole proprietorship. Although a self-incorporated petitioner may only have one owner or employee, a corporation is a separate and distinct legal entity from its owners or stockholders and therefore may petition for that owner or employee.^[21]

5. Doing Business

Doing business means the regular, systematic, and continuous provision of goods or services or both by a qualifying organization. Doing business does not include the mere presence of an agent or office of the qualifying organization in the United States and abroad.^[22]

Foreign Employer Must Continue to do Business

Both the U.S. employer and at least one qualifying organization abroad must continue to do business up until the time of visa issuance or adjustment of status.^[23]

If the beneficiary's foreign employer's operations abroad cease entirely (for example, the company, together with all other otherwise qualifying related organizations, goes out of business or relocates completely to the United States) before the time of visa issuance or adjustment of status, the beneficiary is no longer be eligible for classification as a multinational executive or manager.

U.S. Employer Must Have Been Doing Business for At Least 1 Year

The U.S. employer must have been actively engaged in doing business for at least 1 year at the time of filing of the petition.^[24] Therefore, a U.S. organization may have a legal existence in the United States for more than 1 year, but if it has not engaged in the continuous provision of goods and services for at least 1 year, the organization is ineligible to file petitions for multinational executives or managers.

C. Beneficiary Requirements

1. Managerial Capacity

The statutory definition of "managerial capacity" includes both "personnel managers" and "function managers."^[25]

As it relates to personnel managers, managerial capacity means an assignment within an organization in which the beneficiary primarily:

- Manages the organization, department, subdivision, function, or component of the organization;
- Supervises and controls the work of other supervisory, professional, or managerial employees;
- Possesses authority to hire and fire or recommend those and other personnel actions (such as promotion and leave authorization) for employees directly supervised; and
- Exercises discretion over the day-to-day operations of the activity or function for which the employee has authority.

Contrary to the common understanding of the word "manager" as any person who supervises others, the statute has a much more limited definition of the term manager. A first-line supervisor is not considered to be acting in a managerial capacity merely by virtue of the supervisor's supervisory duties unless the employees supervised are professional.^[26]

Further, if staffing levels are used as a factor in determining whether the beneficiary is functioning in a managerial or executive capacity, an officer should not merely rely on the number of employees the beneficiary is supervising, but should look at the beneficiary's role and function within the organization.^[27]

2. Function Managers

The term function manager, sometimes referred to as functional manager, applies generally when a beneficiary does not supervise or control the work of a subordinate staff but instead is primarily responsible for managing an "essential function" within the organization.^[28]

In this context, the definition of the term manager includes function managers.^[29] A manager may qualify for multinational manager or executive classification as a function manager if the petitioner can show, among other things, that the beneficiary has and will be primarily managing or directing the management of a function of an organization, even if the beneficiary did not or will not directly supervise any employees.

As it relates to function managers, managerial capacity means an assignment within an organization in which the beneficiary primarily:^[30]

- Manages the organization or a department, subdivision, function, or component of the organization;
- Manages an essential function within the organization or a department or subdivision of the organization;
- Functions at a senior level within the organizational hierarchy or with respect to the function managed; and
- Exercises discretion over the day-to-day operations of the activity or function for which the employee has authority.

The petitioner must clearly demonstrate, however, that the essential function being managed is not also being directly performed by the beneficiary. For example, in Matter of G-, the petitioner submitted evidence, including organizational and workflow charts, that indicated that the beneficiary led a financial planning and analysis (FP&A) team that oversaw the monthly revenue forecast process and collected financial data from delivery leads and global sales teams.^[31]

The record reflected that the beneficiary would continue to be supported by six direct and three indirect reports. These personnel performed the routine duties associated with the FP&A function, enabling the beneficiary to primarily develop policies and goals and oversee the execution of long-term strategies. The petitioner demonstrated that this staff would continue to relieve the beneficiary from performing day-to-day administrative and reporting tasks, allowing him to primarily manage the FP&A function rather than perform it himself. That he supervised his direct reports did not detract from finding that he primarily manages the function.^[32] In contrast, an employee who primarily performs the tasks necessary to produce a product or to provide services is not considered to be employed in a managerial or executive capacity.^[33]

In applying the statute and applicable regulations to determine whether the beneficiary meets the definition of a function manager, the petitioner must show that the beneficiary will primarily manage that essential function by clearly describing the beneficiary's duties and indicating the proportion of time dedicated to each duty.^[34] While he or she may perform some operational or administrative tasks, the beneficiary must primarily manage the essential function.^[35]

In addition, the petitioner must establish that the beneficiary will occupy a senior position in the petitioner's organizational hierarchy or within the function managed and that the beneficiary will have discretionary authority over the day-to-day operations of that function.

USCIS considers all factors relevant to these criteria, including the nature and scope of the petitioner's business; the organizational structure and staffing levels; the value of the budgets, products, or services that a beneficiary will manage; and any other factors, such as operational and administrative work performed by staff within the organization, that contribute to understanding the beneficiary's actual duties and role in the business.^[36]

An important, although not necessarily determinative, factor in determining whether a beneficiary qualifies as a function manager is the beneficiary's authority to commit the company to a course of action or expenditure of funds. Function managers perform at a senior level in the organization and may or may not have direct supervision of other employees.

3. Executive Capacity

The statutory definition of the term "executive capacity"^[37] focuses on a person's position within an organization. To adjudicate a petition for a multinational executive or manager properly, therefore, the officer should have a basic understanding not only of the position the beneficiary intends to fill, but also of the nature and structure of the organization itself.

The term "executive capacity" means an assignment within an organization in which the employee primarily:

- Directs the management of the organization or a major component or function of the organization;

- Establishes the goals and policies of the organization, component, or function;
- Exercises wide latitude in discretionary decision making; and
- Receives only general supervision or direction from higher level executives, the board of directors, or stockholders of the organization.^[38]

USCIS does not consider a beneficiary an executive under the statute simply because he or she has an executive title or because some portion of his or her time is spent directing the enterprise as the owner or sole managerial employee; the focus is on the primary duties of the beneficiary. In this regard, there must be sufficient staff (for example, contract employees or others) to perform the day-to-day operations of the petitioning organization in order to enable the beneficiary to be primarily employed in the executive function.

4. Evaluating Managerial or Executive Status

The petitioner must establish that the U.S. entity itself is in fact conducting business at a level that would require the services of a person primarily engaged in executive (or managerial) functions. In making this determination, an officer should consider, as appropriate, the nature of the business, including its size, its organizational structure, and the product or service it provides.

When examining the executive or managerial capacity of the beneficiary, an officer should look first to the petitioner's description of the job duties.^[39] Specifics are an important indication of whether a beneficiary's duties are primarily executive or managerial in nature. Merely repeating or paraphrasing the language of the statute or regulations does not satisfy the petitioner's burden of proof.

If the beneficiary performs non-managerial administrative or operational duties, the description of the beneficiary's job duties must demonstrate what proportion of the beneficiary's duties is managerial in nature, and what proportion is non-managerial. A beneficiary who primarily performs non-managerial or non-executive duties does not qualify as a manager or executive under the statutory definitions.

Additionally, officers should review the totality of the evidence, including descriptions of a beneficiary's duties and his or her subordinate employees, the nature of the petitioner's business, the employment and remuneration of other employees, and any other facts contributing to a complete understanding of a beneficiary's actual role in the business. The evidence must demonstrate that the duties of the beneficiary and his or her subordinates correspond to their placement in the organization's structural hierarchy. Artificial tiers of subordinate employees and inflated job titles do not support a finding that the position is managerial.

For smaller organizations, the officer may request a description of the overall management and executive personnel structure supported by position descriptions for the managerial and executive staff members of the organization. For organizations that are substantial in size, the officer may request comparable descriptions for the organizational unit where the beneficiary is to be employed.

As with all adjudications, if an officer believes that the facts stated in the petition are not true, and can articulate why in the denial, then the officer denies the petition and explains the reasons in the written denial.^[40]

If staffing levels are used to determine whether a beneficiary's job capacity is primarily executive or managerial in nature, an officer considers the reasonable needs of the business enterprise in light of its overall purpose and stage of development.^[41] It is the petitioner's burden to demonstrate the company's reasonable needs with respect to staff or the organization's structure.^[42] However, in evaluating reasonable needs, an officer should not hold a petitioner to his or her undefined and unsupported view of common business practice or standard business logic.

As indicated above, a single-person office is not precluded from having that sole employee be classified as a multinational manager or executive, provided the requisite corporate affiliation exists and all other requirements are met. However, it may be very difficult for a petitioner to establish that the sole employee will be engaged primarily in a managerial or executive function.

While a sole employee will have some managerial or executive duties, simply to keep the business running, he or she will normally be spending the majority of his or her work time doing the day-to-day work of the business, that is, performing the type of duties that persons who would normally be employed in the business in question would perform.

However, an officer considers the totality of the record, including the nature and scope of the petitioner's business and organizational structure, staffing levels, the beneficiary's position and scope of authority, the work performed by other employees and whether it relieves the beneficiary from performing operational and administrative duties, and the reasonable needs of the organization as a whole.^[43]

D. Evaluating Petitions Filed on Behalf of L-1A Nonimmigrants

In some cases, an officer may adjudicate an immigrant petition for a multinational executive or manager that was filed on behalf of a beneficiary who was previously granted L-1A nonimmigrant classification as a nonimmigrant manager or executive. Though the prior approval of an L-1A nonimmigrant petition on behalf of the beneficiary may be a relevant consideration in adjudicating the immigrant petition, the fact that the beneficiary was previously approved for L-1A classification is not binding if the facts do not support approval of the immigrant petition.

Eligibility as an L-1A nonimmigrant does not automatically establish eligibility under the criteria for an immigrant visa classification for a multinational executive or manager. Each petition is separate and independent and must be adjudicated on its own merits, under the corresponding statutory and regulatory provisions.

Notwithstanding the fact that each petition must be adjudicated on its own merits, some courts have asked USCIS to provide an explanation as to why, if the beneficiary had previously been classified in a roughly analogous nonimmigrant category, USCIS has determined that the beneficiary is not eligible for classification in the employment-based immigrant visa classification in question. For this reason, where possible, officers issuing denials in these cases should provide a brief discussion as to why, notwithstanding the previous L-1A nonimmigrant visa petition approval, the petitioner has failed to meet its burden to establish eligibility for approval of the immigrant petition for classification as a multinational executive or manager.

Unlike in the case of the L-1B nonimmigrant classification, there is no provision of law that allows a person who was or is employed in a purely specialized knowledge capacity abroad to be classified as a “specialized knowledge” multinational executive or manager immigrant classification.

However, it should be noted that some beneficiaries who are classified as L-1B nonimmigrants might qualify for the multinational executive or manager immigrant classification because their specialized knowledge and employment abroad also would have qualified as managerial or executive employment and because the petitioners intend to employ them in managerial or executive positions on a permanent basis.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 203(b)(1)(C).

[^ 2] See INA 212(a)(5)(D). See 8 CFR 204.5(j)(5).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 204.5(j)(3)(i)(A). See Matter of S-P-, Inc. (PDF, 116.06 KB), Adopted Decision 2018-01 (AAO Mar. 19, 2018). This decision clarifies that a beneficiary who worked abroad for a qualifying multinational organization for at least 1 year, but left the organization for a period of more than 2 years after being admitted to the United States as a nonimmigrant, does not satisfy the 1 year of the previous 3 years foreign employment requirement for immigrant classification as a multinational manager or executive. To cure the interruption in employment, such a beneficiary would need an additional year of qualifying employment abroad before he or she could once again qualify. Unlike the L-1 nonimmigrant classification, the year of qualifying employment does not have to be “continuous.” Compare INA 101(a)(15)(L) (requiring that the beneficiary have been employed “continuously” abroad for the 1-year period) with INA 203(b)(1)(C) (requiring that the beneficiary be employed abroad for “at least 1 year.”)

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 204.5(j)(3)(i)(D).

[^ 5] The ability to enter the United States to open a new office is limited to the L-1 nonimmigrant classification. See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(3)(v).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 204.5(j)(3)(D).

[^ 7] See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(14)(ii).

[^ 8] See INA 203(b)(1)(C). See 8 CFR 204.5(j).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 204.5(j)(3).

[^ 10] See 8 CFR 204.5(g)(2).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 204.5(j)(2).

[^ 12] See INA 203(b)(1)(C). See 8 CFR 204.5(j)(2) (definitions of affiliate and subsidiary).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 204.5(j)(2) (definition of affiliate and subsidiary).

[^ 14] See Matter of Church Scientology International (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 593 (Comm. 1988).

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 204.5(j)(2).

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 204.5(j)(2) (definition of affiliate).

[^ 17] See Matter of Thornhill (PDF), 18 I&N Dec. 34 (Comm. 1981).

[^ 18] While the L-1 nonimmigrant visa regulations allow for a branch office to petition for a manager or executive, the immigrant visa regulations do not permit a foreign branch office to petition for a multinational executive or manager. The nonimmigrant regulations define the term branch as "an operating division or office of the same organization housed in a different location." See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(J).

[^ 19] See Black's Law Dictionary (11th Ed. 2019).

[^ 20] See Matter of United Investment Group (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 248, 250 (Comm. 1984).

[^ 21] See Matter of M- (PDF), 8 I&N Dec. 24, 50 (BIA 1958, AG 1958). See Matter of Aphrodite Investments Limited (PDF), 17 I&N Dec. 530 (Comm. 1980). See Matter of Tessel (PDF), 17 I&N Dec. 631 (Act. Assoc. Comm. 1980).

[^ 22] See 8 CFR 204.5(j)(2). Doing business does not require that the petitioner provide either goods, services, or both to an unaffiliated third party; providing goods or services in a regular, systematic, and continuous manner to related companies is sufficient. See Matter of Leacheng International, Inc. (PDF), 26 I&N Dec. 532 (AAO 2015).

[^ 23] See Matter of F-M-Co (PDF, 231.04 KB), Adopted Decision 2020-01 (AAO May 5, 2020). This decision clarifies that for first preference multinational executives or managers, a petitioner must have a qualifying relationship with the beneficiary's foreign employer at the time the petition is filed and must maintain that relationship until the petition is adjudicated. The decision also clarifies that in the event a corporate restructuring affecting the foreign entity occurs prior to the filing of the petition, a petitioner may establish that the beneficiary's qualifying foreign employer continues to exist and do business through a valid successor entity.

[^ 24] See 8 CFR 204.5(j)(3)(i)(D). There is no "new office" provision for persons seeking to immigrate under the multinational executive or manager category as there is for certain noncitizens who seek admission as L-1 nonimmigrants in order to open or be employed in a new office in the United States. See 8 CFR 214.2(l)(3)(v).

[^ 25] See INA 101(a)(44)(A)(i)-(ii).

[^ 26] See INA 101(a)(44)(A). See 8 CFR 204.5(j)(4)(i).

[^ 27] See 8 CFR 204.5(j)(4)(ii).

[^ 28] See INA 101(a)(44)(A)(ii). See Matter of G-, Inc. (PDF, 130.68 KB), Adopted Decision 2017-05 (AAO Nov. 8, 2017), which analyzes the requirements for a function manager and concludes: "In sum, to establish that the beneficiary will be employed in a managerial capacity as a 'function manager' the petitioner must demonstrate that: (1) the function is a clearly defined activity; (2) the function is 'essential,' that is, core to the organization; (3) the beneficiary will primarily manage, as opposed to perform, the function; (4) the beneficiary will act at a senior level within the organizational hierarchy or with respect to the function managed; and (5) the beneficiary will exercise discretion over the function's day-to-day operations."

[^ 29] See INA 101(a)(44)(A).

[^ 30] See 8 CFR 204.5(j)(2).

[^ 31] See Matter of G- (PDF, 130.68 KB), Adopted Decision 2017-05 (AAO Nov. 8, 2017).

[^ 32] See Matter of G- (PDF, 130.68 KB), Adopted Decision 2017-05 (AAO Nov. 8, 2017).

[^ 33] See Boyang, Ltd. v. INS, 67 F.3d 305 (9th Cir. 1995) (citing Matter of Church Scientology International (PDF), 19 I&N Dec. 593, 604 (Comm. 1988)).

[^ 34] See 8 CFR 204.5(j)(5).

[^ 35] See Matter of G- (PDF, 130.68 KB), Adopted Decision 2017-05 (AAO Nov. 8, 2017).

[^ 36] See Matter of G- (PDF, 130.68 KB), Adopted Decision 2017-05 (AAO Nov. 8, 2017).

[^ 37] See INA 101(a)(44)(B).

[^ 38] See INA 101(a)(44)(B).

[^ 39] See 8 CFR 204.5(j)(5).

[^ 40] See INA 204(b).

[^ 41] See INA 101(a)(44)(C). See 8 CFR 204.5(j)(4)(ii).

[^ 42] See INA 101(a)(44)(C).

[^ 43] See Matter of Z-A-, Inc. (PDF, 162.89 KB), Adopted Decision 2017-05 (AAO April 14, 2016).

Chapter 5 - Advanced Degree or Exceptional Ability

A. Advanced Degree Professionals

1. Eligibility

To qualify for this immigrant classification as a professional with an advanced degree, the following requirements must be met:

- The beneficiary^[1] must be a member of the professions^[2] holding an advanced degree or foreign equivalent degree;
- The position certified in the underlying permanent labor certification application or Schedule A application must require, at a minimum, a professional holding an advanced degree or the equivalent;^[3] and
- The beneficiary must have not only had the advanced degree or its equivalent on the date that the permanent labor certification application was filed, but also must have met all of the requirements needed for entry into the proffered position at that time.^[4]

2. Foreign Equivalent Degrees

An advanced degree is any U.S. academic or professional degree or a foreign equivalent degree above that of baccalaureate.^[5] A U.S. baccalaureate degree or a foreign equivalent degree followed by at least 5 years of progressive experience in the specialty is considered the equivalent of a master's degree. If a doctoral degree is customarily required by the specialty, the beneficiary must have a U.S. doctorate or a foreign equivalent degree.^[6]

A beneficiary can satisfy the advanced degree requirement by holding either a:

- U.S. master's degree or higher or a foreign degree evaluated to be the equivalent of a U.S. master's degree or higher; or
- U.S. bachelor's degree, or a foreign degree evaluated to be the equivalent of a U.S. bachelor's degree, plus 5 years of progressive, post-degree work experience.^[7]

A beneficiary who does not possess at least a U.S. bachelor's degree or a foreign equivalent degree is ineligible for this classification.^[8]

3. Advanced Degree Position

Mere possession of an advanced degree or its equivalent is not sufficient for establishing a beneficiary's eligibility for this classification. The petitioner must also demonstrate that the position certified in the underlying permanent labor certification application or set forth on the Schedule A application requires a professional holding an advanced degree or the equivalent. The petitioner must demonstrate that the position, and the industry as a whole, normally requires that the position be filled by a person holding an advanced degree.

Where the position requires multiple credentials combined with experience, the issue is not whether a combination of more than one of the foreign degrees or credentials is comparable to a single U.S. bachelor's degree or an advanced degree, but rather that the minimum requirements for the position in the permanent labor certification meet the definition of an advanced degree.^[9]

This requirement has resulted in a particular problem involving petitions filed on behalf of registered nurses. Although many such nurses possess advanced degrees, they are filling nursing positions in the United States that generally do not require advanced degrees. Specifically, the Occupational Information Network (O*Net)^[10] indicates that, in nursing, only managerial jobs (director of nursing or assistant director of nursing) or advanced level jobs (such as clinical nurse specialist, nurse practitioner) generally require advanced degrees. A registered nurse job, by contrast, usually does not require an advanced degree.

The long waiting periods often required for issuance of third preference employment-based immigrant visas for skilled workers, professionals, or other workers may cause a gap between the available supply of eligible nurses and the high demand for nursing services. Officers must verify the actual minimum requirements for the nursing position offered in the advanced degree petition. As stated, most nursing positions do not qualify for the advanced degree classification.

B. Exceptional Ability

1. Eligibility

A beneficiary^[11] may qualify for the exceptional ability visa preference classification if:

- He or she has exceptional ability in the sciences, arts, or business;
- He or she will substantially benefit the national economy, cultural or educational interests, or welfare of the United States in the future; and
- His or her services in one of those fields are sought by an employer in the United States.^[12]

The term exceptional ability is defined as a degree of expertise significantly above that ordinarily encountered in the sciences, arts, or business.^[13] This standard is lower than the standard for extraordinary ability classification.^[14]

2. Evidence

Officers should use a two-step analysis to evaluate the evidence submitted with the petition to demonstrate eligibility for exceptional ability classification.

Petition for Exceptional Ability Classification: Overview of Two-Step Evidentiary Review
Step 1	Assess whether evidence meets regulatory criteria: Determine, by a preponderance of the evidence, which evidence submitted by the petitioner objectively meets the parameters of the regulatory description that applies to that type of evidence (referred to as "regulatory criteria").
Step 2	Final merits determination: Evaluate all the evidence together when considering the petition in its entirety for the final merits determination, considering the high level of expertise required for this immigrant classification.

Assess Whether Evidence Meets Any Regulatory Criteria

The first step of the evidentiary review is limited to determining whether the evidence submitted with the petition is comprised of at least three of the six regulatory criteria.^[15] The officer should apply a preponderance of the evidence standard when making this determination.

While officers should consider the quality and caliber of the evidence to determine whether a particular regulatory criterion has been met, officers should not yet make a determination regarding whether or not the beneficiary qualifies for exceptional ability in this first step.

The initial evidence must include at least three of the following six types of evidence listed in the regulations:

- An official academic record showing that the beneficiary has a degree, diploma, certificate, or similar award from a college, university, school, or other institution of learning relating to the area of exceptional ability;
- Evidence in the form of letter(s) from current or former employer(s) showing that the beneficiary has at least 10 years of full-time experience in the occupation in which he or she is being sought;

- A license to practice the profession or certification for a particular profession or occupation;
- Evidence that the beneficiary has commanded a salary or other remuneration for services that demonstrates exceptional ability. (To satisfy this criterion, the evidence must show that the beneficiary has commanded a salary or remuneration for services that is indicative of his or her claimed exceptional ability relative to others working in the field);
- Evidence of membership in professional associations; and
- Evidence of recognition for achievements and significant contributions to the industry or field by peers, governmental entities, or professional or business organizations.^[16]

In some cases, evidence relevant to one criterion may be relevant to other criteria.

Additionally, if these types of evidence do not readily apply to the beneficiary's occupation, the petitioner may submit comparable evidence to establish the beneficiary's eligibility.^[17] This provides petitioners the opportunity to submit comparable evidence to establish the beneficiary's eligibility if the regulatory standards^[18] do not readily apply to the beneficiary's occupation. When evaluating such comparable evidence, officers consider whether the criteria are readily applicable to the beneficiary's occupation and, if not, whether the evidence provided is truly comparable to the criteria listed in the regulation.

General assertions that any of the six objective criteria do not readily apply to the beneficiary's occupation are not acceptable. Similarly, claims that USCIS should accept witness letters as comparable evidence are not persuasive. The petitioner should explain why the evidence it has submitted is comparable.^[19]

Objectively meeting the regulatory criteria alone does not establish that the beneficiary in fact meets the requirements for exceptional ability classification.^[20] For example, being a member of professional associations alone, regardless of the caliber, should satisfy one of the three required regulatory criteria. However, the beneficiary's membership should also be evaluated to determine whether it is indicative of the beneficiary having a degree of expertise significantly above that ordinarily encountered in the sciences, arts, or business. However, this secondary evaluation should be conducted as part of the final merits determination.

Final Merits Determination

Meeting the minimum requirement by providing at least three types of initial evidence does not, in itself, establish that the beneficiary in fact meets the requirements for exceptional ability classification.^[21] Officers must also consider the quality of the evidence. In the second part of the analysis, officers should evaluate the evidence together when considering the petition in its entirety for the final merits determination. The officer must determine whether or not the petitioner, by a preponderance of the evidence, has demonstrated that the beneficiary has a degree of expertise significantly above that ordinarily encountered in the sciences, arts, or business.

When requesting additional evidence or drafting a denial, if the officer determines that the petitioner has failed to demonstrate this requirement, he or she should not merely make general assertions regarding this failure. Rather, the officer must articulate the specific reasons as to why the officer concludes that the petitioner, by a preponderance of the evidence, has not demonstrated that the beneficiary qualifies for exceptional ability classification.

The petitioner must demonstrate that the beneficiary is above others in the field; qualifications possessed by most members of a given field cannot demonstrate a degree of expertise significantly above that ordinarily encountered. The mere possession of a degree, diploma, certificate or similar award from a college, university, school, or other institution of learning is not by itself considered sufficient evidence of exceptional ability.^[22]

Furthermore, formal recognition in the form of certificates and other documentation that are contemporaneous with the beneficiary's claimed contributions and achievements may have more weight than letters prepared for the petition recognizing the beneficiary's achievements. As with all adjudications, if an officer believes that the facts stated in the petition are not true, and can articulate why in the denial, then the officer denies the petition and explains the reasons in the written denial.^[23]

3. Schedule A, Group II Permanent Labor Certification

Schedule A, Group II permanent labor certification for persons of "exceptional ability in the sciences or arts"^[24] is distinct from classification as a person of "exceptional ability in the sciences, arts, professions, or business."^[25] Under the U.S. Department of Labor (DOL)'s regulations, an employer seeking permanent labor certification on behalf of a person of "exceptional ability in the sciences or arts" may apply directly to USCIS for Schedule A, Group II permanent labor certification instead of applying to DOL for issuance of a permanent labor certification.^[26]

C. Professional Athletes

1. Eligibility

The Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) defines professional athletes for the purpose of allowing them to retain the validity of the underlying permanent labor certification if they change employers.^[27] These athletes may qualify for exceptional ability classification.^[28] Specifically, the precedent decision Matter of Masters held that a professional golfer could, if he was otherwise eligible, qualify as for exceptional ability classification in the arts.^[29]

This holding has been interpreted to apply to exceptional ability petitions filed on behalf of any athlete. However, the fact that the beneficiary has signed a contract to play for a major league team may not be sufficient to establish exceptional ability as a professional athlete.

Definition of Professional Athlete

For purposes of this classification, the term professional athlete means a person who is employed as an athlete by:

- A team that is a member of an association of six or more professional sports teams whose total combined revenues exceed $10,000,000 per year, if the association governs the conduct of its members and regulates the contests and exhibitions in which its member teams regularly engage; or
- Any minor league team that is affiliated with such an association.^[30]

Permanent Labor Certification Validity

A petition for classification of a professional athlete is supported by an underlying permanent labor certification filed on the beneficiary's behalf, which remains valid even if the athlete changes employers, so long as the new employer is a team in the same sport as the team that filed the petition.
^[31]

Employers filing permanent labor certification applications on behalf of beneficiaries to be employed as professional athletes on professional sports teams file permanent labor certification applications under special procedures for professional athletes directly with the appropriate DOL processing center.^[32]

2. Evidence

As is the case with all petitions for persons of exceptional ability, the petitioner must provide, as initial evidence, documentation demonstrating that the beneficiary qualifies exceptional ability classification, as specified in the regulations.^[33] However, submission of evidence that meets the three required regulatory criteria does not necessarily establish that the beneficiary is qualified for the classification. An officer must assess the quality of such evidence, in addition to the quantity of the evidence presented, in determining whether the petitioner has met its burden in establishing that the beneficiary is qualified for the classification.

Similarly, an approved permanent labor certification submitted on behalf of a professional athlete does not prove that the beneficiary qualifies as an athlete of exceptional ability. Officers should look for evidence of exceptional ability beyond the mere existence of a contract with a major league team or an approved permanent labor certification.

An approved permanent labor certification submitted on behalf of the beneficiary does not bind USCIS to a determination that the person is of exceptional ability. Notwithstanding the grant of a permanent labor certification, the beneficiary may, for any number of reasons, be unable to fulfill the underlying purpose of the petition.

Many athletes, for example, enjoy substantial signing bonuses, but may not, thereafter, prove to be of “major league,” let alone exceptional caliber. Similarly, the fact that a beneficiary played for a portion of a season for a major league team does not automatically establish that the beneficiary will continue to play at an exceptional ability level. It would be inappropriate to approve an immigrant visa petition on behalf of a major league player on the basis of exceptional ability if the beneficiary is unlikely to continue to perform the duties specified in the underlying petition for a reasonable period following approval of lawful permanent resident status.

Additionally, the beneficiary could be cut from the major league roster, may announce his permanent retirement as a player in the sport, or suffer from a career-ending injury prior to adjudication of the petition, thereby removing the job offer that formed the basis of the petition, which would result in a denial of the petition.

D. National Interest Waiver of Job Offer

Since 1990, the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) has provided that a person of exceptional ability^[34] may obtain a waiver of the job offer requirement if USCIS deems such waiver to be in the “national interest.”^[35] A subsequent technical amendment^[36] extended the job offer waiver to certain professionals.^[37] This waiver provision applies only to the second preference (EB-2) classification for members of the professions holding advanced degrees and persons of exceptional ability. This waiver of the job offer is known as the national interest waiver.

A petition filed with a request for a national interest waiver on behalf of a person does not need to be supported by a job offer; therefore, the person may file as a self-petitioner. A waiver of a job offer also includes a waiver of the permanent labor certification requirement.^[38] In support of the petition, however, the petitioner must submit the employee-specific portions of a permanent labor certification (without DOL approval).^[39] The petitioner may submit either the Form ETA 750B or Form ETA 9089. To establish eligibility, the petitioner has the burden of demonstrating that:

- The person qualifies as either a member of the professions holding an advanced degree or as a person of exceptional ability;^[40] and
- The waiver of the job offer requirement, and thus, the labor certification requirement, is in the “national interest.”

Qualification for the EB-2 classification as a member of the professions holding an advanced degree or as a person of exceptional ability does not automatically mean that the person qualifies for a national interest waiver. Regardless of whether the person is an advanced degree professional or demonstrates exceptional ability, the petitioner seeking a waiver of the job offer must not only demonstrate eligibility for the classification, but also demonstrate that the waiver itself is in the national interest.^[41]

Specifically, in the exceptional ability context, the INA requires that all petitions for a person of exceptional ability show that the person's presence in the United States would substantially benefit the national economy, cultural or educational interests, or welfare of the United States in the future. Even if the petitioner demonstrates such exceptional ability, if the petitioner is seeking a waiver of the job offer, the petitioner must also demonstrate the additional requirement of national interest.^[42] Neither the INA nor the regulations define the term "national interest."

The burden rests with the petitioner to establish that the waiver of the job offer requirement is in the national interest. USCIS considers every petition on a case-by-case basis.

USCIS may grant a national interest waiver as a matter of discretion if the petitioner demonstrates eligibility by a preponderance of the evidence, based on the following three prongs:^[43]

- The person's proposed endeavor has both substantial merit and national importance;
- The person is well positioned to advance the proposed endeavor; and
- On balance, it would be beneficial to the United States to waive the job offer and thus the permanent labor certification requirements.^[44]

Section 1 below provides an overview of the three prongs that are part of the analysis; section 2 provides guidance specific to persons with advanced degrees in science, technology, engineering, or mathematics (STEM); section 3 addresses letters of support and other evidence from interested government agencies and quasi-governmental entities; and finally, section 4 is specific to entrepreneurs.

When an officer denies a petition because the petitioner has not established that granting the waiver is in the national interest, the decision must include information about appeal rights and the opportunity to file a motion to reopen or reconsider.^[45]

1. Overview of the Three Prongs

First Prong: The Proposed Endeavor has both Substantial Merit and National Importance

When reviewing the proposed endeavor, officers determine whether the evidence presented demonstrates, by a preponderance of the evidence, the proposed endeavor has substantial merit and national importance. The term "endeavor" is more specific than the general occupation; a petitioner should offer details not only as to what the occupation normally involves, but what types of work the person proposes to undertake specifically within that occupation.^[46] For example, while engineering is an occupation, the explanation of the proposed endeavor should describe the specific projects and goals, or the areas of engineering in which the person will work, rather than simply listing the duties and responsibilities of an engineer.

The endeavor's merit may be demonstrated in areas including, but not limited to, business, entrepreneurship, science, technology, culture, health, or education.

In addition, officers may consider evidence of the endeavor's potential significant economic impact, but "merit may be established without immediate or quantifiable economic impact" and "endeavors related to research, pure science, and the furtherance of human knowledge may qualify, whether or not the potential accomplishments in those fields are likely to translate into economic benefits for the United States."^[47]

Officers must also examine the national importance of the specific endeavor proposed by considering its potential prospective impact. Officers should focus on the nature of the proposed endeavor, rather than only the geographic breadth of the endeavor.^[48]

For example, the endeavor "may have national importance because it has national or even global implications within a particular field, such as certain improved manufacturing processes or medical advances." Economically, it may have "significant potential to employ U.S. workers" or "other substantial positive economic effects, particularly in an economically depressed area."^[49] Therefore, petitioners should submit a detailed description explaining the proposed endeavor and supporting documentary evidence to establish that the endeavor is of national importance.

In determining national importance, the officer's analysis should focus on what the beneficiary will be doing rather than the specific occupational classification. Endeavors such as classroom teaching, for example, without broader implications for a field or region, generally do not rise to the level of having national importance for the purpose of establishing eligibility for a national interest waiver.

Ultimately, if the evidence of record demonstrates that the person's proposed endeavor has the significant potential to broadly enhance societal welfare or cultural or artistic enrichment, or to contribute to the advancement of a valuable technology or field of study, it may rise to the level of national importance.^[50]

Second Prong: The Person is Well Positioned to Advance the Proposed Endeavor

Unlike the first prong, which focuses on the merit and importance of the proposed endeavor, the second prong centers on the person. Specifically, the petitioner must demonstrate that the person is well positioned to advance the endeavor.

In evaluating whether the person is well positioned to advance the endeavor, USCIS considers factors^[51] including, but not limited to:

- The person's education, skills, knowledge, and record of success in related or similar efforts;

- A model or plan that the person developed, or played a significant role in developing, for future activities related to the proposed endeavor;
- Any progress towards achieving the proposed endeavor; and
- The interest or support garnered by the person from potential customers, users, investors, or other relevant entities or persons.

The petitioner should submit evidence to document the person's past achievements and corroborate projections related to the proposed endeavor to show that the person is well-positioned to advance the endeavor. A person may be well-positioned to advance an endeavor even if the person cannot demonstrate that the proposed endeavor is more likely than not to ultimately succeed.^[52] However, unsubstantiated or implausible claims would not meet the petitioner's burden of proof.

Below is a non-exhaustive list of the types of evidence that tend to show that the person is well positioned to advance a proposed endeavor. This list is not meant to be a checklist or to indicate that any one type of evidence is either required or sufficient to establish eligibility.

Evidence that may demonstrate that the person is well-positioned to advance a proposed endeavor includes, but is not limited to:

- Degrees, certificates, or licenses in the field;
- Patents, trademarks, or copyrights developed by the person;
- Letters from experts in the person's field, describing the person's past achievements and providing specific examples of how the person is well positioned to advance the person's endeavor;
- Published articles or media reports about the person's achievements or current work;
- Documentation demonstrating a strong citation history of the person's work or excerpts of published articles showing positive discourse around, or adoption of, the person's work;
- Evidence that the person's work has influenced the field of endeavor;
- A plan describing how the person intends to continue the proposed work in the United States;^[53]
- A detailed business plan or other description, along with any relevant supporting evidence, when appropriate;
- Correspondence from prospective or potential employers, clients, or customers;
- Documentation reflecting feasible plans for financial support (see below for a more detailed discussion of evidence related to financing for entrepreneurs);^[54]

- Evidence that the person has received investment from U.S. investors, such as venture capital firms, angel investors, or start-up accelerators, and that the amounts are appropriate to the relevant endeavor;
- Copies of contracts, agreements, or licenses showing the potential impact of the proposed endeavor;
- Letters from government agencies or quasi-governmental entities in the United States demonstrating that the person is well positioned to advance the proposed endeavor (see below for a more detailed discussion of supporting evidence from interested government agencies and quasi-governmental entities).^[55]
- Evidence that the person has received awards or grants or other indications of relevant non-monetary support (for example, using facilities free of charge) from federal, state, or local government entities with expertise in economic development, research and development, or job creation; and
- Evidence demonstrating how the person's work is being used by others, such as, but not limited to:
 - Contracts with companies using products that the person developed or assisted in developing;
 - Documents showing technology that the person invented, or contributed to inventing, and how others use that technology; and
 - Patents or licenses for innovations the person developed with documentation showing why the patent or license is significant to the field.

In each case, officers must consider the totality of circumstances to determine whether the preponderance of evidence establishes that the person is well positioned to advance the proposed endeavor.

Third Prong: On balance, it would be beneficial to the United States to waive the job offer and thus the permanent labor certification requirements

Once officers have determined that the petitioner met the first two prongs, they proceed with the analysis of the third prong. This last prong requires the petitioner to demonstrate that the factors in favor of granting the waiver outweigh those that support the requirement of a job offer and thus a labor certification, which is intended to ensure that the admission of foreign workers will not adversely affect the job opportunities, wages, and working conditions of U.S. workers.^[56]

While Congress sought to further the national interest by requiring job offers and labor certifications to protect U.S. workers, Congress also recognized that in certain instances the national interest is better served by a waiver of the job offer and thus the labor certification requirement. In such cases, a national interest waiver outweighs the benefits inherent to the labor certification process, which primarily focuses on a geographically limited labor market. Within the context of national interest waiver adjudications, Congress entrusted the Secretary of Homeland Security to balance this interest.

Therefore, for the third prong, an officer assesses whether the person's endeavor and the person being well-positioned to advance that endeavor, taken together, provide benefits to the nation such that a waiver of the labor certification requirement outweighs the benefits that ordinarily flow from that requirement. For example, in the case of an entrepreneur, where the person is self-employed in a manner that generally does not adversely affect U.S. workers,^[57] or where the petitioner establishes or owns a business that provides jobs for U.S. workers, there may be little benefit from the labor certification.

Therefore, in establishing eligibility for the third prong, petitioners may submit evidence relating to one or more of the following factors, as outlined in Matter of Dhanasar:

- The impracticality of a labor certification application;^[58]
- The benefit to the United States from the prospective noncitizen's contributions, even if other U.S. workers were also available;^[59] and
- The national interest in the person's contributions is sufficiently urgent,^[60] such as U.S. competitiveness in STEM fields.

More specific considerations may include:

- Whether urgency, such as public health or safety, warrants foregoing the labor certification process;
- Whether the labor certification process may prevent an employer from hiring a person with unique knowledge or skills exceeding the minimum requirements standard for that occupation,^[61] which cannot be appropriately captured by the labor certification;^[62]
- Whether the person's endeavor has the potential to generate considerable revenue consistent, for example, with economic revitalization; and^[63]
- Whether the person's endeavor may lead to potential job creation.

2. Specific Evidentiary Considerations for Persons with Advanced Degrees in Science, Technology, Engineering, or Mathematics (STEM) Fields

There are specific evidentiary considerations relating to STEM degrees and fields, although the analysis is the same regardless of endeavor, so these considerations may apply in non-STEM endeavors where the petitioner demonstrates that such considerations are applicable.^[64] USCIS recognizes the importance of progress in STEM fields and the essential role of persons with advanced STEM degrees in fostering this progress, especially in focused critical and emerging technologies^[65] or other STEM areas important to U.S. competitiveness^[66] or national security.^[67]

To identify a critical and emerging technology field, officers consider governmental, academic, and other authoritative and instructive sources, and all other evidence submitted by the petitioner. The lists of critical and emerging technology subfields published by the Executive Office of the President, by either the National Science and Technology Council or the National Security Council, are examples of authoritative lists.^[68] Officers may find that a STEM area is important to competitiveness or security in a variety of circumstances, for example, when the evidence in the record demonstrates that an endeavor will help the United States to remain ahead of strategic competitors or current and potential adversaries, or relates to a field, including those that are research and development-intensive industries,^[69] where appropriate activity and investment, both early and later in the development cycle, may contribute to the United States achieving or maintaining technology leadership or peer status among allies and partners.

With respect to the first prong, as in all cases, the evidence must demonstrate that a STEM endeavor has both substantial merit and national importance. Many proposed endeavors that aim to advance STEM technologies and research, whether in academic or industry settings, not only have substantial merit in relation to U.S. science and technology interests, but also have sufficiently broad potential implications to demonstrate national importance. On the other hand, while proposed classroom teaching activities in STEM, for example, may have substantial merit in relation to U.S. educational interests, such activities, by themselves, generally are not indicative of an impact in the field of STEM education more broadly, and therefore generally would not establish their national importance.^[70]

For the second prong, as mentioned above, the person's education and skillset are relevant to whether the person is well positioned to advance the endeavor.^[71] USCIS considers an advanced degree, particularly a Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.), in a STEM field tied to the proposed endeavor and related to work furthering a critical and emerging technology or other STEM area important to U.S. competitiveness or national security, an especially positive factor to be considered along with other evidence for purposes of the assessment under the second prong.^[72]

Persons with a Ph.D. in a STEM field, as well as certain other persons with advanced STEM degrees relating to the proposed endeavor, have scientific knowledge in a narrow STEM area since doctoral dissertations and some master's theses concentrate on a particularized subject matter. Officers should then consider whether that specific STEM area relates to the proposed endeavor. Even when the area of concentration is in a theoretical STEM area (theoretical mathematics or physics, for example), it may further U.S. competitiveness or national security as described in the proposed endeavor.

Examples of evidence that can supplement the person's education are listed above,^[73] but a petitioner may submit any relevant evidence, including letters from interested government agencies as discussed below,^[74] to show how the person is well positioned to advance the proposed endeavor. A degree in and of itself, however, is not a basis to determine that a person is well positioned to advance the proposed endeavor.

Finally, with respect to the third prong, it is the petitioner's burden to establish that factors in favor of granting the waiver outweigh those that support the requirement of a job offer and thus a labor certification.

When evaluating the third prong and whether the United States may benefit from the person's entry, regardless of whether other U.S. workers are available (as well as other factors relating to prong three discussed above, such as urgency), USCIS considers the following combination of facts contained in the record to be a strong positive factor:

- The person possesses an advanced STEM degree, particularly a Ph.D.;
- The person will be engaged in work furthering a critical and emerging technology or other STEM area important to U.S. competitiveness; and
- The person is well positioned to advance the proposed STEM endeavor of national importance.

The benefit is especially weighty where the endeavor has the potential to support U.S. national security or enhance U.S. economic competitiveness, or when the petition is supported by letters from interested U.S. government agencies as discussed in section 3 below.

3. The Role of Interested Government Agencies or Quasi-Governmental Entities

While not required, letters from interested government agencies or quasi-governmental entities in the United States (for example federally-funded research and development centers) can be helpful evidence and, depending on the contents of the letters, can be relevant to all three prongs.

Specifically, letters from an interested government agency or quasi-governmental entity could prove favorable for purposes of the first prong if, for example, they establish that the agency or entity has expertise in the proposed endeavor and that the proposed STEM endeavor promises to advance a critical and emerging technology or is otherwise important for purposes of maintaining the United States' technological prominence.

Detailed letters of government or quasi-governmental interest that provide relevant information about how well-positioned the person is to advance the endeavor are valuable for purposes of assessing the second prong.^[75] Finally, an interested government agency or quasi-governmental entity can help explain how granting the waiver may outweigh the benefits of the job offer and labor certification requirement by explaining a particular urgency or detailing how the United States would benefit from the prospective noncitizen's contributions, even if other U.S. workers are available.

4. Specific Evidentiary Considerations for Entrepreneurs

There may be unique aspects of evidence submitted by an entrepreneurial petitioner^[76] undertaking a proposed endeavor, including through an entity based in the United States in which the petitioner typically possesses (or will possess) an ownership interest, and in which the petitioner maintains (or will maintain) an active and central role such that the petitioner's knowledge, skills, or experience would significantly advance the proposed endeavor.

When evaluating whether such petitions satisfy the three-pronged framework, officers may consider the fact that many entrepreneurs do not follow traditional career paths and there is no single way in which an entrepreneurial start-up entity must be structured.

In addition to the more generally applicable evidence described above, an entrepreneur petitioner may submit the following types of evidence to establish that the endeavor has substantial merit and national importance, that the petitioner is well positioned to advance the endeavor, and that, on balance, it would be beneficial to waive the job offer and thus labor certification requirements.

Evidence of Ownership and Role in the U.S.-Based Entity

The petitioner may have an ownership interest in an entity based in the United States, of which the petitioner may also be the founder or co-founder. The petitioner may also play an active and central role in the operations of the entity as evidenced by the petitioner's appointment as an officer (or similar position of authority) of the entity or in another key role within the entity. Such evidence may have probative value in demonstrating the petitioner is well positioned to advance the endeavor.

Degrees, Certifications, Licenses, Letters of Experience

This evidence may indicate that the petitioner has knowledge, skills, or experience that would significantly advance the proposed endeavor being undertaken by the entity. Education and employment history, along with other factors related to the petitioner's background, may serve to corroborate the petitioner's claims. Some examples include successfully leading prior start-up entities or having a combination of relevant degrees and experience to equip the petitioner to advance the proposed endeavor.

Investments

An investment, binding commitment to invest, or other evidence demonstrating a future intent to invest in the entity by an outside investor, consistent with industry standards, may provide independent validation and support of a finding of the substantial merit of the proposed endeavor or the petitioner being well placed to advance the proposed endeavor. This investment may come from persons, such as angel investors, or established organizations, such as venture capital firms. Because different endeavors have different capital needs, USCIS also considers the amount of capital that would be appropriate to advance the endeavor in determining whether the petitioner has secured sufficient investments.

Incubator or Accelerator Participation

Incubators are private or public entities that provide resources, support, and assistance to entrepreneurs to foster the growth and development of an idea or enterprise. Accelerators are generally private venture capital entities and focus on helping entrepreneurs and their start-ups speed the launch, growth, and scale of their businesses.

Officers may consider evidence of an entrepreneur's admission into an incubator or accelerator as an endorsement of the petitioner's proposed plan or past track record, and the petitioner being well positioned to advance the endeavor. Petitioners may submit evidence of the past success of the incubator for officers to consider when evaluating this evidence.

Awards or Grants

Relevant funds may come from federal, state, or local government entities with expertise in economic development, research and development, or job creation. In addition, awards or grants may be given by other entities, such as policy or research institutes. Like investment from outside investors, this evidence may provide independent validation and support for a finding of substantial merit, national importance, or both, of the proposed endeavor or the petitioner being well positioned to advance the proposed endeavor.

Intellectual Property

Intellectual property, including relevant patents held by the petitioner or one of the petitioner's current or prior start-up entities, accompanied by documentation showing why the intellectual property is significant to the field or endeavor, may serve as probative evidence of a prior record of success and potential progress toward achieving the endeavor. The petitioner should submit evidence to document how the petitioner contributed to the development of the intellectual property and how it has or may be used internally or externally.

Published Materials about the Petitioner, the Petitioner's U.S.-Based Entity, or Both

Relevant published materials may consist of printed or online newspaper or magazine articles or other similar published materials evidencing that the petitioner or the petitioner's entity, with some reference to the petitioner's role, has received significant attention or recognition by the media. Petitioners may submit evidence of the media outlet's reputation for officers to consider when evaluating this evidence.

Revenue Generation, Growth in Revenue, and Job Creation

Relevant growth metrics may support that the proposed endeavor, the petitioner's start-up entity, or both, has substantial merit or that the petitioner is well positioned to advance the proposed endeavor.

Such evidence may include a showing that the entity has exhibited growth in terms of revenue generation, jobs created in the United States, or both, and the petitioner's contribution to such growth.

This evidence may also support that the proposed endeavor, the petitioner's start-up entity, or both, have national importance when coupled with other evidence, such as the location of the current or proposed start-up entity in an economically depressed area that has benefited or will benefit from jobs created by the start-up entity.

Letters and Other Statements from Third Parties

Letters may be from, for example, relevant government entities, outside investors, or established business associations with knowledge of:

- The research, products, or services developed by the petitioner, the petitioner's entity, or both; or the petitioner's knowledge, skills, or
- Experience that would advance the proposed endeavor.

While entrepreneurs typically do not undergo the same type of peer review common in academia, entrepreneurs may operate in a variety of high-tech or cutting-edge industries that have their own industry or technology experts that provide various forms of peer review.^[77]

Additionally, the merits of the entrepreneur's business, business plan, product, or technology may undergo various forms of review by third parties, such as prospective investors, retailers, or other industry experts. Accordingly, letters and other statements from relevant third-party reviewers, may have probative value in demonstrating the substantial merit and national importance of the endeavor and that the individual is well positioned to advance the endeavor.

Generally, many entrepreneurial endeavors are measured in terms of revenue generation, profitability, valuations, cash flow, or customer adoption. However, other metrics may be of equal importance in determining whether the petitioner has established each of the three prongs.

As noted in Matter of Dhanasar, "many innovations and entrepreneurial endeavors may ultimately fail, in whole or in part, despite an intelligent plan and competent execution."^[78] Accordingly, petitioners are not required to establish that the proposed endeavor is more likely than not to ultimately succeed based solely on the typical metrics used to measure entrepreneurial endeavors (although such showings may be considered favorably).

They instead need to show that the proposed endeavor has both substantial merit and national importance, that the petitioner is well positioned to advance the proposed endeavor, and that on balance, it would be beneficial to the United States to waive the requirements of a job offer and thus of a labor certification.

Evidence establishing the petitioner's past entrepreneurial achievements and that corroborates projections of future work in the national interest are favorable factors. Claims lacking corroborating evidence are not sufficient to meet the petitioner's burden of proof. As in all cases, officers must consider the totality of circumstances to determine whether each of the three prongs is established by a preponderance of the evidence.

Footnotes

[^ 1] This section uses the term beneficiary to refer to the noncitizen; however, if the advanced degree professional also seeks a national interest waiver of the job offer, he or she can self-petition. See Section D, National Interest Waiver of Job Offer [6 USCIS-PM F.5(D)].

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(2) (defining profession as one of the occupations listed in INA 101(a)(32), as well as any occupation for which a U.S. baccalaureate degree or its foreign equivalent is the minimum requirement for entry into the occupation).

[^ 3] See INA 203(b)(2)(A). See 8 CFR 204.5(k).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(4).

[^ 5] For additional information on medical degrees as advanced degrees, see Chapter 6, Physicians [6 USCIS-PM F.6]. For general information about evaluations of education credentials, see Part E, Employment-Based Immigration, Chapter 9, Evaluation of Education Credentials [6 USCIS-PM E.9].

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(2).

[^ 7] The Joint Explanatory Statement of the Committee of Conference, made at the time Congress adopted the Immigration Act of 1990, stated that the equivalent of an advanced degree is a bachelor's degree plus at least 5 years progressive experience in the professions. See 60 FR 29771 (PDF). USCIS has incorporated this standard with respect to establishing equivalency to a master's degree. See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(3)(i)(B).

[^ 8] Whether the beneficiary has completed all substantive requirements for the degree as of the date on a provisional certificate is a case-specific analysis; but if the petitioner establishes that the beneficiary had completed those requirements, USCIS considers the date of the provisional certificate for purposes of calculating post-baccalaureate experience. See Matter of O-A-, Inc. (PDF, 95.16 KB), Adopted Decision 2017-03 (AAO Apr. 17, 2017).

[^ 9] See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(2).

[^ 10] See the Occupational Information Network (O*Net) website, which is sponsored by U.S. Department of Labor (DOL)'s Employment and Training Administration, and developed by the National Center for O*NET Development.

[^ 11] This section uses “beneficiary” to refer to the noncitizen; however, if the person of exceptional ability also seeks a national interest waiver of the job offer, he or she can self-petition. See Section D, National Interest Waiver of the Job Offer [6 USCIS-PM F.5(D)].

[^ 12] See INA 203(b)(2)(A). See 8 CFR 204.5(k).

[^ 13] See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(2).

[^ 14] See Chapter 2, Extraordinary Ability [6 USCIS-PM F.2].

[^ 15] See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(3)(ii).

[^ 16] See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(3)(ii).

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(3)(iii).

[^ 18] See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(3)(ii).

[^ 19] See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(3)(ii).

[^ 20] See INA 203(b)(2).

[^ 21] See Matter of Chawathe (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 369, 376 (AAO 2010) (“[T]ruth is to be determined not by the quantity of evidence alone but by its quality. Therefore, in adjudicating the application pursuant to the preponderance of the evidence standard, the director must examine each piece of evidence for relevance, probative value, and credibility, both individually and within the context of the totality of the evidence, to determine whether the fact to be proven is probably true.”). See Kazarian v. USCIS (PDF), 596 F.3d 1115, 1122 (9th Cir. 2010). USCIS has interpreted Kazarian as applicable to exceptional ability petitions. See Evaluation of Evidence Submitted with Certain Form I-140 Petitions; Revisions the Adjudicator’s Field Manual (AFM) Chapter 22.2, AFM Update AD11-14, PM-602-0005.1, issued December 22, 2010.

[^ 22] See INA 203(b)(2)(C).

[^ 23] See INA 204(b).

[^ 24] See 20 CFR 656.15(d).

[^ 25] See INA 203(b)(2).

[^ 26] See 20 CFR 656.15(d). See Part E, Employment-Based Immigration, Chapter 7, Schedule A Designation Petitions [6 USCIS-PM E.7].

[^ 27] See INA 212(a)(5)(A)(iii).

[^ 28] See INA 203(b)(2)(A).

[^ 29] See Matter of Masters (PDF), 13 I&N Dec. 125 (Dist. Dir. 1969).

[^ 30] See INA 212(a)(5)(A)(iii). See 20 CFR 656.40(f).

[^ 31] See INA 212(a)(5)(A)(iv).

[^ 32] See 73 FR 11954 (PDF). See DOL's Foreign Labor Certification webpage.

[^ 33] See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(3)(ii)-(iii). See Section B, Exceptional Ability Classification, Subsection 2, Evidence [6 USCIS-PM F.5(B)(2)].

[^ 34] See Section B, Exceptional Ability [6 USCIS-PM F.5(B)].

[^ 35] See INA 203(b)(2)(B)(i). See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(4)(ii).

[^ 36] See Section 302(b)(2) of the Miscellaneous and Technical Immigration and Naturalization Amendments of 1991, Pub. L. 102-232 (PDF), 105 Stat. 1733, 1743 (December 12, 1991).

[^ 37] See Section A, Advanced Degree Professionals [6 USCIS-PM F.5(A)].

[^ 38] See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(4)(ii).

[^ 39] See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(4)(ii).

[^ 40] See 8 CFR 204.5(k)(1)-(3) (providing definitions and considerations for making advanced degree professional and person of exceptional ability determinations). As explained in Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 886 n.3 (AAO 2016), advanced degree professionals and persons of exceptional ability are generally subject to the labor certification requirement and are not exempt because of their advanced degree or exceptional ability. See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 893 (AAO 2016).

[^ 41] Therefore, whether a given person seeks classification as a person of exceptional ability or as a member of the professions holding an advanced degree, that person cannot qualify for a waiver just by demonstrating a degree of expertise significantly above that ordinarily encountered in the person's field of expertise. See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 886 n.3 (AAO 2016).

[^ 42] See INA 203(b)(2).

[^ 43] The three prongs derive from the precedent decision Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884 (AAO 2016). The references to the facts in that case in this guidance, however, are illustrative and do not set the standard.

[^ 44] See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 889 (AAO 2016). See Poursina v. USCIS (PDF), 936 F.3d 868 (9th Cir. 2019).

[^ 45] See 8 CFR 103.3(a).

[^ 46] For instance, although the petitioner was an engineer by occupation, the decision discusses his specific proposed endeavors “to engage in research and development relating to air and space propulsion systems, as well as to teach aerospace engineering.” See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 891 (AAO 2016).

[^ 47] See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 892 (AAO 2016) (finding that the petitioner’s proposed research “aims to advance scientific knowledge and further national security interests and U.S. competitiveness in the civil space sector” and therefore has substantial merit).

[^ 48] See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 887 (AAO 2016) (finding that “certain locally- or regionally-focused endeavors may be of national importance despite being difficult to quantify with respect to geographic scope”).

[^ 49] See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 889-90 (AAO 2016).

[^ 50] See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 889-90 (AAO 2016) (explaining that “an endeavor that has significant potential to employ U.S. workers or has other substantial positive economic effects, particularly in an economically depressed area, for instance, may well be understood to have national importance”). See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 892 (AAO 2016) (finding that the petitioner’s evidence demonstrated the national importance of advancements in STEM fields, specifically hypersonic propulsion technologies and research).

[^ 51] See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 890, 892-93 (AAO 2016).

[^ 52] See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 890 (AAO 2016).

[^ 53] In the case of a petitioner who does not intend to be self-employed, USCIS considers a job offer or communications with prospective employers, while not required, relevant to demonstrate the circumstances or capacity in which the person intends to carry out the endeavor and the feasibility of that plan.

[^ 54] For a discussion of financing for entrepreneurs, see Subsection 4, Specific Evidentiary Considerations for Entrepreneurs [6 USCIS-PM F.5(D)(4)].

[^ 55] For a discussion of letters from interested government agencies, see Subsection 3, The Role of Interested Government Agencies [6 USCIS-PM F.5(D)(3)].

[^ 56] See 20 CFR 656.1. See Part E, Employment-Based Immigration, Chapter 6, Permanent Labor Certification, Section A, Employer Requirements, Subsection 2, Individual Permanent Labor Certifications [6 USCIS-PM E.6(A)(2)].

[^ 57] See discussion of the entrepreneurs in Subsection 4, Specific Considerations for Entrepreneurs, [6 USCIS-PM F.5(D)(4)].

[^ 58] See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 890 (AAO 2016).

[^ 59] See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 891, 893 (AAO 2016) (holding that “because of his record of successful research in an area that furthers U.S. interests, we find that this petitioner offers contributions of such value that, on balance, they would benefit the United States even assuming that other qualified U.S. workers are available”). In that case, the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) noted that the petitioner holds three graduate degrees in fields tied to the proposed endeavor, that his proposed research has significant implications for U.S. national security and competitiveness, and that his work had attracted interest from government agencies. Therefore, the AAO considered the petitioner’s endeavor in the field of aerospace engineering, and his level and extent of expertise within that field, taken together, to have the potential to provide great benefit to the United States such that waiver of the job offer was in the national interest.

[^ 60] See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 891 (AAO 2016).

[^ 61] An employer may only list the minimum job requirements on a labor certification application. See 20 CFR 656.17(i).

[^ 62] See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 890 (AAO 2016).

[^ 63] See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 889 (AAO 2016) (explaining that when evaluating the first prong, “the potential to create a significant economic impact may be favorable but is not required”). The potential economic impact is an appropriate inquiry when weighing the relative benefit of granting the national interest waiver.

[^ 64] “STEM” is not defined in the regulations describing the national interest waiver benefit, but officers may refer to the definition found in the context of STEM optional practical training for students for guidance. See 8 CFR 214.2(f)(10)(ii)(C)(2)(i) (defining STEM as “science, technology, engineering, or mathematics”).

[^ 65] Critical and emerging technologies are those that are critical to U.S. national security, including military defense and the economy. While those technologies necessarily evolve and USCIS reviews the specifics of each proposed endeavor on a case-by-case basis, examples may include, but are not limited to, certain critical areas of artificial intelligence or quantum information science. When adjudicating this discretionary benefit, officers should review the entire record and, where officers have concerns, work closely with their supervisors and fraud, benefit integrity, and national security personnel in their offices.

[^ 66] One, but certainly not the only, indicator of STEM areas important to U.S. competitiveness is inclusion as a priority in the annual research and development priorities memo about the President’s budget issued jointly by the White House Director of the Office of Science and Technology Policy and the Director of the Office of Management and Budget. For example, the Memorandum on Research and Development Priorities (PDF) (August 2021) for President Biden’s FY2022 budget is indicative of STEM areas important to U.S. competitiveness.

[^ 67] U.S. national security objectives are outlined in the Interim National Security Strategic Guidance (PDF). These objectives include protect the security of the American people; expand economic prosperity and opportunity; and realize and defend democratic values. For purposes of national interest waiver policy and adjudications, “national security” refers to these three objectives.

[^ 68] For example, the National Science and Technology Council’s Critical and Emerging Technologies List Update (PDF) (February 2022) identifies critical and emerging technologies “with the potential to further these [national security] objectives,” meaning security of Americans, economic prosperity, or democratic values. Departments and agencies may consult this list “when developing, for example, initiatives to research and develop technologies that support national security missions, compete for international talent, and protect sensitive technology from misappropriation and misuse.” The list is part of A Report by the Fast Track Action Subcommittee on Critical and Emerging Technologies.

[^ 69] In general, research-intensive industries are those with higher value added from research and development. For example, the Science and Technology Policy Institute provided a list of research and development intensive industries at Appendix C of a report on Economic Benefits and Losses from Foreign STEM Talent in the United States (October 2021).

[^ 70] See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 893 (AAO 2016).

[^ 71] See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 892-93 (AAO 2016). In that case, the AAO favorably considered documentation that the petitioner played a significant role in projects funded by grants from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) and the Air Force Research Laboratories (AFRL) within the U.S. Department of Defense. Therefore, the significance of the petitioner’s research in his field was corroborated by evidence of peer and government interest in his research, as well as by consistent government funding of the petitioner’s research projects. The AAO concluded that the petitioner’s education, experience, and expertise in his field; the significance of his role in research projects; as well as the sustained interest of and funding from government entities such as NASA and AFRL, positioned him well to continue to advance his proposed endeavor of hypersonic technology research.

[^ 72] See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 893 (AAO 2016). In that case, the AAO noted that the petitioner holds three graduate degrees in fields tied to the proposed endeavor, including a Ph.D. in a STEM field (Engineering) from a regionally accredited U.S. university.

[^ 73] See Subsection 1, Overview of the Three Prongs [6 USCIS-PM F.5(D)(1)].

[^ 74] For a discussion of letters from interested government agencies, see Subsection 3, The Role of Interested Government Agencies [6 USCIS-PM F.5(D)(3)].

[^ 75] See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 893 (AAO 2016) (finding detailed expert letters describing U.S. government interest and investment in the petitioner's research to be persuasive).

[^ 76] This section, because it discusses self-petitions by entrepreneurs, does not distinguish between "petitioner" and "person" as they are one and the same.

[^ 77] Petitioners may submit evidence related to the credentials of experts who support a petition for officers to consider when assigning weight to the letter.

[^ 78] See Matter of Dhanasar, 26 I&N Dec. 884, 890 (AAO 2016).

Chapter 6 - Physician

A. Petition for Physician Supported by Permanent Labor Certification

1. Determining Whether Physician has met Minimum Requirements for Position

Officers must determine whether the noncitizen physician (physician) met the minimum education, training, and experience requirements of the permanent labor certification as of the date of its filing with the U.S. Department of Labor (DOL) in order to establish the physician's eligibility for the classification.^[1] Although a permanent labor certification may not specify that a license is required for a physician position, physicians involved in patient care must obtain a license to practice medicine in the location where they are to be employed in the United States as a matter of state or territorial law.
[2]

Therefore, it follows that any candidate for such a position must, at the time of the permanent job offer, either possess a permanent license to practice medicine or be eligible for such a license in the state of the intended employment in order to be qualified for entry into the position. In the case of a physician petition supported by a permanent labor certification, the job offer is considered to have been made as of the date of the filing of the permanent labor certification.

License to Practice Medicine^[3]

Each U.S. state has a medical board that devises its own educational, training, and experience requirements that physicians must meet in order to be granted a permanent license, more specifically, a full and unrestricted license, to practice medicine in that state. A full and unrestricted license to practice differs from a limited license to practice medicine. Limited licensure is typically granted to physicians who are still working towards obtaining the credentials required for full licensure or who may be providing limited medical care, such as a physician who is working at a summer camp as a camp physician for a short period of time.

In general, there are two pathways to obtain permanent licensure to practice medicine as a physician: either as an initial applicant for licensure, or as an applicant for licensure by endorsement.

The initial applicant pathway is for medical school graduates who have never obtained a permanent license to practice medicine as a physician in the United States, or in some instances, Canada. An initial applicant must show that he or she has any requisite medical degree, post-graduate training, residency, and board certifications, and has passed the medical examinations required by the state medical board.

All U.S. states require licensing candidates to make an application for licensure with their medical board to demonstrate that they meet the requirements of licensure regardless of previous licensure.^[4] This pathway is often referred to as an endorsement application and involves:

- A verification of the standing of the applicant's license(s) issued by another U.S. state or territory, and in some cases by a foreign country; and
- A review of the applicant's education, training, and medical examinations to determine if the applicant meets the requirements of the state medical board.

U.S. states do not generally allow a physician to practice medicine within their jurisdictional boundaries based on a license issued by another state or territory (referred to as automatic reciprocity). Certain exceptions may exist for physicians practicing at federal medical facilities and in other very limited circumstances.

In some states, applicants must pass medical examinations, such as the U.S. Medical Licensing Examination (USMLE), within a certain number of attempts or within a certain timeframe in order for the examination results to be considered valid for licensure. In addition, approximately 75 percent of the U.S. states require foreign medical school graduates to complete additional post-graduate medical training or residencies beyond that required for U.S. medical school graduates.

In order to approve a petition supported by a permanent labor certification filed on behalf of a physician, the petitioner must show that, at the time of the filing of the permanent labor certification, the physician:

- Possesses a permanent license to practice medicine in the area of intended employment; or
- Has met all of the requirements to be eligible to obtain such a license in the area of intended employment, notwithstanding eligibility requirements that are contingent upon his or her immigration status in the United States.

Some state medical boards do not issue a license to practice medicine unless the applicant presents evidence that he or she is legally authorized to be employed in the United States or has obtained a U.S. Social Security Number (SSN). State licensure criteria relating to the applicant's U.S. immigration status, such as a requirement that the applicant must be a lawful permanent resident (LPR) or must otherwise possess employment authorization or an SSN, should not be considered relevant to the adjudication of the petition as the petition is the means by which the physician would obtain LPR status and eligibility to accept employment and obtain an SSN in the United States.

Officers review the evidence provided in support of the petition to determine if the physician had a permanent license to practice or was eligible to obtain such a license in the location of intended employment at the time of filing of the permanent labor certification. Information regarding the licensure requirements for U.S. states can be obtained from the Federation of State Medical Boards^[5] and at the various U.S. medical board websites.

2. Foreign Medical Degree Equivalency

The United States is one of the few countries where medical school applicants are required to obtain a bachelor's degree as a requirement for admission to medical school. As a result, a U.S. medical degree is considered to be an advanced degree.

In many other countries, a person may be admitted to medical school directly out of high school. In these instances, the program of study for the foreign medical degree is longer in length (generally 5-7 years in duration) than is required for a less specialized foreign bachelor's degree (generally 3-4 years in duration). In some countries, the name of the degree is "Bachelor of Medicine, Bachelor of Surgery," and the program of study may involve only medicine, to include some limited basic sciences.

A foreign medical degree may qualify as the equivalent of a U.S. medical degree and therefore an advanced degree for purposes of this visa classification if, at the time of the filing of the permanent labor certification application, the following two conditions are met:

Condition 1: The beneficiary:

- Has been awarded a foreign medical degree from a medical school that requires applicants to obtain a degree equivalent to a U.S. bachelor's degree as a requirement for admission;
- Has been awarded a foreign medical degree, and the petitioner has provided a foreign education credential evaluation that credibly describes how the foreign medical degree is equivalent to a medical degree obtained from an accredited medical school in the United States; or
- Has been awarded a foreign medical degree and has passed the National Board of Medical Examiners Examination (NBME) or an equivalent examination, such as the USMLE, Steps 1, 2, and 3.

Condition 2: The beneficiary was fully eligible for the position described on the permanent labor certification application on the date that it was filed, and the petitioner has established that:^[6]

- The beneficiary had a full and unrestricted license to practice medicine in the place of intended employment and continues to hold such unrestricted license; or
- The beneficiary's foreign medical degree meets the medical degree requirements to be eligible for full and unrestricted licensure specified by the medical board governing the place of intended employment.

Each U.S. state, the District of Columbia, and the U.S. territories have a medical board that devises its own medical degree requirements that candidates must meet in order to be licensed to practice medicine in that jurisdiction.

B. Physician National Interest Waiver^[7]

1. Purpose, Background, and Legal Authority

Statutory and Regulatory Authorities

The Nursing Relief for Disadvantaged Areas Act (Nursing Relief Act) of 1999 amended the Immigration and Nationality Act^[8] to establish a national interest waiver (NIW) of the DOL's permanent labor certification process for certain physicians petitioning for advanced degree professional or exceptional ability classification.^[9]

USCIS grants a NIW of the job offer requirement, and therefore the permanent labor certification requirement, for any physician seeking advanced degree professional or exceptional ability classification:

- The physician agrees to work full time as a physician in an area or areas designated by the Secretary of Health and Human Services as having a shortage of health care professionals or at a health care facility under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Veterans Affairs; and
- A federal agency or a department of public health in any state has previously determined that the physician's work in such an area or at such facility is in the public interest.^[10]

The physician may not receive LPR status until he or she has worked full time as a physician for an aggregate of 5 years in the shortage area, or 3 years in the shortage area if the physician petitioned for the NIW before November 1, 1998.^[11]

On September 6, 2000, legacy Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS), now USCIS, issued an interim rule implementing the physician NIW provisions.^[12]

Consistent with the statute, the regulations allow filing of a physician NIW and an adjustment application without the physician first completing the 3 or 5 years of service in shortage areas. The regulations include provisions that:

- Require physicians who had an NIW denied prior to November 12, 1999, to complete the 5-year rather than the 3-year service requirement;
- Require NIW physicians to comply with reporting requirements, including submitting initial evidence within 120 days of the completion of the second year of service and additional evidence within 120 days of completing the fifth year of service to establish that they were still engaged in the area of medical practice that was the basis for approval of the NIW; and
- Limit NIW eligibility to physicians who practiced in a medical specialty that was within the scope of the shortage designation for the geographic area.

Schneider v. Chertoff

Plaintiffs in Schneider v. Chertoff^[13] challenged specific provisions of the agency's physician NIW regulations and, in its decision issued on June 7, 2006, the Ninth Circuit found that three regulatory provisions were beyond the scope of the statutory language.^[14] The court held that:

- Medical practice completed before the approval of the employment-based petition (except medical practice as a J-1 nonimmigrant) counts toward the service requirement;
- NIW physicians who had immigrant visa petitions filed on their behalf before November 1, 1998, but were denied before November 12, 1999, need only fulfill the 3-year service requirement; and
- The regulatory period of 4 years (where 3 years of service is required) or 6 years (where 5 years of service is required) within which NIW physicians must complete the medical service requirement is not a permissible interpretation of the statute.

On the remaining two challenged provisions, the court held that USCIS has the authority to impose reporting requirements on NIW physicians to ensure compliance with the statute and declined to address the question related to whether medical specialists should be covered under the statute.^[15] The plaintiff who raised the claim had his NIW and petition denied due to abandonment, thereby mooted the issue.

USCIS remains committed to advancing the congressional intent of providing quality medical care in designated underserved areas and also is mindful of the states' direct interest in obtaining necessary medical care in underserved areas and their critical role in coordinating with USCIS in the NIW process.

USCIS, however, is not required to allow a physician with an approved NIW and pending adjustment application to continue receiving interim work and travel authorization for an unlimited period without some evidence that the physician is pursuing or intends to pursue the type of medical service that was the basis for the NIW approval.

Therefore, while USCIS amended NIW procedures to meet the Schneider decision (for example, not impose a specific timeframe within which the required medical service must be performed), an officer may exercise discretion to deny employment authorization or an adjustment application if he or she believes that the physician is using the pending adjustment application solely as a means for employment in areas or occupations other than medical service in the designated shortage areas.

2. Eligibility

The basic eligibility requirements for the physician are:

- The petitioner has filed a petition under INA 203(b)(2), along with the physician NIW request;
- The physician agrees to work full time in a clinical practice providing primary or specialty care in an underserved area or at a U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) health care facility for an aggregate of 5 years (not counting any time in J-1 status, but including such time that may have preceded the petition filing);^[16] and
- A federal agency or a state department of public health, with jurisdiction over the medically underserved area, has determined that the physician's work in the underserved area or the VA facility is in the public interest (and, to the extent that past work is presented, that it was in the public interest).^[17]

Primary or Specialty Care

Since 2000, legacy INS, and now USCIS, has given state departments of health more flexibility to sponsor waivers for physicians willing to work in medically underserved areas. For instance, under the Conrad 30 Waiver program, state departments of health may sponsor waivers for J-1 specialist physicians who will provide services to medically underserved populations (MUP).^[18] The Conrad program is similar to the NIW program as they both have a medical service requirement under which the physician must work in a medically underserved area.

Based on the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' (HHS) criteria published in 2000, USCIS (and legacy INS) limited its definition of qualified physicians in designated shortage areas to those who practiced primary care medicine, including family or general medicine, pediatrics, general internal medicine, obstetrics and gynecology, and psychiatry.^[19]

As of January 23, 2007, USCIS began accepting NIW petitions on behalf of primary and specialty care physicians who agree to work full time in areas designated by the HHS as having a shortage of healthcare professionals (for example, health professional shortage area (HPSA), medically underserved area (MUA), MUP, and, at the time, physician scarcity areas (PSA)).

In addition, in 2016 the Administrative Appeals Office clarified that, regardless of whether the shortage designation is seemingly limited to primary care physicians, in addition to primary care and specialty care physicians, medical specialists who agree to practice in any area designated by HHS as having a shortage of health care professionals may be eligible for the physician NIW.^[20]

The Nursing Relief Act^[21] requires USCIS to recognize HHS designations of health professionals without limitation to primary care. Accordingly, USCIS recognizes NIW physicians in primary care and specialty care. A specialty physician is defined as other than a general practitioner, family practice practitioner, general internist, obstetrician, or gynecologist. Dentists, chiropractors, podiatrists, and optometrists do not qualify for the physician scarcity bonus as specialty physicians, and therefore, cannot qualify for the NIW.

A physician or employer must submit evidence showing that a geographic area is or was designated by HHS as having a shortage of health care professionals. The designation must be valid at the time the NIW employment began. If the area loses its HHS designation after the physician starts working, a physician can remain at the facility and the time worked after that point qualifies as NIW employment so long as the employment continues to satisfy all other NIW requirements.

Medically Underserved Areas

In designating areas of the country as “underserved,” the Secretary of Health and Human Services addresses the shortage of family or general medicine and sub-specialist physicians (designations include HPSA, MUP, and MUA). For work that preceded the filing of the petition, the area must have been a designated shortage area at the time the work commenced but need not have retained such designation. For shortage designations, see these sources:

- HHS Health Resources and Services Administration to determine if a geographic area is an MUA or MUP.
- HHS Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services to determine if a geographic area is an HPSA.
^[22]

Physicians serving at VA facilities are not bound by the HHS categories noted above. The VA may petition for physicians who specialize in various fields of medicine, and the location of the work need not be in an underserved area.

Time Limit to Complete the Required Medical Service

The physician has no set time limitation to complete the 3 or 5 years of aggregate service, which may include periods of service prior to the filing or approval of the petition. While there is no set time limitation, a NIW physician must submit interim evidence of compliance with the medical service requirement before USCIS approves the adjustment application.

While officers cannot revoke the approval of a petition or deny an adjustment application for a physician solely because the physician did not complete the 3- or 5-year service requirement within a certain timeframe, officers may deny an adjustment application as a matter of discretion if the physician appears to be using the pending adjustment application solely as a means for employment in areas or occupations other than medical service in the designated shortage areas.^[23]

3. Evidence

Physicians seeking an NIW based on service in an underserved area or at a VA facility must submit the following supplemental documentation with the petition:^[24]

- Employment contract or employment commitment letter covering the required period of clinical medical practice, issued and dated within the 6 months immediately before the filing date of the petition; and
- Public interest letter from the federal agency or state department of public health attesting that the physician's work is or will be in the public interest, issued and dated within the 6 months immediately before the filing date of the petition.

The physician must also submit evidence to demonstrate that he or she has met all other eligibility requirements for classification as a person with an advanced degree or exceptional ability, other than the permanent labor certification.

In particular, a physician needing a waiver of the J-1 foreign residency requirement must still obtain such a waiver under INA 212(e) and satisfy all the waiver conditions^[25] (including 3 years of service) before USCIS may approve the physician's adjustment application.^[26]

Admissibility Requirements

The Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) requires physicians to meet specific admissibility requirements relating to passing professional medical examinations and English language competency.^[27]

The physician must provide evidence that he or she has passed parts I and II of the NBME or an equivalent examination as determined by the Secretary of Health and Human Services. The NBME, also known as the NBME, ceased to be administered in 1992. The USMLE, which was first administered in 1992, is considered an equivalent examination.^[28]

In addition to having passed either the NBME, USMLE, or one of its equivalents, the physician is also required to provide evidence of competency in oral and written English. An Educational Commission for Foreign Medical Graduates (ECFMG) certification showing the physician has passed the English language proficiency test meets this requirement.^[29]

Physicians seeking a physician NIW must provide documentation to establish admissibility^[30] at the time of filing of the petition.^[31] In contrast, physicians filing petitions with a permanent labor certification must establish admissibility^[32] at the time of the filing of the permanent labor certification.

Requests to Practice in a Different Underserved Area

USCIS regulations allow a physician with an approved petition and a pending adjustment application to practice medicine in a different underserved area or a different VA facility. Physicians must follow certain procedures, including filing an amended petition, in order to request such a change of practice.^[33]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See Matter of Wing's Tea House (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 158 (Act. Reg. Comm. 1977).

[^ 2] See the American Medical Association's Navigating State Medical Licensure.

[^ 3] See the American Medical Association's Navigating State Medical Licensure.

[^ 4] See Physician Licensure Application Fees and Timelines by State.

[^ 5] See the Federation of State Medical Boards website.

[^ 6] See Matter of Wing's Tea House (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 158 (BIA 1977). See 20 CFR 656.17(h). See 20 CFR 656.10(c)(7).

[^ 7] See INA 203(b)(2)(B)(ii). See 8 CFR 204.12.

[^ 8] See INA 203(b)(2)(B)(ii)(I).

[^ 9] See Section 5 of the Nursing Relief for Disadvantaged Areas Act of 1999, Pub. L. 106-95 (PDF), 113 Stat. 1312, 1318 (November 12, 1999), codified at INA 203(b)(2)(B). Before this law, a qualified physician could obtain a discretionary waiver of the labor certification process by showing that his or her admission or adjustment to permanent residence would be in the national interest of the United States under the same standard as for all other occupations.

[^ 10] See INA 203(b)(2)(B)(ii)(I).

[^ 11] See INA 203(b)(2)(B)(ii)(II) and INA 203(b)(2)(B)(ii)(IV).

[^ 12] See 65 FR 53889 (PDF) (Sep. 6, 2000) (implementing regulations for physician NIW at 8 CFR 204.12 and 8 CFR 245.18).

[^ 13] See Schneider v. Chertoff, 450 F.3d 944 (9th Cir. 2006).

[^ 14] The court specifically reviewed the statutory language in INA 203(b)(2)(B).

[^ 15] See Schneider v. Chertoff, 450 F.3d 944, 959 (9th Cir. 2006). See Matter of H-V-P- (PDF, 139.88 KB), Adopted Decision 2016-01 (AAO Feb. 9, 2016).

[^ 16] Or 3 years (not counting any time in J-1 status but including such time that may have preceded the petition filing), if the petition was filed before November 1, 1998.

[^ 17] See 8 CFR 204.12.

[^ 18] See INA 214(l).

[^ 19] See 8 CFR 204.12(a)(2)(i). See 65 FR 53889 (PDF), 53890 (September 6, 2000).

[^ 20] See INA 203(b)(2)(B)(ii). See Matter of H-V-P- (PDF, 139.88 KB), Adopted Decision 2016-01 (AAO Feb. 9, 2016).

[^ 21] See Section 5 of the Nursing Relief for Disadvantaged Areas Act of 1999, Pub. L. 106-95 (PDF), 113 Stat. 1312, 1318 (November 12, 1999), codified at INA 203(b)(2)(B).

[^ 22] See the HHS Health Resources and Services Administration website to determine if a geographic area is a MUA or MUP. See the HHS Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services website to determine if a geographic area is an HPSA.

[^ 23] If a physician's adjustment application was denied and the petition's approval revoked on or after September 6, 2000, but before January 23, 2007, solely because the physician did not complete the 3 or 5 years of medical service within the 4- or 6-year time limit, USCIS allowed such applicants to file, with appropriate fees, a motion to reopen the petition or adjustment application or both within 1 year of January 23, 2007. The January 23, 2007, date derives from the memorandum Interim guidance for adjudication national interest waiver (NIW) petitions and related adjustment applications for physicians serving in medically underserved areas in light of Schneider v. Chertoff, 450 F.3d 944 (9th Cir. 2006) ("Schneider decision"), HQ 70/6.2, issued January 23, 2007.

[^ 24] For a complete list and detailed explanation of this supplemental evidence, see 8 CFR 204.12(c).

[^ 25] See INA 214(l).

[^ 26] See 8 CFR 204.12(g).

[^ 27] See INA 212(a)(5)(B).

[^ 28] Previously, the Visa Qualifying Examination (which was administered from 1977 through 1984) and the Comprehensive Foreign Medical Graduate Examination in the Medical Sciences (which was administered from 1984 through 1993) were also considered equivalent examinations.

[^ 29] For information regarding this certification, see the ECFMG website.

[^ 30] See INA 212(a)(5)(B).

[^ 31] See 8 CFR 204.12(c)(4).

[^ 32] See INA 212(a)(5)(B).

[^ 33] See 8 CFR 204.12(f).

Chapter 7 - Skilled Worker, Professional, or Other Worker

A total of 40,000 visas are available each fiscal year for employment-based 3rd preference workers, of which not more than 10,000 may be issued to “other” (unskilled)^[1] workers. The visas for skilled workers (requiring at least 2 years training or experience)^[2] and professionals (persons holding a bachelor’s degree or its equivalent in the specific field in which they are to be engaged)^[3] are deducted from the same 30,000 number allotment.

A petitioning U.S. employer may file an Immigrant Petition for Alien Workers (Form I-140) on behalf of a beneficiary for classification as a skilled worker, professional, or other (unskilled) worker.^[4]

A. Eligibility

In all cases, the beneficiary must have the minimum education and work experience requirements that are specified on the permanent labor certification.^[5] Therefore, if the permanent labor certification specifies that a bachelor’s degree in a given field is the minimum requirement for entry into the position, the beneficiary must possess a minimum of a U.S. bachelor’s degree or its foreign equivalent degree in the field.

Where the labor certification permits educational and experience equivalence to a bachelor’s degree, however, the beneficiary may qualify as a skilled worker if he or she meets the requirements on the labor certification.^[6] On the other hand, if the permanent labor certification states a requirement of “2 years college and 2 years experience,” mere possession of a bachelor’s degree, without 2 years of experience, would not qualify, although it would meet the education requirement.

Sheepherders

A sheepherder is an unskilled worker. A noncitizen sheepherder who has been legally employed as a nonimmigrant sheepherder in the United States for at least 33 of the preceding 36 months is not required to obtain an approved permanent labor certification from the U.S. Department of Labor. Instead, the petitioner files the permanent labor certification application directly with the appropriate USCIS office or the U.S. Department of State. This procedure relates only to the permanent labor certification process and has no bearing on the amount of training or experience needed to perform the job.

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 204.5(l)(2), defining an other worker as one capable of performing unskilled labor (requiring less than 2 years training or experience).

[^ 2] Relevant post-secondary education may be considered as training. See 8 CFR 204.5(l)(2) (definition of skilled worker).

[^ 3] See 8 CFR 204.5(l)(2) (definition of professional).

[^ 4] See INA 203(b)(3). See 8 CFR 204.5(l).

[^ 5] See Matter of Wing's Tea House (PDF), 16 I&N Dec. 158 (Act. Reg. Comm. 1977).

[^ 6] See 8 CFR 204.5(l)(4).

Part G - Investors

Chapter 1 - Purpose and Background

A. Purpose

The Immigration and Nationality Act (INA) makes visas available to qualified immigrant investors who will contribute to the economic growth of the United States by investing in U.S. businesses and creating jobs for U.S. workers.^[1] Congress created this employment-based 5th preference (EB-5) immigrant visa category to benefit the U.S. economy by providing an incentive for foreign capital investment in commercial enterprises that create or preserve U.S. jobs. Petitioners participating in the Regional Center Program, discussed more under the background section below, may meet statutory job creation based on estimates of indirect job creation,^[2] rather than relying only on jobs directly created by the new commercial enterprise.

The INA authorizes approximately 10,000 visas each fiscal year for immigrant investors (including their spouses and unmarried children under the age of 21) who have invested or are actively in the process of investing in a new commercial enterprise and satisfy the applicable job creation requirements. To encourage certain types of investments, Congress amended the INA on March 15, 2022, to reserve 20 percent of the EB-5 visas for investors in rural areas, 10 percent for investors in high unemployment areas, and 2 percent for investors in infrastructure projects.^[3] In addition, EB-5 visas are authorized for investors in the Regional Center Program through September 30, 2027.^[4]

The INA initially established a threshold investment amount of $1,000,000 U.S. dollars per investor and provided the ability to raise the amount by regulation.^[5] On July 24, 2019, DHS published the EB-5 Immigrant Investor Program Modernization Rule (EB-5 Modernization Rule), which raised the investment amount for petitions filed on or after November 21, 2019.^[6] However, on June 22, 2021, the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California in Behring Regional Center LLC v. Wolf vacated the EB-5 Modernization Rule.^[7] Accordingly, USCIS does not apply the amounts from the vacated rule to any petitions, regardless of when filed.

On March 15, 2022, the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022 was signed into law, which raised the standard investment amount to $1,050,000.^[8] Petitions filed on or after March 15, 2022, are subject to this higher amount. The minimum amount for investing in a targeted employment area (TEA) was previously set at 50 percent of the standard minimum investment amount, $500,000 U.S. dollars per investor,^[9] but increased to $800,000 for petitions filed on or after March 15, 2022, and now also includes investments into infrastructure projects.^[10]

The following table outlines the minimum investment amounts by filing date and investment location.

Petition Filing Date	Standard Minimum Investment Amount	Reduced Investment Amount	High Employment Area Investment Amount
Before March 15, 2022 ^[11]	$1,000,000	$500,000 TEA only	$1,000,000
On or After March 15, 2022 ^[12]	$1,050,000	$800,000 TEA and infrastructure projects	$1,050,000

Upon adjustment of status or admission to the United States, immigrant investors and their derivative family members receive conditional permanent resident status for a 2-year period. Ultimately, if the applicable requirements have been satisfied, USCIS removes the conditions and the immigrants become lawful permanent residents (LPRs) of the United States without conditions.

B. Background

1. EB-5 Category Beginnings

In 1990, Congress created the EB-5 immigrant visa category.^[13] The legislation envisioned LPR status, initially for a 2-year conditional period, for immigrant investors who established,^[14] invested (or were actively in the process of investing) in, and engaged in the management of job-creating or job-preserving for-profit enterprises.^[15] Congress placed no restriction on the type of the business if the immigrant investor invested the required capital and directly created at least 10 jobs for U.S. workers.

2. Creation of the Regional Center Program

In 1992, Congress expanded the allowable measure of job creation for the EB-5 category by launching the Immigrant Investor Pilot Program (referred to in this guidance as the Regional Center Program).^[16] Congress designed this program to determine the viability of pooling investments in designated regional centers.^[17]

As originally drafted, the Regional Center Program was different from the direct job creation (standalone) model because it allowed for the use of reasonable economic or statistical methodologies to demonstrate job creation. Reasonable methodologies are used, for example, to credit indirect (including induced) jobs to immigrant investors. Indirect jobs are jobs held outside the enterprise that receives immigrant investor capital.

3. Program Evolution

Congress initially authorized the Regional Center Program as a trial pilot program, set to expire after 5 years. Congress extended the Regional Center Program several times before codifying the Regional Center Program into INA 203(b)(5) as part of the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022, which became effective on May 14, 2022 and authorizes the Regional Center Program through September 30, 2027.^[18] The EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022 also included other substantive revisions to the EB-5 program more generally.^[19]

Evolution of EB-5 Program

Acts and Amendments	Key Changes
Sections 121(a)-(b) of the Immigration Act of 1990 ^[20]	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Congress created the employment-based fifth preference (EB-5) immigrant visa category.• The EB-5 category provides a path to LPR status, initially on a 2-year conditional basis, to qualified immigrant investors who contribute to U.S. economic growth by investing in domestic businesses and creating employment.

Acts and Amendments	Key Changes
	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Intended for immigrant investors to establish, invest in, and engage in the management of job-creating commercial enterprises.
Section 610 of the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act of 1993 ^[21]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Congress created an Immigrant Investor Pilot Program (the Regional Center Program) to have a number of the available EB-5 visas set aside each fiscal year for immigrant investors (and eligible family members) who invest in a commercial enterprise associated with a designated Regional Center. USCIS designated regional centers for the promotion of economic growth. Regional Center investors may claim credit for direct and indirect job creation.^[22]
Sections 11035-37 of the 21st Century Department of Justice Appropriations Authorization Act ^[23]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Included a specific reference to limited partnerships as commercial enterprises and eliminated the requirement that immigrant investors prove they have established a commercial enterprise themselves. Investors need only show they have invested or are actively in the process of investing in a commercial enterprise, among other requirements. Defined full-time employment as employment in a position that requires at least 35 hours of service per week at any time, regardless of who fills the position. Allowed regional center proposals to be based on general but economically and statistically sound predictions submitted with the proposal concerning the kinds of enterprises that will receive capital from immigrant investors, the jobs that will be created directly or indirectly as a result of the investments, and other positive economic effects of the investments.
Section 1 of Pub. L. 112-176 (PDF) ^[24]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Eliminated the word pilot from the name of the Regional Center Program.

Acts and Amendments	Key Changes
Division O, Section 204 of Pub. L. 116-260 (PDF) ^[25]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Last reauthorization of the original Regional Center Program, through June 30, 2021. Starting July 1, 2021, USCIS suspended adjudication of pending Regional Center-affiliated Immigrant Petition by Standalone Investor (Form I-526) petitions and most Regional Center applications.
Sections 101 and 102 of the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022 (PDF) ^[26]	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Repealed Section 610 of the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act,^[27] and codified the substantially reformed Regional Center Program within INA 203(b)(5). Includes several integrity provisions for the Regional Center program as well as more general revisions to the overall EB-5 program, including adjusting to LPR status based on the EB-5 category.

C. Legal Authorities

- INA 203(b)(5); 8 CFR 204.6 (PDF)^[28] – Employment creation immigrants
- INA 204(a)(1)(H)
- INA 216A; 8 CFR 216.6 – Conditional permanent resident status for certain alien entrepreneurs, spouses, and children
- 8 CFR 216.3 – Termination of conditional permanent resident status
- Section 610 of the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act of 1993, repealed on March 15, 2022^[29]
- EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022^[30]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See INA 203(b)(5).

[^ 2] For petitions filed on or after March 15, 2022, there are limits on the percentage of indirect job creation. See Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements, Section D, Creation of Jobs, Subsection 4, Measuring Job Creation [6 USCIS-PM G.2(D)(4)]

[^ 3] See INA 203(b)(5)(B). See the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022, Div. BB of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2022, Pub. L. 117-103 (PDF), 136 Stat. 49 (March 15, 2022).

[^ 4] See INA 203(b)(5)(E). See the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022, Div. BB of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2022, Pub. L. 117-103 (PDF), 136 Stat. 49 (March 15, 2022).

[^ 5] See INA 203(b)(5)(B) and INA 203(b)(5)(C) prior to March 15, 2022.

[^ 6] See 84 FR 35750 (PDF) (July 24, 2019).

[^ 7] See 544 F. Supp. 3d 937 (N.D. Cal. 2021). Because a federal court vacated the Modernization Rule, links to regulations in this chapter are to those regulatory provisions in effect prior to the vacated rule. The regulations also do not reflect any updates to certain provisions superseded by statute. In those situations, such as the investment amount, this chapter cites to the statutory authority instead of the regulations.

[^ 8] See INA 203(b)(5)(C). See the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022, Div. BB of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2022, Pub. L. 117-103, 136 Stat. 49 (March 15, 2022).

[^ 9] See INA 203(b)(5)(B) and INA 203(b)(5)(C) prior to March 15, 2022.

[^ 10] See INA 203(b)(5)(C). See the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022, Div. BB of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2022, Pub. L. 117-103, 136 Stat. 49 (March 15, 2022).

[^ 11] See 8 CFR 204.6(f) (PDF)

[^ 12] See INA 203(b)(5)(C). These amounts automatically adjust on January 1, 2027, and every 5 years thereafter. See INA 203(b)(5)(C)(iii). USCIS will update this Part accordingly.

[^ 13] See Section 121(a) of the Immigration Act of 1990 (IMMACT90), Pub. L. 101-649 (PDF), 104 Stat. 4978, 4987 (November 29, 1990).

[^ 14] In 2002, Congress eliminated the requirement that an immigrant investor establish the new commercial enterprise. See Section 11036 of the 21st Century Department of Justice Appropriations Authorization Act, Pub. L. 107-273 (PDF), 116 Stat. 1758, 1846 (November 2, 2002).

[^ 15] See Sections 121(a)-(b)(1) of IMMACT90, Pub. L. 101-649 (PDF), 104 Stat. 4978, 4987 (November 29, 1990).

[^ 16] See Section 610 of the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, Pub. L. 102-395 (PDF), 106 Stat. 1828, 1874 (October 6, 1992).

[^ 17] See S. Rep. 102-331 at 118 (July 23, 1992).

[^ 18] For information on the current expiration date, see the About the EB-5 Visa Classification webpage.

[^ 19] See the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022, Div. BB of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2022, Pub. L. 117-103, 136 Stat. 49 (March 15, 2022).

[^ 20] See Pub. L. 101-649 (PDF), 104 Stat. 4978, 4987 (November 29, 1990).

[^ 21] See Pub. L. 102-395 (PDF), 106 Stat. 1828, 1874 (October 6, 1992).

[^ 22] For a discussion on indirect jobs, see Chapter 2, Eligibility Requirements, Section D, Creation of Jobs [6 USCIS-PM G.2(D)].

[^ 23] See Pub. L. 107-273 (PDF), 116 Stat. 1758, 1846 (November 2, 2002).

[^ 24] See 126 Stat. 1325, 1325 (September 28, 2012).

[^ 25] See 134 Stat. 1182, 2148 (December 27, 2020).

[^ 26] See the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022, Div. BB of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2022, Pub. L. 117-103, 136 Stat. 49 (March 15, 2022).

[^ 27] See Pub. L. 102-395 (PDF), 106 Stat. 1828, 1874 (October 6, 1992), as amended.

[^ 28] DHS published the EB-5 Immigrant Investor Program Modernization Rule, effective November 21, 2019. See 84 FR 35750, 35808 (July 24, 2019). However, that rule was vacated by Behring Regional Center LLC v. Wolf, 544 F. Supp. 3d 937 (N.D. Cal. 2021). Therefore, all links to regulations in this part are to those in effect prior to that rule.

[^ 29] See Pub. L. 102-395 (PDF, 83.2 KB), 106 Stat. 1828, 1874 (October 6, 1992), as amended. Repealed on March 15, 2022, by the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022, Div. BB of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2022, Pub. L. 117-103, 136 Stat. 49 (March 15, 2022).

[^ 30] See the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022, Div. BB of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2022, Pub. L. 117-103, 136 Stat. 49 (March 15, 2022).

Chapter 2 - Eligibility Requirements

The immigrant investor category requires three main elements:

- An investment of capital;

- Engagement in a new commercial enterprise; and
- Job creation.

Each element is explained in this chapter in the context of:

- The standalone program and the Regional Center Program for petitions filed before March 15, 2022;
- For standalone petitions filed on or after March 15, 2022; and
- New Regional Center Program petitions filed on or after May 14, 2022.^[1]

For the general requirements, the term immigrant investor in this part of the Policy Manual refers to any employment-based 5th preference (EB-5) investor-petitioner, whether investing through the standalone program or the Regional Center Program. Where distinctions between the two programs exist, the term standalone immigrant investor refers to petitioners using the standalone program, and the term regional center immigrant investor refers to petitioners using the Regional Center Program.

A. Investment of Capital

Congress created the immigrant investor category so the U.S. economy can benefit from an immigrant's contribution of capital. This benefit is greatest when capital is at risk and invested in a new commercial enterprise that, because of the investment, creates at least 10 full-time jobs for U.S. workers. The regulations that govern the category define the terms capital and investment with this economic benefit in mind.^[2]

1. Capital

The word capital does not mean only cash. Instead, the broad definition of capital takes into account the many different ways in which a person can make a contribution of financial value to a business.

The following table outlines how the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022 refined the definition of capital.

Definition of Capital

For petitions filed before March 15, 2022	For petitions filed on or after March 15, 2022^[3]
Capital includes cash, equipment, inventory, other tangible property, cash equivalents, and indebtedness secured by assets owned by the immigrant investor, provided the immigrant investor is personally and primarily liable and that the assets of the	Congress has similarly defined "capital" as "cash and all real, personal, or mixed tangible assets owned and controlled by the . . . investor, or held in trust for the benefit of the [investor] and to which the [investor] has unrestricted access." ^[5] Also consistent with past definitions, the statute now provides that

For petitions filed before March 15, 2022	For petitions filed on or after March 15, 2022^[3]
new commercial enterprise upon which the petition is based are not used to secure any of the indebtedness. ^[4] All capital must be valued at fair market value in U.S. dollars.	capital must be valued at fair market value in U.S. dollars, in accordance with Generally Accepted Accounting Principles or other standard accounting practice adopted by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, at the time it is invested. ^[6]

The immigrant investor must establish that they are the legal owner of the capital invested^[7] and has obtained the capital through lawful means. USCIS does not consider as capital any assets acquired directly or indirectly by unlawful means, such as criminal activity.^[8] As of May 14, 2022, gifts and loans to the investor are expressly permitted as capital, provided certain conditions are met.^[9]

Promissory Notes

Capital can include the immigrant investor's promise to pay (a promissory note), as long as the immigrant investor is personally and primarily liable for the promissory note debt and his or her assets adequately secure the note. Any security interest must be perfected^[10] to the extent provided for by the jurisdiction in which the asset is located.^[11] Further, the assets securing the promissory note:

- Cannot include assets of the company in which the immigrant is investing;
- Must be specifically identified as securing the promissory note; and
- Must be fully amenable to seizure by a U.S. noteholder.^[12]

The fair market value of a promissory note depends on its present value, not the value at any different time. In addition, to qualify as capital, nearly all of the money due under a promissory note must be payable within 2 years, without provisions for extensions.^[13]

Investing Indebtedness

When investing indebtedness, an immigrant investor must demonstrate:

- The immigrant investor is personally and primarily liable for the debt;
- The indebtedness is secured by assets the immigrant investor owns; and
- The assets of the new commercial enterprise are not used to secure any of the indebtedness.

The immigrant investor must have primary responsibility, under the loan documents, for repaying the debt used to satisfy his or her minimum required investment amount.^[14]

The immigrant investor must also demonstrate that his or her own collateral secures the indebtedness, and that the value of the collateral is sufficient to secure the amount of indebtedness that satisfies the immigrant investor's minimum required investment amount. Any indebtedness secured by the immigrant investor's assets qualifies as capital only up to the fair market value of the immigrant investor's pledged assets.

2. Investment

The immigrant investor is required to invest his or her own capital. The petitioner must document the path of the funds to establish that the investment was made, or is actively in the process of being made, with the immigrant investor's own funds.^[15] For petitions filed on or after March 15, 2022, the capital must be expected to remain invested for not less than 2 years.^[16]

To invest means to contribute capital. A loan from the immigrant investor to the new commercial enterprise does not count as a contribution of capital. A contribution of capital in exchange for a note, bond, convertible debt, obligation, or any other debt arrangement between the immigrant investor and the new commercial enterprise is not a capital investment.^[17]

To qualify as an investment, the immigrant investor must actually place his or her capital at risk. The mere intent to invest is not sufficient.^[18]

Purchasing a share of a business from an existing shareholder, without more, does not qualify, since the payment goes to the former shareholder rather than to the new commercial enterprise.

Guaranteed Returns

If the immigrant investor is guaranteed a return, or a rate of return, on all or a portion of their capital, then the amount of any guaranteed return is not at risk.^[19] For the capital to be at risk, there must be a risk of loss and a chance for gain.

Additionally, if the investor is guaranteed the right to eventual ownership or use of a particular asset in consideration of the investor's contribution of capital into the new commercial enterprise, the expected present value of the guaranteed ownership or use of such asset counts against the total amount of the investor's capital contribution in determining how much money was placed at risk. For example, if the immigrant investor is given a right of ownership or use of real estate, the present value of that real estate is not counted as investment capital put at risk of loss.^[20]

Nothing prevents an immigrant investor from receiving a return on his or her capital in the form of a distribution of profits from the new commercial enterprise. This distribution of profits may happen during the conditional residency period and may happen before creating the required jobs. However, the distribution cannot be a portion of the investor's minimum qualifying investment and cannot have been guaranteed to the investor.

Redemption Language for Petitions Filed Before March 15, 2022

USCIS relies on regulatory language and precedent decisions to address redemption agreements. The regulatory definition of “invest” excludes capital contributions that are “in exchange for a note, bond, convertible debt, obligation, or any other debt arrangement.”^[21]

An agreement evidencing a preconceived intent to exit the investment as soon as possible after removing conditions on permanent residence may constitute an impermissible debt arrangement.^[22] Funds contributed in exchange for a debt arrangement do not constitute a qualifying contribution of capital.^[23] In general, the petitioner may not enter into the agreement knowing that he or she has a willing buyer at a certain time and for a certain price.^[24]

Any agreement between the immigrant investor and the new commercial enterprise that provides the investor with a contractual right to repayment is an impermissible debt arrangement. In such a case, the investment funds do not constitute a qualifying contribution of capital.^[25] Mandatory redemptions and options exercisable by the investor are two examples of agreements where the investor has a right to repayment. The impermissibility of such an arrangement cannot be remedied with the addition of other requirements or contingencies, such as conditioning the repurchase of the securities on the availability of funds; the delay of the repurchase until a date in the future (including after the adjudication of the Petition by Investor to Remove Conditions on Permanent Resident Status (Form I-829)); or the possibility that the investor might not exercise the right. In other words, repayment does not need to be guaranteed in order to be impermissible. It is the establishment of the investor’s right to demand a repurchase, regardless of the new commercial enterprise’s ability to fulfill the repurchase, that constitutes an impermissible debt arrangement.^[26]

The following table describes certain characteristics that might be present in agreements and explains whether their inclusion creates an impermissible debt arrangement.

Characteristics of Redemption Provisions

Type of Provision	Description	Impermissible Agreement?
Mandatory redemptions	Arrangements that require the new commercial enterprise to redeem all or a portion of the petitioner’s equity at a specified time or upon the occurrence of a specified event (for example, once the conditions are removed on the petitioner’s	USCIS considers this an impermissible debt arrangement. Such impermissible obligations are not subject to the discretion of the new commercial enterprise (although it may have some discretion regarding the timing and manner in which the redemption is performed).

Type of Provision	Description	Impermissible Agreement?
	permanent resident status) and for a specified price (whether fixed or subject to a specified formula).
Options exercisable by the investor	Arrangements that grant the petitioner the option to require the new commercial enterprise to redeem all or a portion of his or her equity at a specified time or upon the occurrence of a specified event (for example, once the conditions are removed on the petitioner's permanent resident status) and for a specified price (whether fixed or subject to a specified formula).	USCIS considers this an impermissible debt arrangement.
Option exercisable by the new commercial enterprise	A redemption agreement between the immigrant investor and the new commercial enterprise that does not provide the investor with a right to repayment. One example of such an agreement is a discretionary option held by the new commercial enterprise to repurchase investor shares. These options are typically structured similarly to options exercisable by the investor, except that the option is held and may be exercised by the new commercial enterprise. When executed, these options require an investor to sell all or a portion of his or her ownership interest back to that entity.	USCIS generally does not consider these arrangements to be impermissible debt arrangements.^[27] However, such an option may be impermissible if there is evidence the parties construct it in a manner that effectively converts it to a mandatory redemption or an option exercisable by the investor (considered a debt arrangement). For example, an arrangement would be impermissible if ancillary provisions or agreements obligate the new commercial enterprise to either (a) exercise the option (at a specified time, upon the occurrence of a specified event, or at the request of the investor) or (b) if it chooses not to exercise the option, liquidate the assets and refund the investor a specific amount.

Type of Provision	Description	Impermissible Agreement?

Redemption Language for Petitions Filed on or after March 15, 2022

On March 15, 2022, Congress enacted specific statutory provisions relating to agreements between the immigrant investor and the new commercial enterprise. For petitions filed on or after March 15, 2022, capital does not include:

- Capital invested in exchange for a note, bond, convertible debt, obligation, or any other debt arrangement between the investor and the new commercial enterprise;
- Capital invested with a guaranteed rate of return on the amount invested by the investor; or
- In general, invested capital that is subject to any agreement between the investor and the new commercial enterprise that provides the investor with a contractual right to repayment, such as a mandatory redemption at a certain time or upon the occurrence of a certain event, or a put or sell-back option held by the investor, even if such contractual right is contingent on the success of the new commercial enterprise, such as having sufficient available cash flow.^[28]

However, the new statutory definition of capital includes (in other words, does not prohibit) capital invested that:

- Is subject to a buy back option that may be exercised solely at the discretion of the new commercial enterprise; and
- Results in the investor withdrawing their petition unless the investor has fulfilled their sustainment period and other program requirements.^[29]

Business Activity

An immigrant investor must provide evidence of the actual undertaking of business activity. Merely establishing and capitalizing a new commercial enterprise and signing a commercial lease are not sufficient to show that an immigrant investor has placed his or her capital at risk.^[30] Without some evidence of business activity, no assurance exists that the funds will be used to carry out the business of the commercial enterprise.^[31]

Made Available

The full amount of the investment must be made available to the business(es) most closely responsible for creating the employment upon which the petition is based.^[32] In the regional center context, the immigrant investor must establish that the capital was invested into the new commercial enterprise and that the full amount was subsequently made available to the job-creating business(es), if separate.

In cases with a separate job-creating entity or entities, the payment of administrative fees, management fees, attorneys' fees, finders' fees, syndication fees, and other types of expenses or costs by the new commercial enterprise that erode the amount of capital made available to the job-creating entity do not count toward the minimum required investment amount.^[33] The payment of these fees and expenses must be in addition to the minimum required capital investment amount.

Sole Proprietors and Funds in Bank Accounts

A standalone investor who is operating a new commercial enterprise as a sole proprietor cannot consider funds in his or her personal bank account as capital committed to the new commercial enterprise. Funds in a personal bank account are not necessarily committed to the new commercial enterprise. The funds must be in business bank accounts.^[34] However, even a deposit into a business account over which petitioner exercises sole control, without more, may not satisfy the at-risk requirement.^[35]

Escrow Accounts

An immigrant investor's money may be held in escrow until the investor has obtained conditional permanent resident status if the immediate and irrevocable release of the escrowed funds is contingent only upon:

- Approval of the investor's petition for classification under INA 203(b)(5); and
- Visa issuance and admission to the United States as a conditional permanent resident, or approval of the investor's Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (Form I-485).

An immigrant investor's funds may be held in escrow within the United States to avoid any evidentiary issues that may arise with respect to issues such as significant currency fluctuations^[36] and foreign capital export restrictions.

Use of foreign escrow accounts is not prohibited as long as the petition establishes that it is more likely than not that the minimum qualifying capital investment will be transferred to the new commercial enterprise in the United States upon the investor obtaining conditional permanent resident status.

When adjudicating the immigrant investor's petition to remove conditions,^[37] USCIS requires evidence verifying that the escrowed funds were released and that the investment was sustained in the new commercial enterprise for the period of the immigrant investor's residence in the United States.

Deployment of Capital

Before the job creation requirement is met, a new commercial enterprise may deploy capital directly or through any financial instrument so long as applicable requirements are satisfied, including the following:

- The immigrant investor must have placed the required amount of capital at risk for the purpose of generating a return on the capital placed at risk;
- There must be a risk of loss and a chance for gain;
- Business activity must actually be undertaken;
- The full amount of the investment must be made available to the business(es) most closely responsible for creating the employment upon which the petition is based;^[38] and
- A sufficient relationship to commercial activity (namely, engagement in commerce, that is, the exchange of goods or services) exists such that the enterprise is and remains commercial.^[39]

The purchase of financial instruments traded on secondary markets generally does not satisfy these requirements because such secondary market purchases generally:

- Are not related to the actual undertaking of business activity;
- Do not make capital available to the job-creating business; and
- Represent an activity that is solely or primarily financial rather than commercial in nature.

Further Deployment After the Job Creation Requirement is Satisfied

Once the job creation requirement has been met and the investment capital is returned or otherwise available to the new commercial enterprise, the new commercial enterprise may further deploy such capital within a reasonable amount of time^[40] in order to satisfy applicable requirements for continued eligibility.^[41] The capital may be further deployed, as described above, into any commercial activity that is consistent with the purpose of the new commercial enterprise to engage in the "ongoing conduct of lawful business,"^[42] including as may be evidenced in any amendments to the offering documents made to describe the further deployment into such activities.^[43]

Consistent with precedent case decisions and existing regulatory requirements, further deployment must continue to meet all applicable eligibility requirements within the framework of the initial bases of eligibility,^[44] including the same new commercial enterprise.^[45] The further deployment does not need to remain with the same (or any) job creating entity or in a targeted employment area (TEA).

For example, if a new commercial enterprise associated with a regional center loaned pooled investment capital to a job-creating entity that created sufficient jobs through the construction of a residential building in a TEA, the new commercial enterprise, upon repayment of the loan that resulted in the required job creation, may generally further deploy the repaid capital anywhere in the United States or its territories (regardless of whether it would qualify as a TEA) into any commercial activity that satisfies applicable requirements such as one or more similar loans to other entities.

For regional center petitions filed on or after May 14, 2022, further deployment is permitted under the following conditions:

- The new commercial enterprise has executed the business plan for a capital investment project in good faith without a material change;
- The new commercial enterprise has created a sufficient number of new full-time positions to satisfy the job creation requirements of the program for all investors in the new commercial enterprise, either directly or indirectly, as evidenced by the methodologies set forth in the statute; ^[46]
- The job creating entity has repaid the capital initially deployed in conformity with the initial investment contemplated by the business plan; and
- The capital, after repayment by the job creating entity, remains at risk and it is not redeployed in passive investments, such as stocks or bonds.^[47]

3. Required Amount of Investment

The immigrant investor must invest at least the standard minimum investment amount in capital in a new commercial enterprise that creates no fewer than 10 jobs for U.S. workers. An exception exists if the immigrant investor invests their capital in a new commercial enterprise that is principally doing business in and creates jobs in a TEA or, for regional center petitions filed on or after May 14, 2022, in an infrastructure project.

This means that the present fair market value, in U.S. dollars, of the immigrant investor's lawfully-derived capital must be at least $1,000,000, or $500,000 if investing in a TEA for petitions filed before March 15, 2022.^[48] For petitions filed on or after March 15, 2022, those amounts are $1,050,000 or $800,000 if investing in a TEA or infrastructure project, and will automatically increase January 1, 2027, and every 5 years thereafter.^[49]

Immigrant investors may diversify their investment across a portfolio of businesses or projects, but only if the minimum investment amount is first placed in a single new commercial enterprise. In such a case, it is necessary to show how eligibility has been established (for example, the minimum investment amount, evidence of an at-risk investment,^[50] and job creation) with respect to each job-creating entity at the time of filing.

For standalone investors, the capital may be deployed into a portfolio of wholly owned businesses, so long as all capital is deployed through a single commercial enterprise comprised of a holding company and its wholly owned subsidiaries and all jobs are created directly within that commercial enterprise (in other words, through the portfolio of wholly owned subsidiaries that received the capital through the holding company).

For example, for a petition filed before March 15, 2022, based on an investment in an area in which the minimum investment amount is $1,000,000, the standalone investor can satisfy the statute by investing in a holding company that deploys $600,000 of the investment toward one subsidiary that the holding company wholly owns, and $400,000 of the investment toward another subsidiary that the holding company wholly owns.^[51] In this example, the two wholly owned subsidiaries would have to create an aggregate of 10 new jobs between them. However, a standalone investor cannot qualify by separately investing $600,000 in one commercial enterprise and $400,000 in a different commercial enterprise, since these enterprises would be separate rather than consisting of a singular commercial enterprise comprised of a holding company and its wholly owned subsidiaries.

In the regional center context, where indirect jobs may be counted, the commercial enterprise may create jobs indirectly through multiple investments in corporate affiliates or in unrelated entities, but the regional center investor cannot qualify by investing directly in those multiple entities. Instead, the regional center investor's capital must still be invested in a single commercial enterprise, which can then deploy that capital to multiple job-creating entities as long as the portfolio of businesses or projects can create the required number of jobs.

4. Lawful Source of Funds

For Petitions Filed before May 14, 2022^[52]

The immigrant investor must demonstrate by a preponderance of the evidence that the capital invested, or actively in the process of being invested, in the new commercial enterprise was obtained through lawful means.^[53] Any assets acquired directly or indirectly by unlawful means, such as criminal activity, are not considered capital.^[54] In establishing that the capital was acquired through lawful means, the immigrant investor must provide evidence demonstrating the direct and indirect source of his or her investment capital.^[55]

As evidence of the lawful source of funds, the immigrant investor's petition must be accompanied, as applicable, by:

- Foreign business registration records;

- Corporate, partnership, or any other entity in any form which has filed in any country or subdivision thereof any return described in this list, and personal tax returns, including income, franchise, property (whether real, personal, intangible), or any other tax returns of any kind filed within 5 years, with any taxing jurisdiction in or outside the United States by or on behalf of the immigrant investor;
- Evidence identifying any other source(s) of capital; or
- Certified copies of any judgments or evidence of all pending governmental civil or criminal actions, governmental administrative proceedings, and any private civil actions (pending or otherwise) involving monetary judgments against the immigrant investor from any court in or outside the United States within the past 15 years.^[56]

The immigrant investor is required to submit evidence identifying any other source of capital. Such evidence may include:

- Corporate, partnership, or other business entity annual reports;
- Audited financial statements;
- Evidence of any loan or mortgage agreement, promissory note, security agreement, or other evidence of borrowing which is secured by the immigrant investor's own assets, other than those of the new commercial enterprise, and for which the immigrant investor is personally and primarily liable;
- Evidence of income such as earnings statements or official correspondence from current or prior employers stating when the immigrant investor worked for the company and how much income the immigrant investor received during employment;
- Gift instrument(s) documenting gifts to the immigrant investor;
- Evidence, other than tax returns,^[57] of payment of individual income tax, such as an individual income tax report or payment certificate, on the following:
 - Wages and salaries;
 - Income from labor and service or business activities;
 - Income or royalties from published books, articles, photographs, or other sources;
 - Royalties or income from patents or special rights;
 - Interest, dividends, and bonuses;
 - Rental income;

- Income from property transfers;
- Any incidental income or other taxable income determined by the relevant financial department;
- Evidence of property ownership, including property purchase or sale documentation; or
- Evidence identifying any other source of capital.

For Petitions Filed on or after May 14, 2022^[58]

Effective on May 14, 2022, the immigrant investor must submit the following evidence, as applicable, to demonstrate the lawful source of the invested funds and any funds used to pay administrative costs and fees:

- Business and tax records, or similar records, including
 - Foreign business registration records; and
 - Corporate or partnership tax returns (or tax returns of any other entity in any form filed in any country or subdivision of such country);
- Personal tax returns, including income, franchise, property (whether real, personal, or intangible), or any other tax returns of any kind, filed during the past 7 years (or another period to be determined by the Secretary to ensure that the investment is obtained from a lawful source of funds) with any taxing jurisdiction within or outside the United States by or on behalf of the investor;
- Any other evidence identifying any other source of capital or administrative fees; and
- Evidence related to monetary judgments against the investor, including:
 - Certified copies of any judgments, and evidence of all pending governmental civil or criminal actions, governmental administrative proceedings, and any private civil actions (pending or otherwise) involving possible monetary judgments against the investor from any court within or outside the United States; and
 - The identity of all persons who transfer into the United States, on behalf of the investor, any funds that are used to meet the capital requirement.^[59]

As of May 14, 2022, by statute, gifts and borrowed funds are expressly permissible for petitions filed on or after that date, provided:

- They were gifted or loaned to the investor in good faith; and

- They were not gifted or loaned to circumvent any limitations imposed on permissible sources of capital, including, but not limited to, proceeds from illegal activity.^[60]

Investors relying on gifted or borrowed funds must demonstrate the lawful source of those funds by submitting the evidence described above for the donor or, if not a bank, the lender.^[61]

5. Targeted Employment Area

A TEA is a rural area or an area that has experienced high unemployment.^[62] A rural area is any area other than an area within a standard metropolitan statistical area (MSA) (as designated by the Office of Management and Budget) or within the outer boundary of any city or town having a population of 20,000 or more based on the most recent decennial census of the United States.^[63] For petitions filed before March 15, 2022, a high unemployment area is an area that has experienced unemployment of at least 150 percent of the national average rate.^[64] For petitions filed on or after March 15, 2022, a high unemployment area is an area designated as such by the Secretary of Homeland Security under INA 203(b)(5)(B)(ii).

Congress provided for a reduced investment amount in a TEA to encourage investment in new commercial enterprises principally doing business in and creating jobs in areas of greatest need. For the lower capital investment amount to apply, the new commercial enterprise into which the immigrant invests or the actual job-creating entity must be principally doing business in the TEA.

A new commercial enterprise is principally doing business in the location where it regularly, systematically, and continuously provides goods or services that support job creation. If the new commercial enterprise provides such goods or services in more than one location, it will be principally doing business in the location most significantly related to the job creation.

Factors considered in determining where a new commercial enterprise is principally doing business include, but are not limited to, the location of:

- Any jobs directly created by the new commercial enterprise;
- Any expenditure of capital related to the creation of jobs;
- The new commercial enterprise's day-to-day operation; and
- The new commercial enterprise's assets used in the creation of jobs.^[65]

Investments through regional centers allow the immigrant investor to seek to establish indirect job creation. In these cases, the job-creating entity, rather than the new commercial enterprise, determines where the entity is principally doing business. The job-creating entity must be principally doing business in the TEA for the lower capital investment amount to apply.^[66]

To demonstrate that the area of the investment is a TEA, the immigrant investor must demonstrate that the TEA meets the statutory and regulatory criteria by submitting:

- For rural areas, evidence that the area is not located within any MSA as designated by the Office of Management and Budget, nor within any city or town having a population of 20,000 or more as based on the most recent decennial census of the United States;^[67]
- For high unemployment areas in petitions filed before March 15, 2022,^[68] either:
 - A letter from the state government designating a geographic or political subdivision located outside a rural area but within its own boundaries as a high unemployment area;^[69] or
 - Unemployment data for the relevant MSA or county;^[70] or
- For high unemployment areas in standalone petitions filed on or after March 15, 2022, a description of the census tract(s) and unemployment statistics that allows USCIS to make a case-specific designation as an area of high unemployment.^[71] The area must consist of the census tract or contiguous census tract(s) in which the new commercial enterprise is principally doing business, and may also include any or all census tracts directly adjacent to such census tract(s).^[72] The immigrant investor must demonstrate that the weighted average of the unemployment rate for the requested area (that is, the area comprised of multiple census tracts), based on the labor force employment measure for each census tract, is at least 150 percent of the national average unemployment rate.^[73]

To promote predictability in the capital investment process, an officer identifies the appropriate date to examine in order to determine whether the immigrant investor's capital investment qualifies for the lower capital investment amount according to the following table:

Targeted Employment Area Analysis

Petition Filing Timeframe	TEA Analysis
Petition filed on or after March 15, 2022	USCIS designates TEAs based on the Immigrant Petition by Standalone Investor (Form I-526) filing for standalone petitions and as part of the Application for Approval of an Investment in a Commercial Enterprise (I-956F), for regional center-affiliated projects. ^[74]
Petitions filed before March 15, 2022, and	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• If the investment of capital is made into the new commercial enterprise, and made available to the job-creating entity in the case of

Petition Filing Timeframe	TEA Analysis
standalone petitions ^[75] filed on or after March 15, 2022	investment through a regional center, before the filing of the Form I-526, then the TEA analysis should focus on whether the area in which the new commercial enterprise, or job-creating entity in the case of investment through a regional center, is principally doing business qualifies as a TEA at the time of the investment. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • If the investment of capital has yet to be made into the new commercial enterprise, or made available to the job-creating entity in the case of investment through a regional center, at the time of the Form I-526 petition filing, then the TEA analysis should focus on whether the area in which the new commercial enterprise, or job-creating entity in the case of investment through a regional center, is principally doing business qualifies as a TEA at the time of the filing of the Form I-526 petition.

A geographic area that once qualified as a TEA may no longer qualify as employment rates or population increase over time. Immigrant investors occasionally request eligibility for the reduced investment threshold based on the fact that other immigrant investors who previously invested in the same new commercial enterprise qualified for the lower capital investment amount. The immigrant investor must establish, however, that at the time of investment or at the time of filing the immigrant petition, as applicable, the geographic area in question qualified as a TEA. An immigrant investor cannot rely on previous TEA determinations made based on facts that have subsequently changed.

For petitions filed on or after March 15, 2022, USCIS designations of TEAs are valid for 2 years from the date of investment for standalone investors or 2 years from the date a regional center properly files the Form I-956F for regional center investors and may be renewed for one or more 2-year periods.^[76] An immigrant investor who has invested the amount of capital required for a TEA during an approved designation does not have to increase their investment if the designation expires.^[77]

The area in question may qualify as a TEA at the time the investment is made or the Form I-526 immigrant petition is filed, whichever occurs first, but may cease to qualify by the time the Petition by Investor to Remove Conditions on Permanent Resident Status (Form I-829) is filed. The investor is not required to demonstrate that the area in question remains a TEA at the time the Form I-829 petition is filed. Changes in population size or unemployment rates within the area during the period of conditional permanent residence are acceptable, since increased job creation is a primary goal, which has been met if the area was a TEA at the time the investment was made, or the Form I-526 was filed.

A State's Designation of a Targeted Employment Area Before March 15, 2022

For petitions filed before March 15, 2022, a state government could designate a geographic or political subdivision within its boundaries as a TEA based on high unemployment. Before the state could make such a designation, an official of the state must have notified USCIS of the agency, board, or other appropriate state governmental body that would be delegated the authority to certify that the geographic or political subdivision was a high unemployment area.^[78] The state was then able to send a letter from the authorized body of the state certifying that the geographic or political subdivision of the MSA or of the city or town with a population of 20,000 or more in which the enterprise is principally doing business had been designated a high unemployment area.^[79]

Consistent with the regulations in effect before March 15, 2022, USCIS deferred to state determinations of the appropriate boundaries of a geographic or political subdivision that constitutes the TEA. However, for all TEA designations, USCIS still ensured compliance with the statutory requirement that the proposed area designated by the state had an unemployment rate of at least 150 percent above the national average. To do this, USCIS reviewed state determinations of the unemployment rate and assessed the method or methods by which the state authority obtained the unemployment statistics.

Acceptable data sources for calculating unemployment included U.S. Census Bureau data (including data from the American Community Survey) and data from the Bureau of Labor Statistics (including data from Local Area Unemployment Statistics).

There has never been a provision allowing a state to designate a rural area.

6. Infrastructure Projects

For regional center-based petitions filed on or after May 14, 2022, investors may qualify for the reduced investment amount by investing in an infrastructure project. These projects are ones:

- That are administered by a governmental entity (such as a federal, state, or local agency or authority);
- Where the governmental entity, which serves as the job-creating entity, contracts with a regional center or new commercial enterprise to receive capital investment under the regional center program from investors or the new commercial enterprise; and
- That involve financing for maintaining, improving, or constructing a public works project.^[80]

USCIS determines whether a project meets the definition of infrastructure project during adjudication of the Form I-956F.^[81] A standalone investor cannot establish eligibility through an infrastructure project.

B. Comprehensive Business Plan

For standalone investor petitions filed at any time and regional center investor petitions filed before March 15, 2022, a comprehensive business plan should contain, at a minimum, a description of the business, its products or services (or both), and its objectives.^[82]

The plan should contain a market analysis, including the names of competing businesses and their relative strengths and weaknesses, a comparison of the competition's products and pricing structures, and a description of the target market and prospective customers of the new commercial enterprise. The plan should list the required permits and licenses obtained. If applicable, it should describe the manufacturing or production process, the materials required, and the supply sources.

The plan should detail any contracts executed for the supply of materials or the distribution of products. It should discuss the marketing strategy of the business, including pricing, advertising, and servicing. The plan should set forth the business's organizational structure and its personnel's experience. It should explain the business's staffing requirements and contain a timetable for hiring, as well as job descriptions for all positions. It should contain sales, costs, and income projections and detail the basis of such projections.

Most importantly, the business plan must be credible.^[83]

USCIS reviews business plans in their totality. An officer must determine if it is more likely than not that the business plan is comprehensive and credible. A business plan is not required to contain all of the detailed elements, but the more details the business plan contains, the more likely it is that USCIS considers the plan comprehensive and credible.^[84]

As of May 14, 2022, regional centers file a Form I-956F before investors file their Immigrant Petition by Regional Center Investor (Form I-526E).^[85] USCIS will provide more guidance on these applications on USCIS' EB-5 Questions and Answers: EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022 webpage and later Policy Manual chapters.

C. New Commercial Enterprise

A new commercial enterprise is any commercial enterprise established after November 29, 1990.^[86] Therefore, the immigrant investor can invest the required amount of capital in a commercial enterprise established after November 29, 1990, provided the remaining eligibility criteria are met.

The following table outlines the definition of new commercial enterprise, depending on when the petition was filed.

Petitions filed before March 15, 2022	Petitions filed on or after March 15, 2022
A commercial enterprise is any for-profit activity formed for the ongoing conduct of lawful business.^[87] This broad definition is consistent with the realities of the business world and the many different forms and structures that job-creating activities can have. Types of commercial enterprises include, but are not limited to: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Sole proprietorship; • Partnership (whether limited or general); • Holding company; • Joint venture; • Corporation; • Business trust; or • Other entity, which may be publicly or privately owned.^[88] A commercial enterprise can consist of a holding company and its wholly owned subsidiaries, provided that each such subsidiary is engaged in a for-profit activity formed for the ongoing conduct of a lawful business. Noncommercial activities, including owning and operating a personal residence, do not qualify.^[89] The commercial enterprise must be formed to make a profit, unlike, for example, some charitable organizations.	The term new commercial enterprise means any for-profit organization formed in the United States for the ongoing conduct of lawful business, including sole proprietorship, partnership (whether limited or general), holding company and its wholly owned subsidiaries (provided that each subsidiary is engaged in a for-profit activity formed for the ongoing conduct of a lawful business), joint venture, corporation, business trust, limited liability company, or other entity (which may be publicly or privately owned) that receives, or is established to receive, capital investment from immigrant investors.^[90]

1. Enterprise Established on or before November 29, 1990

A new commercial enterprise also includes a commercial enterprise established on or before November 29, 1990, if the enterprise will be restructured or expanded through the immigrant's investment of capital.

Purchase of an Existing Business that is Restructured or Reorganized

The immigrant investor can invest in a business that existed on or before November 29, 1990, provided that the existing business is simultaneously or subsequently restructured or reorganized such that a new commercial enterprise results.^[91] Cosmetic changes to the décor, a new marketing strategy, or a simple change in ownership do not qualify as restructuring.^[92]

However, a business plan that modifies an existing business, such as converting a restaurant into a nightclub or adding substantial crop production to an existing livestock farm, could qualify as a restructuring or reorganization.

Expansion of an Existing Business

The immigrant investor can invest in a business that existed on or before November 29, 1990, provided a substantial change in the net worth or number of employees results from the investment of capital.^[93]

Substantial change is defined as a 40 percent increase either in the net worth or in the number of employees, so that the new net worth or number of employees amounts to at least 140 percent of the pre-expansion net worth or number of employees.^[94]

Investment in a new commercial enterprise in this manner does not exempt the immigrant investor from meeting the requirements relating to the amount of capital that must be invested and the number of jobs that must be created.^[95]

2. Pooled Investments in Original EB-5 Program

For petitions filed before March 15, 2022, a new commercial enterprise may be used as the basis for the petitions of more than one standalone immigrant investor. For petitions filed on or after March 15, 2022, pooled investments with more than one EB-5 investor are only permitted under the regional center program.^[96] For petitions filed before March 15, 2022, each standalone immigrant investor must invest the required amount of capital and each immigrant investor's investment must result in the required number of jobs. Furthermore, the new commercial enterprise can have owners who are not immigrant investors provided that the sources of all capital invested are identified and all invested capital has been derived by lawful means.^[97]

3. Documentation of New Commercial Enterprise

Except for petitions filed by regional center investors on or after May 14, 2022,^[98] to document the new commercial enterprise, the immigrant investor must present the following evidence, in addition to any other evidence that USCIS deems appropriate:

- As applicable, articles of incorporation, certificate of merger or consolidation, partnership agreement, certificate of limited partnership, joint venture agreement, business trust agreement, or other similar organizational document for the new commercial enterprise;
- A certificate evidencing authority to do business in a state or municipality or, if the form of the business does not require any such certificate or the state or municipality does not issue such a certificate, a statement to that effect; or
- Evidence that, after November 29, 1990, the required amount of capital for the area in which an enterprise is located has been transferred to an existing business, and that the investment has resulted in a substantial increase in the net worth or number of employees of the business to which the capital was transferred.

This evidence must be in the form of stock purchase agreements, investment agreements, certified financial reports, payroll records, or any similar instruments, agreements, or documents evidencing the investment in the commercial enterprise and the resulting substantial change in the net worth or number of employees.^[99]

4. Investment in New Commercial Enterprise

To show that the immigrant investor has committed the required amount of capital to the new commercial enterprise, the evidence presented may include, but is not limited to, the following:

- Bank statements showing amounts deposited in U.S. business accounts for the enterprise;
- Evidence of assets which have been purchased for use in the U.S. enterprise, including invoices, sales receipts, and purchase contracts containing sufficient information to identify such assets, their purchase costs, date of purchase, and purchasing entity;
- Evidence of property transferred from abroad for use in the U.S. enterprise, including U.S. Customs and Border Protection commercial entry documents, bills of lading, and transit insurance policies containing ownership information and sufficient information to identify the property and to indicate the fair market value of such property;
- Evidence of monies transferred or committed to be transferred to the new commercial enterprise in exchange for shares of stock (voting or nonvoting, common or preferred). Such stock may not include terms requiring the new commercial enterprise to redeem it at the holder's request; or
- Evidence of any loan or mortgage agreement, promissory note, security agreement, or other evidence of borrowing secured by the immigrant investor's assets, other than those of the new commercial enterprise, and for which the immigrant investor is personally and primarily liable.

[100]

5. Engagement in Management of New Commercial Enterprise

The immigrant investor must be engaged in the management of the new commercial enterprise, either through the exercise of day-to-day managerial responsibility or through policy formulation.[101]

To show that the immigrant investor is or will be engaged in the exercise of day-to-day managerial control or policy formulation, the immigrant investor must submit:

- A statement of the position title that the immigrant investor has or will have in the new enterprise and a complete description of the position's duties;[102]
- Evidence that the immigrant investor is a corporate officer or a member of the corporate board of directors;[103] or
- If the new enterprise is a partnership, either limited or general, evidence that the immigrant investor is engaged in either direct management or policymaking activities. The immigrant investor is sufficiently engaged in the management of the new commercial enterprise if the investor is a limited partner and the limited partnership agreement provides the investor with certain rights, powers, and duties normally granted to limited partners under the Uniform Limited Partnership Act.[104]

D. Creation of Jobs

The creation of jobs for U.S. workers is a critical element of the EB-5 category. It is not enough that the immigrant investor invests funds into the U.S. economy. The investment of the required amount of capital must be in a new commercial enterprise that creates[105] at least 10 jobs for qualifying employees. It is important to recognize that while the investment must result in the creation of jobs for qualifying employees, it is the new commercial enterprise that creates the jobs.[106]

Example: Standalone Investments Before March 15, 2022

Ten standalone immigrant investors seek to establish a hotel as their new commercial enterprise. The establishment of the new hotel requires capital to pay financing costs to unrelated third parties, purchase the land, develop the plans, obtain the licenses, build the structure, maintain the grounds, staff the hotel, as well as many other types of expenses involved in the development and operation of a new hotel.

The standalone immigrant investor's capital can be used to pay part or all of these expenses. Each standalone immigrant investor's investment of capital helps the new commercial enterprise (the new hotel) create 10 jobs. The 10 immigrants' investments must result in the new hotel's creation of 100 jobs (10 jobs for each investor's capital investment) for qualifying employees.^[107]

1. Bridge Financing

A developer or principal of a new commercial enterprise, either directly or through a separate job-creating entity, may use interim, temporary, or bridge financing, in the form of either debt or equity, prior to receipt of immigrant investor capital. If the project starts based on the interim or bridge financing prior to receiving immigrant investor capital and subsequently replaces that financing with immigrant investor capital, the new commercial enterprise may still receive credit for the job creation under the regulations.

Generally, the replacement of temporary or bridge financing with immigrant investor capital should have been contemplated prior to acquiring the original temporary financing. However, even if the immigrant investor financing was not contemplated prior to acquiring the temporary financing, as long as the financing to be replaced was contemplated as short-term temporary financing that would be subsequently replaced by more permanent long-term financing, the infusion of immigrant investor financing could still result in the creation of, and credit for, new jobs.

For example, if traditional financing originally contemplated to replace the temporary financing is no longer available to the commercial enterprise, a developer is not precluded from using immigrant investor capital as an alternative source. Immigrant investor capital may replace temporary financing even if this arrangement was not contemplated prior to obtaining the bridge or temporary financing.

The full amount of the immigrant's investment must be made available to the business or businesses most closely responsible for creating the jobs upon which eligibility is based. In the regional center context if the new commercial enterprise is not the job-creating entity, then the full amount of the capital must be invested first in the new commercial enterprise and then made available to the job-creating entity or entities.^[108]

2. Multiple Job-Creating Entities

If invested in a single new commercial enterprise and where the offering and organizational documents provide, an investor's full investment may be distributed to more than one job-creating entity in a portfolio investment strategy. The record must demonstrate that the new commercial enterprise will create the requisite jobs through the portfolio of projects. In addition, each investor (or regional center for regional center-based petitions filed on or after May 14, 2022) must demonstrate that the full amount of money is made available to the business(es) most closely responsible for creating the employment upon which the petition is based, which may be one or multiple job-creating entities in a portfolio.

3. Full-Time Positions for Qualifying Employees

The investment into a new commercial enterprise must create full-time positions for not fewer than 10 qualifying employees.^[109] An employee is defined as a person who provides services or labor for the new commercial enterprise and who receives wages or other remuneration directly from the new commercial enterprise. In the case of the Regional Center Program, an employee also means a person who provides services or labor in a job that has been created indirectly through investment in the new commercial enterprise.^[110]

Qualifying Employee

For the purpose of the job creation requirement, the employee must be a qualifying employee. A qualifying employee is a U.S. citizen, a lawfully admitted permanent resident, or other immigrant lawfully authorized for employment in the United States including, but not limited to, a conditional resident, a temporary resident, an asylee, a refugee, or a noncitizen remaining in the United States under suspension of deportation. This definition does not include the immigrant investor, the immigrant investor's spouse, sons, daughters, or any nonimmigrant.^[111]

Full-Time Employment

For the purpose of the job creation requirement, the position must be a full-time employment position.^[112] Full-time employment is defined as employment of a qualifying employee by the new commercial enterprise in a position that requires a minimum of 35 working hours per week.^[113] In the case of the Regional Center Program, full-time employment also means employment of a qualifying employee in a position that has been created indirectly that requires a minimum of 35 working hours per week.

Two or more qualifying employees can fill a full-time employment position in a job-sharing arrangement. Job sharing is permissible so long as the 35 working hours per week requirement is met. However, the definition of full-time employment does not include combinations of part-time positions, even if those positions when combined meet the hourly requirement per week.^[114]

A job-sharing arrangement whereby two or more qualifying employees share a full-time position counts as full-time employment provided the hourly requirement per week is met. To demonstrate that a full-time position is shared by more than one employee, the following evidence, among others, may be relevant:

- A written job-sharing agreement;
- A weekly schedule that identifies the positions subject to a job-sharing arrangement and the hours to be worked by each employee under the job-sharing arrangement; and
- Evidence of the sharing of the responsibilities or benefits of a permanent, full-time position between the employees subject to the job-sharing arrangement.

Jobs that are intermittent, temporary, seasonal, or transient in nature do not qualify as permanent full-time jobs. However, jobs that are expected to last at least 2 years are generally not considered intermittent, temporary, seasonal, or transient in nature.

4. Measuring Job Creation

The immigrant investor seeking to enter the United States through the EB-5 program must invest the required amount of capital in a new commercial enterprise that will create full-time positions for at least 10 qualifying employees. There are three methods of measuring job creation depending on the new commercial enterprise and where it is located.

Troubled Business

The U.S. economy benefits when the immigrant investor's capital helps preserve the troubled business's existing jobs. Immigrant investors investing in a new commercial enterprise that is a troubled business, must show that the number of existing employees in the troubled business is being, or will be, maintained at no less than the pre-investment level for a period of at least 2 years.^[115] This applies in the regional center context as well.

The troubled business regulatory provision does not decrease the number of jobs required. An immigrant investor who invests in a troubled business must still demonstrate that 10 jobs have been preserved, created, or some combination of the two. For example, an investment in a troubled business that creates four qualifying jobs and preserves all six pre-investment jobs would satisfy the job creation requirement.

The regulatory definition of a troubled business is a business that has:

- Been in existence for at least 2 years;
- Has incurred a net loss for accounting purposes (determined on the basis of generally accepted accounting principles) during the 12-month or 24-month period prior to the priority date on the Immigrant Petition by Alien Investor (Form I-526); and
- Had a loss for the same period at least equal to 20 percent of the troubled business's net worth prior to the loss.^[116]

For purposes of determining whether or not the troubled business has been in existence for 2 years, USCIS deems the successors-in-interest to the troubled business to have been in existence for the same period of time as the business they succeeded.^[117]

New Commercial Enterprise Not Located Within a Regional Center

For a new commercial enterprise not located within a regional center, the full-time positions must be created directly by the new commercial enterprise to be counted. This means that the new commercial enterprise (or its wholly owned subsidiaries) must itself be the employer of the qualifying employees. [118]

New Commercial Enterprise Located Within a Regional Center

For regional center-based petitions filed before July 1, 2021, the date that the previous authorization of the regional center program lapsed, full-time positions can be created either directly or indirectly by a new commercial enterprise located within a designated regional center.^[119] For regional center-based petitions filed on or after March 15, 2022, up to 90 percent of full-time positions may be created indirectly.^[120] The general EB-5 program requirements still apply to investors investing in new commercial enterprises in the regional center context except that they may rely on indirect job creation. Employees filling indirect jobs do not work directly for the new commercial enterprise. Immigrant investors must use reasonable methodologies to establish the number of indirect jobs created.^[121]

Direct jobs are those jobs that establish an employer-employee relationship between the new commercial enterprise and the persons it employs. For regional center-based petitions filed on or after March 15, 2022, direct jobs that count towards the requisite 10 percent of jobs include direct employees, including those estimated by economically and statistically valid methodologies, of both the new commercial enterprise and the job creating entity.^[122]

Indirect jobs are those that are held outside of the new commercial enterprise but are created as a result of the new commercial enterprise. For example, indirect jobs can include, but are not limited to, those held by employees of the job-creating entity (when the job-creating entity is not the new commercial enterprise) as well as employees of producers of materials, equipment, or services used by the new commercial enterprise or job-creating entity.

In addition, a sub-set of indirect jobs, known as induced jobs, are created when the new direct and indirect employees spend their earnings on consumer goods and services. Indirect jobs can qualify and be counted as jobs attributable to a new commercial enterprise associated with a regional center, based on reasonable methodologies, even if the jobs are located outside of the geographic boundaries of a regional center.

For petitions filed on or after May 15, 2022, Congress enacted certain limits on how jobs created by construction activity lasting less than 2 years can count towards estimated indirect and direct jobs.^[123]

Due to the nature of accepted job creation modeling practices, USCIS relies upon reasonable economic models to determine that it is more likely than not that the indirect jobs are created. USCIS may request additional evidence that the indirect jobs created, or to be created, are full-time. USCIS may also request additional evidence to verify that the direct jobs (those held at the new commercial enterprise) will be or are full-time and permanent, which may include a review of W-2 forms or similar evidence.

Multiple Investors

For petitions filed on or after March 15, 2022, pooled investments with more than one EB-5 investor are only permitted under the regional center program.^[124] For petitions filed before March 15, 2022, and all regional center-based petitions, when there are multiple investors in a new commercial enterprise, USCIS allocates the total number of full-time positions created for qualifying employees only to those immigrant investors who have used the establishment of the new commercial enterprise as the basis for their immigrant petition. An allocation does not need to be made among persons not seeking classification through the EB-5 category. Also, jobs need not be allocated to non-natural persons, such as corporations investing in a new commercial enterprise.^[125] USCIS allocates full-time positions to immigrant investors based on the date their petition to remove conditions was filed, unless otherwise stated in the relevant documents.^[126]

In general, multiple immigrant investors may not claim credit for the same job. An immigrant investor may not seek credit for the same specifically identified job position that has already been allocated to another immigrant investor in a previously approved case.

5. Evidence of Job Creation

To show that a new commercial enterprise will create no fewer than 10 full-time positions for qualifying employees, and except as provided below for regional center-based petitions filed on or after May 14, 2022, an immigrant investor must submit the following evidence:

- Documentation consisting of photocopies of relevant tax records, Employment Eligibility Verification (Form I-9), or other similar documents for 10 qualifying employees, if such employees have already been hired; or
- A copy of a comprehensive business plan showing that, due to the nature and projected size of the new commercial enterprise, the need for not fewer than 10 qualifying employees will result within the next 2 years and the approximate dates employees will be hired.^[127]

The 2-year period^[128] is deemed to begin 6 months after adjudication of Form I-526. The business plan filed with the immigrant petition should reasonably demonstrate that the requisite number of jobs will be created by the end of this 2-year period.

Troubled Business

In the case of a troubled business, a comprehensive business plan must accompany the other required evidentiary documents.^[129]

In the case of a new commercial enterprise within a regional center, the direct or indirect job creation may be demonstrated by the types of documents identified in this section along with reasonable methodologies.^[130] If a regional center immigrant investor seeks to rely on jobs that will be created to satisfy the job creation requirement, a comprehensive business plan is required.

Additionally, if the regional center immigrant investor seeks to demonstrate job creation through the use of an economic input-output model, USCIS requires the investor to demonstrate that the methodology is reasonable. For example, if the inputs into the input-output model reflect jobs created directly at the new commercial enterprise or job-creating entity, USCIS requires the investor to demonstrate that the direct jobs input is reasonable. Relevant documentation may include Form I-9, tax or payroll records or if the jobs are not yet in existence, a comprehensive business plan demonstrating how many jobs will be created and when the jobs will be created.

If the inputs into the model reflect expenditures, USCIS requires the investor to demonstrate that the expenditures input is reasonable. Relevant documentation may include receipts and other financial records for expenditures that have occurred and a detailed projection of sales, costs, and income projections such as a pro-forma cash flow statement associated with the business plan for expenditures that will occur.

If the inputs into the model reflect revenues, USCIS requires the investor to demonstrate that the revenues input is reasonable. Relevant documentation may include tax or other financial records for revenues that have occurred or a detailed projection of sales, costs, and income projections such as a pro-forma income statement associated with the business plan for revenues that will occur.

In reviewing whether an economic methodology is reasonable, USCIS analyzes whether the multipliers and assumptions about the geographic impact of the project are reasonable. For example, when reviewing the geographic level of the multipliers used in an input-output model, the following factors, among others, may be considered:

- The area's demographic structure (for example, labor pool supply, work-force rate, population growth, and population density);
- The area's contribution to supply chains of the project; and
- Connectivity with respect to socioeconomic variables in the area (for example, income level and purchasing power).

Regional Center-Based Petitions Filed on or after May 14, 2022

As of May 14, 2022, regional centers file a Form I-965F with USCIS before a regional center investor may file an individual petition.

6. Guidance on Tenant Occupancy Methodology

As of May 15, 2018, USCIS rescinded its prior guidance on tenant occupancy methodology. That update applies to all USCIS employees with respect to determinations of all Immigrant Petitions by Alien Investors (Form I-526), Petitions by Investors to Remove Conditions on Permanent Resident Status (Form I-829), and Applications for Regional Center Designation Under the Immigrant Investor Program (Form I-924) filed on or after that date. USCIS also gives deference to Form I-526 and Form I-829 petitions directly related to projects approved before May 15, 2018, absent material change, fraud or misrepresentation, or legal deficiency of the prior determination.^[131]

Previously, on December 20, 2012, USCIS had issued policy guidance defining the criteria to be used in the adjudication of applications and petitions relying on tenant occupancy to establish indirect jobs. ^[132] In November 2016, USCIS published consolidated policy guidance on immigrant investors in this Policy Manual, including guidance on the tenant occupancy methodology. That guidance provided that investors could (1) map a specific amount of direct, imputed, or subsidized investment to new jobs, or (2) use a facilitation-based approach to demonstrate the project would remove a significant market-based constraint.

The first method requires mapping a specific amount of direct, imputed, or subsidized investment to new jobs such that there is an equity or direct financial connection between the EB-5 capital investment and the employees of prospective tenants. In practice, however, the construction of standard office or retail space alone does not lead to a sufficient connection for this type of mapping such that tenant jobs can be credited to the new commercial enterprise. The existence of numerous other factors, such as the identity of future tenants and demand for that type of business, makes it difficult to relate individual jobs to a specific space.

The second method looks at whether the investment removes a significant market-based constraint, referred to in the 2012 guidance as the “facilitation based approach.” In providing this approach as an option, USCIS explicitly allowed applicants and petitioners to avoid having to establish an equity or direct financial connection between the EB-5 capital investment and the employees of prospective tenants. As of May 15, 2018, however, USCIS determined that that allowance was ill-advised, because a direct financial connection between the EB-5 capital investment and the job creation is necessary to determine a sufficient nexus between the two. Reliance on a showing of constraint on supply or excess of demand by itself does not establish a causal link between specific space and a net new labor demand such that it would overcome the lack of a sufficient nexus.

Moreover, allowing applicants and petitioners to use prospective tenant jobs as direct inputs into regional growth models to generate the number of indirect and induced jobs that result from the credited tenant jobs leads to a more attenuated and less verifiable connection to the investment. There is also no reasonable test to confirm that jobs claimed through either tenant-occupancy methodology are new rather than relocated jobs such that they should qualify as direct inputs in the first place.

In sum, tenant-occupancy methodologies described in the 2012 Operational Guidance and previously incorporated into the Policy Manual result in a connection or nexus between the investment and jobs that is too tenuous^[133] and therefore are no longer considered reasonable methodologies or valid forecasting tools under the regulations.^[134]

As of May 14, 2022, regional center petitioners may include jobs estimated to be created under a methodology that attributes jobs to prospective tenants occupying commercial real estate created or improved by capital investments if the number of such jobs estimated to be created has been determined by an economically and statistically valid methodology and such jobs are not existing jobs that have been relocated.^[135]

E. Burden of Proof

The petitioner or applicant must establish each element by a preponderance of the evidence.^[136] The petitioner or applicant does not need to remove all doubt. Even if an officer has some doubt as to the truth, if the petitioner or applicant submits relevant, probative, and credible evidence that leads to the conclusion that the claim is more likely than not (that is, probably true), the petitioner or applicant has satisfied the preponderance of evidence standard.

F. Priority Dates

A priority date is the date the completed, signed petition is properly filed with USCIS.^[137]

If an immigrant investor files an amended Form I-526E in the case of termination or debarment of the petitioner's regional center, new commercial enterprise, or job-creating entity, the petitioner may use the priority date of their original petition for purposes of the amended Form I-526E filed on or after May 15, 2022, for which the petitioner qualifies.^[138]

Footnotes

[^ 1] The effective date for the newly codified regional center program is 60 days after the March 15, 2022, enactment date. See Section 103(b)(2) of the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022, Div. BB of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2022, Pub. L. 117-103 (PDF), 136 Stat. 49 (March 15, 2022).

[^ 2] See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF). DHS published the EB-5 Immigrant Investor Program Modernization Rule, effective November 21, 2019. See 84 FR 35750, 35808 (July 24, 2019). However, that rule was vacated by Behring Regional Center LLC v. Wolf, 544 F. Supp. 3d 937 (N.D. Cal. 2021). Therefore, all links to regulations in this chapter are to those in effect prior to that rule.

[^ 3] The effective date for the newly codified regional center program is 60 days after the March 15, 2022, enactment date. See Section 103(b)(2) of the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022, Div. BB of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2022, Pub. L. 117-103, 136 Stat. 49 (March 15, 2022).

[^ 4] See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF).

[^ 5] See INA 203(b)(5)(D)(ii).

[^ 6] See INA 203(b)(5)(D)(ii).

[^ 7] See Matter of Ho (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 206 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 8] See S. Rep. No. 101-55 (1989). See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF). See INA 203(b)(5)(D)(ii) and INA 203(b)(5)(L). For more discussion of lawful source of funds requirements, see Subsection 4, Lawful Source of Funds [6 USCIS-PM G.2(A)(4)].

[^ 9] See INA 203(b)(5)(L)(iii). For more discussion of gifts and loans, see Subsection 4, Lawful Source of Funds [6 USCIS-PM G.2(A)(4)].

[^ 10] Perfecting a security interest relates to the additional steps required to make a security interest effective against third parties or to retain its effectiveness in the event of default by the grantor of the security interest.

[^ 11] See Matter of Hsiung (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 201, 202 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 12] See Matter of Hsiung (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 201, 202-03 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 13] See Matter of Izummi (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 169, 193-94 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 14] See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF). USCIS no longer follows its interpretation of indebtedness as including the investment of loan proceeds as of November 30, 2018, the date of the district court decision Zhang v. USCIS, 978 F.3d 1314 (D.C. Cir. 2020).

[^ 15] See Matter of Izummi (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 169, 195 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 16] See INA 203(b)(5)(A)(i).

[^ 17] See INA 203(b)(5)(D)(ii)(III)(bb). See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF).

[^ 18] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(2) (PDF).

[^ 19] See Matter of Izummi (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 169, 180-188 (Assoc. Comm. 1998). For petitions filed on or after March 15, 2022, INA 203(b)(5)(D)(ii)(III)(cc) also applies.

[^ 20] See Matter of Izummi (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 169, 184 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 21] The full definition of invest is provided at 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF).

[^ 22] See Matter of Izummi (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 169, 183-188 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 23] EB-5 regulations contain two basic requirements in order to have a legitimate qualifying investment: (1) 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF) defines “invest” to require a qualifying (that is, non-prohibited) contribution of capital; and (2) 8 CFR 204.6(j)(2) (PDF) requires a qualifying use of such capital (placing such capital at risk for the purpose of generating a return). In order to satisfy the evidentiary requirement set forth at 8 CFR 204.6(j)(2) (PDF), an investor must first properly contribute capital in accordance with the definition of invest at 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF). If the contribution of capital fails to meet the definition of invest, it is not a qualifying investment, even if it is at risk for the purpose of generating a return.

[^ 24] See Matter of Izummi (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 169, 186-187 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 25] See Matter of Izummi (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 169, 188 (Assoc. Comm. 1998). Matter of Izummi (PDF) addressed redemption agreements in general, and not only those where the investor holds the right to repayment. USCIS generally disfavors redemption provisions that indicate a preconceived intent to exit the investment as soon as possible, and notes that one district court has drawn the line at whether the investor holds the right to repayment. See Chang v. USCIS, 289 F. Supp.3d 177 (D.D.C. Feb. 7, 2018).

[^ 26] See Matter of Izummi (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 169 (185-86) (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 27] See Matter of Izummi (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 169, 188 (Assoc. Comm. 1998). See Chang v. USCIS, 289 F. Supp.3d 177 (D.D.C. Feb. 7, 2018).

[^ 28] See INA 203(b)(5)(D)(ii)(III).

[^ 29] See INA 203(b)(5)(D)(ii)(IV).

[^ 30] See Matter of Ho (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 206, 209-210 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 31] See Matter of Ho (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 206, 210 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 32] See Matter of Izummi (PDF), 22 I&N 169, 179, 189 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 33] See Matter of Izummi (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 169, 178-79 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 34] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(2) (PDF).

[^ 35] See Matter of Ho (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 206, 210 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 36] When funds are held in escrow outside the United States, USCIS reviews currency exchange rates at the time of adjudicating the Form I-526 petition to determine if it is more likely than not that the petitioner will make the minimum qualifying capital investment. With the Petition by Investor to Remove Conditions on Permanent Resident Status (Form I-829), USCIS reviews the evidence in the record, including currency exchange rates at the time of transfer, to determine that, when the funds were actually transferred to the United States, the petitioner actually made the minimum qualifying capital investment.

[^ 37] See Petition by Investor to Remove Conditions on Permanent Resident Status (Form I-829).

[^ 38] See Matter of Ho (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 206, 209-210 (Assoc. Comm. 1998). See Matter of Izummi (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 169, 179, 189 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 39] See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF).

[^ 40] Based on an internal review and analysis of typical EB-5 capital deployment structures, USCIS generally considers 12 months to be a reasonable amount of time to further deploy capital for most types of commercial enterprises but considers evidence showing that a longer period is reasonable for a specific type of commercial enterprise or into a specific commercial activity under the totality of the circumstances.

[^ 41] The requirement to make the full amount of capital available to the business(es) most closely responsible for creating the employment upon which the petition is based is generally satisfied through the initial deployment of capital resulting in the creation of the required number of jobs.

[^ 42] See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF) for the definition of commercial enterprise.

[^ 43] This clarification is meant to address potential confusion among stakeholders regarding prior language about the “scope” of the new commercial enterprise while remaining consistent with applicable eligibility requirements.

[^ 44] See 8 CFR 103.2(b)(1). See Matter of Izummi (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 169, 175-6, 189 (Assoc. Comm. 1998). See Chapter 4, Immigrant Petition by Alien Investor (Form I-526), Section C, Material Change [6 USCIS-PM G.4(C)].

[^ 45] See INA 203(b)(5)(A), which refers to a single new commercial enterprise: “Visas shall be made available . . . to qualified immigrants seeking to enter the United States for the purpose of engaging in a new commercial enterprise.”

[^ 46] See INA 203(b)(5)(E)(iv) and INA 203(b)(5)(E)(v).

[^ 47] See INA 203(b)(5)(F)(v).

[^ 48] In a rule effective November 21, 2019, DHS raised the investment amounts to $1,800,000 and $900,000. See 84 FR 35750, 35808 (PDF) (July 24, 2019). On June 22, 2019, however, a federal court vacated that rule. See Behring Regional Center LLC v. Wolf, 544 F. Supp. 3d 937 (N.D. Cal. 2021). Therefore, all petitions filed before March 15, 2022, are subject to the original investment amounts set in 1990.

[^ 49] See INA 203(b)(5)(C).

[^ 50] The full amount of money must be made available to the business(es) most closely responsible for creating the employment upon which the petition is based. See Matter of Izummi (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 169, 179 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 51] See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF).

[^ 52] The effective date for the new lawful source of funds provisions outlined in the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022 is 60 days after the Act's March 15, 2022, enactment date. See Section 103(b)(2) of Div. BB of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2022, Pub. L. 117-103, 136 Stat. 49 (March 15, 2022).

[^ 53] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(3) (PDF). See Matter of Ho (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 206, 210-11 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 54] See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF).

[^ 55] See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF) and 8 CFR 204.6(j)(3) (PDF).

[^ 56] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(3) (PDF).

[^ 57] As required under 8 CFR 204.6(j)(3)(ii) (PDF).

[^ 58] The effective date for these provisions outlined in the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022 is 60 days after the Act's March 15, 2022, enactment date. See Section 103(b)(2) of Div. BB of the Consolidated Appropriations Act of 2022, Pub. L. 117-103, 136 Stat. 49 (March 15, 2022).

[^ 59] See INA 203(b)(5)(L).

[^ 60] See INA 203(b)(5)(L)(iii)(I).

[^ 61] See INA 203(b)(5)(L)(iii)(II).

[^ 62] See INA 203(b)(5)(B)(ii) (prior to March 15, 2022). See INA 203(b)(5)(D)(viii).

[^ 63] See INA 203(b)(5)(B)(ii) (prior to March 15, 2022) and INA 203(b)(5)(D)(vii). See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF).

[^ 64] See INA 203(b)(5)(B)(ii) (prior to March 15, 2022). See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF).

[^ 65] See Matter of Izummi (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 169, 174 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 66] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(6) (PDF). See Matter of Izummi (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 169, 171-73 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 67] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(6)(i) (PDF).

[^ 68] In a rule effective November 21, 2019, DHS eliminated the ability for states to designate TEAs and set rules for how USCIS would make those determinations. See 84 FR 35750, 35808 (PDF) (July 24, 2019). On June 22, 2019, however, a federal court vacated that rule. See Behring Regional Center LLC v. Wolf, 544 F. Supp. 3d (N.D. Cal. 2021). Therefore, all petitions filed before March 15, 2022, are subject to the previous rules on TEAs and may rely on state designations.

[^ 69] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(6)(ii)(B) (PDF).

[^ 70] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(6)(ii)(A) (PDF).

[^ 71] USCIS makes designations as part of the standalone petition adjudication. See INA 203(b)(5)(B)(ii). USCIS makes designations for regional center filings on or after May 14, 2022 as part of the Form I-956F adjudication. See INA 203(b)(5)(F). USCIS does not issue separate designation notices.

[^ 72] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(6)(i) (PDF) and 8 CFR 204.6(j)(6)(ii)(B) (PDF).

[^ 73] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(6)(i) (PDF).

[^ 74] See INA 203(b)(5)(F)(i) and INA 204(a)(1)(H)(i) requiring the filing of a Form I-956F before an investor in that offering can file a petition for classification.

[^ 75] For regional center petitions filed after May 14, 2022, USCIS makes the TEA determination at the project application stage and designations are valid for 2 years. See INA 203(b)(5)(B)(ii).

[^ 76] See INA 203(b)(5)(B)(ii)(IV).

[^ 77] See INA 203(b)(5)(B)(ii)(V).

[^ 78] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(6)(i) (PDF).

[^ 79] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(6)(ii)(B) (PDF).

[^ 80] See INA 203(b)(5)(D)(iv).

[^ 81] See INA 203(b)(5)(B)(iii)(I).

[^ 82] See Matter of Ho (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 206, 213 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 83] See Matter of Ho (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 206, 213 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 84] See Matter of Ho (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 206, 213 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 85] See INA 203(b)(5)(F).

[^ 86] See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF).

[^ 87] See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF).

[^ 88] See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF).

[^ 89] See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF).

[^ 90] See INA 203(b)(5)(D)(vi).

[^ 91] See 8 CFR 204.6(h)(2) (PDF).

[^ 92] See Matter of Soffici (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 158 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 93] See 8 CFR 204.6(h)(3) (PDF).

[^ 94] See 8 CFR 204.6(h)(3) (PDF).

[^ 95] See 8 CFR 204.6(h)(3) (PDF).

[^ 96] See INA 204(a)(1)(H)(i).

[^ 97] See 8 CFR 204.6(g) (PDF).

[^ 98] For regional center-based petitions filed on or after May 14, 2022, USCIS reviews the new commercial enterprise as part of the Form I-965F for regional center-affiliated projects. See INA 203(b)(5)(F).

[^ 99] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)-(j)(1) (PDF).

[^ 100] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(2)(i)-(v) (PDF).

[^ 101] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(5) (PDF).

[^ 102] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(5)(i) (PDF).

[^ 103] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(5)(i) (PDF).

[^ 104] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(5)(iii) (PDF).

[^ 105] Job maintenance is also permitted under certain circumstances. See Subsection 4, Measuring Job Creation [6 USCIS-PM G.2(D)(4)].

[^ 106] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(4)(i) (PDF).

[^ 107] See 8 CFR 204.6(j) (PDF) (stating that it is the new commercial enterprise that must create the 10 jobs).

[^ 108] See Matter of Izummi (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 169, 179 (Assoc. Comm. 1998).

[^ 109] See 8 CFR 204.6(j) (PDF).

[^ 110] See INA 203(b)(5)(E)(iv) and INA 203(b)(5)(E)(v). See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF).

[^ 111] See INA 203(b)(5)(A)(ii).

[^ 112] See INA 203(b)(5)(A)(ii).

[^ 113] See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF).

[^ 114] See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF).

[^ 115] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(4)(ii) (PDF).

[^ 116] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(4)(ii) (PDF).

[^ 117] See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF).

[^ 118] See 8 CFR 204.6(e) (PDF).

[^ 119] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(4)(iii) (PDF).

[^ 120] See INA 203(b)(5)(E)(iv)(I).

[^ 121] See 8 CFR 204.6(m)(1) (PDF) and 8 CFR 204.6(m)(7) (PDF). See INA 203(b)(5)(E)(v).

[^ 122] See INA 203(b)(5)(E)(iv)(I) and INA 203(b)(5)(E)(v).

[^ 123] See INA 203(b)(5)(E)(iv)(II) (limiting the percentage of estimated indirect jobs to 75 percent). See INA 203(b)(5)(E)(V)(II)(cc) (regarding the calculation of direct jobs).

[^ 124] See INA 204(a)(1)(H)(i).

[^ 125] See 8 CFR 204.6(g)(2) (PDF).

[^ 126] USCIS recognizes any reasonable agreement made among immigrant investors in regard to the identification and allocation of qualifying positions. See 8 CFR 204.6(g)(2) (PDF).

[^ 127] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(4)(i) (PDF).

[^ 128] The 2-year period is described in 8 CFR 204.6(j)(4)(i)(B) (PDF).

[^ 129] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(4)(ii) (PDF).

[^ 130] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(4)(iii) (PDF).

[^ 131] See Chapter 6, Deference [6 USCIS-PM G.6].

[^ 132] See Operational Guidance for EB-5 Cases Involving Tenant-Occupancy, GM-602-0001, issued December 20, 2012.

[^ 133] See, for example, Matter of Izummi (PDF), 22 I&N Dec. 169, 179 (Assoc. Comm. 1998) (holding that the full amount of the money must be made available to the business(es) most closely responsible for creating the employment on which the petition is based).

[^ 134] See 8 CFR 204.6(j)(4)(iii) (PDF) and 8 CFR 204.6(m)(3) (PDF).

[^ 135] See INA 203(b)(5)(E)(v)(II).

[^ 136] See Matter of Chawathe (PDF), 25 I&N Dec. 369, 375-376 (AAO 2010). For general information, see Volume 1, General Policies and Procedures, Part E, Adjudications, Chapter 4, Burden and Standards of Proof [1 USCIS-PM E.4].

[^ 137] See 8 CFR 204.6(d) (PDF).

[^ 138] See INA 203(b)(M)(v)(I). Priority date preservation was included in the EB-5 Modernization Rule, effective November 21, 2019. See 84 FR 35750, 35808 (PDF) (July 24, 2019). That rule, however, was vacated. See Behring Regional Center LLC v. Wolf, 544 F. Supp. 3d 937 (N.D. Cal. 2021).

Chapter 3 - Regional Center Designation, Reporting, Amendments, and Termination [Reserved]

ALERT: Statutory authorization related to the EB-5 Immigrant Investor Regional Center Program expired at midnight on June 30, 2021. On March 15, 2022, President Biden signed the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022 that includes, among other reforms, repeal of the former Regional Center Program under Sec. 610 of PL 102-395 and authority for a new Regional Center Program with various implementation effective dates for the program. The new program is authorized through September 30, 2027. USCIS is reviewing the new legislation and will provide additional guidance, including drafting new Policy Manual content for this chapter. In the meantime, USCIS has moved Policy Manual content for the repealed program to an Appendix: Regional Center Program Prior to March 15, 2022 [6 USCIS-PM G, Appendices Tab]. For the latest updates, see the EB-5 Immigrant Investor Program webpage.

Chapter 4 - Immigrant Petition by Alien Investor (Form I-526)

ALERT: On June 22, 2021, the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California, in Behring Regional Center LLC v. Wolf, 20-cv-09263-JSC, vacated the EB-5 Immigrant Investor Program Modernization Final Rule (PDF).

See more

On June 22, 2021, the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of California, in Behring Regional Center LLC v. Wolf, 20-cv-09263-JSC, vacated the EB-5 Immigrant Investor Program Modernization Final Rule (PDF). While USCIS considers this decision, we will apply the EB-5 regulations that were in effect before the rule was finalized on Nov. 21, 2019, including:

- No priority date retention based on an approved Form I-526;
- The required standard minimum investment amount of $1 million and the minimum investment amount for investment in a Targeted Employment Area (TEA) of $500,000;
- Permitting state designations of high unemployment TEAs; and
- Prior USCIS procedures for the removal of conditions on permanent residence.

In other words, we are applying the regulations in effect before Nov. 21, 2019 in this chapter.

ALERT: Statutory authorization related to the EB-5 Immigrant Investor Regional Center Program expired at midnight on June 30, 2021.

See more

Statutory authorization related to the EB-5 Immigrant Investor Regional Center Program expired at midnight on June 30, 2021. This lapse in authorization does not affect EB-5 petitions filed by investors who are not seeking a visa under the Regional Center Program. Due to the lapse in authorization related to the Regional Center Program, USCIS will reject the following forms received on or after July 1, 2021:

- Form I-924, Application for Regional Center Designation Under the Immigrant Investor Program, except when the application type indicates that it is an amendment to the regional center's name, organizational structure, ownership, or administration; and
- Form I-526, Immigrant Petition by Alien Investor, when it indicates that the petitioner's investment is associated with an approved regional center.

In general, we will not act on any pending petition or application of these form types that is dependent on the lapsed statutory authority until further notice.

ALERT: On March 15, 2022, the EB-5 Reform and Integrity Act of 2022 (PDF) was enacted. The Regional Center Program is authorized through September 30, 2027. USCIS is reviewing the new legislation and will provide additional guidance, including an eventual revision of Policy Manual content. For the latest updates, see the EB-5 Immigrant Investor Program webpage.

An immigrant investor must file an initial immigrant petition and supporting documentation to receive EB-5 immigrant classification.^[1] The immigrant investor will be a conditional permanent resident upon adjustment of status or admission to the United States.^[2]

The petitioner must establish he or she meets the following eligibility requirements when filing the Immigrant Petition by Alien Investor (Form I-526):

- The required amount of capital has been invested or is actively in the process of being invested in the new commercial enterprise;
- The investment capital was obtained by the investor through lawful means;
- The new commercial enterprise will create at least 10 full-time positions for qualifying employees; and
- The immigrant investor is or will be engaged in the management of the new commercial enterprise.

If the immigrant investor seeks to qualify based on a reduced (50 percent of the standard minimum) investment amount, it is necessary to show the new commercial enterprise or job-creating entity, as applicable, is principally doing business in a TEA.

At the preliminary Form I-526 filing stage, the immigrant investor must demonstrate his or her commitment to invest the capital, but does not need to establish the required capital already has been fully invested. The investment requirement is met if the immigrant investor demonstrates that he or she is actively in the process of investing the required capital. However, evidence of a mere intent to invest or of prospective investment arrangements entailing no present commitment will not suffice.^[3]

At this preliminary stage, the immigrant investor does not need to establish the required jobs have already been created. The job creation requirement is met by the immigrant investor demonstrating it is more likely than not the required jobs will be created.^[4]

A. Petitions Associated with Regional Centers

Each regional center investor must demonstrate that he or she has invested, or is actively in the process of investing, lawfully obtained capital in a new commercial enterprise located within a designated regional center in the United States. The investor must also demonstrate that this investment will create at least 10 direct or indirect full-time jobs for qualifying employees.

As part of the determination of whether a regional center investor has invested, or is actively in the process of investing, in a new commercial enterprise located within a regional center, an officer reviews the regional center's geographic boundaries. If the regional center has requested to expand its geographic area, USCIS adjudicates the petition based on the following:

- Any requests for geographic area expansion made on or after February 22, 2017 are adjudicated under the current guidance in the Form I-924 instructions which require that a Form I-924 amendment must be filed, and approved, to expand the regional center's geographic area.

The Form I-924 amendment must be approved before an I-526 petitioner may demonstrate eligibility at the time of filing his or her petition based on an investment in the expanded area.

- If the regional center's geographic area expansion request was submitted either through a Form I-924 amendment or Form I-526 petition filed prior to February 22, 2017, and the request is ultimately approved, USCIS will continue to adjudicate additional Form I-526 petitions associated with investments in that area under prior policy guidance issued on May 30, 2013.^[5] That policy did not require a formal amendment to expand a regional center's geographic area, and permitted concurrent filing of the Form I-526 prior to approval of the geographic area amendment.

The immigrant investor must provide a copy of the regional center's most recently issued approval letter. In addition, if the immigrant investor is relying on previously approved project-specific documentation (including the comprehensive business plan, economic analysis, and organizational and transactional documents) to satisfy his or her burden of proof, the immigrant investor must submit this documentation with his or her Form I-526 petition. This is required even though the regional center previously submitted and USCIS reviewed the documentation with a regional center's Application for Regional Center Under the Immigrant Investor Program (Form I-924).

When USCIS has evaluated and approved certain aspects of an EB-5 investment, USCIS generally defers to that favorable determination at a subsequent stage in the EB-5 process. USCIS does not, however, defer to a previously favorable decision in later proceedings when, for example, the underlying facts upon which a favorable decision was made have materially changed, there is evidence of fraud or misrepresentation, or the previously favorable decision is determined to be legally deficient.^[6]

B. Stand-Alone Petitions

An immigrant investor not associated with a regional center must, together with the petition, demonstrate that he or she has invested, or is actively in the process of investing, lawfully obtained capital in a new commercial enterprise located within the United States that will create at least 10 direct full-time jobs for qualifying employees.

C. Material Change

A petitioner must establish eligibility at the time of filing and a petition cannot be approved if, after filing, the immigrant investor becomes eligible under a new set of facts or circumstances. Changes that are considered material that occur after the filing of an immigrant investor petition will result in the investor's ineligibility if the investor has not obtained conditional permanent resident status.^[7]

If material changes occur after the approval of the immigrant petition, but before the investor has obtained conditional permanent residence, such changes would constitute good and sufficient cause to issue a notice of intent to revoke and, if not overcome, would constitute good cause to revoke the approval of the petition. A change is material if the changed circumstances would have a natural tendency to influence or are predictably capable of affecting the decision.^[8]

Changes that occur in accordance with a business plan and other supporting documents as filed will generally not be considered material. For example, if at the time of filing the immigrant petition, no jobs have yet been created, but after approval of the immigrant petition and before the investor has obtained conditional permanent resident status, the investment in the new commercial enterprise results in the creation of 10 jobs in accordance with the investor's business plan as filed, such a change would not be considered material.

If the organizational documents for a new commercial enterprise contain a liquidation provision, that does not otherwise constitute an impermissible debt arrangement, the documents may generally be amended to remove such a provision in order to allow the new commercial enterprise to continue to operate through the regional center immigrant investor's period of conditional permanent residence. Such an amendment would generally not be considered a material change because facts related to the immigrant investor's Form I-526 eligibility would not change.

If, at the time of adjudication, the investor is asserting eligibility under a materially different set of facts that did not exist when he or she filed the immigrant petition, the investor must file a new Form I-526 immigrant petition.

Further, if a regional center immigrant investor changes the regional center with which his or her immigrant petition is associated after filing the Form I-526 petition, whether occurring during an initial or further deployment of capital, the change constitutes a material change to the petition. Similarly, the termination of a regional center associated with a regional center immigrant investor's Form I-526 petition constitutes a material change to the petition.^[9]

For petitions filed before November 21, 2019, amendments or supplements to any offering necessary to maintain compliance with applicable securities laws based on regulatory changes effective on November 21, 2019, do not independently result in denial or revocation of a petition, provided that the petitioner:

- Was eligible for classification as an employment-based 5th preference immigrant^[10] at the time the petition was filed; and
- Is currently eligible for classification as an employment-based 5th preference immigrant, including having no right to withdraw or rescind the investment or commitment to invest into such offering, at the time of adjudication of the petition.^[11]

Footnotes

[^ 1] See 8 CFR 204.6(a). See 8 CFR 103.2(b).

[^ 2] See INA 216A(a). For information regarding removal of the conditional basis of the investor's permanent resident status, see Chapter 5, Removal of Conditions [6 USCIS-PM G.5].

